WHO SHALL TRAIN OUR METHODIST YOUTH?

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Chairman of the Educational Commission.

If our Methodism fails to develop and to train the powers of her youth, she will be false—disloyal to the explicit teaching of her Master, who in His great parable of the talents, and complementary parable of the pounds, emphasizes His own estimate of the tremendous importance of that specific teaching by picturing a great judgment scene based upon success or failure in the development and use of power, which scene closes with the Master's final sentence of approval and reward for the obedient and loyal, and of rejection and punishment for the disobedient and the disloyal.

"Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents, behold I have gained beside them two talents more." Here Methodism's all-wise Lord and Master states two great fundamental truths: (1.) All power is delivered unto men by God—the free gift of God. (2.) Development of power and of skill in the use of power are dependent upon the faithfulness of men. The Master emphasized nothing more explicitly and forcibly in all His teaching than that every man, whether he is given only one talent or is given five talents, must come into judgment for proper development and use.

What is the responsibility of Methodism to her youth? St. Paul was the great teacher among the apostles. Trained himself by the most learned doctors of his time, he indicates clearly the important elements to be emphasized by the church of all ages.

As St. Paul wrote to the youthful Timothy, so must Methodism from her pulpits and from its printed page sound the clear, impelling call to her sons and daughters, "Stir up the gift of God that is in thee."

We must convince our children that faithfulness in the development and in the training of their powers will determine the real measure and value of their lives; their possibilities for usefulness, their ability to "make good" in the face of abounding opportunities, and the final judgment which will be passed upon the accumulated results of life by the Lord of all who has himself given life, talents and opportunity.

Methodism must not fail to stir the conscience and deepen the conviction of both parents and children by proclaiming the Master's own doctrine on the duty of developing—that is educating—their God-given talents.

THE OBJECTIVES OF THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

1. To develop in the mind of the church an adequate conception of the place of Christian education in the life of the church, of the nation, and of the world.

2. To promote the cause of religious education by bringing about a closer and more effective co-operation between our institutions of learning and the Sunday school, and by establishing strong departments of religious education in our colleges and universities.

3. To lead at least 5,000 young men and women to pledge themselves to devote their lives to the ministry, to missions, or to some other form of Christian education as a preparation for effective life service.

4. To raise for our schools, colleges, and universities at least $32,000,000, the minimum sum necessary to enable them to send out the constantly increasing stream of educated Christian leaders required to carry forward the Christian work of the world, and to secure $1,000,000 to aid worthy students who are looking to some form of Christian service in their efforts to obtain an education.

5. To deepen the moral and spiritual life of our people and to promote the spirit of Christian liberality in all of the efforts put forth to realize these objectives.

St. Paul's educational policy did not stop with a call to "stir up the gift"—that is to educate. It was equally as explicit and as emphatic in its definition of the character of the education to be sought, and to be given. "Bringing every thought into captivity to Christ," was his sweeping tribute to the pre-eminence of Jesus Christ in the whole realm of thought, as it affects every department of life. Christian education, that is education dominated by the spirit and ideals of Christ, was the Pauline model, which Methodism must adopt, proclaim and follow, or deny her Lord.

Men adopt some philosophy, some creed, some system of thought; men follow some leader, some teacher, some master: he may be Ingersoll, Voltaire, Karl Marx, Mohammed, Buddha, Confucius, or Christ. Methodism follows Paul openly, confidently, joyously, declaring her allegiance to Jesus Christ as Teacher, Master and Lord. She declares all education to be false, incomplete and eternally unsatisfactory which does not recognize His teaching as central, which does not adjust itself to His conception of life and its comparative values both in time and in eternity.

DR. HENRY N. SNYDER,

Associate Director-General of the Christian Education Movement.

Dr. Snyder has been for some years President of Wofford College, and his administration there has brought him prominently before the church and the educational world. A great Christian layman, he has held Wofford College to the high ideals of a Christian college.

Methodism declares that all power, natural or developed either by experience or by the training of the schools, depends for its value upon proper guidance and control. The mountain stream may become a raging torrent, sweep beyond its banks, and bring rain and destruction, or it may be directed into prepared channels and harnessed to make light and to grind corn. An Ingersoll may blight and destroy individual lives. A Kaiser may become a curse and drench the world in blood, while a Washington may make possible "the land of the free and the home of the brave," and a Wesley or a Moody may save men and sweeten their lives. We are faced with the intensely practical question, which presses daily for its answer: Who will train the boys and girls of Methodism? Who will interpret the facts of life, the relation which they bear to these facts, and the supremacy of Jesus Christ in all life? Experience has fully and unquestionably demonstrated, that the church herself must furnish and direct such teaching, if it is to be given at all. Never has there been a more convincing demonstration of the evil results of a Christless education than was given by the great war, and by the conditions which have followed, in its wake, and which exist to-day. The lust for

DOING THE IMPOSSIBLE.

By Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Director General of the Christian Education Movement.

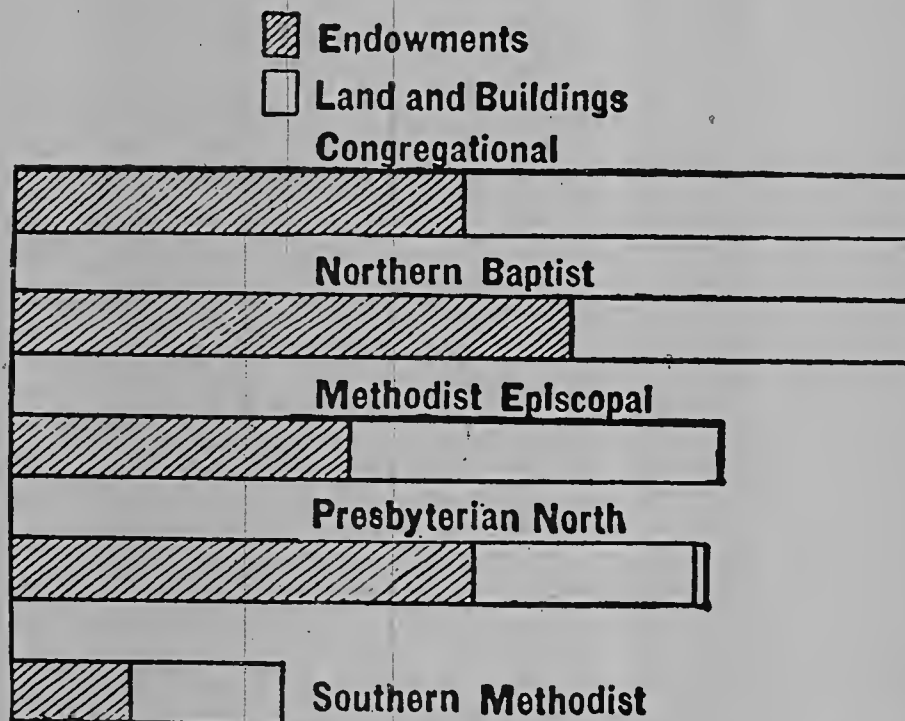

Our Methodism is of God and has faith in the unseen. In spite of the fact that all of the Annual Conferences this fall were held in the midst of falling prices and of an economic depression, they, with remarkable unanimity not only approved the quotas assigned them by the Christian Education Commission, but voluntarily added 40 per cent for the benefit of their local Conference schools. Two Annual Conferences even doubled the quotas assigned them. The Christian Education Movement was ordered at this time by a unanimous vote of the last General Conference, and to this has now been added the practically unanimous vote of all of the Annual Conferences of the entire church.

No ordinary business would have taken such action this fall. It is left to the church to do the impossible. Immediately following the great war-work drives totaling billions, our church raised over fifty millions for the Centenary. Whatever God wants done, the church of the living God can do. And to all thoughtful people the program of the Christian Education Movement commends itself as of God and a thing that must be done now if the world is to be saved. This is as it should be. The church has access to sources of power that the business man does not take into account. Throughout the history of the church the superhuman element has ever been manifest. The now historic Memphis Centenary Conference has been more than duplicated in spiritual power by the recent Memphis Educational Conference.

The Christian Education Commission has set apart the next three months as a period of spiritual cultivation, when the whole thought of the membership of the church is to be centered on the great spiritual objectives of the Movement. This is no smoke screen. No other church ever attempted so comprehensive a program as to educate the entire membership of the church in the cause of Christian education. Through the pulpit, the Sunday school, the Epworth League, and the Missionary Societies every member of the church is to be led to see the fundamental meaning of Christian education; that it begins with the home as the elementary school in Christian education, that it includes the Sunday school and other young peoples' societies as the intermediate schools of Christian education, and church schools, colleges and universities as training camps to develop the outstanding lay and ministerial leaders in church and State. The faithful execution of this program will mark an epoch not only in the history of our church, but in the history of Christian education in the nation. To put the spiritual element in education is the only thing that can save the nation from moral bankruptcy, and civilization from the scrap heap.

We therefore call upon all presiding elders, pastors, and officers of the church to carry out faithfully the program of spiritual cultivation so carefully worked out. In the preparation of all programs and literature the Christian Education Com-

Of the five leading denominations listed above, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has the largest number of educational institutions, and more members than any of them save the Methodist Episcopal Church. And yet our investments in education are far below those of the other denominations named. Is it not time for Southern Methodism to attempt something worth while for its schools?

mission is merely acting as the agent of the General Conference to help the bishops, presiding elders and pastors in carrying out the commission of the General Conference respecting Christian education in this quadrennium.

PROGRAM OF SPIRITUAL RESOURCES DEPARTMENT, JANUARY, 1921.

By Rev. P. L. Cobb, Secretary.

Objectives: During the month of January emphasis will be laid on things of vital importance:

1. Daily Bible Reading.
2. Daily Prayer.
3. Family Altar.
4. Prayer meeting.

Bible Reading: Pastors have been requested to urge their members in the first sermon of the year to begin daily Bible reading as the basis for the intelligent direction of their prayers and to start the year with the Book.

Prayer: The content of prayer and the power of prayer are to be set forth on two subsequent Sundays. The Lord's Prayer and the power of men who prayed will furnish the model and the inspiration. The family altar will be presented as the greatest school of religion in the world.

Enrollment: January 23-30 will be ENROLLMENT WEEK. Enrollment cards for Bible Reading and Prayer, and the Family Altar, with appropriate literature will be sent to all pastors. Every member of the church should be urged to enroll for Daily Bible Reading and Prayer. Teams for this purpose should be organized and the membership of the church divided and assigned to these teams.

Helps provided: At the same time that Bible Reading and Prayer is being urged for each individual, cards for enrollment in the Family Altar League will be presented to the heads of families. When the enrollment cards have been sent into the office, a list of daily readings, both for individuals and families, will be mailed at once with helpful literature.

Readings for Young People and Mothers: It is very important that the young people who sign the card for daily Bible Reading and Prayer indicate their age in the blank for that purpose, as a splendid list of Bible stories is ready for them. This is also the finest list of Bible stories we have found for the use of mothers who do not have a good Bible story book or who, having it, would prefer to read the stories in the words of the Bible to their children.

A Bigger and Better Prayer Meeting: Suggested plans and topics for the improvement of the Prayer Meeting have been furnished to pastors. From many points there are coming encouraging reports of successful Prayer Meetings. In to-day's mail came this statement: "Our Prayer Meeting is going big. We are staying right around 250 to 300 in actual attendance. It is the most spiritual service of the church." Arthur J. Moore, pastor, Travis Park Church, San Antonio, Texas.

We Must Succeed: This program for January is fundamental. On its success will depend largely not only the successful issue of the programs for Life Service and Stewardship which follow, but the material objectives of the Christian Education Movement as well. The church that prays is the church that achieves.

WHAT THE MOVEMENT REALLY IS.

By Mr. A. C. Marts, Advisory Director of the Christian Education Movement.

When the writer of this article is requested for a brief statement of this kind it is generally suggested that something be said relative to organization and money raising. As no specifications have been given with this request, it will be possible to speak of something more primary and important than machinery or money. That primary thing is our conception of the Movement—the image in our minds as we think of it.

The Christian Education Movement has been carefully named. First, it is a Movement. It is the wind stirring in the mulberry trees which presages a great swelling, onreaching move of the church. It is no passing event! Second, it is a Movement in behalf of Christian Education. Its purpose is not to educate, but to make all education Christian. How different that is from a mere money campaign!

He who thinks his way into an adequate conception of the Christian Education Movement finds himself face to face with a revelation of obligation that gives men the inspiration and the urgency to mighty deeds.

We have talked a great deal these past two years about the church's opportunity for rebuilding a new world. What sort of a world have we rebuked thus far? Are we proud of it? Does Jesus Christ mean more to the people of our nation than he did two years ago? Are worldliness, ungodliness, selfishness, materialism visibly lessened in the lives of those about us? Is this young generation of Americans being brought up with a zealous love for Christ, a flaming ideal of service—in the place of that ideal, "what is there in it for me?" which we have observed with dread?

Perhaps as we take stock we will feel like stopping our talk about "opportunity" and begin to talk "backs to the wall." The Christian Education Movement is not an opportunity; it is a downright necessity; the fighting answer of a great church to the tendencies that threaten to sweep its children away.

The Christian Education Movement seeks to do what men desperately in earnest must do. It looks at the whole task of bringing a generation up into Christian character, and undertakes to set forces in motion big enough to accomplish that task. It says that "in so far as God will bless our efforts, we, two and a quarter million Methodists, will not permit this younger generation of Methodists to be swept out in the tide of worldliness. We will appeal to every human element in education and pray unceasingly to our God that these boys and girls may be brought up into Christian character."

What are these human elements? The home, the church and Sunday school, the public schools, the college and university.

The home is the very taproot of education. Unless education in the home be Christian, of what avail would be millions of dollars invested in college buildings? The Christian Education Movement will hold up to parents the ideal of the family altar as "the greatest school of religion in the world." It will also emphasize the place of the Sunday school and League and other church activities in teaching the Bible, not that revivalism or evangelism may be less, but that earnest and careful teaching may be greater.

And this ideal of the Christian Education Movement will sooner or later find its way into the processes of public education in the Southland. For a moral idea is the most powerful force in our human world. When two and a quarter million Methodists adopt as their serious purpose the ideal of making all education sum up in Christian character, they couldn't copyright it if they would. Consciously and unconsciously, this ideal will find reflection in the thought and work of our school boards and teachers, and character will be emphasized in the public schools above vocational efficiency.

And then our Methodist schools and colleges; of course, we must have them and they must be adequately equipped and manned. For we must not, in attempting to put on the capstone of education, overturn in six months' time the structure that has taken sixteen, eighteen, twenty years to build. Provision must be made for education with the single ideal of Christian character clear through to commencement day.

To erect an ideal around which all these factors in education may rally; to set in motion forces which will stimulate the home, the church, the school, the college to assume its full share in the united effort; to properly represent the determined effort of a great church to produce a generation of Christian men and women, this is the Christian Education Movement.

Nashville, Tenn.

THE OBJECTIVE OF THE EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

By Miss Kate J. Bigham, Department of Bible and Religious Education, Whitworth College.

The session of the Mississippi Conference, which was held at Brookhaven in December, was an inspiration to the church and the community far above the cost of hospitality.

There fell into my hands as a result of it several pamphlets setting forth various phases of the

CONTRIBUTION OF ONE COLLEGE TO THE FOREIGN FIELD IN FORTY YEARS

One Christian college has sent more than one hundred and twenty missionaries into seventeen mission fields. From the schools of the Church must come well-nigh all of the men and women who shall carry the message of the kingdom into the mission fields of the world. When the Methodist Church goes out of the business of education it must go out of the missionary business and the preaching business.

Educational Campaign, now getting under headway. These I have read with pleasure. They should be widely read by the leaders of our church and colleges, in which case the Educational Campaign would be more easily carried through.

Though I was a supporter of Christian Education before reading these pamphlets, I was made a more staunch one by the thoughtful, scholarly propositions and arguments contained in them. And from among the many impressive thoughts I quote the following:

"Functions of the Christian College: 1. The Christian college completes the work of nurture, training, and instruction begun in and carried forward by the Christian home. 2. The Christian college stands for the completion of the work of the Sunday school. 3. It is the function of the college to develop leaders. 4. One of the most important functions of the Christian college is to contribute its full share toward making the culture of the community, the State, the nation, genuinely Christian."—Outlines of Sermons on Christian Education.

"A culture which is not Christian is corrupting. If our country is to become one of the great teaching nations of the earth, it is important that its type of education be emphatically and thoroughly Christian."—The Universities of the Church in the Life of To-day, by Bishop Candier.

"From church colleges come the candidates for the ministry of the Word, the mission work in the fields beyond the seas, the deacons and deaconesses in the needy fields of the homeland, the teachers in the Sunday schools, the stewards and leaders in the local churches—whence could come these troops of willing toilers but from the colleges of the church."—A. F. Watkins.

"The cry of the church in every department of its work for a trained leadership is one of the most pathetic things stirring the hearts of our people to-day.

"Nearly every missionary in the foreign field was educated in a college of the church; at least 90 per cent of our educated ministry have some church college as their alma mater.

"People tell us to close the school of the church. If we obey the injunction, I believe the very voice of the pulpit of God will be practically hushed forever.

"It (the State university) does not and cannot produce a Christian ministry, and it cannot compare with the church school in the making of Christian leadership among laymen."—C. R. Jenkins.

I might quote other very convincing statements relative to the Campaign, but I close with the emphasis on my subject, the objective of the Educational Campaign, which is, in brief, the mission of Christ himself on the earth, "To present the world made new in spiritual unity to God." "It is the task of world Christianization."

"We must make this gospel . . . lay hold on and control the entire social order, and all of its activities and relations.

"Any plan which may be projected for the extension of the Kingdom, whether it be by the educational, missionary, or other agency of the church, must be projected from this angle and with this objective in view."—E. J. Clark.

I am glad to note, in closing, the important action taken to appropriate $450,000 to Whitworth College, to raise it to an A Class school. The plant is a very valuable one, with a great future before it, and is in line of substantial progress at present.

SPIRITUAL OBJECTIVES OF THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

By Rev. John S. Chadwick, D. D.

The Christian Education Movement comes at its appointed time in world history and in the movements of the Kingdom of God. And its coming at this appointed time is not primarily because the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, ordered its coming, but because its ideals and its program are the answer to the most pressing needs of the world of to-day. The world never before so needed the message of this Movement, and the church must give that gospel or declare itself unable or unwilling to use the great opportunity this day has brought.

There would be no basis for the foregoing statements if it be not true that the chief objectives of the Christian Education Movement are spiritual objectives. Whatever else we may get out of this enterprise of Methodism, it will not be worth the getting or doing except we build into the life of the church the ideals of the Movement. This done, there shall be something more than a new day for Methodist educational work; there shall be a new church.

For the Right Kind of Education.

The Movement is committed, first of all, to the task of putting into the mind and soul of the church an adequate conception of the place of Christian education in the life of the nation, of the world, and of the church itself. If in any measure this be realized, well-nigh all of our problems are on the way to solution. If there is one lesson the world should have learned during the days of the war, it is that education can either wreck or save our civilization. It was the wrong kind of education—that put aside the ideals of Jesus and exalted the ideals of force, of selfishness, of militarism—that brought to us our day of woe. And out of all the turmoil and strife that follow in the train of war comes the question whether those ideals that surrendered on the field of battle have really been vanquished. If we save has a bigger program than ever before. Our church would not be worthy to live and grow if it did not accept this larger responsibility that the new day brings. We shall not do that larger task as it needs to be done except we strengthen the church paper and bring within the circle of its influence a far larger number of our people.

To make practical this message—what do you propose to do for your Conference and connectional paper? There should be in every Annual Conference a determined effort to increase by at least fifty per cent the circulation of the Conference paper, and along with this to send to many other Methodist homes the general organ of the church. There is no investment of time and service on the part of preachers or laymen that will bring larger returns than the effort to place the church paper in homes now without its good influence. Too long we have neglected this matter of vital importance. Let there be in every Conference during these next three months such an organized effort for the church papers as will not only ease the burdens of the men who make those papers, but, better still, will bring the church into a day of larger service to the world.—Christian Education Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

WHAT IS THE FIRST QUESTION WITH YOU?

By Rev. Rolfe Hunt, D.D.,
President Port Gibson Female College.

A man was offered an excellent book that many of us read with profit and delight—a book that appealed to our children and made our homes more attractive. He suddenly said: "No. I can not afford to buy books nor take time to read them. The meat and bread question is the first question at our house."

I could not fail to remind him that the Divine order is the Kingdom of God first, and that no one can reverse the Divine order without suffering for it himself and bringing ruin and misery to others.

"I am a poor man," he impatiently replied, "and we have got to eat at my house. I tell you the meat and bread question has got to be solved with us. I don't know how we are going to live. We have got to make the meat and bread question first."

How did it turn out?

One of his sons killed his own wife in sheer recklessness and there was a long-drawn-out and expensive lawsuit. Hundreds of dollars were spent in nothing but defense. A home was broken up and many homes were in grief.

Was that all?

No. A second son got into a quarrel with a neighbor boy, stabbed the boy, nearly killing him. Several hundred dollars more went in lawsuits. There were anxiety and embittered hearts with-out end.

Is that all?

No. The bank in which the man had placed his money failed and he lost all he had saved up in years.

Is that all?

No. One of his daughters, a beautiful young woman with brilliant mind, married wrong, and soon her husband had his knife at her throat, threatening her life. I dare not pursue the downward course further, as that charming young woman went from bad to worse.

The last I heard of the man he was complaining that God had been unkind; that the world had been a disappointment to him; that his own children even had distressed him; that his children had never seemed to care for home, and that everything had gone wrong and he could not trust to anything.

In this Educational Movement we are right up against a situation that is going to test us and bring out clearly what is first with us. Even where parents are willing to spend their money without stint for their children, many are falling in what should be first considerations. I know many instances in which parents have spent thousands of dollars on the education of sons and daughters, and yet those sons and daughters are worth less in the home, in the Sunday school, in the prayer meeting, in the church services, and in the old home community than before they went away for expensive preparation. If the school is not helping to make better Christians of our children, it had better moulder into dust.

FROM CENTENARY COLLEGE.

We are all familiar with the statements made by our writers and speakers to the effect that the early settlers of our country were college men. Glowing tributes are paid the pioneers who first broke the tangled wilderness of America. They were educated men.

We are now celebrating the tercentenary of the Pilgrims' landing at Plymouth Rock. All honor to the noble band who braved the cold of the New England winter to plant a base for freedom of worship—all products of Christian education!

A large per cent of the early settlers were Oxford and Cambridge men. These great universities had leavened the life of England at the colonization period. But we are prone to overlook the great influence of Emmanuel College—one of the small religious colleges of England. More men who stamped themselves on American history come from this small school than elsewhere.

What would early American history be without the names and influence of the Mathers, Williams, Tenants, Howard, and a host of others—all the product of the small religious college?

Centenary College is a large factor in the religious life of Louisiana. In the past this school has contributed largely to the leadership of the State. How many ministers and professional men have come from old Centenary? Many of the leading business men of our State trace their first inspiration to dear old Centenary.

That leadership will be more necessary in the future. Questions of moment, problems of State and church, places of responsibility are all before us, calling for carefully prepared Christian leadership. Where shall such be found?

The old college at Jackson was better equipped for its day and needs than is the present college at Shreveport. Centenary College to-day is not abreast of the times. She needs money and support, equipment and endowment. We have come to the parting of the ways. New and heavier demands are upon us. The Educational Campaign has not come a day too soon. Let us rally and build an institution which will serve for future generations. No field is more needy—none will yield richer results. Centenary College calls clearly to her old and new friends for help in this day of crisis.

Acting President.

The Spirit of Wesley Moves the People Called Methodists

Unless we educate we cannot remain Methodists, whatever else we may become. For the very genius of Methodism centers in Christian Education.

Four generations of the Wesley family were trained in a Christian college before John and Charles entered the famous Christ Church at Oxford.

Samuel Wesley, the father; John, the statesman; Charles, the poet of Methodism—all were products of a Christian institution of learning. So also were Whitefield, the silver tongued evangel, and Coke, the first bishop.

In his poverty Samuel Wesley comforted himself by the thought that his son, John, was in a Christian college: "But thank God my Jack is a fellow of Lincoln."

Methodism was thus born in a Christian college. The "Holy Club" of "the People Called Methodists" was an institution of the Church school.

It Has Educated Around the World

Out of a college Methodism went to establish schools everywhere. In 1739, on the same day that Wesley preached his first sermon in the open air, Kingswood School, the first educational venture of Methodism, was founded.

The Methodists built a school before they ever built a church. They preferred to preach on the commons, if thereby they could educate.

The first General Conference of Methodism in America established Cokesbury College, and Asbury himself laid its corner stone.

And so around the world has spread the educational genius of Methodism. In every conference at home, on every mission field abroad, it has established Christian colleges and found in them its greatest support.

The Church has recently entrenched itself in two European countries. We have not yet built churches in either, but have opened schools in both.

Its Greatest Institution is a College

What is the greatest Methodist institution on earth? By what does the world evaluate our Church and its importance?

It is not our hospitals, our social plants, or even our Church buildings. It is Kwansei Gakuin, Soochow University, Trinity, Randolph-Macon, Emory, Wofford, and the others.

To these the greatest gifts have been made, because the world recognizes them as fundamental to Christian civilization.

The Christian Education Movement harks back to the original genius of the Church and sets it fresh and powerful in the midst of the manifold problems and evils of this new day. Methodism seeks to be Methodism. It seeks to be the world's leading exponent of Christian Education.

SUNRISE.

If I have faltered more or less,
In my great task of happiness;
If I have moved among my race
And shown no glorious morning face;
If beams from happy human eyes
Have moved me not; if morning skies,
Books, and my food, and summer rain,
Knocked on my sullen heart in vain—
Lord, thy most pointed pleasure take,
And stab my spirit broad awake.

EMILY SPEAKS A PIECE.

Little Emily Warren was very happy at the idea of going to the big celebration at the Fairfield town hall. Her two older sisters, Amy and Grace, were going to take part in the entertainment; Emily knew their recitations by heart. She herself was to wear a ruffled blue lawn dress and coral beads; she was so eager that she could hardly wait for the time to go.

They found the hall very crowded. While they were looking for seats, Emily saw her friend, Julia Ames, beckoning to her from the upper part of the hall.

"Go up there and sit with Julia, if you want to," said her mother, "only you must be very quiet."

"I won't say a single word," Emily promised.

She walked demurely up the aisle, with her crisp ruffles bobbing as she went, and slid into the seat beside Julia.

Julia was all in a flutter. "We are just behind the girls who are going to recite," she said. "I saved a place for you."

Emily, remembering her mother's command, only nodded; but Julia kept on whispering. "The girl right in front of you," she went on, "is Mary Trueman from the city. She has a long, long piece to say."

Emily stared at Mary Trueman; her little round face was rosy with interest. Mary had brown curls just like her own, and she wore a blue lawn with ruffles, too. Emily wondered how she felt. Think of having to go up on that big stage and say a piece before all those people!

The exercises soon began. A quartet sang, a young lady played the piano and then the recitations began.

"O dear!" thought Emily, "how frightened poor Mary Trueman must be feeling now!"

Then she gave a little jump. Where was Mary Trueman? Her seat was vacant. Emily leaned out and craned her neck; far down the aisle a blue spot was bobbing rapidly toward the door—Mary Trueman going out. Her heart had failed her, and she had simply slipped away.

"I don't blame her; indeed I don't," thought Emily.

"The next number on the program," a voice announced, "is a recitation by a little girl."

There was a pause; every one was waiting. A whole minute went by, and people began to crane their necks. Then the man who was announcing the numbers went over and spoke to a young lady on the other side of the stage.

"A little curly-haired girl in a ruffled blue dress," Emily heard her say.

After that, things happened very quickly. Before Emily could even blink she felt a firm hand on her shoulder.

"Come on, child, and say your piece," a voice whispered in her ear. "There's nothing to be afraid of."

"O dear!" said Emily. Then she stopped short; she had given her word not to talk. Besides there was no use in saying anything, for the hand had pulled her out of the seat and was gently but firmly pushing her forward. A moment more, and she was standing in the middle of the stage all by herself.

She cast a despairing look over the audience. Every one was gazing straight at her. She could see her own family, down in the middle of the room, staring with astonished eyes. Some one gave a shrill little laugh; that was Julia, so started that she had forgotten how to behave herself.

Emily clasped her two hands in front of her and bowed her head. Did ever anything so terrible happen to any little girl on earth? Two large tears spattered on the tips of her slippers.

"Say your piece, dear," some one whispered.

"I must say something," Emily thought. But what could she say? Every poem she had ever learned had gone out of her head.

Then all at once she threw back her head. Some words had come to her.

"I will lift up mine eyes," she began, and faltered. Then she went on again bravely: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help."

The audience gasped; some of them smiled, but others looked very serious and kind.

"My help," went on Emily, "'cometh from the Lord.'"

Then she made a little bow and, amid loud applause, ran down the steps and on down the aisle to the place where her family sat. There she buried her face in her mother's lap.

"Did I do right, mother?" she said in a muffled voice. "She thought I was Mary Trueman, and I wasn't. Tell me, did I do right?"

"You did all right," her mother said. So said many other people. And after it was all over Julia asked admirably, "O Emily, however did you remember your Sunday school verse?"

"I didn't remember it," said Emily, smiling. "It just came."—Lella M. Walters, in The Youth's Companion.

IN THE LAND OF CHERRY BLOSSOMS.

By Dr. Carlton D. Harris, Editor Baltimore Southern Methodist.

III.

The first high social function in honor of the delegates to the World's Sunday school Convention was a tea in the Imperial Gardens with the approval of the Imperial household. This is held to be one of the greatest compliments that Japan can bestow. The invitations stated that frock coats or Prince Alberts should be worn, and silk hats, if practicable, but under no circumstances should anyone appear in a cap. In reality, there were silk hats of every variety, many hats that were not silk and coats of every style. We were driven to the entrance of the gardens in automobiles and permitted the privilege of walking perhaps a mile through a fairyland of beauty—miniature lakes, waterfalls, shrubs, trees of fantastic shapes and a profusion of bowers everywhere greeted the eye.

Our objective was a slight eminence, which was dotted with small tables covered with immaculate linen. Nearby was a long, striped tent, where the guests went in cafeteria fashion and got tea, delicate little sandwiches and mineral waters, and brought them back to the tables for consumption.

We kept waiting for some one representing the Emperor to speak, but there was no speaking, and seemingly no one at the head of the function. The guests, after engaging in social intercourse among themselves, left in groups. At the iron gates dainty Japanese maidens arrayed in purple bowed them out. We could not help feeling a sense of disappointment in regard to a function about which we heard so much.

A few afternoons later the city of Tokio gave a formal welcome to its guests, which for lavishness and magnificence we have never seen surpassed. We learned that but three times in history has such a function been staged—once at the close of the China-Japan War, once at the brilliant end of the Russo-Japanese conflict, and on this occasion, suggestive of peace rather than war. The park is beautiful in its natural state, but expert decorators made it more beautiful for this welcome on what proved to be a wonderful autumn day.

The guests entered the main gate, which was transformed into a lovely evergreen arch of gigantic proportions, on whose sides the word "Welcome" in gilded letters appeared. Japanese girls planned flowers and badges on each visitor, who then filed by a line of bowing members of the City Council, arrayed in long coats and holding their silk hats in their hands. The Mayor stood at the end of the line.

The space devoted to the entertainment of the delegates was fenced off by massed colors of red and white. After an elaborate program by the Imperial Marine Band, closing with Sousa's "King Cotton," there was an exhibition of fireworks, jugglers' tricks and a number of other entertaining features. A five o'clock dinner fit for a king was served to perhaps 2000 persons at tables in artistic tents. Each guest had at his place a box filled with delicious food—meats, bread, vegetables, cake, fruit and a bottle of non-intoxicating champagne cider.

At this dinner Viscount Tajiri, the aged Mayor, paid this tribute to our religion: "We appreciate your coming to Tokio, for you came here for the sake of Christianity and humanity. In the name of Christ, and in the spirit of Christianity, we are brothers, we are sisters." He thanked the Christians of Japan for bringing the Sunday school delegates to Tokio. The Viscount led the Japanese in three "Banzais" for the World's Sunday School Convention. "Banzai" is a word equivalent to our "Hurrah."

We understand this welcome cost Tokio $75,000, but an official apologized for its meagerness.

A third function of large importance was the reception given the delegates at the Imperial Theatre on one of the closing evenings of the Convention. Each delegate received an invitation in true Japanese language. Though he was not sure what it meant, he was told that if he were not at the theatre at a certain time he would regret it all his life. He was there. The reception was given by the Patrons' Association, composed of the leading men of Japan, organized several years ago, when Count Okuma was Premier, to make the proper provision for the entertainment of the Convention. The Count was its president.

Two thousand guests were ushered into the lobby of the theatre, which had been converted into a beautiful garden. Boughs of tinted autumn leaves sprung up like trees from the floor, while on each side of the entrance staircase were banks of chrysanthemums in yellow and white. Flags of the 30 nations represented in the Convention were draped artistically over the canopy outside and in the lobby itself. The entire theatre had been decorated for the occasion and tables had been placed in every available room and lobby space for the dinner that was served when the ceremonies were completed.

Baron Sakatani, vice-president of the Association, presided. He expressed his opinion that the present World's Sunday School Convention looked greater and more respectable than the Peace Conference which was held at Versailles after the great war. He said:

"I am not a Christian yet, but, thinking most frankly and impartially, I do not hesitate in the least to call your religion the World Religion—not a national or a State religion. We, the people of the whole world, regardless of race or religion, must rejoice at the appearance of the great World Religion, which is Christianity."

Viscount Shibusawa, in his remarks, made this significant statement:

"I know that the most important thing in a man's life is his religion. I want the young people of my country to have strong religious faith, whatever creed it may be. Since the introduction of European and American science into Japan I fear that we have over-emphasized the intellectual side of education and have neglected the moral aspect. Because the Sunday School Convention will furnish our youths an opportunity to revitalize faith and to kindle fires in their souls, I have enlisted my support for it."

Are these not lofty utterances of these great leaders, and do they not point to the not remote Christianization of this great empire?

Some people are always grumbling because roses have thorns. I am thankful that thorns have roses.—Alphonse Karr.

WHO SHALL TRAIN OUR METHODIST YOUTH?

money, for power, and for pleasure has swept on unchecked, because so much of our education has been Godless and Christless, and there has been lacking in it the strong tonic of brotherly sacrificial love to counteract the inherent selfishness of the human heart. If our civilization is to be saved, if it not to be eaten up by selfishness, the teachings of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, must be its saving salt. Unless Methodism shirks her responsibility in these fiery testing days she must not only furnish training for her children, but she must furnish training which will be positively Christian, not only for their own sakes but that they may be teachers and leaders in society, in business, in the school, and in the church.

But if Methodism loves her children and desires to retain their respect, love and loyalty, she must furnish for them schools which are adequately equipped and endowed to give the training which the church ought to give. It is shameful for the church to be satisfied with inferior equipment and instruction for our children, when we are abundantly able to supply as good as any in the land. It is absurd, even suicidal, to send our boys and girls to be trained for leadership in the church and in the nation, and then selfishly withhold what is necessary to give them equal opportunity with other boys and girls. The fact stares us in the face that the bulk of our leadership in the pulpits, in the Sunday school, and in church life generally must come from our own church schools. The quality of that leadership is necessarily greatly affected by the quality of the schools. If we furnish our children mediocre, second-class product and leadership. If we furnish first-class schools, we will get a first-class product and first-class leadership.

The call of the General Conference of 1918 to the church at large is a recognition of the great necessity that is upon us to train our own children, to train them under positively Christian influences, and to train them in schools which are adequately manned, equipped and endowed to produce a leadership equal to the great needs of the world to-day.

The great purpose of the Christian Education Movement is to set forth the facts as to the needs of our children, and the needs of the church in its great work, as to stir to the depths the conscience of our people and bring to them the unescapable conviction that they will be held responsible by God for giving to their children Christian-training in the homes and in the school, which will fully prepare them to do their life work. Such conviction will inevitably produce great results.

THE PARAMOUNT NEED OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

(From the Address to the Church by the Methodist Educational Association.)

The world of to-morrow is going to be what the education of to-day is, and the church will do its work well or ill, will be a conquering church, ministering effectively to all human needs, by just the measure of its power to influence the educational life of to-day and to-morrow. If it lets the world continue training men and women primarily for materialistic, practical, social, and selfish ends as it has been doing, it will be false to its duty to the world itself and will ultimately find its own leadership futile and limited. He is dull and blind who has not seen the significance of this truth in the blood and terror and agony of these recent years.

1. Here, then, is our immediate task as a church facing the need of the day—"to make religion more educational, and education more religious." To do this we must begin with the home. This is the child's first school, and the church should see to it that a revived religious life in the home shall function in terms of a deeper responsibility on the part of the parents, a more intelligent understanding of what they are to do and how they are to do it, a more thorough consecration to the duty of training their children religiously, and a closer co-operation with the other religious educational interests of the church.

2. The next great agency of the church devoted to religious education is the Sunday school, or the church school, as it is now called. Of the Sunday school, its mission, its aims, its method and its spirit, we have come to a new understanding, and we must train men and women who, by virtue of their training, are able to take advantage of this newer understanding and apply it to the religious education of all the youth of the church.

3. Finally, the church has its schools and colleges and universities, as its other agencies for religious education. It dare not feel that it has fully met its duty if it stops its educational mission with the home, the Sunday school, and the teaching function of the pulpit. It dare not do this because its business is to put religion into the whole of life, and nothing so determines the quality of life as the kind of education it is subject to. The church thus maintains its schools, colleges and universities, first, for just this conception of education—that no education is complete that leaves God and Christ out and fails to inform character with Christian principles and motives. It does this, in the second place, because it cannot escape the conviction that it is its bounden duty to train its youth in an atmosphere dominantly congenial to its own faith and spirit.

It does this, in the third place, because its schools, colleges and universities are the recruiting grounds and training camps for its leadership.

Without institutions devoted to this purpose, its efficiency, its service, its progress, would be immensely hampered. This would be so, not only on account of the mere shortage in the supply of ministers and of every type of religious worker and leader, but also because of a lack of the special kind of training needed for the tasks the church has in hand.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

By Rev. J. R. Countiss, President.

For four years the attendance at Grenada College has not only taxed its capacity, but each session prospective students had to be turned away. The present session opened with an enrollment that went beyond the entire registration for any previous year and the student body now numbers 240. The freshman class numbers more than seventy, which is nearly equal to the boarding patronage at the beginning of the present administration. Had the new Administration Building been a third larger, it could easily have been filled.

The health of the students has always been remarkably good, but this year has excelled in that respect, no student having been seriously ill and the need for a physician having been rare. After careful examination of the students, the physician in charge stated that he had never seen a group with as good a record as to general health, as well as with reference to diseases of eye, ear, nose and throat.

The morale of the students was never better, nor has the deportment ever been so good. The institution is spoken of as "our school," and the spirit of co-operation is everywhere manifest. All records for excellence on examinations were broken at the end of the first semester. The teachers have shown a genuine interest in the welfare of the pupils, giving freely of their time to those in need of special assistance.

The social and athletic activities of the students have been wholesome and helpful, while the religious atmosphere has been altogether commendable. The fall revival, conducted by Dr. S. S. McKenney, of Galveston, Texas, brought every student into the church. There are now in school nine student volunteers for the foreign field, while many others have pledged themselves for part-time service and to follow the leadership of the Spirit, should they feel impressed to give their lives wholly to Christian service. More than one hundred signed tithing cards, a considerable number having enrolled previously. An active Young People's Mission Society is conducted by the students, their record for last year having been the best made in the North Mississippi Conference. The visits of the representative of the Woman's Board have been exceedingly helpful. Nothing done in recent years has served to connect student activities so closely with their church work at home, thus adding the schools in returning trained and efficient workers to the pastors and Sunday school superintendents. There is a large class in the Teacher Training course who expect to receive their diplomas along with their diplomas from the literary department. On the whole, the relation between the church and the school was never so close and effective. That the school is doing its part in training for Christian leadership is proved by the fact that only one graduate in twelve years did not leave school an active, working Christian. Credit for this, however, belongs in large measure to the Christian homes which have furnished the material. Blessed is that school receiving students who have been taught obedience, good manners and good morals from their infancy. To fall with such material were an unpardonable crime.

The institution has all the patronage it can care for. It needs means and equipment to give these young people all that a first-class college can impart to prepare them most efficiently for life work.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Through an unfortunate failure to receive a communication intended for this issue of the Advocate, we are unable to give a statement concerning the work of Millsaps College. We are unwilling, however, for the Educational Number to go out without mention of this institution of Mississippi Methodism which ranks with the best in the connection. Without having been specifically authorized to do so, we take the privilege of saying a few words concerning this really great college.

Since its opening in 1892, Millsaps College has done a remarkably effective work for higher education in Mississippi. From the beginning it has had an efficient administrative organization, an able faculty, and an earnest, serious-minded student body. It has taken a high place in the educational world by reason of the scholarly work of its professors, the attainments of its alumni, and the capable leadership of those who have served as president. Its resources and equipment have steadily grown, until to-day, with its recently completed dormitory, it is one of the foremost A-Grade institutions of the church.

It has by no means, however, reached the limit of its possibilities for usefulness if its friends will consider the important place it occupies in the life of a great State and if they will rally to its support with gifts and patronage such as it deserves. The spirit of the student body is admirable, the interest of the alumni is expressing itself in definite form, and the energies of the president and the faculty are being expended unceasingly for the constant improvement of its work. It has a great constituency in the loyal Methodists of Mississippi, and its success is measured only by their willingness to stand by it with cordial and substantial support.

We can have no other thought but that the urgent needs of Millsaps College will so impress themselves upon the friends of Christian education in Mississippi during the progress of the great Movement in which the church is now engaged that there will be a hearty response to its appeals, and that, along with all our other institutions, it will be enabled to enter a new era of prosperity and usefulness. An already great institution will be made greater by the productive enthusiasm generated by the Christian Education Movement.

H. T. CARLEY.

FROM THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SECRETARY.

Dear Brethren: You are aware of my appointment at the last Annual Conference as Educational Secretary for the Mississippi Conference. I entered upon this work with some trepidation, feeling unequal to the task because of its greatness.

During the past month I have been trying to study it from every angle. It rises before me as a great mountain peak; and yet the mountain peak is the first to catch the rays of the early morning sun. As I have prayed and thought and planned, I have not in any sense changed my viewpoint as to its greatness, and yet, standing side by side with it, is the command of the church to encompass the field, and the promise of our Lord, "Lo, I am with you." There has come into my mind again and again a statement of the Divine writer who said, "Who is so great a God as our God?"

I am sure that the General Conference made no mistake; I am sure that those in authority made no mistake when they put each claim upon its own merit. The Centenary only showed us what we could do. We must meet the obligations made as regards the Centenary; but rising higher and higher than the Centenary is the claim of Education, for unless we have trained men and women, then the departmental work of our church, from the smallest mission in the home land to the farthest missionary in the foreign field, we can not accomplish anything.

Christian schools stand before them at the very opening of the way, pointing the youth of our land to her halls that they may be equipped for whatever position God may call them. Can we, then, afford to think of the difficulties? Can we afford to be as the ten spies who beheld themselves as grasshoppers? It was not the enemy who called them grasshoppers. They had the idea themselves. We are not grasshoppers; we are men and women called by God with the assurance that we will succeed.

And we will succeed if we will only turn to Him. If we believe that this great question is of God, who are we to say that it can not be accomplished? So let us as preachers and laymen of the church of God, as we look out into the future and see the great need of this great Educational Movement, renew our covenant with God, re-establish our family altars that have fallen down, pay to the Lord that which justly belongs to Him, and turn over to the church that which belongs to it. The time for ACTION has come. The battle now is on. He that is not for us is against us. If we only look closely, we will see that the chasm has already been spanned by God and all we have to do is to cross over and the VICTORY IS OURS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI SET-UP MEETINGS.

My Dear Brother Pastor: You have already had a call from your presiding elder to come to the District Set-up Meeting of the Christian Education Movement. This call was made by the authority of Bishop McMurry and the Board of Education.

The PURPOSE of this meeting is not to give orders or to be ordered, but to counsel together concerning this supreme task of the church, how we may best carry out the plans made by our last General Conference to meet a crisis in our church and in the great field of education. We want to form plans by which we may execute the orders of our General Conference and of our Annual Conference, for which we voted unanimously.

The NECESSITY for this Movement is seen everywhere. It is not optional with us if we are to follow the leading of Providence and be obedient to the Heavenly Father and loyal to our church.

We insist that you come to your District Set-up Meeting and help us plan this definite work this new year. The General Conference has said that "during these two years, as far as possible, the full power of the church be delivered in this movement." Without this Movement the Centenary is crippled, the wheels turned back. Every consideration urges us to most earnest efforts. If the expense of the trip, Brother Pastor, is in the way, send the bill to me and I will see it paid.

Yours in the work,

J. H. HOLDER,

Secretary of Education.

GET THEM AS SOON AS YOU CAN.

Dr. J. J. Stowe, secretary of the Department of Stewardship, has written three leaflets recently that we should like to see in the hands of every member of our church. They are: "One Night," "While It Rained," and "The Two Spies." We understand they are to be used in the work of the Centenary and the Educational Movement, and their distribution will be provided for; but we want to call the attention of our readers to them now in order that they may be on the lookout for them. We picked them up, intending to glance through them just to see what they are; but our glance turned into a steady gaze—and we read all of them through with intense interest. They all deal with Christian stewardship, and "The Two Spies" is intended especially for preachers—but they are good reading for everybody, saint and sinner. We repeat the advice contained in the caption—"Get them as soon as you can."

The "Stewardship Manual for Use of Pastors," also by Dr. Stowe, ought to be in the hands of every preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It is a commonplace to say that it is worth its weight in gold, but it is worth that—and more.

EDUCATION AND RESEARCH

The Indian village is the main support of American missions and has always been so. During the last twenty-eight years of the history of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, not more than half were in the various fields named. Of these 100 were college graduates, although in these days college training was not so easy to obtain as now.

The history of some mission stations seem almost like the human rolls of certain villages.

In this field lies one of the greatest justifications for the larger endowment of Christian colleges. The whole world waits for missionaries to produce them; the Christian school must be more liberally supported.

It is declared that 100,000 trained workers will be necessary to man properly the various fields in the next five years; that 13,000 will be needed by the Methodist Episcopal Church alone; that it will require 3,000 foreign missionaries at once to bring the work of Protestantism to the point at which it would have been had not the war occurred; that the Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church could use the entire output of the theological schools, leaving none for the ministry in this country; that the Methodists in India are on a 25 per cent basis of efficiency, baptizing 50,000 converts annually and turning away 150,000 because of an insufficient number of missionaries. — Christian Education Movement.

La Grange (Ga.) College reports almost 100 per cent increase in enrollment over last year. The college buildings and equipment have been improved, and the citizens of La Grange have pledged $250,000 for the building of a greater college.

In Randolph-Macon College are 42 ministerial students; in Trinity College, 26; in Birmingham-Southern College, 26; in Millsaps College, 22; in Morris-Harvey College, 20; in Emory and Henry College, 18; in Central College, 17; in Hendrix College, 17; in Wofford College, 15; in Southwestern University, 15; at Emory University there are 117 ministerial students, and at Northern Methodist University, 79. No college for men in our church fails to report ministerial students enrolled.

In Grenada (Miss.) College, revival services were held early in the present scholastic year. There were thirteen young women who volunteered for Christian life service, eighty-five either renewed their vows of Christian service or gave themselves for the first time to such a life, and 103 made the

The enrollment in Trinity College for the present session is about fifty in advance of the number enrolled at this time a year ago. The courses of study at the college have been recently reorganized, two groups being those in Religious Training and Business Administration. There have been no additions to the faculty this year. In the departments of History, Biology, Mathematics, Economics and Modern Languages. Substantial increases are being made in the endowment fund, and plans are being made for several new buildings—a gymnasium, a dormitory for women and a science building.

Wesleyan College, our oldest college for women, was never more prosperous than now. Hundreds of young women were turned away this year, and the demands upon the institution make it imperative that the Methodists of Georgia and Florida give it such equipment and endowment as will launch the old college upon a greater career. The people to whom Wesleyan looks for support will not fail of their duty in this best day of the history of the institution. The alumnae of Wesleyan are especially active in the carrying out of the program of the Christian Education Movement.

Wadsworth College, at Brookhaven, Miss., began the present session with a new territory. This made it possible to enroll many students who otherwise would have been denied admission, and the increase over last year's enrollment is nearly one hundred. Other buildings recently completed or now under construction are a Y. W. C. A. hut, a gift of the students, and a gymnasium, the gift of Mr. Walter Lampton. Several additions to the faculty have been made the present session, a professor of Bible and Religious Education, an athletic instructor, and an increase of the teaching force in the Music Department.

Blackstone College for Girls, Blackstone, Va., some months ago lost by fire its main building. Plans for rebuilding have taken definite form and work on the new structure will begin early in the new year. The possibilities of this school are unlimited, and with adequate equipment, such as Virginia Methodists and other friends of the school will supply, there is no reason why it should not be one of the leading junior colleges of the South. The greatest asset Blackstone has is the religious atmosphere which pervades the daily life of the school. Out of the fire of last spring will come a greater Blackstone.

Epworth League.

THE BEGINNING.

We begin modestly this week an Epworth League Department, which we shall endeavor to make both interesting and helpful to those of our young people who are engaged in the work of this most valuable organization, and which we hope will be the means of interesting our readers generally in the activities of the young men and women, boys and girls, who are developing Christian character and are in training for positions of leadership in the church of the future. We are necessarily restricted as to the amount of space we can devote to this Department, but to the best of our ability we will utilize that space in such way as to help the work of the Epworth League. We believe in the League as an organization, and we honor the Leaguers for their loyalty, enthusiasm, and zeal.

CONFERENCE ORGANIZATIONS.

The marked progress during the past year in the League work in our three Conferences is due largely, we are sure, to the fact that the personnel of the Conference organizations is so efficient. In the Louisiana Conference, Rev. W. E. Thomas, of New Orleans, is president of the Conference Epworth League Board, and Mr. Jas. B. Grambling, of Shreveport, is president of the Conference Epworth League.

In the Mississippi Conference, Mr. W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian, is president both of the Conference Epworth League Board and of the Conference Epworth League.

In the North Mississippi Conference, Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Durant, is president of the Conference Epworth League Board, and Rev. W. R. Lott, of Holly Springs, is president of the Conference Epworth League.

All these officers are aided by assistants in various capacities who are well qualified to render efficient service. At an early date we hope to be able to give a complete roll of the Conference organizations.

STATE-WIDE MEETINGS.

It is not too early for the Leaguers to begin planning for a full representation at their State-wide meetings next summer. The Louisiana Epworth League Assembly will meet at Mansfield in June, and the North Mississippi League will hold its annual meeting at Grenada in June. So far as we know, the Mississippi Conference League has not yet made its announcement.

THE QUIET HOUR COVENANT MEETING.

For many years the devotional meeting for the first Sunday in January has been devoted to the development of the prayer life through the Quiet Hour Covenant. We earnestly hope that the meeting next Sunday will be unusually fruitful in enlisting our young people in a definite agreement to pray daily during the year. Prayer is always necessary for the development of the personal religious life—but, somehow or other, we feel that all of us need to pray this year more than ever before. We are facing difficult problems that prayer alone can solve—and we must do our part in solving those problems.

MOTION PICTURE TO BE USED BY MOVEMENT.

A two-reel moving picture is being prepared for use in the Christian Education Movement. This picture is for special use in large cities and in alumni and set-up meetings. It will be produced by the International Church Film Corporation of New York. The Publicity Department of the Movement is writing the scenario and will supervise the making of the film. The picture will be taken in New York and at several of our colleges and universities. The object of the Commission in having such a picture prepared is to present the cause of Christian Education in the most effective way possible. —Bulletin.

Birmingham-Southern College enrollment represents an increase of 25 per cent over the figures of last year. The new dormitory, a three-story brick and steel structure, is filled to capacity.

Randolph-Macon Woman's College, with an enrollment of more than 600, denied admission to more than 500 young women because of lack of room. With such equipment and other facilities as are needed, this institution can enroll 1500 students.

Among the junior colleges of our church the following make splendid showings in the number of ministerial students enrolled: Hiwassee College, 23; Clarendon College, 22; Young Harris College, 20; Wesley College, 18; Reinhardt College, 12.

MARRIED.

On December 25, in the Methodist church, Magnolia, Miss., Mr. ALFRED W. TUCKER, of New Orleans, La., to Miss MABEL CLYDE SCOTT, of Magnolia, Miss., Rev. H. E. Carter, of Iuka, Miss., officiating. The bride is a half sister of Rev. H. E. Carter.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 9.

Lesson Topic: Forgiveness: Its meaning And Scope.

Scripture Lesson:—Matthew 18:21-35; Luke 17:3-4.

Golden Text: "If ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you." Matt. 6:14.

Home Readings: Monday, A Short Story About Forgiveness, Matt. 18:21-27; Tuesday, An Unforgiving Spirit, Matt. 18:28-35; Wednesday, Repentance and Forgiveness, Luke 15:10-19; Thursday, A Father Forgives His Boy, Luke 15:20-24; Friday, A Brother Forgives His Brethren, Genesis 45:4-15; Saturday, A Prayer For Forgiveness, Psalm 51:1-9; Sunday, A Prayer For Forgiveness, Psalm 51:10-19.

Teaching Points.

1. Jesus did not hesitate to state clearly the principles of righteousness, no matter how hard they might seem to men.
2. Forgiveness is one of the essential Christian virtues. Our hope of Divine forgiveness is based upon our willingness to forgive those who sin against us.
3. Forgiveness, however, is conditioned upon the penitence of the one who has done the wrong.
4. The duty of forgiving is as "inexhaustible" as the duty of loving.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

1921 never came before and can never come again. What are we doing with the golden moments as they come and go?

We have an impossible task to perform this year. This is our opportunity to rediscover the fact that God is able to do the impossible through us. Will we let him? There is nothing too hard for God.

Most of us are in debt to some one that has been lenient with us. We are all overwhelmingly in debt to God. We are fortunate that he is our surety. But he does not expect us to throw up our hands and cry out, "We can't do it."

The Home Quarterly is an 80 page magazine, price 60 cents a year for a single subscription, 5 or more to one address 12 cents each per quarter. Send to Smith & Lamar for a copy. Read it and then pray the Lord to call some one to help put this periodical in every home where there is an invalid, or one that is too old to attend Sunday school, or where they are too indifferent. If you desire to establish family altars and get the people to read a word from the Bible and pray daily, use this magazine. If you want a religious church, you must make the homes religious.

The superintendent of the Home Department recently gladdened the heart of one of our worthy superannuates by sending a Christmas gift of a few dollars. The preacher only had to make the suggestion and many hearts were made glad on account of this simple deed. Good for the Home Department at Sardis!

Several have sent in their names as students for our Standard Training School to be held at Grenada College, from May 30 to June 5. It is not too early to make up your mind about attending and selecting the course you wish to take. We will have a strong faculty and an extensive course. We expect to hold at least two district schools equal in the class of work done to Junaluska or Grenada. Sardis has put in her bid for the first district school. These schools are to be held every year as long as our people desire to learn more about teaching religion. Our aim is to have trained teachers in every school in the Conference. The day is not far distant when every teacher will be required to make preparation for this most important work.

You have not said a word about holding a Wesley Bible Class Federation for all our organized classes during the year. It would be foolish to ask the question, "Do we need it?" But it is not foolish to ask, "Do we want such a gathering of our laymen, our women, and young people to learn better how to organize our forces and put them to saving the lost?" We have no time to lose; we are already too late to save thousands who have gone beyond our reach. What sort of a man is it who sits still and belittles the fellow who is trying to do something worthy of our Lord?

NOTICE.

There is called a district "set-up" meeting, in connection with the Educational Movement, in Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, January 12, 1921. All pastors of the district, district secretary of Sunday schools, district secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, district secretary of the Epworth Leagues, district chairman of Minute Men and the presiding elder are expected to be present.

Let all pastors and the other officials named plan to be with us in this meeting. Live subjects in connection with the Educational Campaign will be discussed by able speakers and our district organization will be effected.

REPENTANCE: A VITAL MATTER IN PERSONAL SALVATION.

By Rev. W. A. Betts.

Foreword: So depraved are we by nature that one can neither repent nor exercise saving faith until there is wrought in his mind, and heart as well, a profound conviction that he is a wretched sinner, deserving and constantly exposed to the righteous and avenging wrath of his just though merciful Maker. The Holy Spirit unhindered, can and will cause one intellectually to see and emotionally feel such to be the case with him personally. Any one may, however, by willful refusal to see, and hardening the heart against feeling it, fail to be convicted, thereby effectually hindering the benevolent effort made for his salvation. Such is the freedom of the human will that one may either choose or refuse to be saved. The ordinary effect of a deep conviction of sin is a serious desire and effort to escape from the guilt, pollution and consequences of one's transgressions and vileness.

Evangelical repentance involves (1) "A broken and contrite heart" on account of one's acts of iniquity and sinfulness (proneness to err) as well. And the contrition or penitent grief experienced is based not upon a dread of the punishment impending so much as upon the painful consciousness of having wronged very grievously the loving heavenly Father. "Against (Thee most of all) have I sinned and done this evil in Thy sight," is the bitter wail of the guilt-laden psalmist. (51:4.) So, too, the prodigal felt: "I have sinned against heaven, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy son; make me as one of thy hired servants." (Luke 15:18-19.)

There is likewise experienced in repentance (2) A heartfelt hatred of sin, which creates a disgust for all forms of evil, even unto an abhorrence of that which appears to be such. There is realized a positive distaste for worldly pleasure and sinful gratification of any sort.

It goes without saying, that genuine repentance is ever marked by (3) Utter separation from sin and its enticements. Any willing indulgence in things known to be forbidden, or neglect of duties incumbent, is certain evidence of an impenitent spirit, and cannot comport with the scriptural requirement to put away the filthiness of the flesh and spirit (II Corinthians 7:1.) Entire forsaking of sin is necessary whether pertaining to the thoughts, utterances, conduct, or disposition. Moreover, careful avoidance of any liability to err is studiously cultivated. One may not dally with temptation. Indeed, a truly repentant person "burns the bridges behind him" lest opportunity to retreat induce it. He will watch as well as pray.

(4) Unreserved acknowledgment or confession of sin is a pre-eminent characteristic of repentance. It is perfectly natural for one who has renounced sin to make a well-defined declaration of the fact, and gladly, in public, though in a modest manner. Undue reticence on the subject sometimes arouses suspicion of insincerity, while open confession is usually reassuring. There is an invariable accompaniment of repentance found in an honest effort at making amends. It is commonly called "restitution," and in addition to certain specific acts of repairing injuries done, seeks expression in a continual effort to do good, whereby to overhance past wrongs done and redeem mispent time.

Suffered Twenty-eight Years.

Miss Nora Erney, 1351 Poplar St., Terre Haute, Ind., writes: "For the past 28 years I had rheumatism in my back. I tried everything, but got no help. I saw Foley Kidney Pills advertised in the paper. I sent for some and they helped me right away. I recommend them to other sufferers." Winter aggravates symptoms of kidney trouble; cold weather makes aching joints, sore muscles and irregular bladder action more unbearable. Foley Kidney Pills help the kidneys eliminate pain-causing poisons. Good for bladder weakness.

THE COUNTRY CHURCH BUILDING.

By M. W. Brahham.

Regardless of the improved conditions under which the rural Sunday schools of the future may work, it is safe to say that there are more than 1,000,000 of the present generation of white boys and girls who will receive what instruction the church has to give in what is known as the one-room church. That this condition is unavoidable for the present, is undoubtedly true in many instances. This article will undertake, therefore, to set forth some of the possible ways of improvement as applied to these conditions.

It is estimated that of the 30,000 country church buildings in the South in which Sunday schools are held, not more than four or five thousand have more than the one room in which to meet. That this condition is not confined to the South does not make out any better case for us. Neither does the fact that 6,000,000 public school children in the United States receive their training in one-room public schools make us rejoice. However, it is comforting to know that there are many others who are striving to find better ways.

It has been well said that it is a wise thing to recognize your limitations and a foolish thing to be bound by them without an effort to improve them. It is in the spirit of those who strive to improve that this question is discussed. The room for improvement has been declared to be the largest room in the world. Nowhere is this truer than in the matter of the church buildings of the country.

The Sunday school which now meets in the one-room building must of necessity do one or more of several things if its work is not to be greatly hindered:

1. It may discover better ways to use the present equipment.
2. It may modify the present equipment by changing the arrangements for seating, both in the worship and instruction periods.
3. It may enlarge the present building by the addition of rooms.
4. It may erect an entirely new building.

Taking these suggestions in the order stated, let us look at the possibilities more in detail:

1. It has been declared by one worker that there is no such thing as a "one-room church." That there is an outside as well as an inside is a fact too often overlooked. For instance, one of the glories of many a country church is the beautiful grove of shade trees which surround it. It has happened time and again that some classes have made use of well-selected spots out under the shade of the trees for the recitation period. Where proper seats are arranged, this plan may be followed for the greater part of the year in most of our Southland. Then, again, it is not an infrequent thing to find the public school building or a residence right close by the church, and rooms in such buildings have been utilized in many communities. Still another plan for making better use of present equipment is found in the use of the building by certain groups at one hour, and by the other groups at the next hour. For instance, if all the classes of pupils under twelve used the building from 9:30 to 10:30 then the other groups could use it for the following hour. There are certain apparent difficulties in the way of this, but it is full of fruitful possibilities in several directions. In communities where good teachers are hard to secure, this plan would make it possible to utilize some of the best for both periods—a rather hard task, it is true, and yet a better plan than often exists at present.

2. Some schools have found that they could improve their work by a different arrangement of the seats. If chairs are used, the groups may be more easily arranged in half-circles about the teacher at the lesson period. If the chairs have the wide-arm rests, they serve still better for this purpose. Different size chairs for different age pupils will prove to be a great help in making the one-room church more adaptable to Sunday school uses. In addition to the chairs, good screens, which may be bought or may be made at home, will enable the teacher to have her group cut off from the others in a fairly satisfactory manner. If the screen is of beaver board and made of three sections hinged together, one panel may be used effectively as a blackboard by applying slate paint. These screens may be folded and put out of the way when not needed. Other plans for dividing the one-room church are being tried, such as the window shade plan, curtains and other devices. However, many think that the screen is most desirable.

3. Some marvelous changes have been made by adding to or remodeling the one-room church. Grace church, Union, South Carolina, offers a remarkable instance of this kind. Pictures of the old church and the new, together with floor plans of the present building, may be secured by writing to the General Board of Church Extension, Louisville, Kentucky. In writing, ask for Bulletin Number 4.

Some churches have moved the old building back and built new auditoriums for the preaching and other assembly purposes. In these cases, the old building has been divided up for Sunday school rooms. Where the timbers were in good condition and where the congregation provided ample funds for doing this work thoroughly, this plan has been fairly satisfactory.

PILES DON'T BE CUT

Until you try this wonderful treatment, if you have piles in any form write for a FREE sample of PAGE'S PILE TABLETS and you will bless the day that you read this. Write to-day. E. R. PAGE, 430-44 Page Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Says It Is the Best in the World.

There is one remedy that those who know depend upon for relief from coughs, that "hang on" after the grip. Foley's Honey and Tar clears the passages, soothes raw, inflamed membranes and banishes irritation and tickling in the throat. A. H. McDaniel, Box 51, Lakeside, W. Va., writes: "I am glad to tell you that Foley's Honey and Tar is the best medicine in the world. I have had a severe cough and before I used half a bottle I was better."

Other congregations have added two or three rooms to the rear of the building, forming what is known as the "T" shape church. Others have added to the front, placing a porch with columns, and allowing for two rooms just as you enter the auditorium. Banks Chapel, North Carolina Conference, has one of the most attractive churches of this type to be found anywhere. They have the rooms at the rear also. This is an entirely new building.

4. The fourth plan for the one-room church is that of putting up a new building and providing adequately for the work of the church from the standpoint of preaching, teaching, and the social and expressional needs of the members. These three things must always be provided for if the church building is to be adequate. Training in worship, instructing the pupils in the Bible, and training in service should be kept in mind as the things for which the new church is planned.

The new building should be erected in the light of the present needs of the community, but the probable development of the community along all lines should be thought of also. No short-sighted policy should determine the building in which the present and the future generations are to be taught and trained. The contractor who guaranteed that the church building which he was to erect would last for fifteen years evidently had little idea of how long we use our buildings. Yet this kind of guarantee was actually given to a building committee within the last twenty years.

No memorial gift from any source which demands unfair things or seeks to saddle unfair conditions on the church should be accepted. Better wait longer for the building than allow such a thing. This is mentioned in this connection because a case is on record in which a church accepted $500 toward a building on condition that it would not have any rooms of any kind other than the auditorium. Stained glass windows, oak furniture for the pulpit and the congregation were installed, and they were handsome. But absolutely no provision was made for the teaching function of the church.

Floor plans and other suggestions as to building and equipment may be secured from the Department of Circuit Sunday Schools, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SET-UP MEETING.

The Set-Up Meeting for the Mississippi Conference was held in Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., on December 22, 1920. Because of illness and the interrupted railroad travel on account of the excessive rains the night before, several of the presiding elders and others directly interested were not present. The meeting, however, was a very highly enthusiastic one and the stride taken in the Mississippi Conference will carry the movement "over the top" when the command to charge is given.

The opening devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. C. W. Crisler, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, with the music furnished by Mrs. Culver, daughter of the Conference Secretary of Education.

The objectives of the Movement were set forth by Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College. Mrs. B. F. Lewis, President of the Woman's Missionary Society, spoke most interestingly of the part that the women will play in the movement. Dr. W. B. Ricks, Nashville, Tenn., who was present, spoke concerning religious training in the rural districts.

At the noon hour the ladies of the church served a splendid luncheon in the lunch room of the church.

The afternoon session was opened with religious services conducted by Rev. B. F. Lewis, Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage.

Dr. H. F. Tolle presented that portion of the program pertaining to prayer and stewardship. Rev. J. M. Morse, Conference Secretary of Education, presented the plans suggested at the Memphis meeting.

The following places and dates for the district set-up meetings were decided upon:

Seashore District, Gulfport, Wednesday, Jan. 5.

Hattiesburg District, Hattiesburg, Thursday, Jan. 6.

Brookhaven District, Brookhaven, Friday, Jan. 7.

Jackson District, Jackson, Tuesday, Jan. 11.

Vicksburg District, Vicksburg, Wednesday, Jan. 12.

Newton District, Newton, Thursday, Jan. 13.

Meridian District, Meridian, Friday, Jan. 14.

The Conference Team is composed of: Dr. A. F. Watkins, Dr. I. W. Cooper, Dr. Rolfe Hunt, Rev. H. W. VanHook; Conference Educational Secretary, the Presiding Elder.

G. L. HARRELL.

A LOVELY AND LASTING GIFT.

Perhaps no larger group of persons were made happier during this season of love and good-will than we at the Mary Werlein Mission, who, through the kindness of Mr. Parham Werlein and Mr. Paul Felder, received a handsome new piano.

We are indeed grateful for so lovely and lasting a gift and pray that this gift may be as great a blessing to the ones who gave it, as it will be to the ones who receive it.

E. W. McGLASSON.

The dispositions, affections, inclinations of soul, which shall issue hereafter in perfection, must be trained and nurtured in us throughout the whole course of this earthly life. When shall we bear in mind this plain truth, that the future perfection of the saints is not a translation from one state or disposition of soul into another, diverse from the former; but the carrying out, and, as it were, the blossom and the fruitage of one and the same principle of spiritual life, which, through their whole career on earth, has been growing with an even strength, putting itself forth in the beginning and promise of perfection, reaching upward with steadfast aspirations after perfect holiness?—H. FROM WEST MONROE, LA.

Dear Advocate: We held a watch-night service in West Monroe Methodist Church last night. It was a very gratifying success. The attendance was fine. The social in the basement lasted until nearly ten; then we went into the main auditorium and began our program. Every department of the church co-operated. We would love to tell you about it all, but shall refrain. As we look back over the program we would not change it, each one did so well.

After the devotional exercises, the choir directress read an article on music and briefly stated the plan of teaching the choir. Then every department of the church followed with reports and plans. Then came testimonials and resolutions. At the altar in our consecration service were numerous and earnest prayers. So the old year closed and the new year came in with the West Monroe Church on its knees. Only those who know how well this church is organized can know what it means when we say all the departments are co-operating. The secretary of the board said they would be able to pay monthly in advance. Why were those words musical? Then there has been a raise. Mr. Editor, harmony prevails and everything is lovely. One of our stewards, who has been a member in Dallas, in Denver, and some other large cities, said he had rather belong to this church than any church of which he had ever been a member. That is the prevailing sentiment here.

It has not been very many years since there were no preaching in West Monroe. So it is a valuable appointment added to the Conference. This summer the pastor has planned to visit a number of growing churches and study their development. Some have found it worth while to inquire how we have achieved what we have here with so meager opportunity. As we pray, the Lord quickens; so we hope to make this a year of earnest devotion.

Sincerely,
H. W. LEDBETTER.

Making Bad Things Worse.

Winter, as if it were an evil spirit, seems to take delight in making bad things worse. Rheumatism twists harder, twinges sharper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of acrofula are developed and aggravated. These are common diseases, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has been very successful in the treatment of these complaints. It is easily obtained, and there is abundant testimony that its effects are radical and permanent. In cases where a laxative or cathartic is needed, it is well to supplement Hood's Sarsaparilla with Hood's Pills, which are gentle, thorough and effective.—Adv.

WHY THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

The educational institutions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, not including the schools operated by the Board of Missions in the foreign field and at home, number eighty-eight. Of these, two are universities, thirty colleges, twenty-two junior colleges, twenty-six academies, and eight missionary and training schools. The total assets of these institutions, including grounds and buildings, equipment and endowment, are more than $30,000,000. The teaching force numbers 1275, and for the session of 1919-20 the student enrollment was 19,818.

At the beginning of the present session the number of students enrolled showed an increase of nearly twenty per cent as compared with the 1919 enrollment. More than three thousand were denied admission because of lack of room. The presidents of our schools were asked to give conservative estimates of possible enrollments provided their institutions had now such equipment and other facilities as are needed, and their estimates go beyond the present total enrollment by approximately nine thousand. The young men and women turned away from Methodist schools, the thousands who could be reached if only the church should give to its schools what their present day needs demand, these stand before Southern Methodism as a challenge and an appeal. To fail to answer the call of such a situation is to prove ourselves unworthy of this opportunity.

With reports received from eighty of our schools, there are in these institutions 652 ministerial students and 491 volunteers for missionary service. For its trained ministry and for well-nigh all of its missionaries the church must look to its own schools. There are those, even of our own people, who declare that the church schools hold to no higher religious ideals and furnish no better religious atmosphere than do the State and Independent colleges. The answer to this is in the fact that out of the schools of the church are coming our preachers and missionaries. And many of these young people are making their decisions for Christian life service after entering college. We need more of these volunteers for life service; we must have them if the work of the kingdom is to go forward. Practically our only source of supply is the church school. If there was no other ground for the appeal of the Christian Education Movement, the highest obligation of Southern Methodism to-day would be to so strengthen its schools that they may be able to serve every young man and woman who can be reached and be able to give to their students the best educational advantages within reach of the youth of our land. We cannot repudiate this obligation and face, free of condemnation, this new day that has come to the world.

Our schools stood aside during the days of greatest prosperity this country has known. And it was during a period when their needs were more pressing than ever before. How they have come through those trying experiences, have maintained their high standards, and have served more students than during any previous period of their history, only the men and women who have carried those heavy burdens can know. The church would be ungrateful—more than that, would be unworthy of the sacrifices made by our men and women who have carried the educational work of Methodism, if we did not now give to our schools all they need.

In the program of the Christian Education Movement every school of the church is included—there is provision for each in the askings that have been approved by the Christian Educational Commission. The connectional interests, for which each Conference will carry a share, are: Emory University, Southern Methodist University, Scarritt Bible and Training School, Breward Institute, Suo Bennett Memorial School, Holding Institute, Vashit Industrial Institute, and a Christian Workers' Educational Aid Fund. Each Conference school—college, junior college and academy—is included in the total askings of approximately $35,000,000. It is the biggest educational enterprise ever undertaken in the South. We will carry it through. Our schools need and must have all that is asked; it is our high obligation and privilege to give what they need, and with faith in God we shall go forward.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

PICKING A TOUGH JOB.

Doubtless there are some easy jobs in the world—and there are applicants for all of them; there are also some tough jobs—and many of them are waiting to be worked. The tough job is the finest opportunity a young man can find for realizing his own fullest self-development. He may dodge it and move along quietly and calmly in the line of least resistance—but he will never know what he could have done if he had been willing to put himself into his work. A tough job is a challenge to every drop of red blood in a fighting man's veins. It stirs his heart and puts him on his mettle and dares him to do his best. We suppose the easy jobs must be filled—but we have a strong admiration for the man who picks the tough one even when the other kind is available.

THE VALUE OF TRUTH.

A successful business man, in concluding a magazine article dealing largely with his own remarkable achievements in the business world, used these words: "Of course, all these things I am saying are predicated on the premise that a man is thoroughly honest with himself and with every one else. The most valuable commodity I have ever had to deal with is the truth. Success never comes without it." If a preacher had said this, it would have come as a matter of course, and people would have thought nothing more about it than that it was just what a preacher ought to say. But when the point of approach is from the business world altogether, and the speaker is not assuming the role of a teacher of morals, it carries an added weight. In these days of the tendency to take short cuts, to "trim the edges," to measure success solely in terms of dollars, it is refreshing to have brought to our attention so clearly and so emphatically the fact that truth is the most valuable asset a man can have as he swings out into the world to make his fortune. Let our young men and young women learn this before they face financial and moral bankruptcy.

WE ARE SORRY.

We have seen it announced that an inaugural ball will be held when President-elect Harding enters upon his high office. We are sorry. To say nothing of its moral significance, it strikes us that it is ill-becoming for the new administration to dance itself into office in the face of the most tragic situation the world has ever faced. It would be more in keeping with the fitness of things to have an all-night prayer meeting.

AN OLD TRICK.

It is impossible not to believe that much of the publicity now being given to the so-called lax enforcement of the prohibition law is part of an organized attempt to discount the law itself and bring about a revulsion of feeling that will result in congressional action favorable to the brewers. No sensible person ever expected that the prohibition laws would be perfectly enforced—no other law is—and the mere fact that liquor can still be bought, or that sworn officers of the law have been proved to be in collusion with its violators cannot legitimately be used as an argument against prohibition. It is a self-evident fact that prohibition is prohibiting in a very real way; and it will become increasingly effective as public sentiment demands its enforcement. It is an old trick to try to bring the law into contempt by claiming that it is a failure; the dealers themselves being witnesses, the present law is not as ineffective as they would like to have us believe. Prohibition is here, it is here to stay, and, ultimately, it is going to accomplish that for which it was established.

REFUSING A FORTUNE.

The newspapers a short time ago had a good deal to say about a young man who refused to accept a legacy of thousands of dollars left him by his father, his plea being that he was not entitled to it since he himself had not earned it, and that the possession of a fortune incapacitates a man for the finest service to his fellow-man. Whatever we may think of the action of the young man in question, it was so unusual as to attract attention throughout the country. What shall we say, then, of the men and women who persistently refuse to accept the riches provided for them through the infinite mercy of God—riches by the side of which the wealth of this world is but dross? We cannot all be wealthy as men count wealth, but it is our own fault if we are not "rich toward God."

SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

No person who is really concerned for the religious welfare of all the people can fail to be interested in the movement for the proper observance of the Sabbath. From time immemorial the religious significance of this one day in seven set apart for rest and the performance of distinctly religious duties has been so clearly recognized that there can be no question as to its value. In view of the tide of worldliness that is sweeping all lands to-day, all Christians need to be on guard lest this essential institution of our religion be overthrown. This does not mean, however, that our civilization must be made to conform itself to conditions as they existed thousands of years ago, or that arbitrary restrictions must be imposed upon activities that have grown out of the complex social, industrial, and economic order that has been evolved through the centuries. The injunction, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," must be interpreted in the light of that saying of the Master, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath."

FUNNY.

It is impossible to walk along the city streets without noticing the lengths to which some girls and women will go in complying with the mandates of fashion, which, just now, seem to run to shortness in skirts. If the spectacles one sees were not so excruciatingly funny, one might be inclined to feel that they are pitiful; but the humor of the situation is so penetrating that one walks on, suffused with the glow of an internal chuckle at the ridiculous figures that have been passed in review. We doubt not, if some of these devotees of fashion could see themselves as others see them, they would hesitate to appear on the streets even when fully clothed from the lobes of the ears to the soles of the feet. Even then the paint on their faces would furnish a suggestion for the comic supplements of the Sunday newspapers.

A MARVELOUS ESCAPE.

The newspapers recently contained full accounts of the marvelous escape of three naval balloonists who were carried by a gale from New York to the frozen regions of Northern Canada, where they almost perished before they were found and brought to safety. It was a thrilling story of heroic courage in the face of almost certain death, and of a marvelous rescue at the last moment. No wonder the world read it with bated breath and a tremendous sigh of relief. But everywhere in the wilderness of sin are lost men, many of them going to destruction every day because they will not heed the warnings and respond to the entreaties of those, who, for Christ's sake, are willing to give their very lives to save them—and the world calmly goes on its way. When a soul has escaped perdition the most marvelous rescue recorded in history has been made.

shudder at it. They are not coming and they will not come until we do better for our old preachers, furnishing them some comforts for their helpless old age. No sensible laymen will wonder at it. The church is making it too hard on her preachers. If we would be wise, we would settle this solemn matter right before we do anything else.

If we will get the church filled with the Holy Ghost, and provide for old preachers adequately, then we will get all the preachers we need and they will be thoroughly efficient.

Brookhaven, Miss.

BISHOP McMURRY'S MESSAGE TO THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

While I was spending a most happy day at the session of the Mississippi Conference at Brookhaven recently, I was suddenly called upon to "stand up and let us see you" by the incomparable chairman. Having been for six years accustomed to his wise direction and practical methods, I readily stood up. But it was not my attractiveness he was wanting to present, nor was he desirous that I should make a powerful speech. He wanted to send a message to my noble and faithful brethren in North Mississippi. It had just been represented that a telegram had arrived from Nashville saying that in paying Centenary pledges that Conference had risen to the seventh place among all the Conferences. So the good Bishop's breast swelled with commendable pride over the great work of one of "his" Conferences and he wanted the other of "his" Conferences to do as well. So with confidence he said, "Jaco, go back and tell your folks to get busy." So, now I say to you sixty thousand Methodists that our Bishop wants you to get busy, and elders, pastors, members prepare for and carry out Pay-Up Week, January 16-23. Let every one pay his third installment at once and all who are in arrears pay up not less than 40 per cent of their whole pledge. I beg that our good pastors read from bulletins and other literature to their congregations what the Centenary money is doing. Tell where it goes and what results follow. I talked recently with an ex-State senator who had decided not to pay any more on account of what he had "heard" was being done with the money. The devil is circulating lies about it. His mind was different when I told him what was being done.

By all means take a Mission Special for each church. Let each church select a special that costs just what the church pays on Centenary money each year, so that their money will go to the very spot they wish. They will get quarterly reports from these specials and thus learn what good is being done with their money. Write me asking for a special and telling me what you pay each year.

Remember Bishop McMurry's message and get busy. Organize a committee in each church, give a list of Centenary subscribers to each team and let the teams get the money on the first day if they can. Then on the morning of January 24, send all money straight to S. J. High, Tupelo, Miss. Our Conference must not be behind. The church that stays behind is not only discounting itself, but is reproaching the whole Conference.

The church that leads and the pastor that leads, like Prairie and Strongs, and D. W. Babb, honors God and the church and Conference. Everybody help to bring North Mississippi Conference to the front, January 16-23.

Earnestly,

BEN P. JACO.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D.

Well, Brother Carley, it looks like this is the year of the "down and outs." Clemenceau, Venizelos, Wilson, the Democratic Party, ye editors Blair, Kirkland, Lovett, and the Pelican Presiding Elders, all down and out! These last, I suppose, are consoling themselves with the slogan of the Salvation Army, "down, but not out." I did not get to Conference at De Ridder, but if I had foreseen the lively time you were going to have in the pinet, I would have strained a point to get there. I "sho" would have enjoyed seeing the P. E.'s dismount, and go waddling down the road, toting their wallets, singing,

Jordan sho' am a hard road to travel

When Mae comes along with his little gavel!

However, I bear them no grudge, for I have had one of the best years of my life. The goodness and mercy of the Lord have followed me all the days of my life, so it would be hard to pick out the best in the threescore years and ten that have past. All have been good, better, best. The path of the just, and so forth. I have travelled a circuit that has extended from the plains of Texas to the Peaks of Otter in Virginia; preached 260 times, and seen many happy conversions; lectured and given addresses to High Schools, Normal Schools, and Colleges, Rotarians, Lions, and various civic bodies; written a new book and read many old and new ones; scribbled a good deal for the Methodist papers; and am coming to the end of the year in splendid health, and irksome as a thoroughbred colt in a Kentucky blue grass pasture in June. Pretty good for a "worn out" preacher, don't you think so?

Carley, Maggie takes the wrong plan with Jiggs. Sister Steel does not use a rolling pin on me, she appeals to "noblesse oblige." For instance, she had me sealed up tight as wax on that convenient form of revenge, "I told you so!" If I start to say that, she quietly asks, "Do great men say that?" Of course, that checks the spurt, and I begin with Alexander "the great," and come on down, and I can't find that any of them said, "I told you so." Her subtle appeal to my ambition bothers me, for every man who is worth his salt desires to be great, even though he may never achieve it.

But I have found a precedent at last. I haven't told her yet, am waiting for the occasion to use it; for she will get around it some way when she finds it out. Paul, the greatest man of all antiquity, told the captain of that ship on which he was sailing to Rome: "You ought to have listened to me, and not have sailed from Crete. Then you would have escaped this suffering and loss"—in other words, "I told you so!" I wonder how Sister Steel will get around that! She is bound to admit that Paul was a great man. But I will go slow in using it, for I have a sly suspicion that she will emphasize Paul's benevolent spirit, or ask some embarrassing question about my comparing myself with Paul, and so on.

From the pictures the press has given us of the widow and sister of the deceased Mayor of Cork, they do not take his death very hard. Both of them were smiling, and looking like they were having the time of their life as the result of McSweeney's suicide, for that is what it was. I am largely Irish myself. My paternal grandfather came from the neighborhood of Belfast, County of Antrim, North Ireland. I have little patience with the blunders and injustice of British misgovernment in Ireland; but I have infinitely less with the unreasonable and rebellious spirit of the Sinn Feiners. Any one not blinded by partisan passion can see that England must control Ireland, if necessary with the sword; otherwise, it would become a base of German hostility, and soon be bristling with Krupp guns pointing across the channel. The United States has no right to meddle with that situation. To do so will be to make it worse. And the visit of the Irish women is not helping the cause of Ireland. Their frank admission that the only reason Ireland did not help Germany was because she could not, ought to be enough for us. But politics cuts queer dices in this country.

I am enjoying my involuntary immunity from pastoral burdens, and owe the Pelican P. E.s. a vote of thanks (!) for relieving me of the necessity of helping to raise thirty odd millions for education with cotton off like it is. Endowing our colleges is a paramount duty, but what about using in our schools godless textbooks in science? I have just examined, from cover to cover, a Physical Geography used in one of our colleges, and there is not a word from beginning to end that even remotely suggests the idea of God. We get our textbooks from the northern universities, and they got their science from the German universities, and the German universities were centers of infidelity. The same charge might be brought against most of the histories used in our colleges, they are godless and untrue.

One of the men who helped me in my youth was the Rev. Guilford Jones, D. D., of the Memphis Conference. He was ugly as a baboon, but he had one of the most beautiful women I ever saw for his wife. They might have made a fortune in this day in a movie as a picture of "Contrast." Dr. Jones was a wonderful preacher, and his hobby was Geology. After hearing one of his sermons, I caught the fever, and, greenhorn though I was, I got me a copy of "Dana's Geology Unabridged." I plodded through all those thousand pages, big print, little print, notes and all. That was science; that was the science taught in our colleges then, before German propaganda had injected its serum of atheism into our educational literature. What impressed me about that book, and about the only thing I remember distinctly, was the ending, just two Latin words, "Deus fecit"—God made it. Our young people do not get that sort of instruction now. They are teaching the same Biology in some of our schools that made the atheistic mind of Germany, and religion is left out of the scheme of American education as it is outlined by its most eminent leaders to-day. In the December World's Work Dr. Alderman, President of the University of Virginia, discusses the subject, and never alludes to the moral education which is the most important of all.

Carley, you are one of the pilots on the old ship. Nudge the boss pilot over at Nashville, and tell Dr. Anderson to get after these college presidents that are leaving God out of their courses of instruction. Of course, I'm an old foggy along this line. By the way, the Baptist pastor here in Mansfield recently preached a sermon in which he likened the church of the past to the ox wagon and the church of the present to the auto. The next day he went to Shreveport and got pulled for exceeding the speed limit! Which incident contains a parable. You youngsters may go too fast. What there is in America that is worth keeping rests at bottom on the work of a godly generation which it is now popular to consider as antiquated and uncouth. The "progress" that spurns the past is likely to land in the ditch. Of one thing I am sure, there is disaster ahead if we do not purge our institutions of learning of infidel textbooks.

I laugh, Carley, I laugh, I can't help it! What do I laugh at? Why, at Louisiana folks singing "America," and saying, "Land of the Pilgrim's pride." Stupendous ignorance! The land of the Pilgrim's pride was New England. Stretch it to the uttermost limit patriotic charity may demand, and it did not cross the Mississippi, and held up its hands in horror at all below the Potomac. It said distinctly, openly, and on the floor of Congress, that if Louisiana was admitted to the Union, Massachusetts would consider that the Union was dissolved. And yet these Pelican nincompoops whoop it up and imagine they are in line. The main fault I find with the New England folks is they are so provincial, and when I sing "America" I always substitute the word "Pilgrim" with the word "patriot," so as to include Dixie and California too. I don't propose to have my patriotism limited by the Hudson River. The South carried the flag to the Pacific in spite of Brother Smith, the author of the Pilgrim's pride song. Tell them to read history, Carley, tell them to read history. But the world is full of fools. The ancient Athenians threw the Persian envoy who brought the summons for earth and water, the tokens of surrender, into a well, and told him to help himself to water. The modern Athenians bow the knee, and kiss the harness of the horses that draw the chariot of the foreigner who rules them! Ta, ta.

LEAVES FROM THE LIFE OF DR. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

Many and Varied Experiences.

A preacher sees a great many things he ought not to see, and hears a great many things he ought not to hear. Bad impressions are received and they are hard to erase. I would be glad to get rid of some, and gladder still to know that many were falsely made. When Solomon said, "Through desire a man, having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddeth with all wisdom," I don't think he intended to encourage preachers to spend "Ten Nights in a Bar-room," nor even one night in a worse place in an effort to learn the ways of the wicked. Enough of that kind of "wisdom" comes to them incidentally, and in the course of their legitimate business. They will learn enough without "intermeddling." Their experiences will be sad enough with the members of their own flock.

One May day in 1865 I held forth on the text, "And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." There was present the most prominent member of the charge—an official of long and high standing. He was present as a visitor, he belonged to another society. I had no idea of seeing him that day, and of course the sermon was not prepared with him in view, though I was well aware that much of it fitted him exactly. He was greatly enraged—said I was "too young a man to talk to him in that way." I ate several meals with him during the year, but we never became very friendly. The first time I was at his house, when dinner was announced, he said: "Come, Brother Boswell, let us go out to dinner, but we've got nothing fit to eat." It was near the close of the war when nothing extra in the way of food was to be had. The dinner consisted of corn-bread, corn-field peas, and the thickest piece of fat meat I had ever seen. I did full justice to the bread and peas and the rye-coffee, but left the fat meat untouched. I was as much averse to fat meat as I was (and still am) to beef. When I had finished eating, the brother deliberately reached over with his fork and took my piece of fat meat and ate it—without explanation or apology. He didn't do it because he was poor, or stingy, for he was neither. It was a Pharisaic act, done to show that he was meek and lowly—condescending. Such was my impression. I was unconvinced. I could not see that that kind of testimony to righteousness was valid. What further impression was made on my mind I will not say.

Stewards are sometimes "tricky," or used to be. One of that kind down in Texas charged his preacher twelve and a half cents for bacon when the market price was only ten cents. When asked why he did it, he said: "I'm laying up treasure in heaven, and the more I charge for what I furnish the preacher (his idea was that he was giving it to the Lord) the bigger will be the balance in my favor." Bishop Marvin called that "inverted hypocrisy." I had a similar experience. One of my stewards, a merchant, bought a lot of chickens. In the goodness of his heart he sent several around to the parsonage without being asked. I esteemed it a great favor and thanked the brother accordingly, naturally supposing that, like many other good things that found their way to the preacher's house, the chickens were a free-will offering. When quarterly meeting came on, the chickens were reported at full value—and "a little the rise," I think. It was easy enough to make a "spec" on that kind of a transaction. That was one of the many little things I have met in life—little, but provoking.

Now and then a preacher says things that hurt—things necessary to be said, when nothing personal is intended. Brother Dick Cobb, at Morrilton, Ark., got much offended on one occasion and sent Brother Clifton to me to know if, in my talk on Sunday, I meant him. Brother Clifton came in due time, and said, "Dick Cobb is greatly hurt and wants to know if, in your sermon last Sunday, you aimed at him." "Yes," I replied, "tell Brother Cobb I meant him, and tell him that I meant you and Burrow, and Garland, and Crosier, and Moose, and Joe Beal, and all the rest of you."

In a little while Brother Clifton met Brother Cobb. "Dick, I saw Brother Boswell and he told me to say to you, that in his talk last Sunday he meant you." Brother Cobb drew back, bowed his neck ready for a fight. "But," said Brother Clifton, "he also told me to say to you that he meant me, and Burrow and Garland, and Crosier, and Moose, and Joe Beal and all the rest of us." Brother Cobb relaxed and after a moment's reflection said: "I guess Brother Boswell was right."

It was different with another brother—a man I loved and greatly respected. He got mad and would not be reconciled. In what I said he was not at all concerned. He was not in my mind. He was entirely above suspicion. I could not convince him that I was innocent, and he lived and died under the impression that I had wronged him. This misunderstanding impressed me strongly that, though a preacher is bound to rebuke evil, he should be careful not to single out individuals and make them public examples. There is a better way of dealing with individuals.

In that same church I lost one of our most popular sisters whose husband, though a clever man, was a horse-racer. In his eagerness he asked the judge of one of the courts to adjourn a session that the lawyers, jurors and others might attend the races. I rebuked the action as an insult, as a breach of good morals and an offense against the public welfare. In this case I could not help saying, "Thou art the man." The sister resented my remarks, wrote me a letter withdrawing from the church, and demanding a certificate. I sent her a paper certifying that she had withdrawn from the church—the only kind of certificate to which she was entitled.

The most troublesome people I ever had to deal with were what we called "pastoral gimlets." I don't hear the word these days, though I doubt not there are still some gimlets in the churches. Of course everybody knows that I refer to persons, men and women, who know how and take delight in harrowing the feelings of the preacher by caustic remarks and criticisms. They meet you at the door and say: "Come in, Brother Jones; it's been an age since you paid us a visit," or, "Well, you've gotten around to see us at last. I thought you had forsaken us entirely." And some, apparently badly hurt, will say: "I have been wondering what I had done to cause you to slight me so long. You have passed my door ever so many times without stopping." Such remarks, varied in a score of ways, a preacher often hears. And they are mostly undeserved. But he must make up his mind to bear them—patiently, if he can, for to answer them or undertake a defense will do no good.

Besides, preachers ought to know that they are not perfect. A few preachers never learn this, and, with other unfortunate brethren, expose themselves to criticism. I am perhaps further from the goal than anybody, but I did learn a little on the way and profited by my knowledge even if it did come to me in a roundabout way. For instance: After I had been in the work fifteen years a brother, a warm personal friend, said of me: "You've got to handle him like a wasp, lest you get stung." Another brother, after a complimentary word, added: "But he hasn't got all the rough corners knocked off yet." A man should profit by such criticisms. Again, I have met unjust accusations, and have been accorded unfair treatment. These I have pocketed and said nothing, and by so doing escaped a deal of trouble. Once or twice I resented unfair treatment, but it didn't do me any good.

FEDERAL COUNCIL ACTION ON PROHIBITION.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

One of the most interesting and significant actions of the Federal Council at its recent quadrennial meeting was the action taken on prohibition. The report of the Commission on Temperance was referred to the Business Committee, where it was referred to a sub-committee composed of Rufus W. Miller, Howard H. Russell and James Cannon, Jr., which committee reported a series of ten resolutions to be acted upon by the Council. The report after an interesting discussion was unanimously adopted.

The resolutions call for prohibition for the Philippines; for prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicants by American citizens in consular districts in foreign countries; for greater care in the issuance of permits for medicinal and manufacturing purposes; for concentration of intoxicants in fewer warehouses; for passage of a law to secure greater fidelity to their oath of office by Federal and State officials on penalty of forfeiture of office.

Three of the resolutions are fundamental in their nature, and as expressive of the attitude of united Protestantism in its official gathering are given in full:

"1. Prohibition of the liquor traffic should be judged not by results where the law is flagrantly violated, but by its results in communities where the law has been efficiently enforced. In order that the will of the people in the adoption of the 18th Amendment may be carried into effect, we urge that an appropriation be made by Congress of whatever amount may be necessary for the effective enforcement of national prohibition.

"9. We rejoice in the spread of temperance principles throughout the world, and we hereby express our hearty sympathy with temperance workers in all lands and our desire to co-operate with them in every suitable way to banish from the entire world the traffic in intoxicating liquor and debasing narcotic drugs.

"10. We would emphasize the necessity for a continuance of the educational program, which has been so effective in the destruction of the legalized liquor traffic. The effects of the use of intoxicating liquor upon the individual and society, the beneficent results which follow efficient enforcement of the prohibition law and the evils which follow its violation, should be clearly taught from the platform and by the printed page, by textbook, posters and circular, and we hereby record our appreciation of the effort of those church and inter-church agencies which have carried on this work, and our conviction of the necessity for the continuance of their great work until the 18th Amendment is effectively enforced throughout the United States."

It is fundamental that the will of the majority shall be enforced. It may and will require a strong force of strong men and ample funds for a few years. But wherever the Prohibition Law is honestly enforced, it will be justified by the results. The desperate criminals who are violating the Prohibition Law for gain and with assurance of pay and protection from men with large interests at stake must not be allowed to defy the Government any more than were the Whisky Rebels in Pennsylvania in the time of President Washington. At whatever cost, the law must be enforced, and no cost will be great compared with the billions spent for intoxicants before prohibition came into effect.

The Council also emphasized its belief in co-operative effort by temperance workers throughout the world, and urged the continuation of the educational program, and of the great agencies which have been so efficient in securing the passage of the Prohibition Law, until the law is efficiently enforced throughout the country. This is no time to talk of disbanding our forces. The next four years will require the best thought and effort of our experienced leaders to checkmate and finally defeat all the efforts of the lawless liquor forces, which have entered upon a desperate, even murderous, campaign of nullification of the Prohibition Amendment.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 29, 1920.

THE PERAMBULATOR AT THE CONVENTION.

The Fire. The World's Sunday School Association Convention was scheduled to open at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday, Oct. 5. At 4:30 the Convention Hall, a building which had been especially erected for the Convention, caught fire in the loft above the stage through defective wiring. Mr. H. Augustine Smith, the Director of the chorus and pageants, at the time had some 750 people on the platform giving them the final rehearsal for the opening session. Casting his eyes above him he saw a tiny flame. Immediately he announced to the chorus that there was a small blaze above them, but if they would dismiss in an orderly manner the building would be emptied without any mishap. This suggestion was promptly complied with and the building was emptied. In thirty minutes the hall was a mass of smoking ruins. The burning of the building brought the opportunity to demonstrate how quick the Americans are to meet emergencies. "You are not going to try to hold a meeting to-night?" asked some Japanese of the members of the Executive Committee. "Certainly, we are" was the reply. That same evening only twenty-four minutes behind schedule the Convention was called to order in two sections, one at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium and the other at the Salvation Army Hall. The following day Baron Shibusawa announced from the platform that beginning with Thursday morning and continuing to the close of the Convention, all sessions would be held in the Imperial Theatre. This building was secured through the influence of the Patrons' Association. All theatrical contracts for the next eight days were cancelled and the building in its entirety given over to the Convention. Expressions of sympathy were received on all sides and offers of help were constantly given. The Parliament Houses were offered, an unprecedented thing, but the Convention required a larger building.

The Patrons' Association. When the Association was invited to hold its Eighth Convention in Tokyo, a Patrons' Association was formed to finance and care for all details of the Convention's entertainment. This Association was composed of statesmen, bankers, merchants and men from all walks of life in the Japanese Empire. Its chairman was Baron Sakatani, ex-minister of Finance, while its vice-chairman was Viscount Shibusawa. This committee raised $142,000 for the Convention expenses. The Emperor of Japan was a contributor to the extent of $25,000. Thus, you see, it was quite easy for the Patrons' Association, headed by such prominent men of the Empire, to secure so promptly the use of the Imperial Theatre. The membership of the Patrons' Association religiously was Confucianist and Buddhist and what they did was not so much from a religious motive as it was to hold up Japan's end of the details of the Convention.

The Great Sunday School Rally. Sunday afternoon in the beautiful Hibiya Park a great Sunday school rally of the Sunday schools of Tokyo and delegates to the Convention took place. Through lanes and lanes of Japanese children, laughing, talking and singing and always shouting at the top of their voices "Banzai," which means "long live Japan," the delegates to the Convention reached the grandstand in the Park. So impressive was this Sunday school rally that "The Japan Times Mail" of the following day said, "Never in the history of Japan, and probably never in the history of the Far East, was there such a gathering of Sunday school workers as that at Hibiya Park." Previous to the rally at the Park, the foreign delegates had joined with the Sunday school children in a parade to the Park. After the singing and speeches in the Park, the parade was continued through the streets of Tokyo, the delegates being in the following order: America, Argentina, Australia, Canada, Denmark, England, Formosa, Hawaii, India, Java, Korea, New Zealand, the Philippines, Scotland and then the Sunday schools of Tokyo. Vivid and variegated were the colors, both of the Japanese children and the hundreds of large banners and streamers which they carried. Interspersed were thousands of smaller banners carrying the letters "W. S. S. A." (World's Sunday School Association). All along the line the air was made to ring with the shouts of "Banzai." Fully 15,000 people were in line and it was an occasion to be remembered.

The Pageants. The theme of the Convention was "The Sunday School and World Progress." Under the direction of Prof. and Mrs. H. Augustine Smith, assisted by Japanese leaders, a program of pageantry, music and art was provided which was closely related to the theme. The pageants were "The City Beautiful," "The Rights of the Child," "The Cross of Christ," "The Sunday School from Bethlehem to Tokyo," "The Court of Christianity." In addition there were stereopticon lectures, instruction in Sunday school music, and great inspirational song services. The pageants were especially beautiful and the Kingdom's influence in life was tremendously enhanced because of this use of the eye gate.

The Entertainment. The Japanese people entertained upon a large scale the officers and delegates of the Convention at many special functions. Even the cities throughout the Empire gave receptions and extended a cordial welcome on an elaborate scale. Two complimentary excursions on chartered trains were given all delegates to Kama Kura, the ancient capital of Japan, and to Yokohama, one of their great seaport cities. At each place the visitors were entertained royally by the governors of the provinces, the mayors of the cities and the leading citizens. The Patrons' Association entertained 15,000 at the Imperial Theatre on Thursday afternoon with an elaborate box dinner, music and pageantry. Addresses of welcome and responses were received and given. A luncheon was also given at the House of Peers, and on the last night the Emperor sent a message, which was read by a personal representative, expressing the Emperor's interest in the success of the Convention. This is the first time the Emperor has ever done anything of this nature.

The Convention Enrollment. There were 1814 present: 75 from Canada, 513 from the United States, 275 from Japan, that is the foreigners, while the native Japanese delegates numbered 813. The rest were scattered throughout the world, coming from Siam, India, Holland, Formosa, Africa, Netherlands, Indies, Scotland, England, Australia, South America, Hawaii, Philippines, China and Korea.

The Exhibit. Under the supervision of the Sunday School Association, the Secretary for Japan, Mr. Horace E. Coleman, a splendid exhibit was erected in the Y. M. C. A. building, presenting to the Sunday school workers every phase of Sunday school activity. Forty thousand people visited the exhibit. Fifty-one extension meetings throughout Tokyo, attended by 33,000 people, were also carried out under the direction of Mr. Coleman. Before and after the Convention, 50 cities in Japan were visited and meetings addressed by delegates from abroad. One around-the-world party of 40 left to carry the Convention message to Korea, China, India, Egypt, and other places.

Briefly Mentioned. If space would permit, we might tell of the messages of sympathy, the spared statuary, the Convention program, the unveiling of the portraits of the Emperor and Empress, choice sayings of the Convention speakers, the message from the Emperor to the Convention, etc. Suffice it to say that the Convention was a tremendous emphasis to Christianity in the Far East, and much good will come therefrom. Of course, as in all public gatherings, everything done does not please everybody, so it was with the Sunday School Association Convention. However, those of us who have the Kingdom at heart believe that the Heavenly Father can even make our mistakes turn to His good and glory.

THE PERAMBULATOR.

THE PRODIGAL FATHER AND HIS "SUNDAY TOWER."

By S. R. Reno.

There was a prodigal father. He had two sons. He said to the younger, "Why not have a good time to-day, seeing it is Sunday and we have worked hard all week and have had no time for recreation, and all work and no play makes father a dull man. Why not take a spin in our super-six? The better the day the better the deed," so said the man who caused the ox to be thrown into the ditch on Saturday that he might be taken out on Sunday morning. And the younger son said, "Father, you have always wanted us to have a good time, and this is one way to have it, and my elder brother joins right heartily in this decision for a Sunday spin."

Thump! thump! thump! goes the radiator and there is a big cloud of dust and Jehu is not in it—not to-day! And away they went into a far country for a day of riotous joy-riding! Night came on and they were a long way from home. The rain descended, the floods came, the winds blew and beat upon the windshield, the lightnings flashed, the thunders roared, the clouds thickened and grew black as night, and the rain, it rained. It poured, and the younger son who was at the steering wheel said, "Father, it is going to rain and we had better speed up before the roads are spoiled." And the father said, "Right you are, my son. Loose her and let her go!" And away they went. But the rain, it got rainier; and the mud, it got muddier; and the dark, it got darker; and the slip, it got slipperier, and the car began to skid and got skiddier and gave a sudden lurch and turned turtle and they were all safely sheltered under the car and they cried aloud for help!

By and by Farmer Oleson chanced to come along and heard their cries for help and fain would have helped them, but his high-spirited horses shied at the spectacle of the wreck right in the middle of the road and of a sudden all the wild nature of his domesticated animals reverted to their original state, and Farmer Oleson had troubles of his own. Under normal conditions he would have cheerfully performed the office of the Good Samaritan, but even Walter Scott had to admit that he could not sweep the firmament with a feather!

The prodigal father cried aloud: "How many hired servants I have at home and behold, we perish here in this land and away from home!" And the younger son said, "Father, we have sinned against heaven and the Sabbath and are near to perishing here on the highway! Let us arise and dig out of this! For if mother hears of it she will be overhauled again and will have all of the neighbors aroused from their beds! Beside all this, we were told only last Sabbath by our good minister that it was a perilous thing to smash the fourth commandment and it has fallen out as he said!"

But the neighbors came and dug them out, and they all, father and sons, fell upon their neighbors' necks and repented of their joy-riding on the Sabbath Day and they were taken to their home, and mother and nurses and doctors bound up their wounds, and seated them around the table and they all feasted on the good things mother had provided for them aforesaid, and she said to her neighbors, "Rejoice with me, for these, my husband and sons, are at home once more, the wiser, let us hope, though somewhat battered by their 'Sunday Tower!'" And they all made merry.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

GRATEFUL APPRECIATION.

Dear Brother Carley: Please permit us through the columns of the Advocate to express our thanks to the many friends who have remembered us in our sorrow caused by the passing of our dear Ward Ella. Thank God, she was ready. We would not have had her different in any respect from what she really was.

Immortal Monuments

John Doe lived for himself alone, and accounted all that he possessed as his individual property to be used in his own service. And today there is nothing left of him except a marble slab to tell that he is dead, and even that will in time decay.

Benjamin Wofford was a Methodist preacher who had large wealth. He recognized that his possessions brought him a responsibility. He called himself a steward, and he tried to use his wealth to serve his fellowman.

And today Wofford College stands proclaiming to all the world that the spirit of Benjamin Wofford is alive.

This Man Multiplied Himself

It was seventy years ago that he gave $100,000 to establish a Christian college. In that time his gift has immortalized him.

It has given to the world a United States Senator, 3 Governors, 4 Congressmen, 10 United States Officials, 9 Authors, 30 Editors, 125 Lawyers, 95 Doctors, 50 Bankers, 14 Cotton Mill Presidents, 4 Bishops, 16 Missionaries, 225 Pastors, 10 College Presidents, 60 College Professors, 31 School Superintendents, 219 Teachers, and thousands of other trained Christian leaders.

Benjamin Wofford as he was, multiplied by the services and influence of all these, shows us Benjamin Wofford as he now is. His gift has been cumulative through the years. The men it has produced are worth a million times his original bequest.

College investments build immortal monuments. They pay their dividends in character, leadership, manhood, service. They give immortality alike to the investor and his investment.

A PRAYER.

By Margaret Rutherford.

For this one day alone, dear God, I pray;
Help me to walk the straight and narrow way
With cheerful mind;
Help me to think, to act, the Golden Rule,
To do my best with book, or beast, or tool,
To serve mankind.

Help me to think before I speak a word
That might, by chance, hurt one who overheard,
And make him sad;

Help me to laugh with clean and wholesome mirth,
To scorn the thought that evil minds gave birth,
Or actions bad.

Help me to see in sunshine and in rain,
In daylight and in dark, Thy hand again,
Thy love alone,
And then at eve, when work is put away,
Help me, dear Lord, to lift my eyes and say
"Thy will be done."

MINNIE'S GOOD LUCK.

"Minnie," said mamma one warm morning in June, "wouldn't you and Alice like to go out in the garden and put a stop to Mr. Rough Weed, who is trying to choke Mrs. Dainty Flower and crowd her out entirely?"

Minnie jumped up. "Why, yes, indeed," she said. "And you must remember," continued mamma, "not to be like the queen in 'Alice' who said: 'Off with his head.' You must be very sure to pull Mr. Rough Weed's feet up, else he'll come right back and go on with bad behavior worse than ever."

Minnie laughed. "Maybe we'll see the white rabbit. Come on Alice."

Her sister rose rather reluctantly from where she was combing Lady Adelina's golden locks. "I think it's mighty hot," said she.

"There'll be some lemonade for you after a while," said mamma.

Alice looked somewhat interested at this information. She followed Minnie, who was already at the foot of the steps. Mamma smiled as the two little girls disappeared. They were as much alike as twins could be, but she had no difficulty in telling them apart; that was because she was mamma.

Out in the garden the children worked steadily.

Suddenly Minnie exclaimed: "Oh, Alice, I've found a four-leaf clover!" And she held it up gleefully.

Alice examined it carefully. "It means good luck," said she slowly. "I heard Brother Jim say so."

"Then I'm glad I found it," said Minnie. And she pinned the little green clover carefully in the bosom of her frock.

After a little while, Alice yawned and laid aside her trowel. "I wonder if that lemonade isn't most ready," said she.

"Oh, we haven't been working long," said Minnie cheerfully.

"Well, I'm awfully tired," returned Alice. "I believe I'll rest a little."

Minnie did not reply. The sun was warm, but she went on weeding valiantly. Presently she pushed her sunbonnet back and looked around for Alice, but the little girl was nowhere in sight. Minnie looked at the flower bed. There were a lot of weeds. She sighed. It did seem a shame to leave them. So she went on, pulling and tugging at the tough stalks, and presently she was astonished to see they were all gone. Mrs. Dainty Flower was holding up her head triumphantly.

Just then Minnie heard the honk of an automobile, and then somebody called gaily: "Hello, little sunbonnet girl. Want a ride?"

Minnie jumped up and ran to the gate. There in the road was Brother Jim with his brand-new car. "Come on, pet," said he. "I'm in a big hurry to get some medicine for aunty, who isn't well. Want to go to town with me?"

"Oh, I'd love to. Can you wait for me to tell Alice?"

"Sorry, honey, but I can't wait. Aunt Bess has had a headache, and I told her I'd hustle. Jump in."

It was a lovely ride to town, and Brother Jim told her such funny stories that Minnie was laughing all the time. And while the clerk prepared the powders Brother Jim let Minnie use the telephone all herself and tell her mamma where she was, for "she might be scared," Minnie had said gravely when they started.

"I shouldn't wonder. I'd like to kidnap you myself for 'keeps,'" said the other, laughing.

Then when they were back in the car there was a box all tied with gold cord for Minnie.

"But you mustn't open it till after dinner," said Brother Jim.

"Oh, I'll give half to Alice," cried Minnie. "She truly ought to have more'n half, 'cause she didn't get any lovely ride."

They reached home in good time, and Minnie raced indoors, eager to tell her adventures.

Mamma was just coming in from the kitchen with a big pitcher of lemonade. "Just in time," said she.

At that moment Alice appeared. She looked very cross. "You had all that good luck 'cause you found that four-leaf clover. Wish I had seen it first."

"Well, you're going to have some of the good luck," cried Minnie. And she held up the pretty box of candy. "Only, I promised Brother Jim I wouldn't open it till after dinner. You can have a lot then," she added.

She carefully unfastened the drooping little clover and showed it to mamma. "It brought me such nice luck, didn't it, mamma, dear?"

Mamma stooped to kiss the happy little face. "I am not sure it was the four-leaf clover," she said.

Minnie looked bewildered. "Why, mamma, what else could it be?"

But mamma only smiled.—S. L. Bacon in Presbyterian Advance.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

By J. A. Stewart.

"Another year's at the door; upon his arm, behold A basket full of seeds and bulbs and cuttings manifold,

And in his hand, with rake and hoe, a spade all clean and bright,

For us to bury past mistakes and start the New Year right."

Shall we make good resolutions on New Year's Day? By all means, yes. New Year's Day is more fitly celebrated by new resolutions than in any other way. To be in the genuine New Year's spirit, we must think, ponder our mistakes, and resolve to "scrap" them.

It is right to make resolutions. That is to say, it is right to look ahead, to foresee wherein we are liable to slip down and to make up our minds to step clear of the fault. There may be more than one fault to avoid. One at a time is the best way to take them. We must have patience with ourselves.

What resolutions shall we make? The resolutions of many contrite folk partake naturally of the moral and religious nature. The sanest kind of resolution is that which has to do with a more vigorous spiritual life. To resolve to be a more true and constant follower and exponent of the Christian ideals is the first of all resolutions.

Then there are a few resolutions of practical good cheer and loyalty:

I will be cheerful and avoid worry.

I will control my tongue, my temper, and my thoughts.

I will be loyal to my family, my community, my country, and humanity.

Each victory over a wrong habit clears the way for the next. We should count our failures as blessings. They are accessions of power. If we have failed to keep our resolutions before, we can resolve to try again. A failure is so much a lesson to a sane mind that for ages the wise have attributed to many failures the greatest of successes.

"Greatly begin! Though thou have time
For but a line, be that sublime.
Not failure, but low aim is crime."

The best sort of New Year's resolution to make is the silent resolution. Let our resolves be made between ourselves and our God, weighing them over carefully, counting the cost and the sacrifice, saying nothing, but praying hard.

"Break with the follies of the past;
Master your weakness at last;
Stiffen your muscles, watch and pray;
Stoutly begin a year to-day!"

Literally.

A colored minister of the Baptist Church, so runs the story, in order to strengthen and confirm the faith of his congregation, took as his text: "In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea." "Oh," said he, "how I like to read these precious words in the blessed Bible! You don't read anywhere about John the Presbyterian, or John the Methodist, or John the Episcopalian. No, brethren, it is John the Baptist."—The Christian Register.

To The Point.

The Hindu witness in a railway accident knew a little English which he was anxious to use.

The prosecuting attorney was anxious that the testimony should be brief, so in calling the witness he said:

"There are just two things we want to know: Did the train whistle? And did you see the man killed? Please tell us as few words as possible."

The witness rose and bowed profoundly.

"The train tooted and took him," he announced and sat down.—Selected.

Scotch Humor.

At the foot of a steep hill stood a sign board on which the following notice was painted:

"Danger.—Bicyclists and autolsts are hereby notified that this hill is dangerous and they are cautioned to come down slowly."

Appended to this were the equally funny lines.

"Any person not able to read the above, will have it read for them if they call on the blacksmith who lives around the corner."

A Scotchman saw this notice and explained to his friends that the point of the joke was that the blacksmith might not be at home.—Boys' Life for December.

"Now, John, who knew Jesus intimately, declares that any one claiming fellowship with the Master ought to embody the Master's ideals and principles. This is just as true in business as anywhere else; on Saturday as well as on Sunday; in the shop as in the synagogue or church. What a revolution the acceptance and practice of this would work in the shops where men toil with hand or brain; in the offices, where men counsel and plan; in all the complex and intricate relationships between employer and employed! The important truth is that the spirit and purpose that must have dominated and controlled Christ in His work as an artisan ought to dominate and control in the realms of labor, industry and commerce. An emotional acceptance of Christ will not do. Emotion alone will not save a world industrially astray. A revival of the passion for Jesus must include the passion to incorporate and make vital His industrial ideals in all the realms to which they are applicable. Then, as Markham tells us:

"Glad quick cries will go from man to man:
'Lo, He has come, our Christ the Artisan.'"

ADL/ING N TEE LIGHT

The following is a list of the names of the persons who have been appointed to the various positions of the Board of Directors of the City of New York, for the year ending December 31, 1900.

This is one of the characteristics of the Christian life - one of the things that is apart from any other manner of living. It is not necessary to dwell upon this fact but the Christian is the only person in the world who is properly situated in all the circumstances of life and who is therefore in order to embrace to the fullest and happiness of his existence. There are actual experiences all along the way that fill the heart with joy and keep a strong ringing in the soul. When the dinner is over he looks beyond the darkness in which he is surrounded he sees nothing but a blacker darkness still. The Christian walking in the light looks for ward with eager anticipation to the breaking of the perfect day.

This is "the day to reflect, the light that shines upon us is the great light that leads to Heaven. We are happy we ought to be, at least, let us share in the world our great is the happiness we can enjoy. The world has enough of gloominess and darkness of. Needs men and women who can go about radiating sunshine. "A cheerful heart is a good medicine" but a broken spirit drieth up the bones," said a wise man of old. We may not do some great thing, as the world counts greatness, but we can be a great blessing to the world simply by letting our lights shine. The light that streams into our souls from the great Sun of Righteousness

We call the special attention of our readers to the article, "Confronting Civilization's Crisis—A New Year Appeal by Laymen for Prayer," appearing on page two of this issue of the Advocate. The names signed to this article are those of laymen many of whom are widely known in this country and abroad not only for their interest in religious affairs, but also for their achievements in the business and professional world. "Holding no ecclesiastical positions, and representing, quite unofficially, various branches of the Christian church," they feel impelled to appeal to Christian men and women everywhere to "join in a com-

The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the car was the cold. It was a sharp contrast to the warm blanket I had been sitting under. I looked up at the sky, which was a deep, dark blue, and I felt a sense of peace. The stars were out, and they were beautiful. I had never seen so many stars before. It was like looking into a giant's eye. I felt small, but in a good way. I felt like I was part of something big. I took a deep breath and felt the cold air fill my lungs. It was invigorating. I felt like I was starting over. I felt like I was beginning a new journey. I felt like I was finally home.

This world needs prayer as it needs nothing else to bring it back to a sense of the reality of God and of His presence among men. Those of us who profess to be Christians need to pray more than our own lives may be blessed and that we may be the instruments in God's hands of bringing a blessing to all mankind. The only way out is the way up and we can never find the way up except through prayer. What a blessed privilege Christians today have of showing to the world this way that leads up to God!

The following is a telegram from Bishop W. R. Lamborn sent from Vancouver, B. C., under date of January 3 to the Board of Missions:

"Nine thousand lives saved by your traffic. Situation growing worse. One thousand men, women and children frozen to death one night at Kalgan. Fourteen million now facing starvation, or death from disease or cold. I bring samples of leaves. Children even now being eaten. The wolf is at their throats. Wild-eyed mothers with shriveled breasts throw their babies into wells. China is raising to the emergency, but cannot cope with it single-handed. Our people must do their best and do it quick. There is no time to be lost. Just arrived from China and received telegram from President Woodrow Wilson appointing me on Famine Commission. Will do my best."

The January number of the Methodist Quarterly Review, being No. 1 of Volume 79, has duly reached our desk. We have not yet had time to read it exhaustively, but we have dipped into it enough to know that it is a storehouse of intellectual and spiritual treasures. To one who is interested in the influence of heredity and environment upon character, the article "Some Recent Advances in the Study of Heredity," will be very suggestive; the study of "Personality and Fate," based upon the travels of John Wesley, will stir the earnest reader to a new appreciation of the compensations of Christian service; exceedingly timely and suggestive is the article, "Some Educational Lessons from the War." If anybody can read "The Old Greeks," by Dr. S. A. Steel, without serious reflections concerning the militaristic tendencies of the present day, he is indeed absorbed in the materialistic side of our civilization.

There are other articles that are as attractive in their titles as these we have glanced at. We wish ten thousand preachers and laymen would read the Review regularly.

Through the failure of the transportation agency to function properly we were unable to insert in

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

The nature of the activities mentioned in this letter is considered less than by the fact of its being illegal. It was a religious occasion.

44-111-1, which reported the people have been told the Communist is not so very bad as they think. Ref. 1, Ferguson of Wash. Dist.

Rev. A. M. Johnson of Boston, Mass., writes that he has been warmly received by the good people of that town who have not spared themselves in making him feel at home. The people were so kind.

The attendance of the "Big Brother" Class at the training school at Nashville, Miss., in December 19, 1941, and the following summary: In 1941 this was the first of the year and the weather was very inclement.

Ray J. Irwin, Hollywood, California, in a letter dated 12/15/44, advised that his post office address is Panama, La. Ray J. Irwin's brother, Arthur, has been most recently reported as being in the United States Army, stationed in the Pacific.

The "Chapman: Biographer" is an interesting publication issued by Chapman Wade & Rindge of Fort McPherson, N.D. going in record of the past activities such as: A glance through it is sufficient to show that the mission is a busy one.

The Winfield Memorial Journal of Little Rock, Ark., has some in press photographs of the possession on March 1 in preparation for a great singing enterprise which will give this congregation, one of the finest plants in Arkansas. Rev. W. D. Hogg is the pastor.

"No pastor was ever more warmly received than I have been in the Dublin charge for my sixth year and so one has ever had more consideration shown him or received more substantial evidence of appreciation," writes Rev. J. J. Brooker, of Dublin, Mass.

Rev. F. L. Applewhite, our pastor at Rankin Street Church, Jackson, Miss., was cordially received by the people at the new school. He was participated in Missions Sunday in the Junior class, where he will marry in his studies in connection with his pastorate. His address is 111 Georgetown St., Jackson, Miss.

Dr. John T. Sawyer preached at Epworth Church at 11 o'clock Sunday January 2 to a good congregation, notwithstanding bad weather. In speaking of the service, he made special mention of the day work of the choir. The church is growing, and Dr. Sawyer is of the opinion that a new and better building should be provided for worship.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, the presiding elder of the New Orleans District, has recently organized a new church at Bogalusa, La., to be known as Second Church. It is connected with the Bogalusa circuit, and begins its work under the most encouraging auspices. Rev. M. N. Hildbrand, transferred from the Louisville Conference, is the pastor.

The good people of Kosciusko, Miss., not only think highly of their pastor, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, but they show their appreciation unmistakably year after year. For the fourth year in succession during the holiday season the congregation gave Brother Cunningham a "pounding," which, according to the account of the event in the Kosciusko Star-Herald, must have been "some pounding," indeed!

We have received the following from Rev. W. W. Nelson: "Being the pastor at Forworth, Miss., where Rev. R. H. Barr lives and knowing his circumstances as I do, I take this method of announcing to the brethren who made a subscription to him at Conference and have not paid, that it will be greatly appreciated if they will send in the amount at once."

The editor and wife were honored with an invitation to attend the third annual "Harvest Day" celebration of the Woman's Missionary Society of Shelby, Miss., held on Saturday, January 8. The occasion commemorated the addition of the third gold star to the Society's "Harvest Day" banner in recognition of a 61 per cent increase in its finances for 1920. The new officers were installed, and the plans for the work of 1921 outlined.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, was chosen by the College of Bishops recently as a delegate from our church to the Ecumenical Conference, which will meet in London on September 6. This is a great honor, worthily bestowed. Dr. Cooper has signified his acceptance of the appointment, and is planning to leave home in advance of the meeting in order to visit Greece, Egypt, and Palestine.

We have received a card announcing the birth of a son to Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Battle on January 7. Blessings upon the little one!

We learn from a friend that the congregation at Springfield, La., on the first Sunday in the new year was larger than the house could contain. Rev. Joseph Fraser is the beloved pastor.

We are glad to learn from a personal note from Mr. Curtis B. Haley that Dr. F. M. Thomas, editor of the Review, who has been in bad health for several months, is somewhat improved and expects to be back at his desk at an early date.

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., who has many friends in Louisiana and Mississippi, where he served some of the leading appointments, is now president of Westmorland College, San Antonio, one of the important educational institutions of Texas Methodism.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the hard-working and efficient Sunday school field secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, is attending the General Workers' Council at Tampa, Fla., this week. We understand that all the other Sunday school field workers are also in attendance.

An installation service for the stewards, Sunday school superintendent, and officers of the Woman's Missionary Society and of the Epworth League was held by Rev. R. P. Neblett, our pastor at Durant, Miss., last Sunday. A neat invitation to the service was issued by the pastor.

President R. E. Bobbitt, of Mansfield College, spent a few hours in the city on Monday of this week, being on his way home after attending several meetings throughout the State in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. We were delighted to have him call at the Advocate office.

Rev. C. C. Evans, the new pastor of our church at Hazlehurst, Miss., was welcomed by a banquet and general "get-together" meeting on Tuesday evening of last week. The pastors and many of the members of the churches of the city were present, and a delightful program was carried out.

The New Orleans District Set-Up Meeting of the Christian Education Movement was held in New Orleans on Tuesday of this week. The meeting was well attended and the work was thoroughly discussed. Several of the visiting brethren honored the Advocate office with a call while in the city.

Upon the removal of Rev. J. W. Thompson to another charge, the Woman's Missionary Society of Wesson, Miss., passed highly appreciative resolutions concerning him and his wife, who was a most efficient worker in the Society, and commending them most highly to their fellow-workers in their new field of labor.

We take the following from the News Register, of Forest, Miss., issue of January 7: "There was a large attendance at the Methodist church Sunday. The service conducted by Rev. J. W. Chisholm, the new pastor, was good and intellectually deep, and was eagerly listened to. The subject of his sermon was, 'The Secret of His Presence.'"

Rev. Marion Browning, of China, Texas, has been appointed to work in the city missions of New Orleans, under the superintendency of Rev. W. C. Childress. Brother Browning and his wife have both had experience in missionary work in Cuba and among foreign-speaking people in this country. He will be especially concerned with the Spanish work here.

From a note received from Mr. H. C. Hamblen, reporter for the class, we infer that there is a contest on between the Big Brother Class and the Sunday school as a whole, as to attendance and offering, in the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss. The figures of Sunday, January 9, are: Big Brother Class—attendance 45, offering $13.75; Sunday school—attendance 200, offering $11.65.

Miss Alva Witt, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. R. F. Witt, was married to Dr. W. D. Hooper, of McComb, Miss., on January 4, at the residence of the bride's parents in Meridian, Miss. Mrs. Hooper is a graduate of Whitworth College, and has many friends throughout the State. Dr. Hooper is a prominent physician of McComb. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to the happy couple.

Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux has found a most promising situation at Spring Hill, La., to which place he was appointed at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference. A new parsonage is being built, and all indications point to a good year's work. Brother Rousseaux paid the Advocate office a pleasant visit recently while passing through the city to spend the holidays with his family at Logtown, Miss.

Recently Rev. F. B. Hill, our pastor at Jackson, La., while in New Orleans was invited to attend the song service held by the D. H. Holmes store for its employees every morning before opening for business. Brother Hill was greatly impressed with this service, which, while not religious in its nature, is exceedingly helpful to the many employees, young and old, who enter heartily into it.

It was our great pleasure to take lunch with Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, our pastor at Rayne, La., on Friday of last week. He was in the city in connection with his work as State chaplain of the American Legion, a position in which he is rendering most efficient service. One of the outstanding features of Brother Gunn's work at Rayne is a Men's Bible Class, which is very active and enthusiastically aggressive in its work.

The Sunday school at Jackson, La., held a "White Sunday" service at the Christmas season, as a result of which a bundle of clothing was sent to St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, and about $20 in cash was collected for the European war sufferers. Mr. R. S. Austin, the superintendent of this Sunday school, is well known to many former Centenary College students who attended the institution when it was located at Jackson. Rev. F. B. Hill is the pastor.

Rev. Robert A. Bozeman, a well known evangelist of Louisiana, and Miss Maxie Herrington were married in the parlors of First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., on Friday, December 24, in the presence of the parents of the bride, relatives, and a few friends. The groom is a former student of Emory University and of Southern Methodist University, as well as a graduate of Louisiana State Normal School. The bride is a graduate of Baylor College, in Texas. The couple will make their home for the present at Pleasant Hill, La. Rev. Earl B. Moll, of Conway, S. C., a close friend of the groom, was present at the wedding.

An enthusiastic meeting of the alumni of Centenary College was held at First Church, Shreveport, La., on Tuesday evening of last week, with Dr. W. W. Drake presiding. Addresses were delivered by Acting President Smith, Dr. John L. Scales, president of the Board of Trustees, Rev. A. S. Lutz, Conference Secretary of Education, who is an alumnus of the college, and Dr. R. H. Wynn, former president of the institution. A movement was launched to secure portraits of all the presidents of the college and place them in the library. The placing of a tablet in memory of Professor Wiley, a distinguished teacher of the "Old Centenary," will feature the alumni meeting in June.

The Advocate office enjoyed a call from Mr. J. R. Abels, of Ponchatoula, La., on Thursday week. Brother Abels brought the good news that Ponchatoula, which was made a station at the late session of the Louisiana Conference, is making fine progress. At the stewards' meeting on Wednesday evening, the pastor, Rev. A. J. Coburn, delivered an address on the importance of the stewards' office, in line with the recent valuable suggestions of Rev. A. J. Gearheard as published in the Advocate. As a result of the meeting, those stewards who were not already taking the Advocate gave their names as subscribers. We were glad to learn that Brother Coburn is greatly improved in health, and that he and his good wife are untiring in their efforts to build up the Kingdom of God.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Mrs. M. J. Holloman, Greenwood, Miss., 2; Rev. W. M. Williams, Purvis, Miss., 2; Rev. S. J. Davies, Grand Cane, La., 2; Rev. Henry T. Young, Natchitoches, La., 10; Rev. B. F. Jones, Newton, Miss., 2; Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, Biloxi, Miss., 4; J. R. Abels, Ponchatoula, La., 4.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition, we hereby make the following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.
2. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.
3. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.
4. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.
5. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate in Every Methodist Home in Louisiana and Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.

2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.

3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will be found.

Never think that you can make yourself great by making others less.—Exchange.

Epworth League.

THE STANDARD BIBLE STUDY BOOK.

The Standard Epworth League Bible study book, "The Story of the New Testament," is of special interest to Louisiana and Mississippi Leaguers in that it was written by Dr. Thomas Carter, a native of Louisiana, who is recognized as one of the ablest scholars of our church. The book possesses high literary merit, accurate scholarship, and a fine spiritual fervor. It should be widely used, not only by Leaguers, but also by others who are interested in systematic, intelligent study of the New Testament.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE AND THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

The Christian Education Movement is expecting, and very naturally so, to receive the heartiest co-operation from the Epworth League in carrying forward its vitally important work. The young people themselves are in close touch with the activities of our schools and colleges, many of them being enrolled now as students or having been recently graduated. We doubt if a more helpful work could be undertaken by the League within the next three or four months than that of assisting in every way possible to make this great Movement a success. Without doing it from a selfish motive, they would be doing that which would equip all our young people for the largest possible usefulness in the days to come.

EPWORTH LEAGUE GROWTH.

We have not at hand the statistics for the Epworth League in the Mississippi Conference, but from the official records we learn that there are 116 chapters in Louisiana, with a membership of 3315, and 40 chapters in North Mississippi, with a membership of 1358. Thirty-nine new chapters were established in Louisiana last year, and several have been organized since Conference—a fine record of growth. Some of us have not realized heretofore how aggressive our young people are in carrying forward the work of their own organization.

QUESTIONABLE AMUSEMENTS.

Whereas the deadly spirit of worldliness appears to have a tremendous hold upon the people of our country to-day, and

Whereas such spirit seeks to manifest itself through the practice of certain evil indulgences, and

Whereas many of the young people of our church have been and continue to be guilty of having a part in such indulgences, therefore be it

Resolved, first, That we, the members of the Church-Wide Epworth League Conference, express our regret and disapproval at the prevailing tendency of many of our young people to lower the standard of morality with respect to recreation and amusement.

Resolved, second, That we unhesitatingly denounce the modern dance as pernicious to decency and good morals and that we urge our Leaguers not only to abstain from indulgence therein themselves, but to use every influence to persuade others to abstain.

Resolved, third, That while we recognize the educational value of the motion picture, we deplore its appeal in many cases to the baser instincts and exhort our young people to refrain their patronage from any performance that does not elevate morally.

Resolved, fourth, That we express it as our opinion that earnest and active service in the Epworth League and church, and regular attendance upon public worship would safeguard us against such demoralizing practices, and to that end we call upon our Leaguers everywhere to devote their efforts accordingly.

Resolved, fifth, That a copy of these resolutions be published in the Epworth Era, the Christian Advocate, and in each Conference organ, and that a copy be spread on the Minutes, and that a copy be read at each Annual Conference or Assembly.

Signed by: R. Bayard Proctor, J. E. Savage, S. A. Wilson, A. McK. Reynolds, A. L. Gunter, Lillian Earnest, Gertrude Falls.

(The above resolutions were unanimously passed at the meeting of Epworth League presidents held in St. Louis Dec. 29-30, 1920.)

FROM COAHOMA AND LYON CHARGE.

Dear Mr. Editor: This is my second year on this charge. I am glad to be returned for another year. This is a good place and full of good people; in fact, the best Coahomians and Lyons you ever saw. If the lions were as nice to Daniel that night as these Lyons have been to me, he surely didn't suffer. My people at Coahoma are so thoughtful of their preacher.

On the night of the thirteenth I was introduced to a blind automobile, which knocked me down and unceremoniously ran over my right knee and ankle. This left a patient with my good wife as trained nurse for two weeks. But I am able to be going again. Say, Mr. Editor, there was only one good thing about this accident; the car was a "Ford."

Our people have given us several "poundings," one of which was a whole hog. But none of this hurt us, not even my lame leg. These "poundings" were appreciated by the pastor and family.

We are looking for our new presiding elder, Rev. James H. Felts, on January 16, 1921. Our motto for the new year is, "Help somebody all the time." We pray for the best year we have ever had.

God bless the Advocate staff with great success. Pray for us.

Your friend and brother,

W. C. CARLISLE.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Mrs. Little Tells How She Suffered and How Finally Cured

Philadelphia, Pa. — "I was not able to do my housework and had to lie down most of the time and felt bad in my left side. My monthly periods were irregular, sometimes five or seven months apart and when they did appear would last for two weeks and were very painful. I was sick for about a year and a half and doctored but without any improvement.

A neighbor recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me, and the second day after I started taking it I began to feel better and I kept on taking it for seven months. Now I keep house and perform all my household duties. You can use these facts as you please and I will recommend Vegetable Compound to everyone who suffers as I did." — Mrs. J. S. LITTLE, 3455 Livingston St., Philadelphia, Pa.

How much harder the daily tasks of a woman become when she suffers from such distressing symptoms and weakness as did Mrs. Little. No woman should allow herself to get into such a condition because such troubles may be speedily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for more than forty years has been restoring American women to health.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 16.

Lesson Topic: Money and the Kingdom.

Scripture Lesson: Matthew 19:16-26; I Timothy 6:9-10, 17-19.

Golden Text: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Matt. 19:19.

Home Readings: Monday, Our All Belongs to God. Matt. 19:16-22; Tuesday, God Loveth a Cheerful Giver, Matt. 19:23-30; Wednesday, The Commandments of the Kingdom, Mark 12:28-34; Thursday, Who is My Neighbor? Luke 10:30-37; Friday, A Neighborly Spirit, Colossians 3:12-17; Saturday, The Wisdom of the Kingdom, Proverbs 8:10-18; Sunday, The Prayer of the Kingdom, Matt. 6:5-15.

Teaching Points.

1. Rich men are just men—in need of God's grace like the rest of us.
2. Jesus never taught that the possession of wealth is, in itself, wrong; its evil is in the temptations that go with it.
3. The man who values wealth above obedience to God has no chance to be saved.
4. When a man acquires wealth honestly, uses it unselfishly, and holds it subject to God's will concerning his disposition of it, he has complied with the requirements of Christian discipleship.
5. The mere possession of money does not make a rich man.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The third Sunday in December was spent with Rev. C. H. Stralt at Florence, Miss. We had a very fine day, in spite of the rain and clouds. Brother Stralt has a Bible Reading Contest in his school, and the boys and girls are trying to average a hundred verses a week per pupil. I think this a fine idea. It was remarkable the large number of Bible verses read by this school. They are doing some mighty fine work and God is blessing them.

The fourth Sunday was spent at home for the first time in over twelve months. The services were very helpful and fine-spirited.

We had the privilege of attending the Educational Set-Up Meeting and the District Stewards' Meeting for the Jackson District. Brother Burton held a very fine meeting. He adopted the goal for the Christian Advocate, and he also set a goal of twenty-five young men to be called into the ministry. This meeting was permeated with a deep spiritual tide. Every address made was freighted with the presence of the Spirit.

Monday night of this week we had the privilege of conducting prayer for the Orphans' Home. I feel that if our people generally realized the tremendous work that Brother Lewis is accomplishing for us in this field we would be very careful to see that he gets an adequate financial as well as prayerful support. I was delighted with the beautiful and orderly behavior of the children both at their meals and at service. All of the teachers, matrons and children, big, little, boys and girls, knelt upon their knees at prayer. This was indeed refreshing.

Wednesday night it was our privilege to attend the prayer services at Capitol Street Church. A layman on the streets the day after said that the only time he would miss prayer meeting again would be when it would be impossible for him to come. It was a most unusual and delightful occasion. God is blessing this fine body of men and women.

May the Lord bless and keep each and every one. I beg that you pray for the work and the workers.

Sunday the second of January was spent in Meridian, Miss. I had the privilege of visiting the Central Sunday school. They took their missionary offering, which reached one hundred dollars more than last year. This they will put in new specials.

Mr. E. R. Lowrey is a teacher of a Young Men's Bible Class. This is an unusually fine class and Brother Lowrey is doing an unusually fine piece of work. This class has grown from seven members to forty in the past year, and they seem to be anxious to serve.

I had the pleasure of preaching for Brother Hays. His work starts well. I did not have time to find out about his work for the coming year, but I believe that there will be an advancement over last year.

In the afternoon I visited Brother Sells and looked over his new building. This is going to be a mighty fine plant when it is finished. He deserves the prayers and faith of the brethren.

Sunday night I preached for Brother Ferguson. We had a mighty fine service. There are many indications of real life in this church.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday I was in the Educational Set-Up Meetings at Gulfport, Hattiesburg and Brookhaven. God is in the meetings and is blessing the work.

The Gulfport school is very remarkable in many respects. They have a Cradle Roll with one hundred and ten enrolled. This is the largest Cradle Roll in the Conference so far as I know. Miss Ruby Rabby is the Superintendent of this work. They have a Home Department of one hundred and twenty-five members. Mrs. Geo. Gully is the Superintendent. The day I was in Gulfport they (the Home Department) were out holding a service in one of the member's homes who was deprived of attending services at the church.

The Court Street Church has maintained a steady growth all the year and has averaged a 100 per cent increase in attendance for several months. This is a fine forward step.

The Brookhaven Sunday school is doing magnificent work.

I wish to call the attention of the Conference to Mr. H. L. Clark, our new field worker, and ask that you receive him into your churches. We desire that you invite him to places where it is hard to get a Sunday school and let him remain with you for several days, visiting, holding services and working up an interest in the school.

God bless and keep each and every one of you. Pray for us and the work, for without your prayers we fail.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS,
Field Secretary.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Big Brother's Class of Greenville is rapidly developing into a trained force that is being felt for good all over the city and surrounding country. This class suggested a Santa Claus Club for Christmas. The idea was put into action. One result was that six hundred dollars was expended to carry comfort and good cheer to many hearts. The Big Brother's Class is true to name.

Another worthy deed by the Greenville Sunday school: The contents of the Birthday Jar, $28.66, were directed toward the payment of the missionary special carried by the Sunday school, a kindergarten in Korea. Any school would be glad to do this same thing if God could get hold of one heart that would see to the matter. It is not for a lack of ability as much as a lack of honest desire.

Learning as defined by the teachers of religious education is not simply receiving information, however good the information may be, but it is responding to the truth by putting it into practice. We are satisfied when we give knowledge; Jesus thought doing was the chief way of getting knowledge.

This week has been spent with a group of eleven teachers and workers in the Oxford church. Besides the teachers we have had several interested visitors. The class undertook the unusual task of making two units in six days. We are using the text, Learning and Teaching. This class has been punctual, regular, prayerful, studious. Great good must come from their consecrated efforts.

While the school has made wonderful improvement it will go on doing still more effective work in giving religious education. The church building is too small to do the work that must be done in this important city. The teachers chafe under their limitations, but in time they will make the church see what they see, the need of more room.

The following is a brief paper by one of the members of the training class that has been taking the course this week:

Why Take a Teacher Training Course?

For the same reasons exactly that the farmer studies farming, the doctor studies medicine, the teacher studies pedagogy, and then there are other and more potent reasons besides.

We as Sunday school teachers hope to determine the moral and religious lives of our charges and we will do so Neutralizes Uric Acid!

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." to some extent whether we will or not. These two factors will for the pupils determine their destiny here and hereafter. Then it is of ultimately the highest import that none of these things be left to the teacher who is unprepared or who is unwilling to continue to grow not only in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ but also in the knowledge of methods of instruction and understanding of human nature and the laws of human development. There is not a single reason for not taking a teacher training course that is not a perfectly valid reason why we should not be teachers.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

On January 5, Mr. H. L. Clark, of Yazoo City, Miss., assumed the position of Assistant Field Secretary for the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board. Brother Clark comes to us after an outstanding success in Sunday school work. He has the confidence of his local church and pastor, and we bespeak for him a cordial welcome into your hearts and church.

AN URGENT REQUEST.

Sunday, January 16, being the first anniversary of National Prohibition, we request our pastors, where they can, to give some part of either the morning or evening service to the discussion of some of the benefits derived therefrom, calling attention of city and parish officers to Section 1014 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, authorizing them to arrest federal law violators and bind them over to the federal court.

Big Service For 10c.

Washington, D. C. (Special).—In order to let people, all over the country, see for themselves how valuable the Pathfinder can be to them, the editor of that old-established national weekly offers to send his paper on trial 8 weeks for only 10 cents. The 10c does not begin to pay the cost but the editor says he is glad to invest in new friends. The Pathfinder has been going for 28 years. One family in every 70 in the entire United States now takes it. Thousands more would take it if they realized what they are missing. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Only a dime sent to the Pathfinder, 98 Langdon Station, Washington, D. C., will keep your whole family informed, entertained, helped and inspired.—Adv.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 231G Marcellus Avenue, Manassquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

THE KINDNESS OF MOVING MEN.

Dear Brother Carley: I have lately become indebted to several of our preachers for personal kindnesses, given at a time when they were themselves under stress of marching orders. It was my privilege to spend a week with my predecessor, Brother Higginbotham, and his wife in the parsonage here, their presence making my coming doubly pleasant, and giving me an opportunity to get much first-hand information of my work. His work here has been constructive and has prepared the way for me. The records of membership are in better shape than any I have seen. Brother Higginbotham will be one of our most efficient workers in the years to come. He and his wife leave many friends on the charge. The people are very cordial, and my reception has been all that one could expect, and more. The folks are loyal to their pastor, and speak often of Wells, Price, Lewis, Meigs, and others who have served them. Such appreciation of their former pastors gives me encouragement.

I am indebted for a number of kindnesses to Brother J. C. Jackson, my successor at Washington. For practical, consecrated common sense, I know few men his equal among the younger men. Whether by accident or good judgment, the cabinet in 1919 selected the right man for the past year at Washington, especially in regard to the church repair enterprise.

Simple Mixture
Makes Hens Lay

By W. S. Burgess.

Any poultry raiser can greatly increase his profits, easily and quickly by taking advantage of the 35 years' experience of a successful poultryman.

A life long study of egg production has resulted in a secret formula of buttermilk and other valuable ingredients that puts pep into lazy hens. Users report increases of two to seven times as many eggs.

This secret formula is now put up in tablet form and is called Combs' Buttermilk Compound Tablets. Simply feed in water or mix with feed.

I am so convinced that this wonderful formula is always successful that I say kill the hen that won't lay after using it.

One million new users are wanted, so for a limited time any reader of this paper can get a big double size box (enough for a season) on free trial by simply writing for it. Send no money. Use the tablets 30 days; if at the end of that time your hens are not laying 2 or 3 times as many eggs; if you are not more than satisfied in every way the tablets are to cost you nothing. If completely satisfied this big double size box costs you only $1.00 on this introductory offer. Not only do they make this exceptional offer, but the tablets give such universal satisfaction that a Big Bank GUARANTEES that they will live up to every word of their offer. With the box of tablets you will be sent a letter from the Broadway State Bank which reads in part as follows: "You, therefore, take no risk whatsoever in ordering a package of tablets from them, as this bank will refund out of this deposit the one dollar you send them provided the Milk Products Co. fails to do as agreed." Because you are fully protected and are the sole judge as to whether you want your money back, it is asked as an evidence of good faith on your part, that you pay the mail man the dollar when he delivers the package. Simply send name—post card will do—to Milk Products Co., 458 Creamery Bld., Kansas City, Mo., and the big box of tablets will be mailed immediately, post paid.—Adv.

more credit for the successful accomplishment of which is due Brother Jackson than he will probably ever receive. All of the sincere, godly people of the circuit appreciated him and regretted his going. Brother Simpson has some splendid people to serve and will do good work among them.

J. H. Grice can hardly be called a "moving man," except in the bounds of his circuit, where he moves often and with good effect. He is the most obliging man I know and almost wore out a Ford car in kindness to me. Much constructive work has been done on the church property since he went on the work. The only sermon I heard him preach was clear, logical, and sensible in the presentation of the text. Both he and my predecessor are like Dr. Steel's description of the pastor at Capitol Street—much helped in their work by their better three-fourths.

I preached twice for M. W. David at Pine Grove and heard him preach twice. He was much in favor with his people and in many ways this was the best year the Mentor circuit has had. The secret of it lies in the fact he is a good preacher and folks still like preaching, especially the preaching of the gospel. Wise is the man who refuses to let the many demands of the present take him from his chief task.

Brother Lewis kindly let me stay at Conference with my predecessor on the Washington charge. J. H. Jolly is one of the strongest young men in the Conference and has a bright future before him. He is concerned about every part of his work and always brings a good report to Conference of a substantial increase in membership and his collections in full.

I miss J. A. Smith, whose moving took him across the continent. At the Conference of 1919, when almost everybody it seemed was trying to persuade me not to go to school, he came to me and although nearly a stranger, said: "If you need help in going to school, let me know." I shall not forget it.

Incidentally, I had a good year at Emory and the catalogue says I got an M.A. degree. Personally I don't remember much about it, but a college catalogue never tells an untruth—that is, hardly ever. I preached over forty times by invitation and taught a Sunday school class of men. Pray for us.

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever and the grip is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid, there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's.

FROM FOXWORTH, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The people of the Foxworth charge have received us very kindly, meeting us at the parsonage with a nice, warm dinner, and all kind of edibles; and they have been coming in ever since we came. May the good Lord repay them for their kindness to us. I pray that we may have a gracious revival this year all over the charge.

The stewards have adopted the monthly payment plan for the pastor, which is working nicely. Three of the churches have already paid up ahead, and I am not grumbling, but praying the Lord for a genuine, Holy Ghost revival this year. So I take courage and press the battle for souls.

Brother Barr, our superannuated preacher, is living here and already has been a help to me. Brother Wal-drop, a supernumerary and superintendent of the Sunday school here, is a wide-awake man, and has helped the pastor wonderfully already. So we are not looking down at all, but up, up, up. May God give us a great year!

Yours in His service,

W. W. NELSON, P. C.

THE PROGRAM FOR JANUARY.

In the program for January of the Christian Education Movement emphasis will be placed on Bible reading and prayer by the individual, by the family, and by the church in all its departments. January 23-30 will be enrollment week, when every member of the church will be given an opportunity to sign a card, similar to the one signed in the Centenary Campaign. Cards can be secured on application to Rev. P. L. Cobb, Secretary, 160 Fourth Avenue, N., Nashville, Tenn.

FROM TAYLORSVILLE, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: I was received on the Taylorville and Mize circuit with a warm welcome. All denominations had a big hand in giving me a pounding. I am already having a warm feeling for the people on my work, as they have expressed themselves so courteously in my behalf in many ways.

I will state, also, we have a new boy in our home. He came to us on Dec. 28, 1920.

FROM MERRYVILLE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I was returned by the Conference at DeRidder to the Merryville charge. Every thing looks like a prosperous year. We have a good Sunday school, a fine Epworth League, a very good prayer meeting, and our church services are very well attended.

Well, yes, we had the "pounding." Brother J. M. Grady, president of the Epworth League, got his Leaguers busy, and on the night of December 16, just before the prayer meeting service, they came to the parsonage all loaded with good things for the preacher and his family. Well, you have been a pastor and know just how we appreciated these nice things, which were too numerous to mention. What a fine lot of people we have here at Merryville! Come to see us.

B. H. SHEPPARD, P. C.

A NOTE FROM REV. A. W. O'BRYANT.

Dear Brother Carley: We arrived at our new home, Rector Station, on December 3, and were kindly received by the good people. Rector is in about 15 miles of the Missouri State line, and has a population of approximately 2300. We have the best church in the Paragould District. It is a new brick building with all the modern conveniences, valued at $40,000. We also have a nice parsonage in connection, well furnished. The stewards increased the pastor's salary 20 per cent over last year, and relieved the pastor of all financial burdens. And, too, they rounded out the old year by "pounding" the pastor and family with enough groceries to last at least sixty days and when you take into consideration the fact that there are nine in the family, it counts. With regards to the editor and readers, I beg to remain,

Fraternally,

A. W. O'BRYANT.

FALL QUARTER CONVOCATION,
EMORY UNIVERSITY.

Fourteen men were graduated from Emory University at the fall quarter convocation late in December. The degree of Bachelor of Divinity was conferred upon three young men and certificates in Theology were awarded five. The degree of Master of Science was conferred upon one candidate; the degree of Bachelor of Arts upon one, the degree of Bachelor of Science upon two, and the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy upon two. The convocation sermon was preached by Bishop McMurry.

MASS MEETINGS TO BE HELD.

During February there will be held in thirty-six of the more important cities of our connection, great mass meetings in the interest of Christian Education. These gatherings will be for the general public, being held in some central auditorium in the various cities. The programs of the meetings will be of a popular character, planned for the purpose of presenting the cause of Christian Education in the most forceful manner possible. Prominent educators will speak and the moving picture which the Publicity Department is getting out will be shown.

There are more opportunities than there are young men to take advantage of them. You say the country has grown larger, that life is more complex, and that as a result the personal incentive has vanished in proportion. Everything in that is perfectly correct except the conclusion. The country is bigger and life is more complex; but who will gainsay that if the country has grown bigger, and the opportunities have with it, and that if life is more complex, it at least results in a greater variety of opportunities?—James J. Hill.

PRAYER FOR CHRISTIAN UNITY IN SERVICE.

Spirit of the Son of man, unite us in the love for man as man, in the sympathy for those wants which are universal because they are human. Unite us in pity for the poor, in distress for the desolate, in help for the homeless, in succor for the sinful. Then we can afford to wait for the unity of the faith. Then can we postpone our differences about the name we shall give to thy light, for thine unnamed light shall itself be our guide, and the glory of the sacrificial flame shall lead us all into the presence of the Father.—George Matheson.

RHEUMATISM—RELIEF

From Its Dreadful Pains and Aches,
Stiffness, Soreness—

Is properly to be sought in a good blood medicine, because authorities say rheumatism is a blood disease; acid has entered the blood, settling in the muscles and joints. That's what makes the sharp, sudden, shot-like pains, causing you to jump and cringe in agony.

Hood's Sarsaparilla comprises remedies that every physician prescribes for rheumatism, combined with other blood-purifying, tonic and strength-building ingredients in a formula vastly superior in make-up and in curative power. It does give positive relief. Thousands say so. So will you. For a fine laxative take Hood's Pills.

THE STARVING CHILDREN OF CENTRAL EUROPE.

"In the naked lands of central and southeastern Europe," says the Literary Digest, "three and a half million children are to-day threatened with death from starvation, cold, and disease."

Herbert Hoover, whose organization has fought successfully for the past six years against the Grim Reaper, says that the resources of his organization will be exhausted in January, and that $23,000,000 must be provided without delay if these three and a half million little children are to be snatched from the brink of death. "Is our hand shortened that it cannot save?"

THE NORTH CHINA FAMINE.

"Apparently the monumental work of Hoover in stricken Belgium must be surpassed in China during the coming winter," says the Far Eastern Fortnightly, "or a population greater than that of Belgium will perish. Approximately forty million people are known to be affected. Twenty-five million are in straits, and at least ten million will perish if relief measures of heroic proportions are not forthcoming before the cold weather sets in."

The Christian Herald sums up the situation in brief: "The bitter cold winter of North China already has begun. It is estimated that nearly one-half the people in the famine districts are without shelter and without winter clothing."

"The people are eating sand burrs, elm bark, alfalfa (when it can be obtained), acacia leaves, and weeds all stirred into a gruel. They are cooking this 'food' over fires made of dried weeds, wood from the walls of their huts, and bamboo and sorghum stocks from the roofs—all in the way of fuel they have left."

"Mothers are putting poison in the last remnant of food to end the sufferings of their families."

"Little girls are being sold into slavery, partly for the money they will bring and with which some morsel of food can be bought, and partly because it will make fewer mouths to feed."

"Babies are being thrown into the rivers or left tied to posts on the roadside while their parents flee from their villages."

"Famine fever and typhus already have made their appearance in hundreds of communities."

"Starvation now is a fact. What will be the conditions, then, by spring?"

WOMAN'S INTERRACIAL CONFERENCE.

Through the courtesy of the Commission on Interracial Co-operation (headquarters Atlanta, Ga.) a Woman's Interracial Conference was called at Memphis, Tenn., October 6, 7, 1920. Ninety-one white women were present from all parts of the South. Five denominations, the Y. W. C. A., the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis Association, and the Department of Negro Education of Shelby County, Tenn., were all represented by the delegates present.

Four colored women addressed the Conference: Mrs. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Principal of Palmer Memorial Institute, Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. George E. Hayes, Secretary Department of Social Science, United States Employment Bureau, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. R. R. Moton, wife of Principal of Tuskegee Institute; Mrs. Booker T. Washington, Superintendent of Industrial Department, Tuskegee Institute.

A finding committee was appointed by the chairman, Mrs. Luke Johnson. This committee brought in a recommendation for the appointment of a Continuation Committee, to be composed of one woman from each denomination and Christian agency represented, and also recommended the following constructive measures:

1. Domestic Service.—We acknowledge our responsibility for the protection of the Negro women and girls in our homes and on the streets. We therefore recommend that domestic service be classed as an occupation and co-ordinated with other world service in order that a better relation may be established for both employer and employee.

2. Child Welfare.—We are persuaded that the conservation of the life and health of Negro children is of the utmost importance to the community. We therefore urge: (1) That day nurseries and kindergartens be established in local communities for the protection, care, and training of children of Negro mothers who go out to work. (2) That free baby clinics be established, and that government leaflets on child welfare be distributed to expectant mothers—thus teaching the proper care of themselves and their children. (3) That adequate playgrounds and recreational facilities be established for Negro children and young people.

3. Sanitation and Housing.—Since good housing and proper sanitation are necessary for both physical and moral life, we recommend that a survey of housing and sanitary conditions be made in the Negro sections in each local community, followed by an appeal to the proper authorities for improvements when needed.

4. Education.—(1) Since sacredness of personality is the basis for all civilization, we urge that every agency touching the child life of the nation shall strive to create mutual respect in the hearts of the children of different races. (2) We are convinced that the establishment of a single standard of morals for men and women, both black and white, is necessary for the life and safety of a nation. We therefore pledge ourselves to strive to secure respect and protection for womanhood everywhere, regardless of race or color. (3) Since provision for the education of Negro children is still inadequate, we recommend that surveys be made of the educational situation in the local community in order

Pity

Those who would help to destroy one of the most vital factors in the commercial and social life of their city are more to be pitied than censured. Everything that contributes to a city's welfare should be encouraged, not hampered.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world-over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

that colored children may secure (a) more equitable division of the school fund, (b) suitable school buildings and equipment, (c) longer school terms, (d) higher standards and increased pay for teachers.

5. Travel.—Since colored people frequently do not receive fair treatment on street cars, on railroads, and in railway stations, and recognizing this as one of the chief causes of friction between the races, we urge that immediate steps be taken to provide for them adequate accommodations and courteous treatment at the hands of street car and railway officials.

6. Lynching.—As women, we urge those who are charged with the administration of the law to prevent lynchings at any cost. We are persuaded that the proper determination on the part of the constituted officials, upheld by public sentiment, would result in the detection and prosecution of those guilty of this crime. We therefore pledge ourselves to uphold these officials in the execution of justice.

7. Justice in the Courts.—We recommend that our women everywhere raise their voices against all acts of violence to property and person, wherever and for whatever cause occurring. We further recommend that competent legal assistance be made available for colored people in the local communities in order to insure to them the protection of their rights in the courts.

8. Public Press.—Since the public press often gives undue prominence to the criminal element among Negroes, and neglects the worthy and constructive efforts of law-abiding Negro citizens, we pledge ourselves to cooperate with the men's committees in endeavoring to correct this injustice and to create a fair attitude to Negroes and Negro news.

Respectfully submitted: Mrs. Archibald Davis, Chairman; Mrs. T. W. Bickett, Miss Belle H. Bennett, Mrs. Arch Trawick, Mrs. A. T. Robertson, Mrs. M. Ashby Jones, Mrs. H. L. Schmelz, Mrs. Theodore D. Bratton.

FROM LULA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I have just read in the Advocate of December 30 the complimentary notice of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Clarksdale, Miss., Methodist Church, in which the statement is made that its "membership of 150 raised last year, $2,909."

I wish to congratulate this society and its pastor, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, upon this splendid showing. I have just made a comparison of the reports of this society and the Woman's Missionary Society of Lula, Miss., which shows the following:

Lula has 63 church members, of whom 25 are ladies and 7 are girls. The Lula Missionary Society has 33 members. The membership of the Clarksdale church is 541 (taken from last year's minutes), with 150 members in the Missionary Society.

Thus it will be seen that Clarksdale, to be in the same proportion as Lula, should have 283 members in Missionary Societies.

The report shows that Clarksdale's 150 members raised only $2,909 last year, or $19.39 per capita, while Lula's 33 members raised $675, or $20.45 per capita; showing that the little society at Lula raised $1.06 per capita more than the Clarksdale society raised last year.

These figures do not include report from the Dundee Ladies' Aid Society, which, with a smaller membership, raised $12 more than the Lula Society.

This comparison and comment is not made in any spirit of boasting, or unfriendly criticism, but is meant to be an encouragement to Brother Broyles and his splendid church. It is a source of great pleasure to us at Lula, however, to know that we are making a record which we hope will be an inspiration to Clarksdale Methodists.

May we all do better in 1921!

Idle Hens Start Laying
104 Eggs, Instead Of 5

Steady Egg Gain Each Week for Mrs. Pierce in Winter Weather.

"The week before we tried Don Sung, we got 5 eggs, from 50 hens. The next week, from a package of Don Sung, we got 72 eggs, and the next week 104. Some of our hens are mere pullets and Don Sung started them laying."—Mrs. B. F. Pierce, R. F. D. 1, Butler, Tenn.

Mrs. Pierce selected a severe time for her test—the middle of January. Yet she got the eggs. Your hens can lay well in cold weather, and we'll prove it.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) is a scientific tonic and conditioner. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health and makes her stronger and more active. It tones up the egg-laying organs, and gets the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather.

Don Sung can be obtained promptly from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer, or send $1.04 (includes war tax) for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 214 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

PRAY, GIVE, GO!

Three things the Master hath to do,
And we who serve Him here below
And long to see His kingdom come,
May pray, or give, or go.

He needs them all—the open hand,
The willing feet, the asking heart—
To work together and to weave
The threefold cord that shall not part.

Not all can go; not all can give
To arm the others for the fray;
But young or old, or rich or poor,
Or strong or weak—we all can pray.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

PATIENCE—A DIFFICULT VIRTUE.

Patience is one of the most beautiful, as it is one of the most difficult, of all virtues. It is exceedingly hard not to show, by facial expression, word, or act, our irritation when things do not go just as we should like to have them, or when people do not speak or act just as we think they should. We are often tempted to let our feelings get the better of our judgment to such an extent that we ourselves become unhappy and our friends become offended. When James exhorted us to "let patience have her perfect work," he was hitting at a pretty weak point with most of us. If we would be "perfect and entire, wanting nothing," we might begin with this commonplace virtue which needs to be practiced every day.

STARVING!

We write the word, but we do not know what it means. We are told that millions of people, men, women, and children, are actually starving to death in China and in Central Europe. We do not even know what it is to be hungry. Our appetites sometimes become rather vigorous—but we soon appease them. We see no famished people eating bark and leaves of trees, trying to sustain life just a few hours longer; we see no mothers casting their children into the streams to end their suffering; we see no gaunt little bodies lying by the roadside, starved to death. We have food for ourselves, and plenty of it, even if we do complain of hard times. Cannot we give a little of our plenty to those who have nothing at all? Never before in the history of the world has there come such an appeal in behalf of starving people as comes to us to-day. Starving—what DOES it mean?

PRIZE FIGHTS AS SOCIAL EVENTS.

We have always believed that prize fighting is a brutal exhibition of physical strength and skill, devoid of everything that has any tendency to develop the finer instincts of humanity. Even its patrons are not accustomed to speak of it as a form of entertainment that would appeal to those who are concerned about the higher issues of life. What shall we think, then, of those socially prominent women in New York who are reputed to have attended a championship fight recently and to have declared they were "just crazy" about the bloody "sport?" That part of the proceeds of this particular fight went to the European Relief Fund only accentuates the culpability of those who sold tickets to it and gave it the prestige of their presence. Thank God, prize fights have not yet found a place on the social calendar of the South.

ATTENTION, LAWMAKERS!

The mere layman is frequently nonplussed, and sometimes disgusted, at the apparent ease with which duly enacted laws are found to be fatally defective when submitted to the test of the courts. Resourceful lawyers, intent, of course, upon the interests of their clients, seem to be able to find some technical flaw, or to raise the question of constitutionality in practically every case where the issues involved justify the necessary expenditure of time and talent in undertaking to overthrow the law itself. In many instances the issue seems to be clearly drawn between the lawmakers and the lawbreakers—and the lawbreakers altogether too frequently win. We are not thinking now of the laws into which a "joker" has deliberately been written, but of the statutes which have been conscientiously and carefully drawn for the purpose of preventing and punishing crime. A legislator who will deliberately put into a law a single word that he knows in advance will invalidate the whole measure is as contemptible a traitor as the man who would deliver a military secret to the enemy for so much cash in hand. One of the many things this country needs is laws that cannot be shot full of holes. If some lawmakers have to be retired to private life and some lawbreakers have to be put in the penitentiary in the process of securing them, so much the better.

$1,000,000 FOR EDUCATION IN NEW ORLEANS.

The archepiscopal diocese of New Orleans of the Roman Catholic Church has determined to establish a diocesan seminary for the training of priests within its boundaries. It was decided that one million dollars would be necessary for the enterprise, and a campaign was inaugurated to secure it. An organization was set up, captains and teams appointed, and the solicitation was begun. In spite of the fact that we are now passing through a severe financial depression, the campaign was waged vigorously, and on the day this is written, January 17, the total amount already reported is more than $600,000. There is not the slightest doubt but that the full million will be secured. The lesson for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is this: If we make up our minds to provide now for the pressing needs of our educational institutions, we can come mighty near doing it, depression or no depression. We still believe the great Methodist Church can do whatever needs to be done, WHEN it needs to be done.

THE CENTENARY PLEDGES.

The best way to do a thing, is to do it; we hope, therefore, that all those who have not as yet paid their Centenary subscriptions will "strain a point" if necessary, in order to meet these obligations. We happen to know how faithfully our Conference Centenary secretaries and treasurers have worked to secure at least the 40 per cent necessary to complete the second payment; and we know, too, how badly this money is needed for the support of the enterprises that were launched under the inspiration of the Centenary Movement. If it is at all possible to do so, we ought to be able to write, "In full to date," across our pledges by the end of January.

A PITY.

Last week we used the escape of the naval balloonists from the frozen wastes of Northern Canada as the basis of a reflection concerning the spiritual welfare of those who are lost in the wilderness of sin; what a pity that two of these men, after having faced death together, should engage in an altercation and come to blows as soon as they were safe from the dangers that had so recently threatened them! And what a tragedy it is that men in the crises of life will make their vows to the Lord—and straightway forget them when the danger has passed! The repentance of fear is a very different thing from true contrition of spirit.

THE CRIME WAVE.

A wave of crime seems to be sweeping over the whole country. Almost every day we read accounts in the newspapers of daring robberies and brutal murders, many of them committed in broad daylight. The police authorities throughout the country are making diligent efforts to suppress these outrages, special squads of trained officers being set apart in many cities to deal with the situation. All this is well and good; but mere physical force is not going to be able to exterminate these hordes of criminals. If the stream is to be purified, we must begin at its source, by a moral reformation that will make impossible the raising up of a generation of young people who know nothing of the imperatives of the moral law. It would seem, from present indications, that the only hope for the preservation of our social and economic welfare is a system of religious education, beginning in the home and extending through all our educational institutions, that will lay the foundation upon which national security may be established. The sanctions of religion will do more than all the officers of the law in the world to abolish crime.

Rev. John Sharp said that the Bible and Shakespeare had made him Archbishop of York. John Wesley once declared that two books had determined his calling and character, Thomas à Kempis'

"Imitation of Christ" and Jeremy Taylor's "Holy Living and Holy Dying." Methodism owes more to these two books than she can ever repay, for without them she may not have been. It is well known that Pitt, Wilberforce and the author of the "Dairyman's Daughter" which has been translated into more than fifty languages and has brought about hundreds of conversions, were traceable to a tract left in a village by a tin peddler. Carey, the first modern missionary, stated that his mind was first influenced towards missions by reading the story of Captain Cook's voyages.

Josephus Daniels, the Secretary of the Navy, a man of moral strength and backbone, who banished wine from the Navy in the face of a storm of opposition, is the wizard of the seas. He did what the Imperial Government of Germany said was impossible. He transported more than 2,000,000 American troopers across an ocean that was infested with murderous U-boats, whose highest ambition was to send our transports to the bottom of the sea. Josephus Daniels says that his early life was largely shaped by two books—George Eliot's "Adam Bede," and "The Hoosier Schoolmaster" by Edward Eggleston. Mr. Daniels rarely ever makes a speech before a religious assembly that he does not allude to Dinah Morris, a leading character in "Adam Bede," who, in his judgment, is a striking type of the old-time Methodist. When Charles Dickens was a boy, he lived in an attic and performed the most menial services for a pittance, for his father was incarcerated in jail for debt. But some thoughtful person put some good books into his hands, which helped to change the current of his life and to make him the greatest novelist of the English-speaking race. In his description of the death of little Paul in "Dombey and Son," he paints a picture of immortality which has been a source of comfort and strength to countless thousands. The influence of Christian literature is immeasurable, beyond all conception.

But that of another character is not without its force. I have been told that Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" had more to do with bringing about the "War between the States" than any other one thing. Students who look beneath the surface for causes say that the atheistic philosophy of Nietzsche, Christianity's most formidable foe and war's stoutest apologist, was largely responsible for German militarism and for the great war that has plunged the world into blood. For German militaristic writers are all disciples of Nietzsche. It is not surprising to learn that Nietzsche's life was shaped by a book. He was born in 1844, the year the Methodist Church was divided, not in the home of infidel or free thinker, but in a German parsonage. He was descended from a long line of German pastors, and was designed to be a pastor himself. He lived an exemplary life until he was 14 years of age, when he got hold of some poisonous literature which diverted his mind from the truth. His biographer says that Schopenhauer's masterpiece, "The World as Will and the World as an Idea," completely divorced the mind of this brilliant youth from the truth. If Nietzsche had not got this intellectual poison, he would never have written his false philosophy, and it is more than possible that this war, which has brought sorrow into millions of homes and whose effects are being felt now throughout the world, might have been averted. Therefore, in its last analysis, may we not say that the war is largely traceable to a single book?

The world has not grasped the potency, yea, the power of the printed page. It is silently but effectively shaping the destiny of men and nations, and writing a new history of the world while men sleep. John Wesley was wise in advance of his day and generation. He caught the vision of the value of Christian literature which his church is slowly catching to-day. In 1739, after he had secured the Foundry as a meeting house, he immediately established therein book rooms and devoted a large part of his busy life to writing and editing hymnals, other religious books and periodicals, so that at his death it was found that during the fifty years of his ministerial life he had traveled 250,000 miles and preached 42,000 sermons, and had written and compiled 200 volumes, including his translation of the New Testament, his notes on the New Testament, four volumes of English history, four of physical science, grammars in the English, French, Latin, Greek and Hebrew tongues, and fifty volumes of poetry.

It is no wonder that one of his charges to his preachers was: "Distribute good literature among the people. It cannot be that a people should grow in grace unless they be a reading people. A reading people will always be a knowing people." The old-time circuit rider had his saddlebags crammed full of religious books and periodicals, such as Fletcher's "Checks" and Butler's "Analogy," books that would be considered heavy reading to-day, when there are so many magazines and newspapers; but these books produced a sturdy type of Methodists, of whom the world was not worthy, who laid the foundation upon which we are building the superstructure.

Some other denominations have made marvelous progress by the use of their literature. The Seventh Day Adventists some time ago shipped two freight car loads of their literature into a single Southern State for gratuitous distribution. The Russellites ordered 37,000,000 copies of their publications, which required 2100 tons of white paper on which to print them. It is not surprising that these two "isms" are making prodigious progress. Their literature is insidiously creeping into our homes, and weakening the faith and destroying the loyalty of our people to their church. The only way that we can offset it is to flood our homes with our own literature.

The Centenary Movement has tried out our literature with surprising results and has given it no little credit for the amazing success of its drive. Dr. W. W. Pinson, the secretary of our Board of Missions, in whose brain the Centenary Movement was conceived, said, "We could not have put it over without the church papers." But the rub has come in collecting subscriptions as the enthusiasm has somewhat abated. The Centenary recognizes the fact that there is no agency in the church better fitted to keep the movement alive in the minds of the rank and file than the church papers.

But to do this effectively, as well as to do the part it is possible for them to do in the Educational Movement and for other enterprises of the church, their circulation must be greatly increased. It is not extravagant to say that the progress of the church to-day depends in no small measure upon the strength of its literature and the wideness of its circulation, for its literature not only reinforces the utterances of the pulpit with those who have heard the message, but it often reaches people un-reached by the pulpit. A church cannot, therefore, do a wiser thing than to provide an adequate equipment for this most potential arm of service. While it is raising millions for many other commendable purposes, by a little extra effort it could place its periodicals, whose existence has always been more or less precarious, on a permanent foundation, solving the financial problems, enabling them to be published at a price that would guarantee a maximum circulation, and increasing their general usefulness many fold. This would be a long step toward the church's goal.

The Southern Methodist Press Association, organized a year ago at Birmingham, Ala., is one of the youngest enterprises of the church. We hope, however, that its virility is in inverse proportion to its age. Its primary purpose, I take it, is to put our periodicals on a stable basis and increase their efficiency. This can be done by the Association's making a correct diagnosis of the source of the troubles of our publications and presenting their imperative needs to the church. We are glad to have with us this year the members of the General Conference Commission on Periodicals, and feel assured that they will help us to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling.

Three largely attended and enthusiastic meetings have already been held, which, in addition to the progress made as to our primary purpose, have heartened the papers and aided some of them in increasing their circulation and their advertising patronages. But the helpfulness of the Association, if properly managed, will become greater each year. To us its future is fraught with wonderful possibilities. May they all be materialized!

In conclusion, I desire to express my deepest gratitude to the members of the Association, especially to Rev. H. T. Carley, the vice president, and Dr. A. F. Smith, the secretary-treasurer, for the splendid support they accorded me, their unworthy president, during the year now closing.

Perhaps the richest of God's earthly gifts is an accepted sorrow. Do not lose this one. Accept it. Say, "Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth," and He will tell you some things worth all it cost to hear them. I cannot say what—but you will know. You will be more heavenly-minded, more patient, more kind and gentle, more consecrated to the good you can do. I am sure of this much; for these are some of "the peaceable fruits of righteousness" that come afterwards, in those whom God loves and chastens.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

He who complains, or thinks he has a right to complain, because he is called in God's Providence to suffer, has something within him which needs to be taken away. A soul whose will is lost in God's will can never do this. Sorrow may exist, but complaint never.—Catherine Adorna.

TIME TO SLOW UP.

By Bishop W. F. McManis.

I have opportunity to know something of the demands that are being made on the office of the Board of Church Extension. These demands, for the most part, seem to be based upon inability to collect subscriptions for negotiate loans to complete buildings already begun.

Our people should move very cautiously at this time in the matter of entering into contracts for church building obligations. The financial depression that is upon the country makes the collection of subscriptions very uncertain, and the borrowing of money at the banks and from individuals, for the purpose of church building, all but impossible. The conditions that affect the collection of local subscriptions and the negotiation of local loans affect this Board acutely. The first department of the Board to feel the effect of a financial depression is the Loan Department. At this time collections on existing loans are very much reduced.

I do not hesitate to say that no church building should be contracted at this time, unless the money is in hand, or so arranged for, as to make embarrassment, because of lack of funds, impossible. To go ahead without proper consideration being given to the availability of assets, and expect the Board of Church Extension to come to the rescue when the embarrassment has developed, is not the wise course.

It will be recalled that the Board entered upon its present fiscal year with its donation and loan accounts heavily overdrawn. More than fifty per cent of the income from the assessment this year was necessary to pay the overdraft in the donation account. The Secretary has made a good record in collecting outstanding loans and in securing additional contributions to the Loan Fund Capital, but for some weeks collections have been slow.

No Centenary Funds have been received by the Board since April 21, 1920, and no information has been given as to the amount to be received from this source at the next payment, nor are we advised as to just when the payment will be made. It is out of the question for the Board to be expected to make payment of grants out of this fund when it is not in hand.

It is time to slow up. The building enterprises of the church will be better cared for if our people are given the consideration to which they are entitled. They should be given an opportunity to meet existing, pressing obligations, such as current expenses, Centenary subscriptions, etc., by postponing for the time being, the contracting of building obligations. It is not believed that the present financial depression will be of long duration. There is a great day ahead for the nation and the church. A little patience and foresight is needed.

"For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? Lest haply, after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, saying, this man began to build and was not able to finish."

"PHYSICIAN, HEAL THYSELF."

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

With the above caption a strong editorial was printed in a late issue of The Saturday Evening Post. It was a sharp and merited criticism of a report of the Interchurch Commission on labor conditions in the steel industry. From facts given in the editorial, it is manifest that the Commission was misleading and unfair in their report. They failed to give any comparative statistics. This lack was for the apparent reason that they feared comparisons. If the denominations represented by the Commission really desired to help to improve the conditions of labor in the steel industry, in the matter of wages, they should have shown that they, the denominations, were doing better for their preacher employees than the steel corporation was doing for its operations. They did not make any such showing for the simple reason that they could not do so. The Bible has some specific directions concerning "a mote" and "a beam," which the Interchurch Commission would have done well to consider. See Matt. 7:5.

Mr. F. M. Barton, editor of The Forum, comments on this report of the Commission in a very vigorous and telling way, as follows: "This Committee, representing denominations employing some 115,000 ministers, deprecate the fact that 72 per cent of the steel employees get a wage of less than $300 a year, while they knew that over 90 per cent of the preacher employees of the denominations they represented got less than that amount, and that 50 per cent of their own preacher employees receive an average of $750 per year, less than half the $1575 specified by the Government as a minimum of subsistence."

This additional from Mr. Barton's comments: "The committee who represent the denominations knew when they were signing this statement that their own denominations, in which they, the signers, were bishops or directors or representatives, were paying only 7 per cent of preachers' salaries equal to what 30 per cent of skilled workers were getting, only 9 per cent of the preachers were receiving the pay of semi-skilled workers, and that 84 per cent of the 115,000 preachers were getting from a third to one-half less than the unskilled steel worker who receives the 'entirely inadequate wages of $1400 a year.' This committee could do something to remedy this condition of starvation wages paid to preachers by the denominations. But they risk nothing in bringing indictments against the steel company that is far more humane and just in the treatment of its employees than is the church."

This is a terrible showing for the churches, and ought to bring a blush of shame to the cheeks of us all. Mr. Barton's indictment against the churches for less humanity and justice than the steel company is severe, but do not facts justify him in making it?

In his editorial Mr. Lorimer says some very striking things. Note the following: "Many ministers of these great denominations are being shamefully underpaid. Nor does it appear that they have any more, if as much, recourse against injustice than the unorganized steel workers. We cannot find that the principles of collective bargaining, the eight-hour day, and the six-day week for preachers are indorsed by any denomination. Shall we say that in their pay, homes and conditions of work, preachers are entitled to less consideration than puddlers?"

Who can object to these statements? How can the denominations, represented by this Commission, afford to give to the public a report reflecting upon the steel company in its dealings with labor, when they do so much less for their preacher employees? If they will pull the beam out their own eyes, they may be able to pull the mote out of the steel company's eyes.

Another quotation from the editorial is noteworthy: "The churches no less than secular organizations must first recognize the supreme importance of the human factor, must see to it that their employees are decently housed, clothed, and fed. We believe, too, that ministers are entitled to a standard of living that will permit them to enjoy human amusements like other folks and provide for their old age in a self-respecting way. As it is, too many preachers must half-beg their way through life. No minister, humbled with the humility of half-starvation, can walk upright and tell his people eye to eye the things they must hear for the good of their souls."

All of that is as true as can be. Why do the churches allow a situation like this to be criticized and condemned by editors of secular periodicals? This editorial of Mr. Lorimer ought to be printed in tract form and largely distributed throughout the Methodist Church. I am sure it would do good.

One fact was not mentioned in this editorial that ought to be known. It is not generally known that the steel company, after having paid well for the work of their employees during all their active years, retires them at fixed age and length of service on a pension that provides a competency for comfort for life. Their pension at its peak is $100 a month. The allowance for the care of our old preachers averages $212 a year. How did this fact escape Mr. Lorimer's attention? It is the weakest thing and the most damaging fact in our church.

The steel company coins the brain, soul and body of its employees into gold. It is generous enough, however, to say to them, "We have used you and wasted you and worn you out to make money for us; now it is our duty to care for you when you are too old and worn to care for yourselves."

The Methodist Church draws from her preachers heavily, moving them around rapidly, making them defray all the traveling expenses, taken from painfully meager salaries, leaving not more than enough to keep soul and body together, and then when they are so old and worn out that nobody wants them or will have them, superannuates them on an average of $212. They are without a parsonage to live in, have no board of stewards to look after them, have no perquisites of any kind, have to rent a shack to live in and starve by degrees. Can God bless a church that treats its old preachers in such a way? It is reasonable to say He will not and can not.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION A SPIRITUAL UNDERTAKING.

By Rev. I. P. Martin.

The Christian Education Movement undertakes the same task which the preacher, the Sunday school teacher and the Christian parent are engaged in performing. All alike are trying to save souls.

We sometimes talk about saving souls as if we thought the work of saving souls was altogether done when we have seen them converted. This is without question the hour of all hours in the life of a Christian, the hour when old things pass away and all things become new. The moment when the lost sheep is found is the moment of dramatic interest; but the lost sheep must be carried back to the fold; and its wounds must be dressed; and it must be fed and sheltered; else it might as well not have been found at all.

In saving souls there is, therefore, the process of nurture and development. This is just as essential as the work of finding the lost.

Now the Christian Education Movement undertakes to inspire and promote this process. It says to parents: "You have a very solemn duty to perform in bringing up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. You have also a holy privilege; for God gives you a larger share in shaping the destiny of your children than any one else can have." It also says, "Reading the Bible and praying with your children is the best way in which you can start them toward useful Christian service."

The Christian Education Movement says to the Sunday school: "Your work is highly useful. If well done, it is second only to that of Christian parents. You must help parents to give Christian training to their children. It is not yours to take the place of parents, but to take a place with them. These children, whose parents seek your aid, have now come to the place where the Christian community must give them inspiration and instruction in the Kingdom of God. You stand at the threshold where the child passes into the larger world. You must interpret that world in the light of God's Word. Now, in order that you may be better prepared to do this work, we pledge to you the definite help of our colleges and universities."

The Christian Education Movement says to the colleges and universities: "Your task is the task of making scholarship minister to the training of men and women for the service of Jesus Christ our Lord. You are not to minify learning, but to magnify Christ. And you must give to the church young men and women of the highest culture who have so learned Christ that His service is the passion of their souls."

It says to the whole church: "If the best ambitions of the Christian home are to be realized; and if the labors of the Sunday school are to be fruitful; and if the colleges and universities are to turn out trained workers for the Master, there must be a revival of prayer and intercession. There must be secret prayer and family prayer and public prayer. There must also be a revival of the dedication of homes and of lives to the service of the Lord. There must also be a revival of the dedication of money to the Lord in order that the schools may be able to live and do this work of training men and women for the service of God."

This is why I say that the Christian Education Movement is a spiritual undertaking. It does not propose to do the work of those agencies which from the beginning were ordained of God, but it undertakes to help these agencies to understand and perform the tasks which God has given them.

This is an undertaking worthy of a great church. Abingdon, Virginia.

THE PERAMBULATOR "SEAS" AND SICKENS.

From Tokyo to Shimonoseki is 705 miles—one of the most wonderful railway journeys in all the world. Leaving Tokyo at 7 a. m., you are in Shimonoseki at 10 o'clock the following morning. Your journey has been through such cities as Yokohama, Nagoya, Kyoto, Osaka, Kobe, Hiroshima and Miyajima. In some places the railway track has for miles skirted close to the shores of the inland sea with its many wonderful islands, as well as passing through a number of tunnels and across level plains; all of which is a pleasing country, intensively cultivated as the Japanese must do. The scenery is beautiful and every phase of Japanese busbandry is stretched before you, rice, grains and fruit being grown on every available spot. In addition to all this, be it a clear day for some three hours in and around Tokyo and Yokohama, you have a view of the matchless Mt. Fuji, the sacred mountain of Japan, which dominates the skyline, though at places it is 80 miles distant from you.

The trip is had in a modern train thoroughly equipped with sleeping and dining cars. In all the long journey there is not a jar or a jolt when the train stops or leaves the station. True, the road is a narrow gauge and cars may be a trifle narrow when compared with ours in America, but for comfort and ease, they are the equal of any. As one rides along, one sees men and women side by side working in the rice fields, on the road bed, and in the highways. Quite frequently a shrine is passed and the natives may be seen going to it, offering their sacrifice and prayer.

From Shimonoseki, Japan, to Fusan, Korea, is 150 miles across the Korean Strait. Ordinarily, this trip is made in 10 hours on regular ocean-going vessels, operated by the Imperial Government Railway of Japan. These vessels have roomy cabins and good berths, and, under fair weather and ordinary circumstances, are quite comfortable. It sometimes happens that the water of the Strait is so rough that the ships have been forced to turn back to the port from which they have sailed after having been half-way across and at a later hour another and more successful attempt is made. The morning our party sailed from Shimonoseki was one of those bright and glorious sunshiny days which come to us often in the Southland during the month of October—just such a day when it is good to be in God's out-of-doors and drink to the full all the joy and pleasure of just being alive and thankful to the Heavenly Father that life is so full of possibilities, and to you has been given one of the great opportunities to help the world become what He long since has planned for it to be.

On boarding our ship our party, not knowing the treacherousness of the Strait, looked forward to a most delightful sea voyage. As we moved out of the harbor, passing the many ships loading and unloading, we anticipated another trip of wonderful scenery. For about two hours of time the ship passes through a portion of the inland sea before it reaches the Straits. On either side of the vessel are many picturesque islands, inhabited and uninhabited. As long as we were in this portion of the sea the trip was indeed a glorious one, and if it could have continued the rest of the journey, it would have been a great day, but alas and alack! when we moved out into the Straits proper, the sea became somewhat choppy and seemed bent upon making our ship ride them in the most "bumpity-bump" manner possible.

At 12 the ship gong announced luncheon. Immediately sixty-four Sunday school workers from various parts of the United States and Canada descended into the saloon. The room was quite long. In it were two tables, each seating thirty-four people. In a very short space of time our party had seated themselves and were anticipating such things as Italian soup, lobster entree, mayonnaise sauce, Cochin fowl, ox-tail hatch potch, golden buck rabbit, shell peas, veal chop, Surat curry and rice, potatoes boiled and baked sweet, roast ribs of beef, roast leg of pork, Mowbray pie, Kamakura ham, smoked sausage, salad, pickle, Baba au Cbantilly, chocolate rolls, Napoleon brown bread, pull bread biscuits, Swiss and American cheese, fruits, tea, coffee. Strange as it may seem, the minute we were seated and the menu was put before us, a number of the crowd suddenly discovered that they did not care for a thing. It's strange how suddenly one changes one's mind in a dining room of a vessel upon a choppy sea. Even the Perambulator was not tempted to order any of the many good things on the bill of fare. Of course, we kept our courage up and displayed it in many ways. I heard one gentleman say to the lady beside him, "Not going to eat any lunch?" to which the lady replied, "I may take some soup." The gentleman spoke again, saying, "I believe I prefer an apple," and reaching for the dish took one and peeled it and began eating it, offering a piece to the lady. At this moment a lady across the table arose and asked to be excused; this was the first volunteer for the fish-feeding brigade. She was quickly followed by the lady to whom the gentleman had offered the apple, who, arising, said, "I don't think I'll eat any lunch." The next to go was the Perambulator, though he had dispensed with his second apple and as he left he remarked, "I'll leave it to the rest of you; I'm going on deck." As he ascended the stairway, the thought which seemed to be apparent in the minds of most who remained at the table was, "Man wants but little here below." One by one recruits were added to the fish brigade, and should you have passed ten minutes later upon deck, you would have seen scattered here and there at the most convenient places, men and women answering the call of that choppy sea. Most of them were clinging to the rail of the ship with their heads extended far beyond, giving to old Neptune the things that he was demanding. But as sick as sea sickness can make one, there is always some one around who can see the humorous side. It was the wise old sage on one voyage which got off this: Seeing a passenger bestowing his dinner upon the bosom of the ocean, he said, "What's the matter, weak stomach?" and instantly received the reply, "Weak nothing, I'm throwing it as far as the rest of them." Instead of the sea's getting calmer, it seemed to most of our crowd to get more choppy. Certain it is that one by one the fish brigade was swelled until we had enlisted in its service 60 of the 64 passengers. Some were on deck sitting in chairs, some lying down on benches, some spending their time walking, constantly, from the chair to the rail, others stretched flat on the back on the hatchway, while others sought peace and quiet in their bunks in the cabin below; but all was misery and vexation of stomach. Some, when they thought of the 400 miles across the eastern sea and the 4200 miles across the Pacific ocean that was yet ahead of them, were almost ready to forego the joy and pleasure of the 1500 miles of railway travel through Korea and China, if they could only be placed on terra firma now.

When dinner was announced there was scarcely a corporal's guard that seated themselves around the table, and even these were far from the mood of eating. The rest of the party did not even arise from their bunks, chairs, or couches until the ship had gotten safely within the harbor of Fusan and away from the turbulent waters of the Strait. It was a listless but expectant crowd that stepped off the ship amid the substantial quays and piers, warehouses and railway tracks, and walked across to the Fusan station to board their special train, which was awaiting to take them through Korea into China.

But of this trip, more in our next.

CHINA FAMINE FUND.

Our appeal for the starving millions in China is meeting with a prompt response. Already we have received $31,000. More than $4,000 was received yesterday in 112 separate contributions. Contributions are coming from individuals, churches, Sunday schools, Missionary Societies and Epworth Leagues. Bishop H. C. Morrison contributed the first $100. Twenty-two men and women sent as much as $100 each. The Y. W. C. A. at Macon, Georgia, sent $100. The students in Scarritt Bible and Training School have resolved to dispense with butter for a month and give the amount thus saved to the starving Chinese. Memorial Church, Lynchburg, Virginia, contributed $1,500; Main Street Church, Danville, Virginia, contributed $500; First Church, Memphis, Tennessee, contributed $603. Many smaller churches and Sunday schools are doing quite as nobly.

We have already cabled $25,000 to China. Bishop Lambuth wires that this saved nine thousand lives.

All news indicates that the situation grows worse. One report states that one thousand die daily. Bishop Lambuth wires that one thousand men, women and children froze to death one night at Kaigan. Children are being sold or killed by their mothers in agony and despair.

Let it be repeated with all emphasis that what is done should be done quickly and liberally, if the bare necessities of this dire situation are to be met.

The Christian Workers' Conference will meet at Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., on Monday evening, June 6, at 8 o'clock, and will adjourn at noon, Thursday, June 9. The program is being carefully planned and the occasion will no doubt prove interesting and profitable to both pastors and laymen. Men with a message will occupy the platform. In the dormitories of the College will be room for all who will attend, and a minimum charge for entertainment will be made. This Conference affords opportunity for recreation and fellowship as well as instruction and inspiration and worship. Please make note of this date, June 6-9, and make immediate engagement with yourself to attend.

TAKE DOWN THE BOARDS FROM THE DOOR

There are 1,048 churches—perhaps 5,000 congregations—in the M. E. Church, South, which have no itinerant preachers. Does this fact mean anything to you?

All of these churches are closed most of the time. Many of them are closed all of the time; abandoned, they are falling into decay. Those which have any kind of ministry are served by "supplies" who have few qualifications for their task; often these "supplies" preach as a "side line" to blacksmithing, or something else.

These abandoned churches indicate a lowering community morale and moral decay.

Where Shall Workers Be Found?

If the Church secures a sufficient number of trained preachers for all the pulpits, they will come from our Christian colleges. No other schools produce them. If we had all the ministers produced by every state university in America during any given period, they could not supply the churches of one annual conference.

The Christian Education Movement is the only hope.

It will take down the boards from the door of the little church. It will "fix up around the place." It will place trained and godly preachers in every pulpit.

How will all this be accomplished? Thousands of life service volunteers will be enlisted. A great fund will be raised to educate them. And the schools and colleges will be equipped to receive them—a thing which they cannot now do.

Then these little churches which are now closed will again become dynamos of spiritual life, springs of living water, altars of God's Mercy, centers of community service, radiative centers of moral power and civic virtue for state and nation.

The Home Circle

THE SQUEAKY CHAIR.

A queer old rocking chair there stands
Right by my little bed,
It has a cover on the back
With yellow flowers, and red,
And when I have been very good
And said my prayers all right,
I go to Katie and I say—"Rock me to sleep to-night!"

(I'm awfully big to rock to sleep, I'm nearly half-past five.)
Then Katie says, "Why, baby's back
As sure as I'm alive."

But then she takes me on her lap,
Although my legs hang down,
And laughs and says, "Now, baby dear, We're off to Sleepy Town."

"Eenk—awnk, eenk—awnk," the old chair goes,
It has an awful squeak.
"Eenk—awnk, eenk—awnk," I try to talk,
But I—forget—to—speak.
"Eenk—awnk, eenk—awnk," the old chair says,
From some place far and deep
I hear it call "Eenk—awnk—eenk—awnk—"

WHEN KATHERINE TURNED A NEW LEAF.

By Grace Boteler Allen.

"I thought Katherine could fix my eats for the New Year party," doled Junior, looking appealingly across the table at his sister. "Only ginger bread?" When still she did not answer, he chokingly reminded, "Other boys have mothers to fix their stuff, but I've a sister who thinks she's so smart since she graduated from cooking school that she can't make even ginger bread, and I thought"—sniff—sniff—"that she'd know everything when she came home. I think domestic science gurrils are horrid."

The scorn in Junior's voice had made daddy's brown eyes dance. The grief made the big man wipe these same eyes with his sleeve. His face was quite serious when his hand came down and slowly broke into bits the delicate angel cake which Katherine was so proud of making. He joked to assuage the youngster's grief.

"Junior, I am surprised at your lack of worldly wisdom," he mocked. "A domestic science graduate make ginger bread? Of course not. That was grandmother's favorite concoction along with baked beans and salt rising bread and other things which stick to the ribs. Poor grandmother didn't go to cooking school, or perhaps she might have made heavenly host and angel food; yet I wonder if her hungry farmer boys would have fared better."

"But, daddy, such common things." Katherine's red lips curled.

"The hogs and corn which sent you to fashionable school were quite common. Grandmother delighted in doing common things for her family. Your mother was a wonderful cook and homemaker. I was glad when you wished to study home economics, but somehow, daughter, it has only driven you farther away. Since you came home you are—"

Daddy smiled enigmatically. "I'll give you fifty dollars for every sheet of ginger bread like mother's," he said.

And Katherine laughed. "Won't it be easy? Really I hate to take the advantage of you." But suddenly she ceased to giggle. "No matter how good it is, you will think it not so good as grandmother's."

"I'll expect it for supper," called back daddy, as he followed Junior to the barn.

Katherine knew that this was a challenge. She turned quickly to the kitchen. "I am going to make some ginger bread," she announced.

The Swedish girl looked doubtfully. "I done try it many times, but it no suit the master."

Katherine tilted her head gaily to one side. "But you haven't been to cooking-school," she laughed.

Freda listened stolidly to the gay songs as Katherine beat the batter. There were no songs when the ginger bread came from the oven, a blackened mass. As Katherine tossed the bits into the poultry yard, indifferently announcing, "I used too much sugar," Freda grinned slightly. She returned from the telephone just as Katherine tossed the second cake to the chickens. But the third time Katherine carefully weighed sugar, butter, grease, and flour. When the fine-looking sheet came from the oven and proved to be as tough and tasteless as rubber, Katherine gazed at the pile of unwashed dishes, crocks, and spoons, and fled to the cool grape arbor. She stayed there until the men filed in to eat their earned beef and cabbage. At the door daddy roguishly called, "Is your ginger bread done?"

"I have about a month before the party," she returned.

"You'll need twice that time to learn to make ginger bread," prophesied daddy.

But Katherine had taken the dare. During those days life seemed but a procession of soggy, burned loaves. They were pursued, in her dreams, by loaves such as mother and grandmother had been proud to make and which she had so recently begun to covet.

All sugar and syrup and flour which came to the kitchen reached the poultry yard eventually and by the selfsame route. Finally one evening found her in grandmother's arms in the old, old farmhouse forty miles away.

"I have come for the purpose of learning to make ginger bread, and that alone," she coolly announced when the greetings were over.

Grandmother's brown eyes twinkled as she looked over her glasses. "A domestic science graduate coming to a foggy old woman for instruction?" she joked.

"Domestic science is all right, but not everything," humbly confessed the granddaughter, who had once scorned common things. "Teach me, grandmother. I'll try so hard."

Christmas came and went, and still Katherine lingered at the old house. At home Junior worried and fretted until daddy promised to get granny to come and make the ginger bread for the New Year's party. "Maybe," he added, wistfully, "Katherine will come home and help."

So Junior was comforted and the two boys went about their work. The day before the party Junior came home early. It was beginning to snow, and they had wanted snow so badly, so that they could sleigh-ride to their party. As he flung open the door, he sniffed, thought he was dreaming, and sniffed again. He had not smelled that particular smell since mother went away. Ginger bread! Again he sniffed. It must be. It could be nothing else. With a bound he was out in the kitchen.

There was no one there. But on the table, cooling, were sheets and sheets of ginger bread and dozens of spicy pumpkin pies. Right beside them was a butcher knife and a large piece of cheese. Evidently some one remembered what he liked. He cut a great slice, took two huge bites, and gave a yell that brought daddy axe in hand, to the kitchen door. He looked almost frightened, but when he saw that gorgeous array he, too, tasted and with Junior executed a war dance over the kitchen linoleum.

Then a girl, white-capped and bright-eyed, appeared, dropped a curtesy and, extending her hand, said, "Fifty dollars, please."

"It's worth it. How did you do it?" queried daddy, as he cut another slice of ginger bread. Katherine rushed into his arms.

"I'll never be so horrid any more," she penitently murmured. "Grandmother taught me to make the ginger bread." She smiled and finished enigmatically, "And some other things, too."

Junior noticed it that night when she went to the hall and helped to arrange the tables and play games and help that the boys have the best time of their lives. It did not stop when New Year's Day was over. It lasted the whole year. All through that year, when Junior and daddy were the best fed and happiest boys in the country, Junior pondered.

"I think domestic science gurrils are just fine," he reluctantly admitted on the anniversary of that New Year's eve. Daddy's eyes, sparkling, showed that he agreed.—In Western Christian Advocate.

When Ignorance Is Bliss.

Katherine's uncle had come to pay them a visit. After the first greetings were over and he was comfortably seated with little Katherine on his knee, he asked, as uncles often do, if she were "a good little girl." "Yes, but nobody knows it," was Katherine's prompt answer.—Delineator.

An Englishman was once persuaded to see a game of baseball, and during the play, when he happened to look away for a moment, a foul tip caught him on the ear, and knocked him senseless. An Eye to Business.

A motorist touring in the western counties, where, though the scenery is beautiful, the roads are bad, managed to get his car stuck in a tenacious mudhole.

After he had made vain attempts to escape a boy appeared with a team.

"Haul you out, mister?"

"How much do you want?"

"Two dollars."

After a long and fruitless argument the motorist agreed to pay the money asked and the car was pulled to dry land.

After handing the money to the lad the motorist asked:

"Do you haul many cars out in a day?"

"I've pulled out twelve to-day."

"Do you work at night, too?"

"Yes; at night I haul water to the mudhole!"

AN ADDRESS TO THE CHURCH.

By the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

(We commend this address by our bishops as a timely and forceful presentation of the Christian Education Movement in relation to the world's need and the church's duty. We need to heed its warnings and follow its suggestions.—Editor.)

We, your general superintendents, charged with the responsibility of oversight over all the interests of the church, feel it to be our duty at this time to call special attention to the spiritual aspects of the Christian Education Movement which is now occupying the thought of the church.

We have fallen on troublesome times. The whole world is turned upside down. Waves of crime are sweeping over our beloved country. Disregard of the Christian Sabbath and indifference to the sanctity of marriage have become distressingly common among our American people. Even many church members have become "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Selfishness reigns in all departments of life—in the dealings of capital with labor and in the dealings of labor with capital.

There is but one hope for America—in the religion of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. For there is no foundation for prosperity, either national or individual, except in morality; and there is no sure foundation for morality except in religion. Without religion morality has no compelling sanctions, and no sufficient dynamic.

Forty years ago Christlieb, a great German preacher, warned his countrymen that their Kultur was separating itself from the Christian religion, and, if not checked, would plunge Germany into the abyss. His prophetic warning was not heeded. Germany plunged into the abyss and came near wrecking the whole world.

Let America be warned. Philosophy, science, and even religion have in most of our American universities gone far astray from the principles and practices which have made America great as a nation. The greatest menace to our republic just now is moral and spiritual bankruptcy. Information brought to us by our chaplains and other religious workers among our soldiers during the Great War, reveals the fact that multiplied thousands of our young men are growing up with no knowledge of the fundamental principles of the religion of Jesus Christ. We believe that the Christian Education Movement comes at a providential hour. We must make America Christian, or America will follow the way of all nations that have forgotten God.

Beginning with the month of January, we urge that all our preachers and people give earnest attention to the matter of Christian education in every department of the work of the church, especially in the home, in the Sunday school, and in the colleges and universities.

In the colleges and universities we would suggest that revival services be held wherever practicable; that college and university presidents impress on the minds of their teachers the fact that our institutions of learning are established and maintained for the expressed purpose of propagating the religion of the New Testament; and that all our young people be exhorted to build their intellectual as well as their moral lives upon spiritual foundations.

In the Sunday schools let our pastors, superintendents, and teachers all understand that the prime object of the Sunday school is to bring our children to Christ and to build up all who attend in the knowledge of the Son of God.

In the homes of our church let large emphasis be laid on religion. We call upon our pastors to preach often on the importance of the family altar and family religion. We suggest that an effort be made to circulate the religious literature of the church in our Methodist homes. The Christian home is fundamental to Christianity and to the church. Let earnest effort be made to impress on our fathers and mothers the solemn responsibility of parenthood. May God help us to save our own children!

In conclusion we would call upon the whole church to pray earnestly to the God of our fathers that we may be able to bring about everywhere a genuine revival of Christian education. And we ourselves do unite in praying "that your love may abound more and more in knowledge and discernment; so that ye may approve the things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere and void of offense unto the day of Christ."

A FEW SIMPLE THINGS.

It may be well for us, in these times when there is so much of feverish activity in doing the things that urgently need to be done, and so much of uncertainty in the outcome of great movements for the betterment of the world, to keep clearly in mind a few simple things that are fundamental so far as our personal relationship to the church and the Kingdom of God is concerned.

The first of these is the paramount duty of maintaining our own integrity as professed Christians by performing the unmistakable duties of the Christian life. We need to pray and study God's Word daily, and keep our hearts and minds pure, and practice the elemental Christian virtues, no matter what may happen.

Secondly, we need to meet all the obligations that we have voluntarily assumed as members of the church, by keeping its rules, attending upon its ordinances, and supporting its institutions. The normal activities of the church are of such kind as have grown out of recognized permanent needs, and we absent ourselves from them at our own loss and to the detriment of the cause we have professed to love. It may seem a small thing to do the little we feel able to do in our local churches, but it is tremendously important that we do that little if it is the best we can do. If we are not faithful in little things, we shall never be able to accomplish much in what we call great undertakings.

Thirdly, we must keep our hearts and minds open to the influences that are calculated to enlarge our vision and broaden our sympathies. We may not feel that we are called upon to do some things that other people look upon as imperative obligations; but we cannot afford to set ourselves against movements and causes for the good of mankind simply because they do not happen to appeal to us personally. Our permanent attitude toward a cause is oftentimes dependent upon the manner of our approach; it were a tragedy to be found in opposition to a good cause simply because of the rigidity of preconceived notions.

HOLLY SPRINGS ADDED TO THE LIST.

Our church at Holly Springs, Miss., again accepts the "Every Family" proposition. A note from the pastor, Rev. W. R. Lott, informs us that the board of stewards has included the Advocate in the budget, feeling that it is a wise policy to put the paper in every home, even though it take several years to realize the full value of such a policy. We heartily commend the Holly Springs brethren for their wise action, and we pray that they may see at once the good fruits of their labors.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Jas. V. Bennett, Mississippi Conference evangelist, has recently been with Rev. P. M. Carraway in a meeting at Ferriday, La.

Rev. J. L. Carter, who is serving the Scotland circuit, Mississippi Conference, requests us to state that his post office address is Wesson, Miss., R. F. D. No. 7.

Bishop W. F. McMurry is scheduled to be in New Orleans next Sunday. He is announced to preach at First Church at the morning hour, and at Louisiana Avenue in the evening.

Mr. F. S. Hammille, a prominent member of our Fairview Church, Birmingham, Ala., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call while in New Orleans last week on business.

Bishop Warren A. Candler and Dr. E. B. Chappell were appointed fraternal delegates to the next General Conference of the United Brethren Church, at the recent meeting of the College of Bishops.

The Trout and Good Pine charge, Louisiana Conference, has fixed the pastor's salary at $2500, thus making it one of the best charges, financially, in the Alexandria District. Rev. A. M. Shaw is the pastor.

We have just received a telegram from Dr. W. W. Pinson, stating that the Central Committee in New York has found that rice and other foodstuffs cannot be accepted for China, on account of the cost of transportation.

Rev. H. B. Watkins requests us to state that Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Tylertown, Miss., has been elected secretary of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference in place of Rev. Paul D. Hardin, who is now presiding elder of the Meridian District.

Under date of January 10, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of Kosciusko, Miss., writes: "Rev. A. T. McIlwain was with us Sunday and inspired our people with two splendid sermons. We had a good quarterly conference. Good fellowship and harmony prevail." Happy pastor, happy people!

We have received and read with much interest the first number of the newly established Oklahoma Methodist. It is the official organ of the East and the West Oklahoma Conferences. We congratulate Editor Aston and our Oklahoma brethren upon the marked excellence of the initial number.

Rev. W. A. Mangum is meeting with encouraging success in his work at Queensborough Church, Shreveport, La. Thirty-one members have been added to the church thus far, and the Sunday school has increased more than one hundred in attendance. There is also a fine Epworth League in operation.

Rev. H. B. Hines, well known in the local ministry in Louisiana, and for a number of years prominent in the educational work of the State, is now serving as pastor of our church at Cedar Grove, an industrial suburb of Shreveport. He has before him a great opportunity, with a fine people to assist him in his work.

Hon. D. W. Heidelberg, of Shubuta, Miss., has, for several years, offered a year's subscription to the Advocate as a prize to the member of his Sunday school class having the best attendance record for the year. The prize was won this year by Mr.

J. E. Rainwater. We sincerely trust that it may prove to be a prize worth having.

The Sunday school attendance of First Church, Gulfport, Miss., last Sunday was 557. The school has set a goal of 700 by Easter.

"We have had a cordial welcome at Artesia, and a splendid outlook for a great year is before us," writes Rev. H. M. Young from Artesia, Miss.

Dr. Theodore Copeland is engaged in a meeting at Sinton, Texas, in which all the local churches are united. The services are being held in a tabernacle.

Rev. Victor G. Clifford writes that he has been most cordially received by the good people of Bogue Chitto, Miss., and that the outlook for the year is encouraging.

Announcement has been made that revival services will begin in the Methodist church at Holly Springs, Miss., on Tuesday, March 1, the preaching being done by Dr. H. C. Morrison, of Louisville, Ky. Rev. W. R. Lott is the pastor.

Our congregation at Winnsfield, La., are making progress on their new church building. They have increased the pastor's salary $500 over last year, and are going forward in other ways. Rev. W. H. Jordan serves this excellent people.

We appreciated a call by Rev. A. J. Gearheard, our pastor at Bogalusa, La., one day last week. We were glad to learn from him that Mrs. Gearheard, who is spending some time in the city for medical treatment, is showing marked improvement.

The evangelists of our church have voted to continue the Bureau of Evangelism, as a kind of clearing house for their work. The Bureau will gladly give information to pastors concerning the work of evangelists and evangelistic singers upon application. The address of the Bureau is Box 510, Nashville, Tenn.

A personal note from Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, states that, as a whole, the people and preachers are encouraged over the outlook for the year's work. He has seen no disposition on the part of the people to reduce preachers' salaries on account of the stringency of the times.

A great loss to Georgia Methodism and to the church at large, was the death of Dr. R. F. Eakes, on December 26, following an operation for appendicitis. Dr. Eakes was Missionary Secretary of the North Georgia Conference, and former assistant editor and business manager of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate. He was a lovable man.

One of the features of the educational set-up meeting for the New Orleans District last week was the address delivered by Dr. W. W. Drake, of Shreveport, La. Dr. Drake is one of the recognized leaders of the educational forces of the State. Rev. A. S. Lutz, the Conference Secretary of Education, is conducting his work in a remarkably effective way.

A note from Rev. J. R. Jones, received last week after the Advocate had gone to press, brought the distressing news that Rev. T. B. Cottrell, pastor of Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., had undergone a very serious operation at the Vicksburg Sanitarium. He stood the ordeal well, and was making satisfactory improvement when Brother Jones wrote.

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, the Louisiana Conference Centenary secretary-treasurer, has spent the past two weeks in a tour of the State in the interest of the great cause he represents. His indefatigable energy and contagious enthusiasm, coupled with unusual business ability, have enabled him to do a fine work in maintaining the morale of the Centenary organization.

Rev. L. L. Roberts, of Columbia, Miss., believes that the church paper in the homes of the people is worth while. He wrote us recently: "I am trying to put the paper into every Methodist home; in fact, we are going to do it, and we are anxious to start with the new year so that our people will get all the educational information that the Advocate furnishes." Would that all our people got it regularly!

Professor W. W. Moore, Jr., formerly of Centenary College, but now principal of the high school at Lumberton, Miss., and Miss Beatrice Hawthorne, of Shreveport, La., were married on December 28. Professor Moore is a son of Rev. W. W. Moore, of the Mississippi Conference, a young man of fine character and scholarly attainments. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to this fine couple.

We acknowledge, with thanks, the receipt of a copy of the Calendar of the Central Methodist Church of Meridian, Miss., Rev. H. B. Watkins, pastor. The calendar gives the general outline for the work of the entire year, the special features being indicated according to the months in which they will appear. We note with much pleasure that a definite time has been designated for a "church periodical campaign."

Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Summit, Miss., wrote as follows on January 4: "I went out this afternoon, and every one I asked subscribed for the Advocate." As "proof of the pudding," he sent us thirteen new subscriptions and four renewals, with the cash to cover. To our way of thinking, that was a fine afternoon's work. Brother Oliver is keenly alive to the spiritual interests of his charge. A gracious sunrise service was held on Christmas morning; and eighty-five were present at the Watch Night service. Best of all, God's presence was felt at both services.

A revival meeting was begun at Epworth Church, this city, on Sunday, January 9, the opening sermon being preached by Rev. W. C. Childress. On Monday, Rev. Leon I. McCain, of Hammond, La., came, and has been doing the preaching since. The meeting was begun with the determination to carry it on long enough for a real work of grace to be wrought. The congregations have steadily increased and the interest is growing. Brother McCain and the pastor, Rev. J. E. Selfe, are giving themselves earnestly to the work, expecting to continue the meeting through January 28. They are enlisting the help of as many Christians as possible in the meeting, and they ask that prayer be made by all our people that backsliders may be reclaimed, sinners converted, and the whole church revived.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTEST IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

We have received reports for last Sunday from two of the Sunday schools of the North Mississippi Conference that are engaged in the contest suggested by Rev. E. S. Lewis. They are as follows:

Greenville, First Church—Big Brothers' Class: attendance, 61, offering, $23.35; whole Sunday school: attendance, 242, offering, $12. Total: attendance, 303, offering, $35.35.

West Point—Clisby Class: enrollment, 102, attendance, 51, offering, $3.05; whole Sunday school: total enrollment, 242, offering, $11.75.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition, we hereby make the following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.
2. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.
3. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.
4. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.
5. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate in Every Methodist Home in Louisiana and Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.
2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.
3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will be found.

"Life is not as idle ore,
But iron dug from central gloom,
And heated hot with burning fears,
And dipt in baths of hissing tears,
And batt'r'd with the shocks of doom
To shape and use."

We cannot ask a better point of leverage from which to move our little fragment of the world toward truth and goodness than the point on which we have been placed. All that made saints and heroes of old strong and full of trust is as near to us as it was to them.—Don Kristelge Talsma.

ALFRED CLAY DAVIS, son of Levi and Nancy Davis, was born October 12, 1842, in Monroe County, Mississippi. When a small child he moved to Tate County, Mississippi. He departed this life on December 13, 1920. In his 18th year he was happily converted, and dedicated his life to God, attaching himself to Greenleaf M. E. Church, South, near his home, where he ever lived as becometh the saints of the Lord. His dying testimony was that all was well, and that he was ready and waiting for the final summons. He was a veteran of the Lost Cause, and made a brave and valiant soldier, numbering his friends by the score. He leaves a devoted wife, one brother, and many friends who sorrow. But we know our loss is his gain. He was laid to rest in Greenleaf cemetery, after funeral service conducted by the writer, and the rites of the Masonic fraternity, of which he was a faithful member. A good man is gone. Peace to his ashes.

NEW YEAR'S DAY.

Dear Brother Carley: On Saturday morning I was called to the telephone by a friend with whom I had had a previous understanding to take a drive into the country, into the neighborhood of Kingdom, in the south end of Adams County, to perform a duty that was a great privilege as well.

At the home of Mr. W. H. Swayze, one of the leading citizens of the county, and member of one of the most prominent families in the State, and one long connected with the Methodist Church, I received into the church on profession of faith the oldest member of the oldest Masonic Lodge in the State, Mr. Henry Clay Swayze, and his nephew, Mr. W. H. Swayze, and baptized them.

At the same time I received into the church two beautiful girls, daughters of Mr. W. H. Swayze, Miss Dora and Miss Sophronia. This was a beautiful home service and will be remembered by the family for many long years to come. These two beautiful girls left the next day for Jackson to attend Belhaven College, where they are now at school.

The old gentleman is little past the ninetieth milestone and in his day has been one of the best farmers and citizens of the county. He is directly connected with the famous Swayze family which was among the first settlers of this part of the State, and a grandson of the Swayze who associated himself with Tobias Gibson, the first Methodist preacher that came to these parts, more than a hundred years ago, and the Methodist church, and was a strong force in establishing the kingdom in these parts. After a delightful social hour or two, and a sumptuous dinner, we drove home, and I will always be glad to have had the privilege of having performed this sacred duty and enjoyed this privilege. Their names will be entered upon the register of the Kingston church, the house built by the ancestors of the family, a church that is a sacred edifice to many Methodists.

THE NEW EMPHASIS ON PRAYER.

By Rev. P. L. Cobb, Secretary Spiritual Resources Department.

"In the morning, he rose early, while it was yet quite dark, and leaving the house, he went away to a solitary place and there prayed."

Prayer had a large place in the life of Jesus. He not only rose early and went out to a quiet place, where he could pray alone, but "He went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer." Luke 6:12.

Other prayers of Jesus brought to him some of his richest experiences. It was while he prayed at his baptism that the descending dove and the Father's voice proclaimed him the Son of God.

Before the difficult and arduous task of preaching the sermon on the mount and selecting the twelve, upon whom the success of the kingdom should depend, from among his followers, he did not seek a refreshing night's rest, but, instead, gave himself to prayer the whole night through; and the sermon and the work of the twelve show the wisdom of his course.

It was while he prayed in the presence of the Greeks, brought by Andrew and Philip, that the tender voice of the Father again broke the silence and gave him the vision of the whole gentile world coming, as typified by these anxious visitors, and enabled him to say, "And I if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

Again as he prayed, his form was illumined in the transfiguration and his very clothes were glistening as no fuller on earth could whiten them.

It was prayer that nerved him in the loneliness of the garden to drain to the bottom the dregs of the bitter cup.

On Calvary's rugged cross, when every human prop had fallen from under him, it was prayer that held him up until the task was finished, and he could gasp with his last breath, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit."

From the very depths of our anguished spirits let us cry, "Lord, teach us to pray." Luke 21:1. May there go out from us a constant stream of prayer that will release the spiritual power necessary for every great task the church is undertaking. Let us follow his example and that of the Psalmist who said, "Evening and morning and at noon, will I pray and cry aloud; and he shall hear my voice." Ps. 55:17.

GRENADA DISTRICT "SET-UP MEETING," EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENT.

Most of the charges were represented in a Set-Up Meeting, called by our presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Tucker, at Grenada, Jan. 6-7. The Conference Secretary, Rev. J. H. Holder, presented the work in a forceful manner and made for the cause lasting friends.

Grenada opened her doors to the preachers and those of the other brethren who were present, and made us feel that we were at home in our college town. President J. R. Countiss made a telling speech on the need of an education conscience. This we need greatly to create, as so many of our people do not understand the situation, or the true objectives of the "CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT" in the home, the Sunday school, the church, public school and college. The Movement is fast taking shape in North Mississippi.

FROM SAUCIER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The beginning of our second year at Saucier has been a great one. On Dec. 10 we began what is said by many to be the greatest revival ever held at Saucier. The preaching was done by the Rev. James V. Bennett, of Brookhaven, Miss. Bennett is truly a great preacher. He knows just when and where to tackle sin. He is safe, sound and logical. We had the old-time altar services, and many penitents found their way to the altar and there, amidst prayers and tears, found that blessed peace that the world knows nothing about. Old grievances were forgotten, old wrongs were righted. A goodly number were saved, and twenty-three added to the church on profession of faith, and three by certificate, with others to be received. Brother Bennett is an old home boy, and the people always loved him; but after his stay with us for nearly three weeks, we love him more.

A NOTE FROM REV. S. W. MILLER.

Dear Brother Carley: I am reading Dr. John W. Boswell's letters with pleasure. I can appreciate some of his experiences, as I traveled over some of the same territory a few years later. At the ferry on the way to Cornersville, I attempted to cross in 1873 and drove my mule half a mile in water up to my buggy bottom. The ferryman put a plank out and my wife walked to the ferry, and I made my mule jump into the boat. Passing up between the two streams, I came to a mudhole in the road; my mule did not want to go into the mud, so he dashed on the side of the river where the water was twenty-five feet deep, running the wheels of the buggy almost off into the river.

A large gentlemen's shawl often saved me from suffering at night; and my overcoat did the same thing when I first came here. I often think of Bishop Kavanaugh's early experience as he related it in his lecture once to a class of young preachers.

Rev. J. H. Brooks, the father of J. J., and the grandfather of J. H., at Okolona, Miss., licensed me to preach in 1869, and performed the ceremony when I was married. His name is sweet memory to me.

This has been a pleasant Christmas, while our children gather around us, and many pleasant remembrances come from many friends of ours, both preachers and laymen. It is so refreshing to a superannuate to know that those with whom he has been associated in other days still remember him kindly.

Yours in Christ,

S. W. MILLER.

Epworth League.

THE NEW ORLEANS UNION EPWORTH LEAGUE.

It was our privilege to attend the monthly meeting of the New Orleans Union Epworth League, held at Rayne Memorial Church on Tuesday evening of last week. It was an inspiration to us to come into contact with this vigorous, enthusiastic, progressive body of young people who mean so much to the life of the church to-day—and tomorrow. The meeting was well attended, and, from the reports made, we judge that the various chapters are enjoying a marked degree of prosperity.

As an indication of the wide-awake interest of the Leaguers in promoting laudable enterprises of various kinds, we mention the fact that the Union League has undertaken to bring the Glee Club of Southern Methodist University to New Orleans for a concert in the near future, probably in February. This will entail considerable financial outlay, but the matter will be handled in a business-like way, and the expectation is that a substantial sum will be realized above all expenses.

The editor was greatly pleased when the announcement that the Advocate is now carrying a League Department was greeted with hearty applause.

THE STANDARD OF EFFICIENCY.

We do not know how many of our Leagues measure up to the Standard of Efficiency as set by the Central Office, but we do know that this Standard fixes a desirable goal toward which every chapter should work. It is not so low as to be attained without effort; neither is it so high as to discourage those who earnestly desire to make their Leagues as efficient as possible. We imagine it would be a good thing to have this Standard brought before every chapter occasionally, in order that each might measure its progress from month to month and year to year.

THE MEMORY SERVICE.

The feature of the League service next Sunday will be the repeating from memory of some of the most helpful passages in the Bible. This will be a fine opportunity for the young people—and older ones, too—to store away in their minds some of the great truths that transform character and shape the destiny of life. Most of us require very little of our memory; we should do well to put it to work, and keep it at work, until it becomes an efficient servant of our wills. We cannot employ it more usefully than by concentrating it upon the acquisition of eternal truth.

dates of the nineteenth session have been fixed at June 7-10 inclusive. Wonder if we couldn't all keep these dates in mind so that no other conflicting engagement need be made? We are very anxious to have all the pastors in attendance and we hope that no special meetings are being planned for that time.

A splendid program is being arranged and already we have secured two very excellent speakers—Rev. R. E. Nollner and Mrs. F. S. Love (formerly Miss Phala Hawkins).

Altogether, the prospects are for a bigger and better Conference than we have ever had. Sincerely yours, ERMA M. KILE, Conf. Sec'y.

NOTES FROM THE MONROE-RUSTON DISTRICT.

Every interest of the church is being looked after at Calhoun, by Brother McLean. At the quarterly conference Mrs. Dolla Watson was elected secretary of the quarterly conference—the first lady secretary I had seen.

Brother Hudnell seems to be the right man in the right place at Simsboro. We had a splendid attendance—a good quarterly conference, on a cold, icy morning. One of the stewards, about 70 years old, drove 12 miles in a buggy to attend this quarterly conference.

At Rayville there seems to be fine interest. On the 26th of December we had good congregations both morning and evening. On the 5th of January we had our educational meeting. The Missionary Society did well their part by serving a bountiful lunch for the occasion. Brother Lutz, our secretary, spoke in praise of the meeting.

Brother and Sister May were well domiciled in their splendid parsonage at Winnsboro. He is preaching, we are told, to a full house.

At Gilbert, Brother George is starting off well, in his second year. We had an enthusiastic quarterly conference, and a splendid service on Wednesday night.

At Sicily Island, Brother and Sister Caraway have the church well organized—the Missionary Society and Epworth League doing well.

The people at Bonita seem delighted with their pastor, and Brother Barr is doing things, as he usually does.

Tallulah was made a station last Conference. They seem to think they have the greatest preacher in the Conference. Brother Cudd is at Tallulah.

The salaries for the pastors, where the assessments have been made, have in no case been lowered—some have advanced.

Will write more as I go on.

FROM McCOOL, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Our first quarterly conference was held Wednesday, January 5. Our much loved and efficient presiding elder, the Rev. A. T. McIlwain, was with us, and surely was at his best. He brought us a great message at 11 a. m. The good people of Liberty Hill came out in the good old-fashioned way, with boxes and baskets full of good things to eat. After dinner, the business session of the quarterly conference, came—every church represented by one or more officials, one steward walking seven miles to answer to roll call; an encouraging report was made. All felt that it was good to be there. We came back to McCool for the evening hour's worship, where a house full of people greeted our presiding elder, who brought to us another great message. His coming to the McCool charge with God's messages, as he did, brought a benediction to the entire charge. Our people are looking forward to February 27, when he has promised to touch the charge, again. All is well, and the sun is shining along the pathway of this happy pastor.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 23.

Lesson Topic: Greatness Through Service.

Scripture Lesson: Matthew 20:17-28.

Golden Text: "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." Matt. 20:28.

Home Readings: Monday, Selfish Requests Refused, Matt. 20:20-28; Tuesday, Humble in Prayer, Luke 18: 9-14; Wednesday, Humble in Action, Luke 14:7-11; Thursday, A Generous Regard for Others, Philippians 2:1-11; Friday, Sympathy for Others, James 2:1-9; Saturday, Pure Religion and Service, James 1:19-27; Sunday, Our Lord Humbled Himself, Isaiah 53:4-12.

Teaching Points.

1. It is natural and praiseworthy for parents to desire for their children honorable positions in life—that they become great.
2. Children themselves should look forward to achieving success.
3. True greatness, however, is not measured by the positions we occupy, but by the service we render to our fellow-men.
4. Fame does not always follow true greatness.
5. Since service is the condition of greatness, it is possible for all of us to live truly great lives.

PROPOSING A SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTEST.

Dear Brother Carley: I am writing to several of the larger Sunday schools in the North Mississippi Conference, proposing that we put on an attendance and offering contest for two or three months, believing that it will stimulate interest and do good. In this way we will find out what the other schools are doing. If a dozen or fifteen of our leading schools reported through the Advocate each week their offering and attendance, I am sure some of our schools would take on new life.

I am suggesting that we have a report, first, of the largest adult class, its attendance and offering, then of the whole school. My own school is sending in its first report, which is considerably below that of last Sunday, but we want to make a start. Come on, Tupelo, Corinth, West Point, Winona, Greenwood, Grenada, Water Valley, Clarksdale, Columbus, and any others that may want to enter the race. My school is not nearly so large as some of the others, but a contest like this will be a stimulant. So, let's go.

Yours,
E. S. LEWIS.

OLDER BOYS' CONFERENCE.

Under the auspices of the Louisiana Young Men's Christian Association and the Louisiana Sunday School Association, the Second State-Wide Louisiana Older Boys' Conference will be held in the city of Lake Charles, January 23-30. All boys from 16 to 25 years of age, and especially those in the organized Bible Classes of the church and the Hi-Y Clubs of the public schools, are invited and expected to be in attendance. This conference is a coming together of the older boys of Louisiana for consideration of boy work and boy life, so as to fit the boy to live the four-fold life as Jesus would have him live it. The first conference was held in Baton Rouge last January and a great deal of good was the outcome of it. Especially were the ministers of Baton Rouge, as well as the laymen of that city, enthused and inspired when they found out what was going on in the conference for the development of the boy life of the State. This year the conference promises to be better and bigger, as the Y. M. C. A. and the Sunday School Association have had a year in which to develop and extend the work of the conference.

Men of national reputation—men of God who are giving their lives for and with boys—will be in attendance to enthuse, inform, inspire and instruct. Many forward steps will be taken and the boys given sympathy in their tasks of growing into men of righteousness. Some of the expected speakers are C. C. Robinson and E. C. Colton, of the International Committee Young Men's Christian Association, of New York; C. E. Buckner, of Tulsa; S. E. Henning and C. B. Loomis, of Atlanta; Geo. D. Booth and Fred D. Thompson, of New Orleans, and Van Carter and Wm. Tietje of the Louisiana State Sunday School Association.

Lake Charles is preparing to entertain the boys, realizing that it is one of the biggest opportunities that can come to a city to give a home for three days to a boy who is to be the leader in all walks of life in the years not far distant. Dr. Hines of that city is securing homes for three hundred. We would like to urge that the Methodist pastors of the State give consideration to this conference and send some of their older boys to it.

Yours,
VAN CARTER.

A NOTE FROM REV. F. R. POWER.

Dear Brother Carley: I expected to write you some time ago and tell you about our work over here and the kindly way in which we were received, but owing to serious illness I have delayed.

Mrs. Power has been dangerously ill since the 2nd of this month. We have had a trained nurse with her for a week, and three physicians, one coming from two to four times a day; the other two were called in consultation. She has a complication of diseases, but her main trouble is malaria. The doctor and nurse both think she is somewhat better to-day and that she has a chance for recovery.

I have never seen anything like the goodness of the people here. We have not wanted for a thing. Pray for us.

Yours fraternally,

F. R. POWER.

Wilmar, Ark., Jan. 11.

FROM CARROLLTON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: At the session of the North Mississippi Conference Bishop McMurry sent me back to Carrollton for the fourth year. If I complete the year's work, it will be the first time any preacher has served the charge four years.

We began the year by having Rev. R. H. B. Gladney come to us the first week in December and teach a class of fifteen in the "Teacher Training Course." Our people remembered us kindly at the holidays with many substantial tokens of their appreciation, all of which is greatly appreciated by myself and family. I hope and pray that by my leadership and service I may prove worthy of their kindness.

The work has started off well, notwithstanding the financial distress caused by woeful failure in crop caused by boll weevil and also drop in prices. I trust we shall have a great year at Carrollton in 1921.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT SET-UP MEETING.

In answer to call of the presiding elder, most of the pastors of the Meridian District and a group of other workers assembled in Central Church, Meridian, at 9 a.m., Friday, Jan. 14, 1921, for a District Set-Up Meeting of the Christian Education Movement, with Rev. J. M. Morse, Conference Secretary of Education, in the chair, this being the last of a series of such meetings covering the seven districts of the Mississippi Conference. H. G. Hawkins was elected Secretary. About forty were enrolled as in attendance, counting several who appeared later in the day.

The first speaker upon the program was the Conference Educational Secretary himself, who emphasized the importance of the movement, and sounded a note of determination, hope and triumph.

Dr. Rolfe Hunt, President of Port Gibson Female College, next spoke on Prayer and Life Service, an address which was thoughtful, heartfelt, inspiring, moving.

Rev. J. C. Chambers, Conference Sunday School Secretary, was called forward as the next speaker, emphasizing the need of Christian training through prayer and instruction in home and school, that the church may have the laborers to send forth into the harvest fields.

Rev. J. T. Leggett, pastor of Main St. Church, Hattiesburg, was next on the program, giving in eloquent and overpowering words a philippic on materialistic education, of which the German educational system was the leading exponent, but whose influence had passed to other peoples to some extent, including America. Over against this was shown the imperative need of training in the ideals of Jesus of Nazareth. The 33 million for Christian education he said, was needed; but this will not accomplish its purpose, unless it is accompanied by prayer.

Music That Wins is our great Gospel Song Book for 1921. It contains 160 pages. Much of it is new music for 1921, a number of selected pieces, and a number of the old tunes of the church, are used. Price, 35 cents per copy, postpaid. The golden age will be the age of the golden heart.

Those purposing to co-operate in this movement were asked to offer their hands, and many, probably all, came forward. Rev. H. A. Wood was then called on, and led in an earnest prayer.

The next speaker was W. D. Hawkins, Conference Centenary Secretary and Treasurer, and President of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League. He spoke in behalf of the hosts of youth that are represented by the Epworth Leagues of the Conference.

The meeting adjourned for dinner to be served at the church, the benediction being pronounced by Rev. W. J. Ferguson. A vote of thanks for the dinner was passed.

The afternoon session was begun at 1 o'clock. Rev. S. B. Watkins led the devotional exercises, the prayer being offered by Rev. W. A. Hays.

Brother W. D. Hawkins was introduced to resume his address of the morning session, devoting himself this time to the Centenary—the great things already achieved by it, and the necessity of consummating that movement. He gave good news of payments on Centenary pledges, and showed the unmistakable peril to the educational and other causes if these pledges are not redeemed.

"Onward, Christian Soldiers" was sung; and then Miss Ella Wayne Ormond was called upon, and made a short speech, indicating that the women could be depended upon for co-operation in this movement.

Mrs. C. R. McQueen, being presented, paid tribute to the Methodist ministry, stating that she owed much of the best of her life to a Methodist preacher whose influence put her into a Methodist college.

The Chairman made an illuminating address, outlining the program of cultural work of the campaign for the coming weeks.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, was introduced as the next speaker. He explained that the nation is still as rich as it was six months ago. The money and the wealth have not been destroyed; money's purchasing power is greater. There are single educational institutions in the North and East and West that have as much endowment as have all the educational institutions of Southern Methodism. There are seven million Southern Methodists, counting adherents, and the total endowment of all our Southern Methodist schools is only about seven million, or a dollar per member. The speech was bristling with information and illustration of the possibilities of this Movement, and exhortation as to the accomplishments that will come through faith. He said that there were a dozen millionaire Methodists in the Mississippi Conference, and a dozen more half-millionaires.

Mrs. W. J. Ferguson was called upon and talked in a way that interested.

Before final adjournment, opportunity was offered for voluntary talks, and quite a number of the pastors expressed their appreciation of the inspiration received, and their determination to take the message to their people and achieve the triumph of the movement in their charges.

mination to take the message to their people and achieve the triumph of the movement in their charges.

Rev. H. B. Watkins was appointed to bear to Rev. P. D. Hardin, presiding elder of the district, expressions of regret that he was prevented by illness from being present; and prayer was offered for his speedy and complete restoration to health.

Mrs. O. F. Youngblood, publicity agent for the Wesson auxiliary, writes us of their work. True she did not mention "oil," but she did say the machinery is "running well," each new officer learning to do her part, fitting herself into a very excellently planned organization. The Pledge for 1920 is paid in full, and at a charming little Halloween party in the fall the workers raised their "quota" for the Methodist Hospital at Laurel.

THE CRACK O' DOOM FOR NASTY CALOMEL

Folks Abandoning Old Drug for "Dodson's Liver Tone,"
Here in South.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you lose a day.

Calomel is mercury! When it comes into contact with your bile, it crashes into it, breaking it up. Then is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish, if liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous, go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it can not sate or make you sick.

The women of Wesson found their pastor's wife a great help: her missionary zeal is contagious. Mrs. Youngblood, write, if you have not already done so, and send the names of your officers to your Conference President and Corresponding Secretary.

Galloway Memorial Church of Jackson Welcomes Own Missionaries.

A memorable event in the annals of the closing year for Galloway Memorial Church, of Jackson, was the visit, in November of Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Jones, of Soochow University, China. When it is remembered that while this church has been caring for the support of these missionaries since 1915, they were personally strangers to its members, it will be understood with what interest they were welcomed.

Mr. Jones spoke to the congregation at the morning service on Sunday, and Mrs. Jones occupied the pulpit in the evening, both giving stirring messages of their work in China.

On Monday afternoon, Mrs. Jones met with the women of the Missionary Society. After a brief musical program, rendered in her honor, she gave an informal and delightful talk of her intimate life in Soochow. Wearing a dainty frock of white, with a blue ribbon sash, Mrs. Jones looked very charming, and as she talked, her earnest face illuminated with the light of noble purpose, the hearts of her hearers were completely won. At the close of her talk, the president of the society, Mrs. Grace Hemmingway, introduced a tiny Chinese maiden imported for the occasion "lest Mrs. Jones be homesick for the sight of some one from her adopted land." This maiden from Cathay (little Adele Howie) came forward laden with gifts with which Mrs. Jones, to her surprise, was showered.

In the evening of this day, a large reception for Dr. and Mrs. Jones was held in the church parlors. The pastor, Brother Crisler, with Mrs. Crisler and the stewards and their wives, together with the guests of honor, formed the receiving line.

Later, a musical program, including several numbers by the Millsaps Glee Club, was given, after which Mr. and Mrs. Jones gave informal talks, each again giving touching testimony of the work in China and its needs, and earnestly voicing their pleasure in the warmth of the welcome accorded them by their own people of Galloway Memorial Church.

Many beautiful and curious things from China, hand-woven lace and embroidered linen to delight the heart of woman, books, bags, beads and other souvenirs which Mrs. Jones had collected, were on exhibition during the evening. Delicious refreshments were served and good time was enjoyed by the large company present.

The members of Galloway Memorial Church, long sensible of the worth of Mr. and Mrs. Jones, were pleased even beyond expectation upon meeting these consecrated young people face to face.

Truly, to know them is to love them. Henceforth the bond of personal acquaintance will strengthen the tie which binds their lives to ours, and an added and tender loyalty from those of their own in the home-land will follow, to cheer and inspire them as they go to tell the story of Jesus and his love.

FROM GRAND CANE, LA.

Dear Advocate: The Grand Cane charge is moving steadily onward. The "present cold and rain" retards the work somewhat. We are lining up on the General Conference plan for the Educational Campaign, and hitting the line in some places.

The Advocate has a warm place in the hearts of our people. We expect to assume our quota as outlined by the Publishing Committee. One Advocate for every ten members should be the minimum for every charge in the three Conferences, which this paper patronizes, helps and informs.

Yours faithfully,

S. J. DAVIES.

WOMAN AVOIDS AN OPERATION

Hope Nearly Gone, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her

Star, N. C.—"My monthly spells gave me so much trouble, sometimes they would last two weeks. I was treated by two doctors without relief and they both said I would have to have an operation. I had my trouble four years and was unfit to do anything, and had given up all hope of ever getting any better. I read about your medicine in the 'Primitive Baptist' paper and decided to try it. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for about seven months and now I am able to do my work. I shall never forget your medicine and you may publish this if you want to as it is true."—Mrs. J. F. HURSEY, Star, N. C.

Here is another woman who adds her testimony to the many whose letters we have already published, proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound often restores health to suffering women even after they have gone so far that an operation is deemed advisable. Therefore it will surely pay any woman who suffers from ailments peculiar to her sex to give this good old fashioned remedy a fair trial.

MOSES NGANJOLO.

Mrs. H. P. Anker.

Nganjolo was formerly a student of the Catholic Mission school near Wembo-Niama and was one of their evangelists at the time of the opening of the Methodist Mission. He tells us that long before this the priests informed their followers that the Protestants were coming and described them as Lutherans and people of Satan. They were told not to accept their baptism, for they had no sacraments, no confirmation, and did not know the mystery of turning the bread and wine into the body of Christ, but ate their own bread at communion.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

The evangelists were told that if they continued to stay with the Catholic Mission, they would always be treated well and receive regular monthly salaries.

The day on which our first missionaries arrived was a big event for Nganjolo and others. He says they stood afar off to view the new white people for fear that, should they go too near, some harm might befall them. As time went on, they learned that the new Protestants were not as bad as they had been pictured, and when the priests refused to pay Nganjolo his promised monthly wage he decided to visit the Methodist Mission. Very soon after this he entered their school, which was very displeasing to the Catholics, and they began to do their utmost to get him back. They sent a messenger to the chief of Nganjolo's village with the following words: "We want Nganjolo and if he does not return to us, we will report you to the Government officials." The chief replied: "Nganjolo is not a slave of mine and, so far as I am concerned, he may 'sit' in the village of any white man he may choose." Having failed in this attempt, they sent one of their evangelists to Nganjolo offering him work for a better salary. They also asked their church to pray that he would change his heart, and if not, that he might die.

Nganjolo had no desire to return, and in the course of time he and others who had previously been baptized by the Catholics were ready to be baptized by our Mission. The Catholics were on the alert and thought they saw a favorable opportunity in this to frighten him into coming back to them. They predicted that if these boys and young men received baptism twice they would die. The natives are very superstitious and this was too much for most of the candidates for baptism. And so all, with the single exception of Nganjolo, ran away on the date of baptism. Some of them, however, returned later and were baptized.

A few weeks after, when Nganjolo was on his way to a certain village to preach, he stumbled on the path and a knife which he was carrying for protection pierced his leg. Many of the natives were filled with fear and thought at once that this accident had been prayed upon him by the priests and that his death was near. But God had other plans for Nganjolo's life, and after his leg healed he was sent out as our evangelist to Oduku. While there he was visited by one of the Catholic priests who tried all manner of methods to win him back to them, to all of which Nganjolo replied that he would not leave his present work. When he mentioned also that one of the things which bound him to the Mission was a loan given him to help buy a wife, the priest offered to give him the money at once to cancel the debt. This must have been a tempting offer to Nganjolo, for every native loves money, and by refusing he showed his strength of character. After this the priest became very angry and left, calling him a lost sheep.

Lest you think that Nganjolo had no further temptations we must tell you of one other occasion when he was sorely tempted to leave us. When two of our missionaries made a long itineration, taking with them Nganjolo as the evangelist, they noticed a lack of enthusiasm in his work. This was not understood at the time, but soon after returning to the Mission Nganjolo told us that he, with one other evangelist, was about to leave, having accepted employment from a trader. The last Sunday of his stay on the mission the Spirit of God led a missionary to preach that morning on the subject of Jonah. The message touched the heart of Nganjolo. He felt that he was running away from the work of God even as Jonah had tried to do. He made a touching public confession of his error and since then has grown to be our strongest and best evangelist.

A story like this reveals the inner struggles and temptations in a native's life, and shows us how much they need our help and prayers.

FROM VICTORIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I have gotten pretty well acquainted on the Red Banks charge, and like the people here. They know how to make a preacher feel good in their midst. The church at Victoria gave us a "pounding" New Year's Day that helped wonderfully along the way.

I am planning and hoping for a year of success in nineteen and twenty-one.

Fraternally,

FROM COCKRUM, MISS.

We have been very kindly received in this, our new, field of labor, and, since making one round of appointments, feel we have the best folks to serve in all the Conference. On our arrival here, we were met at the parsonage by a committee of ladies, who stocked our pantry with good things too numerous to mention, captivating us both heart and soul, and placing us under lasting obligations to them. Our heart is in the work and we are expecting this to be a great year.

Cordially, yours,

HOW DOCTORS
TREAT COLDS
AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

RELIGION IN THE HOME.

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Almost every human being comes home every day.

We come home to sleep. For once every twenty-four hours our lives must be dipped in death. We come home for the refreshment that we get from hearts that love us.

The most essential element in any home is God.

We are willing to do almost anything for God except to use Him. Yet the thought of God is the most practical of all the thoughts that enter into our mind. It solves problems, eases loads, unties hard knots, smooths out complications.

Once a day every human being should think of God. We are all human; hence faulty and cranky. The God thought is the greatest of lubricants. There is no secret of getting along with folks equal to the secret of His presence.

The God thought is the foundation of love's permanency, the best resistant to the many storms and floods and fires that threaten love. The God thought is the most deeply educational atmosphere for children, the surest guaranty of nobleness in a young man, of virtue in a young woman.

What fools we mortals be! We talk and write and read and argue and believe about God, everything but use Him. We are as silly as people would be if they wore no shoes, but only praised shoes and prayed for them.

Once a day if we rise to the God thought, we shall carry that high and pure atmosphere throughout all the logs and impurities of our daily affairs. Once a day if we creep into the thought of God, we shall find that deep rest of the spirit we all crave.

Plan your day so that you will have a little while with God. Once in twenty-four hours reach up and touch the Infinite. It is well to do this alone. It is better to do this with your family. Do this, not from a sense of duty, not as an irksome task to be over with as soon as possible, but for the real, usable strength, sanity, poise, vision, optimism you can get from it.

Almost every human being comes home every day. We come home to sleep. What a world it would be if we came home to God! "I came from God," said George MacDonald; "I am going back to God. I will have no gaps of death in my life."—The Christian Advocate. (N. Y.).

FROM PICKENS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Allow me a few lines to say that the Pickens charge is moving along nicely.

We were cordially received for another year in this very pleasant charge.

Our people are depressed over the financial condition of the country, but they are going to make a heroic effort to keep the church prospering.

We observed the first week in January as a week of prayer and consecration in three churches in this town, with their pastors working together, the ladies conducting a prayer service each p. m., and the preachers of the different churches preaching at 1 p. m. two days and nights at each church. We had splendid congregations of very earnest workers, about 15 pledging themselves to have family prayer and about twice that number have pledged to tithe. It was good to be here and we felt we were sitting together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus.

Brother Ford of the Presbyterian Church, and Brother Simmons, of the Baptist Church, and I took our turn in the preaching services. One joined the Presbyterian Church, and we feel our whole town has been lifted to a higher plane of Christian living.

Yours in word and work for souls.

J. H. SMITH.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT SET-UP MEETING.

The first meeting of the Shreveport District for the purpose of discussing the Educational Campaign and laying the plans for operation, was held here yesterday. The attendance was almost 100 per cent, and the discussions were entered into by ministers and laymen, and lent great encouragement towards the success of the campaign.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the district, presided, and conducted the devotional service. He delivered a very able address on the need of a consecrated spirit and on the spiritual objectives of the campaign.

Rev. W. L. Duren, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, delivered a masterly address on "Conservation of the Resources of the Church." He won his way into the hearts of his hearers by the clear ring of a sincere spirit and the able manner in which he handled his subject. Brother Duren reflected credit upon Millsaps College, his Alma Mater, but, best of all, showed himself to be a worthy soldier in the Master's cause.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, State secretary, outlined the purpose and scope of the Educational Campaign relative to the work to be done in the three months' cultural campaign by every church organization in the district for the success of the Movement.

All the talks were filled with inspiration, and the principal thought was the need of a spiritual foundation which would give the denomination an active zeal in the cause to be represented in the campaign.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE CHALLENGE OF JESUS.

There are myriad cries coming to us and myriad cross-currents sweeping over us, urging us hither and thither. Some of them we turn deaf ears to and some of them we brazenly disregard. But it cannot be so—it must not be so—with the challenge of the Christ. It comes to us straight as a beam of light and clear as a bugle call. We disregard it at our peril. Jesus challenges our admiration by the heroism of his life; he challenges our faith by the nobility and power of his ministry; he challenges our love by the infinite tenderness of his own love for us; he challenges our whole-hearted devotion by the greatness and urgency of his work in the world. By every token we should rise above our own selfishness and narrowness, and catch the magnificent vision over which his eyes sweep, and breathe in that indomitable spirit of optimism and courage that characterizes him, and throw ourselves unreservedly into the work of the propagation of his kingdom. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto myself."

HEROES.

The world worships heroes when it recognizes them—but often its eyes are holden, so that it sees not. The roll of heroes is not made up only of those who receive the laurel wreath and the plaudits of the people; in the quiet walks of life, among the humble and lowly, in the obscure corners, are many men and women around whose heads a halo glows. They are heroes who remain faithful to God and the right in the face of bitter opposition and cruel indifference; they are heroes who remain faithful through suffering, keeping their sorrows to themselves lest they make heavier the burden upon another's shoulders; they are heroes who hold tenaciously to whatever spiritual light they have received, though much is left in darkness, facing their doubts and temptations courageously because they know they cannot go astray if they "follow the gleam;" they are heroes who are doing what they can, with limited means and circumscribed opportunities, to bless the world, counting the smile of a little child a richer reward than the waving of flags and the booming of cannon; they are heroes who, having come far on the journey of life, having tasted somewhat of its joys and experienced somewhat of its sorrows, near the end of the journey, unable to labor longer, with folded hands and peaceful breast are waiting patiently, calmly, holily, for the summons that will usher them into life eternal. We are surrounded by a heroic company.

UNDEVELOPED RESOURCES.

One of the great problems in connection with the industrial and economic welfare of the United States is the proper development of the tremendous resources with which it has been so richly endowed. More and more these resources are being made available, but when we compare the density of population in our land with that of other and older nations, we begin to realize that we have but scratched the surface of our industrial possibilities. If we are the richest country in the world to-day in the value of our tangible resources, we are infinitely richer in the vast store upon which we have not yet begun to draw. But we are thinking now of our undeveloped resources in life rather than those in material things. The tragedy of many a life lies in the fact that it never becomes what it could become, by reason of the failure to utilize its potential resources. Too many of us too often are content to skimp along, when we could, if we would, become opulent in the possession of intellectual and spiritual virtues that are easily within our reach. Under the barren surface of unused land may lie fabulous wealth in the form of mineral deposits—but it is valueless until it is made available by shaft and well; beneath the commonplace plane upon which many a life is lived lie untold resources of physical and mental and spiritual strength—but they are useless unless they are developed by determined effort. The poorest of all men is the one who is rich and does not know that he is rich.

NOT ON THE FRONT PAGE.

We read the following press dispatch from Wausaukee, Wis., a few days ago: "Joseph Jejois bought the Wausaukee jail for $30, and will use it for a woodshed. City officers, in explaining the sale, said that since the advent of prohibition the jail, which has been in service thirty years, has been idle." But we did not find this item of news on the front page of the newspaper we were perusing; it was in an obscure corner on an inside page. Of course we do not know that it was intentionally hidden away, but since so many things that are intended to discount prohibition are given first-page position, the idea suggests itself that there is a well-defined plan to give as little publicity as possible to news that favors the other side. We call attention to this merely that the friends of prohibition may not be misled by the propaganda for the repeal or modification of the Eighteenth Amendment.

DON'T WRECK THE TRAIN.

One of the most dastardly crimes imaginable is wrecking a train upon which hundreds of people are traveling, thus endangering and almost certainly destroying the life of scores of innocent men and women. Only a moral degenerate could be guilty of such enormity. But a man may wreck a movement as well as a machine, with results even more tragic. If danger is ahead, the wise thing to do is to put out signals that will convey a warning in unmistakable terms; only a fool would wreck the train to keep it from running into an obstruction or an open switch.

THE INSPIRING POWER OF A GREAT IDEA.

The world never really advances except by ideas. The deed is the attainment of the idea—but the idea always precedes the deed. The superlatively great men of history are the men who have conceived ideas that have eventuated in great deeds throughout succeeding centuries. A great idea is as deathless as time—and it never loses its vigor with the passing of the years. As it is assimilated by men and women as generations come and go, it inspires them to live noble lives and attain holy character. A great idea implanted in the soul of a youth is worth infinitely more to him than a fortune of millions left him by his father. A legacy of money is laden with responsibilities and temptations; the acquisition of ideas enriches and ennobles the life without ensmalling the soul. The true function of education is to bring inspiring ideas within the range of receptive minds.

NATIONAL SELFISHNESS.

Selfishness is usually looked upon as the besetting sin of the individual—and most of us, probably, think more highly of ourselves than we ought to think; but there is such a thing as national selfishness, that may corrupt the morals and unsettle the life of a whole people. If a nation is willing to ignore the responsibilities of international relationships; if it is willing to disregard the obligations it owes to the world as a whole; if it is willing to lose its cosmic consciousness and think only in terms of its own present material welfare, it may be able to find some justification for the policy of "every man for himself, and the devil take the hindmost." It seems to us that it is only on this ground that any argument can be made for the recent serious proposal that "no goods, the like of which we are now making or can make, shall be imported into the United States for the next ten years." Even then, we are face to face with the fact that a prohibitive protective tariff almost invariably leads the favored manufacturer to exploit the consumer, who is delivered bound into his hands. There is sound reason in morals as well as in economics for the territorial division of labor.

DON'T STOP AT THE STATION DESPAIR.

By Joaquin Miller.

We must trust the Conductor, most surely,

Why, millions of millions before
Have made this same journey securely,
And come to that ultimate shore.
And we, we will reach it in season;
And, ah, what a welcome is there!
Reflect, then, how out of all reason
To stop at the station Despair.

Ay, midnights and many a portion Of little black water have we
As we journey from ocean to ocean
From sea unto ultimate sea—
To that deep sea of seas, and all silence
Of passion; concern and of care—
That vast sea of Eden-set islands.
Don't stop at the station Despair!

Go forward, whatever may follow—
Go forward, friend-led or alone;
Ah me! to leap off in some hollow
Or fen, in the night and unknown
Leap off like a thief; try to hide you
From Angels, all waiting you there!
Go forward! whatever betide you
Don't stop at the station Despair.

ADDRESS ON LIFE SERVICE.

The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at their meeting held in Birmingham, Ala., December 16-30, have had under consideration the general plans of the Christian Education Movement, and especially those plans which seek to secure a more spiritual and efficient service in all departments of church work and teachings. As a result of our inquiry, and as an expression of our profound concern for the success of this Movement, we address this word of earnest reminder to the ministers and members of our church, and to that large body of friends who share interest in the fortunes and prosperity of our particular portion of the household of Christian faith.

The alarmingly inadequate supply of trained men for pulpit and pastoral service is one of the conditions to which the Education Movement is addressed as a remedy. For the church to be embarrassed and impoverished at the place of authoritative teaching and indoctrination can but bring the most distressing and destructive consequences. There are now in the Connection one thousand pastoral charges which must be supplied by men from without the ranks of Conference membership. The appointing power finds itself unable satisfactorily to meet even the more reasonable demands of congregations for preachers of equipment and preparation.

The enlarged missionary programme of the church calls for a force of workers equal to the entire output of our theological seminaries and other training schools. If this missionary call be fully met, there will be few workers left to serve in the rapidly growing home field, which is to be the point of failure or success in the immediate future. The first objective of the Education Movement is to meet this crucial and ever growing demand.

A correlative of this call for workers is that of the need of Christian education in general, which cause immediately requires trained leaders and teachers in such numbers as cannot be supplied from any source. The call for religious educational directors as adjuncts to the pastorate increases every year. Most of the Conferences have full-time secretaries for Sunday school and other educational movements, and the time is near when these will be needed in the districts. Professors of Applied Christianity are not less needed in our colleges. Unless new and productive methods are adopted, these calls must go unheeded.

These are not only questions of churchly concern; but are equally national problems. Moral bankruptcy threatens that nation whose spiritual leadership is inadequate or incompetent. In this time, when the church spirit and nationalism meet in the realm of constructive activities, these problems become elements of faith and patriotism.

The Christian Education Movement has wisely set as one of its definite objects "to lead at least five thousand young men and women to pledge themselves to devote their lives to the ministry, to mission work or to some other form of Christian service; and to seek an education as a preparation for this life service." The Movement has set apart the full month of February, when this great compelling appeal is to be presented to our congregations. We call upon the leaders of the Sunday school, the Epworth League, and the Missionary Societies to lay this message of the kingdom upon the hearts of the members of their respective organizations. We also ask that the faculties of our schools, colleges and universities at chapel hours address this matter to the minds and consciences of their students. Let our pastors throughout the Connection preach on the subject during the month of February, and seek to bring parents to consecrate their children to God's service.

Finally, we call upon our pastors and people to pray that during the month of February our whole church may be visited by a gracious revival; and that, as a result, on the last Sunday in February, thousands of our young people may be led to respond to the call of God in the stewardship of life.

THE PARALYZING FORCE OF MONEY.

By Rev. J. H. Jowett, D.D.

There are three judgments in the matter of giving, in which I hope we shall all be agreed.

And the first judgment is this: we are apt to be gravely deceived about the extent of our beneficence, and we vastly exaggerate the amount of money we give away. The majority of people have no idea of the range of their beneficence. They do not know how much or how little they give in the course of a year. But the bias of their estimate is always on the side of generous judgment. The people who do not know how much they give always give less than they think they do.

The Paralyzing Power of Money.

And the second judgment is this: there is a strangely paralyzing power about money, and it so restricts the heart that the more we get the less we are inclined to give. And this is surely what the Lord was meaning when He spoke of "the deceitfulness of riches." Riches can make a man think that he is growing bigger when all the time he is growing less. He estimates his size by the inlet of income, and not by the outlet of beneficence. While the inlet is expanding the outlet is contracting. But the reception is frequently more deadly still. His growth in riches is often accompanied by a corresponding growth in fear. It is one of the pathetic ironies of life that men who are growing in wealth have an increasing fear of poverty. And the fear puts them into bonds and they are afraid to give of their treasure lest none should remain. I went to see a very wealthy man in New York to ask him to help an exceedingly noble cause. His fear immediately answered my appeal, and he spoke as one who was on the verge of poverty. "I really cannot give any more!" The word was apparently sincere, and it was accompanied by a sort of sigh which confirmed its reality. "I really cannot give any more! What with one thing and another I do not know what we are coming to!" Fear seemed to haunt the man. It determined his thought and his speech and his services. A few weeks later he died, and his will was proved at over sixty millions! And I wonder, I wonder if at the end of the day he heard the messenger of the Lord saying unto him, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee, then whose shall these things be?"

Deafness to Necessities of the Soul.

And the third judgment is this: that conscience in the matter of giving is apt to become less sensitive as the appeals come from the necessities of the soul. Many a man will give generously in response to a cry of material hunger who is numb to the cry of spiritual hunger. Many men will give a large contribution to relieve the hungry children in Eastern Europe who feel no urgency in the cry of those who are spiritually hungry in Mongolia or Tibet. They would hasten to succor a fainting body, but they are careless to the needs of a fainting heart.

Well, all these are personal chills in the service of beneficence. They are personal limitations they are personal antagonisms, and they assault us all; and we are compelled to take a very strong and deliberate course if we are to overcome them and rise into possession of a soul which is wholly distinguished by "this grace also." How are we to meet these enemies of beneficence? What course can we follow to make beneficence a spontaneous issue in our life? First of all we must cultivate a sense of stewardship. We must cultivate the sense as assiduously as we have cultivated the sense of ownership and possession. A sense of stewardship is the recognition of the ultimate fountain of our life and strength; it is homage paid where homage is due. The Lord puts this homage very early in the prayer which He taught His disciples. All that we have is ours in trust; and we are to bow in homage before the Lord and say: "Not my will but Thine be done."

The Strategy of Method.

We cannot fight the enemies of magnanimity and beneficence by thoughtless and spasmodic warfare. We must have a scheme of action. There must be some designed strategy if we are to overcome the deadly attacks of the grim army of selfishness and meanness. And I am sure that part of this same method must be the assignment of a certain minimum proportion of our income to ministries of beneficence. The minimum must not be less than a tenth. Even the Pharisee could boast of that attainment. "I give tithes of all that I possess." It was no dull virtue when compared with the general giving of the members of the church of Christ. If we all followed the Pharisee's example, and gave a tenth of all that we possessed, the appeals which call to our beneficence would be met with overflowing wealth and sufficiency.

But I would advise young people who adopt the method of minimum proportion not to dribble their tenth away in small and insignificant contributions. Let them go in sometimes for the giving of large sums. If you have ten pounds a year to give away, have the satisfaction now and again of giving a five-pound note to something. If you do

It you will know the reason of the counsel. It seems a big sum, and it challenges your powers, and there is a bracing influence in the endeavor. The subsequent experience will give you the needful justification. It is like a fine drive at golf; it is a good send off and the lesser strokes will come in its train. And if you find, as the year goes by, the tenth exhausted, you may take a dash past your minimum and break all your records. You will do it just to prove that you are not the victim of your own minimum. It will be like a plunge into deep cold water, and you will emerge with a healthy glow, not the fever of silly pride, but the satisfaction of healthy manhood.

Shall the Fountain Go to Sleep?

I confess I am very much concerned about this grace and virtue of beneficence in the Christian life and character. The generosity of our people during the war was manifold and amazing. Every appeal was met with fervor, and our folk were strengthened by the energies of their own beneficence. But beneficence which flows freely in days of conflict may dry up again in the quieter days of peace. The necessity may seem to be over and the fountain goes to sleep. That is one of our dangers. And the other equally imminent danger is this: we are surely living in a day of extravagance. There are signs of wasteful and even prodigal squandering on every side. We have the example of a government which is not taking the lead in wise economy. Think of what is being spent in pleasure. Look at the crowded theaters and the movies with their long waiting queues. I do not object to these things, and I appreciate the reasonable reaction after all the strain and the fear and the terror of the last five years. But it is unhealthy when we spend a large proportion of our income on amusement and have no reserves to meet the demands of noble necessity. Professedly Christian people give more money to see performances in a cinema than they give to the cause of God's kingdom. I do not attribute this lack of beneficence to meanness, or to a stinginess which locks up its resources; it is explained by want of thoughtfulness, and by lack of method and conscience, and piloted devotion.

The constraints which ought to move us are great and manifold. There are the needs themselves. Let us direct our thoughts and our imagination to play about the realms of necessity. And then let us walk with Jesus Christ. Let us talk with Him. Let us ask for His counsel. Let us hear what He has to say about things. Let us consult Him about this and that, and the other, and our hearts will burn within us as He talks with us by the way. His own example will be our abiding constraint. When we follow the young Prince of Glory from His Throne to His Cross the springs of sacrifice are unsealed in our own hearts, we have the fellowship of His sufferings, and in the realm of beneficence we become ready and cheerful givers.—Central Christian Advocate.

SCHOOLS FOR RURAL PASTORS AND CHURCH LEADERS.

By Rev. R. L. Russell,

Secretary, Department of Home Missions.

For some time there has been much thought and discussion given to the town and country church. The Board of Missions, through its Home Department, has been trying to think through to an adequate program for this great arm of the moving host of the Lord. We have concluded that it would be better to make the venture of a fool than let the procession run over us. So we have begun to get ready to start something.

First—We have outlined a program for ourselves which seems to be adequate for a pastor who is willing to crawl before he walks. In outlining this program we have sought the advice of leaders in rural life in our church and others.

Second—Fifteen or twenty men have been chosen by Conference Mission Boards, and appointed by bishops to as many charges, to demonstrate what can be done with our program under adequate leadership. This is our first experiment with our plan, and the church should not expect too much of us the first time.

Third—Our men, though they be trained in the schools, have not been trained for town and country work. Much of their training has been away from this sphere of needed service, so much so that the cities and larger towns have been getting our trained men and leaving the poorly trained to the town and country. We are waking up to the danger brought to us by such methods, and we are trying to correct ourselves before it is too late.

We must take the men who are willing to undertake the tasks of the rural church and train them for this work. Therefore, we are holding this summer, two Rural Life Schools of two weeks each. The first will be held at Lake Junaluska, May 17 to June 3; the second at Hendrix College, Conway, Arkansas, June 7 to 23.

We propose to bring to these schools the most competent and expert men on this subject we can find in this nation. We are hoping that every pastor serving a church in a town under twenty-five hundred population, and every man on a distinctly country charge may have the privilege of one of these schools. The training they will receive will not only change their conception of service, but will, in time, revolutionize our whole thinking about our circuit work and the church in the smaller towns.

We are anxious to have the WHOLE CHURCH back us up in this work. We want you to know our plans and boost for us. Throw away your hammer and get a horn. The walls of Jericho never fell until the people threw down their battering rams and got the rams' horns. Now let every fellow get his horn ready and send forth a note of encouragement. It will help wonderfully. Let the presiding elders and stewards determine now that men who ought to be in this school shall find it possible to get there.

Bear in mind these schools are also open to laymen who want better equipment for work in their local church.

We are making the expenses as low as possible. No fees whatsoever will be charged, so that the only expense will be the carfare and board, and the board has been reduced to the minimum. In Junaluska the rates will be $2 to $2.50 and at Hendrix College $1.50 per day. In both instances this includes room and board.

Begin now to make your arrangements to attend the one nearest to you.

THE CHURCH SCHOOL AND THE SALVATION OF THE WORLD.

By Dr. W. J. Young.

It is an admitted basal fact that the mission of the church is the salvation of the world. It has many secondary and yet important interests, but whatever those interests may be, they ultimately look to this supreme purpose. We are coming to see that this salvation is a much broader work than we at one time supposed, and looks to the development and use of every ransomed power of our common humanity. In this work and purpose education has a prominent part.

The leadership of the world, we are told on every side, is passing, if indeed it has not already passed, into the hands of educated, for the most part college-trained, men and women. The world at large is considering that leadership largely from the point of view of the business and financial interests. But there is a far more important consideration than these. What shall be the influence of this leadership on the moral and religious welfare? Shall it be a religious and moral? Or shall it be non-religious and non-moral? Education, as ordinarily conceived, does not of necessity carry with it the idea of anything beyond the training for some vocation—the point of emphasis to-day.

The world is beginning to see the value of character, the value of religious and moral training even to its lower aim, because character and well-rounded manhood are both essential factors in the largest success. It is a recognized fact that the church school has done a very large service in sending out the better leaders in the life of the world. It was, of course, the forerunner in emphasizing the religious side of life, and by its influence it has brought the other schools, at one time almost wholly secular, to the same great task. The church school must continue this work, so well begun. It can do so only with an improved equipment and with larger means, inviting men and women to come not only because of loyalty to the church, but also because of the advantages offered as being second to none.

But the church is in need of leadership in its own work. It needs and must have more competent stewards, Sunday school teachers, missionary leaders, pastors. The need just now is by no means being met, even half-way. Those who have in the past taken these places of leadership with real success have been for the most part of the number of those trained in church schools. This has been particularly true of the ministry of the church. Even where moral and religious leadership has developed among men and women in the secular schools, that leadership has largely shown itself in departments of work outside of official connection with the church.

The church, then, has two important tasks before it—to develop its own schools, emphasizing more loyally and definitely the religious side, and to put itself in such relation to the secular schools as to be able to exert its influence for service of a denominational, though certainly not of a sectarian sort, so that it may keep itself supplied with workers in its chief task of saving the world. Incidentally may be mentioned the very great aid to loyalty to these religious principles which might come from larger funds and the consequent deliverance from the temptation to put forward other things in a spirit of compromise in order to secure patronage and popularity.

A very important matter is not to be overlooked. The advance of research and discovery has had a very large bearing on religious and theological thought. Readjustments of thinking have become necessary, points of emphasis have changed, and in some cases men of real piety and loyalty have found they had to make, for themselves, at least, restatements of the forms of their faith. The church must admit the truth, where the truth really is, whatever the results of the admission may be, and if there be facts brought to its attention which it had not come to see before, it must accept them. But it is a most important question as to what shall be the use made of such facts. They have had a different meaning and purpose in the hands of different men. The results of modern scholarship have led one great teacher to surrender all that is worth while in the Bible and in Christian experience, while another has been able to use the same results of scholarship to deepen conviction in the truth of the fundamentals of the Gospel and to enlarge the religious experience, at the same time making it more real and vital. It happens quite often that the scholarship which in one school leads to the Cross, in another leads hopelessly and forever away from the Cross. It is a momentous duty that the church, honestly seeking the truth and not concealing it from the minds of its youth, shall have schools in which the faith once for all delivered to the saints shall be held sacred and have its place even in the most advanced scholarship. "Bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ" for the world's larger salvation.

We have come to a place in the history of Christianity where it must touch all life, show its close relationship to everything that concerns mankind, or it must withdraw all its claims. It may be true, indeed it is true, that the church is not a social organizer or reorganizer, that its appeal is spiritual, that it deals with a citizenship which at last finds its inspiration and even its abode in heaven. But it is also true that every forward movement in the world's life and thought for centuries has been traceable both at home and abroad to the vital application of the Gospel to all departments of life. A great Chinese statesman is reported to have said that the revolution which led to the beginnings of a republic in China began when the great missionary, Robert Morrison, came to Canton in the early years of the nineteenth century. Now if this great aim is to be accomplished, it must be done by men who are specially trained and consecrated to the task of building the Kingdom of Jesus in the world, and of building it in all life, the mill, the shop, the legislative hall, the school, the church. Thus the world's salvation will be a verity.

Attention should also be called to the stress being laid to-day on religious education as over against the revival. It may be that in some instances the former is unduly emphasized, or emphasized at the expense of the latter. The saner thinkers see no contradiction between the two. It is quite evident that the principles enunciated by the leaders in this comparatively new movement are based on essential facts and divine laws. If the movement is to bring to the church and the kingdom of God a real blessing, it must be carried forward by men who have been educated under the guidance of the church, and while in the enjoyment of a real experience in the things of God, and a large part of this religious education must find its place in the preparatory schools and colleges of the church as well as in the Sunday school. The revival will not pass away, it must not pass away. But it will be more wisely conducted and more wisely used. The great need, a very great need of the age, is a genuine, fearless scholarship coupled with an evangelical Christian experience of the richest sort. Men and women so blessed are sadly few. We must have more of them, if the world is to be truly saved. They must come, they ought to come, out of the schools of the church.

Emory University.

AN APPEAL TO THE PASTORS AND CHURCHES.

By Dr. P. A. Baker, General Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America.

The inherently criminal character of the liquor traffic was never more in evidence than at this time. Every thoughtful reader of magazines and daily papers must be convinced of this fact. The whole scheme of prohibition, present and future, is on trial, and is in peril. The adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution, and the Volstead Law enacted to carry the amendment into effect, did not bring prohibition. They simply cleared the way for making prohibition possible. A traffic so criminal in its character and conduct as the drink traffic does not go out of existence at the behest of a constitutional amendment or an enforcement act. The abolition of what has been termed "the legal traffic" has made the illegal traffic fabulously profitable. A dollar a quart was a big price for the moonshine product when breweries and distilleries were allowed to operate; now it finds a ready sale at $10 per quart and $25 per gallon. Every corn field, wheat field, barley field, potato patch, orchard and kitchen furnishes material for the violation of the Eighteenth Amendment, and with the existing appetite and criminal greed for gain there is no lack of persons who are ready to take the chance of violation.

The propaganda for "wine and beer" is popular not only amongst the drinkers who have a fixed appetite, but amongst thousands of well-meaning people, including church members, who have not counted the cost of yielding to such a demand. To admit either, or both, means that the whole fight must be fought over again. If we are to have beer and wine, we must have a place to sell it, which means the opening of the grog shop, where regulation is as impossible as it would be to attempt to regulate the tides of the ocean.

The liquor people are working more wisely for their cause than at any time in the past. They are operating under the advice of counsel, and that advice is that it is not possible, at least not now, by a frontal attack to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, but that it can be nullified by changing the alcoholic content in beverages that may legally be made and sold, and this can be done by a majority vote of the Congress. Why attempt repeal when nullification will answer every purpose? The Congress is not safe. This one is, and will appear much safer than it really is if a vote should be forced on the Volstead Law during the coming session. Many Congressmen will vote against a beer and wine amendment when they know it is impossible of passage who will vote for it if they are reasonably certain it will pass. This is a favorite method with some Congressmen for deceiving the public. Congressmen who honestly favor prohibition will vote their principles every time, while those who do not will not. The majority margin of real prohibitionists in Congress is very small. The apportionment of Congress, following the present census, will admit above fifty additional Congressmen, nearly every one of whom will come from the large cities of the country and can reasonably be depended upon to stand for the liquor program. If the apportionment should not be increased, the same difficulty faces us because in the country districts the number will be decreased and in the great centers of population increased; hence the stiffest fight the prohibitionists of this country will ever have will be two years hence at the next congressional election. The liquor people are now systematically laying their plans for that contest. Meanwhile they are increasingly violating the law to create, if possible, the greater reaction against prohibition.

Most people overlook the fact that the organizations responsible for directing the efforts to secure the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Law were builded out of the best material the country affords—the thoughtful, reading, conscientious, church-going population, which could be brought to bear quickly upon legislative bodies for immediate results. The great outlying millions in city and country who do not attend the churches or read the religious papers, and who have no knowledge of the propaganda that has been going on for years except as they gather it from the numerous flings in much of the secular press, resent the fact of prohibition and believe that something was "put over" on them by unfair methods when they were not looking. These millions must be reached in their own language with speakers and literature, which may never convert many of them to the principle of prohibition, but which will neutralize their opposition until the principle is firmly established.

We must reckon with the fact that the war set prohibition ahead from five to ten years, and it will require at least that much time, with all hands at it, to bring public sentiment up to the point of sustaining it. Many people write to our offices, saying, "Now prohibition is a fact, and, of course, you no longer have need of funds," and cancel their subscriptions; others add, "It is the duty now of the government to enforce the law, and, of course, you have no further need of funds." These people are prohibitionists and have fought nobly to secure prohibition, but are quitting with the job half finished. Does any one think for a moment that the government will go ahead and enforce the prohibitory law with a well-organized, influential and well-financed minority opposing it, if there is not an organization thoroughly equipped to secure necessary appropriations from Congress for enforcement and to see to it that all the enforcement machinery is on its job? Does any one believe, under existing conditions, if the present organizations were to disband that two Congresses would pass before there would be a determined agitation not only for a modification of the Volstead Law, which would easily be accomplished, but for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment itself? Already there are ministers and churches short-sightedly taking the ground that since prohibition has become a part of the fundamental law of the land, and a code for its enforcement has been enacted, that there is no need for further support at their hands. They forget the organizing period of the forties, and the prohibition victories of the fifties, when a large number of States enacted prohibitory laws, and the repealing period of the sixties and seventies, when the organizations that had put over prohibition in these States, one after another, disbanded and the "last state became worse than the first." Are we to have a repetition of this fiasco because of the short-sightedness of leaders of the church to-day? The church has furnished the leadership and the sinews of war to bring us to the present strategic and hopeful position and it is unthinkable that when complete victory is in sight there should be a fatal reaction in the face of as determined an opposition as we have ever met. No pastor or church has any more right to desert or falter now than have the men who have poured their lives into this struggle, to step down and out into some more congenial employment. To scrap the great organizations that have been for a quarter or a half century building, in the face of the unfinished task, would be a crime against humanity. To even cripple their efficiency by a lack of support would be the acme of unwisdom.

We have too much confidence in the church and the ministry, as we have witnessed the quality of their splendid leadership for the overthrow of the drink traffic, to believe that they will give an hour's truce to an institution that can only live by the ruin of our people. We appeal to all right-thinking men who have "put their hand to the plow" that they will not look back until this age-old destroyer has been completely destroyed—until a new generation, fresh from the scientific instruction of the public schools, and the moral drill of the church and Sabbath school, have come upon the scene, who know not the Beast of Baccus.

LYNCHINGS AND ASSASSINATIONS, NORTH AND SOUTH.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The holding of human life cheap and the taking of it for light cause is a capital offense against the Government of God. This is the deep meaning of that solemn passage in Genesis which relates the killing of a man to an assault upon the image of God. "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God made he man." (Gen. 9:6.)

In contravention of both divine law and human statutes of our land, the country is filled with crimes of violence as is no other civilized country in the world. With the denunciation of his people by the prophet Ezekiel we may say of our people, "The land is full of blood and the city full of perverseness." (Ezek. 9:9.) Then, as now, the city was full of the worst crimes.

The people who dwell in the rural sections of our country are not without sin, but the greatest number and the worst types of crimes are found in our urban centers. This has been true for many years, and the fact has been conspicuously established by the wave of crime which has swept over our nation recently and which continues to run to our utter dishonor and dire damage.

New York City houses more criminals, especially murderers, than can be found in all the rural districts of the South. Chicago, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, and Cleveland are not far behind New York in this hideous record of bloody deeds. This is said not to excuse or extenuate the crimes committed in the rural districts of the South, but to point out the points at which our civilization is being most strained.

In the South lynchings have been more common than in other sections, although they have not been confined to the South and they are decreasing in the South. Such inhuman offenses can not be condoned or defended by conscientious men who regard the sacredness of human life and the authority of law. They are unspeakably wrong and ineffably shameful.

But no other section of the country is justified in accusing the people of the South as if they were sinners above all who dwell in the United States. Such, however, has been the disposition of a considerable part of the Northern press and the Northern people. A record is made annually of all the lynchings committed in the South, and upon this record periodical preachments are poured forth berating the Southern people and calling upon them to reform. This has not benefited the people in the North nor improved the people of the South. It has engendered a self-righteous spirit in the North and a resentful spirit in the South, and thus the North has been led to think lightly of its own sins and the South to defend its offenses.

In the "Hudibras" of Butler are found these quaint but truthful lines which well describe the pharisaic disposition wherever it is found:

"They compound the crimes their hearts incline to And damn the sins they have no mind to."

The people of the North have not had the temptations to lynchings which have met the people of the South, but when the temptation has been presented to them, they have not been over-successful in resisting it. Lynching is not a matter of geography.

Lynchings in the South in point of numbers fall far short of the assassinations which occur daily in the cities of the North. During the last twelve months there have been more than a hundred murders in New York, the perpetrators of which have never been found or apprehended. In Philadelphia there were not quite so many as in New York, but a number much larger than the number of lynchings in the South. In Boston, the metropolis of the "Land of steady habits," the number of unexplained and inexplicable killings has been very great. In all the South during the year 1920 there were less than sixty lynchings, but in the cities of the North there were more than ten times as many assassinations for which the criminals have never been arrested.

Moreover, there are companies of men in some Northern cities known as "gunmen" who make merchandise of murder and hire themselves to kill persons against whom they have no grudges and for whom they feel no sentiment of vengeance. By them crime is commercialized, and their bloody business could not exist if it were not true that for every one of them there is hidden in the community a man too cowardly to kill a fellow-being, but corrupt enough to employ a "gunman" to do what he dare not do.

And this awful type of crime is on the increase. At one time some were disposed to say that most of these crimes were done by the foreigners huddled in the large cities of the North, but this has been demonstrated to be untrue, and more is the pity. Native Americans are committing most of these horrible offenses, and their motive is money.

A lynching in the South is, generally speaking, the outburst of passionate indignation against an unspeakable crime, but the unexplained murders and assassinations in Northern cities show no such motive. They are deliberate and cold-blooded assassinations apparently done under the vile impulse of inhuman greed.

Is it not time the press and people of the North began to keep as careful records of the assassinations in their own midst as they make of the lynchings in the South and paid more attention to extracting the beams from their own eyes than to playing the part of oculists on Southern eyes? Would not the money spent and the men engaged by some Northern churches to do missionary work in the South be better bestowed upon efforts to cleanse the dark spots in the North?

In the South there is the purest type of Anglo-Saxon American to be found in any section of our country. Most of us can pronounce one another's names without the help of a dictionary. And in the South there are more church members in proportion to population than in any other part of the United States, and the type of their Christianity is the purest form of evangelical religion. Eccentricisms have never taken root and flourished to any great degree in the South. Why, then, should the Southern people be objects of missionary interest and endeavor upon the part of Northern churches? Well may we say to these well-meaning but ill-advised churches, "Physician, heal thyself."

In Manhattan and the Bronx there are more than twice as many people as there are in Georgia; but in the four cities of Atlanta, Augusta, Savannah and Columbus there are more church members than there are among the more than 5,000,000 of people in Manhattan and the Bronx. Does it not savor more of partisanship than piety, more of sectionalism than of salvation to be sending missionaries to evangelize the South when these awful masses of unregenerate human beings fester and ferment and die in New York without hope and without God?

But, turning away from this phase of the subject, let the people of all sections of the country be called to repent for their own sinners and arrest the horrible wave of bloody crimes which sweeps over the nation.

They have been holding human life too cheap. Unconsciously they have imbibed a materialistic theory of life which secretes murder as the tail of a cuttle-fish yields his inky fluid. If man has a brutal origin and a beastly end, the offense of maiming or killing him is no greater offense than cruelty to animals. But if he was made in the image and likeness of God, his blood cries to heaven for vengeance whenever it is shed without law. The doom of a nation of Cains is the curse of Cain.

HE GIVES TWICE WHO GIVES QUICKLY.

The Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations, representing thirty denominations in the United States and Canada, with a Sunday school enrollment of nineteen millions, adopted the following paper January 19, 1921:

"The Lord of heaven and earth, who gives to all life and breath, made of one every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth. We cannot have God for our Father unless we are willing to recognize all his children as our brothers. America, the richest land of all time, must not say to perishing multitudes, 'Go in peace, be ye filled,' and yet give not bread to those who are starving.

"In China thirty million people are facing starvation. Great numbers are existing on roots, barks, and leaves. It is believed that many millions will die before relief can be given. There can be no permanent relief in the famine district—two hundred by four hundred miles in extent—until next harvest time, in May or June. The situation is distressing in the extreme and calls for prompt action.

"Be it resolved, That the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations in session at Indianapolis, Ind., heartily indorses the efforts of the China Famine Relief in behalf of the suffering people of China, and lays upon the hearts of the churches represented in the Council the urgent needs of the afflicted multitude; and recommends that the Sunday School Boards of the constituent bodies in the Council set apart a Sunday, before May 1, 1921, if possible, on which day an offering shall be made in Sunday schools for the China Famine Fund."

The Executive Committee of the General Sunday School Board, at the meeting in Nashville, Tenn., January 25, 1921, adopted a resolution requesting our Sunday schools throughout the Connection to make an offering for the China Famine Fund on Sunday, March 13.

Make checks payable to J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer, and mail to him at 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

THE TERMINUS.

Did you ever hear of a railroad ending in the middle of a cornfield or back behind a haystack? I never. Read the initials on the box cars—C. C. & St. L. C., M. & St. P., C. I. & L., etc. They mean that the railroads usually head up in great cities. Builders of roads first pick out a terminus, and that terminus is always, as we say, a great, teeming city, where commerce flourishes and into which trainloads of manufactured articles wheel out. Some roads would not stop their trains in little towns that spring up along the way were they not compelled to do so. They make their money in the great cities. Whenever you see a splendidly equipped passenger train, with Pullmans and diners, or a half mile freight train steaming along the track, put it down they are headed for some great city at the road's end. A railroad cannot succeed without a splendid terminus.

The point we want to make is, the road you are building must have a great terminus. In other words, you must look forward to some great end and strive toward it. Set your stakes for something big. Successful men, as a rule, have dreamed of great things long before they were in sight. They had their terminus in a pronounced project, toward which they moved. They were not content to aim low. They dreamed of becoming a senator, bishop, college president, bank director, capitalist, or something along the same high level.

Boys and girls, look ahead; pick out a terminus for your life that is worth while and drive toward it even in the face of opposition. Only in this way will you succeed.—Northwestern.

A good way to find pleasure and profit in prayer is to ask God to bless some one whom you don't like.—Exchange.

SPIES THAT CRIED CALAMITY

Israel's Great Advance was halted a generation because some of her agents cried calamity.

They saw the Land of Promise. It flowed with milk and honey. Its fruit was of surpassing excellence. It was a land to be desired. In it Israel would be happy and great; there she would fulfill the will of God.

Yet some of her agents cried calamity. The city had walls, the adversaries were strong, their own people were too weak, the time was not propitious. So the very people most expected to lead the Great Advance cried out against the enterprise to which all their previous struggles had been directed.

The result: The censure of God was upon them. In the dark wilderness they wandered a generation. The plans and purposes of God were frustrated. Israel remained a gypsy race. And the only ones who even saw the Land of Promise were those who contended that the thing could and should be done.

Another Great Advance Is Due

The Christian Education Movement is another Great Advance ordered by the Church and willed by the Head of the Church. It means the saving of Methodist education to the nation and the production of those Christian leaders, now lacking, who alone can lead the blinded world aright.

It ultimately means life or death for the M. E. Church, South; it means moral character and stable government for the nation.

Are there those who cry calamity? Who say the adversaries are too strong? Who declare the thing cannot be done? Who advise the Church to tarry in the wilderness without an attempt to move forward.

Remember what happened when Israel followed the counsels of reaction.

THE MOTTO THAT COUNTS.

You may bring to your office and put in a frame
A motto as fine as its paint,
But if you're a crook when you're playing the game,
That motto won't make you a saint.

You can stick up the placards all over the hall,
But here is the word I announce:
It is not the motto that hangs on the wall,
But the motto you live that counts.

If the motto says "Smile," and you carry a frown;
"Do it now," and you linger and wait;
If the motto says "Help," and you trample men down;
If the motto says "Love," and you hate—

You won't get away with the mottoes you stall,
For truth will come forth with a bounce;
It is not the motto that hangs on the wall,
But the motto you live is what counts.

BILLY'S "NISHITIVE."

By Clara J. Denton.

"What is it?" asked Billy.
"What is what?" asked Johnnie.
"Why, that you said just now."
"Nishitive?"
"Yes."
"Don't you know? It's easy."
"No, I don't know; if it's easy, why then, tell me."

"Why, it's—it's—let me see—" and Johnnie paused.

"Guess you don't know yourself," and Billy looked at Johnnie teasingly.

"Yes, I do, too; it's getting things done before the other fellows do, then, that's all."

"How do you know that's it?"

"I've heard my folks talk about it."

"But you can't do things until you think of them, and suppose the other fellows think of them first?"

"That's just what you've got to look out for," said Johnnie, eagerly: "It's the thinking or not thinking that makes all the difference."

"Well, then," said Billy hopelessly, "I guess I'll never have a nishitive, 'cause I never think of things to do. I can do things all right when some one else thinks them up and tells me to do them, but I hardly ever think of things to do. Did you ever think of something to do before some one told you about it?"

"Yes, yesterday my dad couldn't find the key to the garage, and he was in an awful hurry to get to the office. He said he'd have to walk to the station and go on the train. Then I remembered that it was raining the night before when he put up the car, so I rushed to the closet where his waterproof hung and looked in his pocket, and there was the key."

"I bet he was glad," said Billy, laughing in sympathy.

"You bet he was, and when I took it to him he said, 'That's the stuff! You're the boy with the nishitive!'"

"Oh," sighed Billy, "don't I wish I could do something like that!"

"It's easy," said Johnny, "If you just keep watching and watching, and thinking, all the time. You try it now, and maybe you'll have a nishitive too;
it's lots of fun."

"I'll try," said Billy, but his tone was very hopeless.

The little boys' mothers and some other ladies were walking behind the two little boys. They had all motored out from Chicago to visit some friends, but as the car could not be kept waiting for their return, they were about to go back by way of the interurban train, which ran only once an hour, and they were now on the way to the station. They had never ridden either into or out of Chicago by this train, so they knew nothing of the rules by which it was managed. When they reached the station the ladies went inside at once, for they were glad to sit down, even on the hard benches; Johnny also went inside, but Billy stayed out, saying that he "guessed he'd look around a little."

Johnny smiled to himself as he thought, "I know what he's staying out for, but he'll not see anything here to do, so he might as well come in."

The ladies fell into merry talk and Johnny was soon busy reading the colored posters, of which there were many, setting forth the delights of trips on Lake Michigan.

Thus passed several minutes, while Billy with his "looking around" was quite forgotten. Suddenly they heard swiftly rushing feet coming across the station platform, and Billy burst into the waiting room, exclaiming, "O Mother, there's a sign out there which says that the cars don't stop here unless the flag is pulled down. I can't reach the rope, and the train just whistled around the bend."

In another second the waiting room was empty and Billy's mother managed to grasp the rope and pull the flag down just before the train reached the station platform.

When they were all safely in the coach, the two little boys sitting together, Billy said to Johnny:
"That was a nishitive, wasn't it?"

"I guess so," said Johnny.

"Whatever are those children talking about?"
asked one of the ladies.

"Oh," said Johnny's mother with a smile, "my little son has been hearing a great deal lately about people having the initiative, and it sounds as if he's been trying to pass his knowledge on to Billy, but, son, if you wish to teach others you must be careful to pronounce your words correctly, so, Billy, say the word slowly this way, in-i-ti-ative." Billy obeyed and managed to say the word very correctly, but in a moment he added, "But I like nishitive better."

This brought a laugh which bothered Billy very much.

Then one of the ladies said, "Well, Billy, whatever you call it, you surely saved us a long stay in that dreary waiting room."

So Billy was satisfied.—In the Christian Work.

WHERE THEY FOUND CHATTERBOX.

By Helen M. Richardson.

They called him Chatterbox because he was always chattering. Jack and Marjory had found him under a tree, a baby squirrel with a broken leg. He was too young to be put in a cage to care for himself; but a cage was necessary to insure safety from prowling cats. So a soft bed of cotton was made for him in the bottom of an old cage, and with care the broken leg soon grew strong again.

At first the squirrel had to be fed with bread and milk, like any other baby animal. Of course, it became very tame, and would follow Jack and Marjory about the house like a kitten.

Chatterbox soon became familiar with everything about the house, even to the pantry shelves, where he had been known to sample articles of food unless carefully protected from his inquisitive little nose.

One day the squirrel was missing. Jack and Marjory spent the whole afternoon calling and hunting. Every drawer was opened, and the pantry shelves thoroughly searched. When about to give up in despair, Jack climbed into a chair to inspect something that looked like a feather sticking up out of a box of corn flakes. Jack reached for the box, and there, curled up inside was the little squirrel, fast asleep.

After eating a hearty meal Chatterbox had decided to take a nap; and what softer bed could be found than this box of corn flakes? Jack gave such a shout when he made the discovery that it woke up the squirrel, and he began a series of frightened "chuts," and the corn flake box began to jump about as if it were alive, for the poor little squirrel was a prisoner, the cover of the box having settled down over his head after he had crawled in.

As soon as Jack could stop laughing he lifted the cover, and out popped a squirrel head, while an angry little voice kept repeating: "Chut!
chut! chut!" which Marjory declared sounded just as if Chatterbox were saying: "Aren't you ashamed to wake a squirrel from his nap, after he has been lunching on corn flakes?"—The

"GIVE ME THY HEART."

There is a striking directness about God's call to man that cannot be mistaken if we open our ears to it at all. God wants our time, our talents, our possessions—but he wants them only as we give with them all that we are. It is only when we give Him our hearts—for out of the heart are the issues of life—that He has received that for which He pleads.

This is a gift that all of us can make. If He had asked for wealth, some of us would be unable to answer; if He had asked for illustrious service, some of us would have to bewail the fewness of our talents; if He had asked for the doing of some mighty task, some of us would have to turn away from Him. But He asks for what all have and what all can give—He wants our hearts.

Of course, all goes with the heart. With that given to Him, if we acquire wealth, or render noble service, or achieve some mighty undertaking, the glory of it all belongs to Him. But His having all, enables Him to give us more. If our hearts are His, really His, the measure of their fullness is His infinite love. He cannot use that which we withhold; but if we give Him all, He will bless more abundantly than we could ask or think.

"Give me thy heart!" It is a wonderful thought that God Himself asks for and will accept the one gift that we are able to make!

LIFE SERVICE.

In the program of the Christian Education Movement, the month of February is to be devoted especially to the presentation of the subject of Life Service. It is especially important that this subject be laid upon the hearts of all our young people, because the church is facing just now a call for workers in its various fields of activity such as it has never been called upon to face in the past.

The ranks of the Christian ministry need recruiting. Our bishops, in their address to the church on this subject, declare that at least a thousand appointments have to be supplied by pressing into service men outside the membership of our Conferences. There is no reflection, of course, upon the character of those good men who help hold the work together, but, from the very nature of the case, they cannot be as well qualified for these responsible positions as the situation demands. We need young men who feel called of God to give their whole lives to the ministry, and who will make such educational preparation for the work as will enable them to do efficiently what needs so urgently to be done.

Then, too, in our missionary operations, both at home and abroad, there is urgent need of trained workers, men and women, if we would even maintain the activities we have already enterprised, to say nothing of enlarging the field of our operations. The time has passed when the church can hope to fulfill its mission by assigning untrained workers to its arduous and delicate tasks. It must have trained men and women if it would save itself the embarrassment of seeing its plans fail and its usefulness grow less.

Our Sunday school authorities declare that there is need for two hundred thousand trained Sunday school teachers in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, alone. We do not know of any other field in which the investment of life service will produce such immediate and rich returns. As lamentable as has been lack of interest in secular education in many respects, even more lamentable is our failure to provide for our children competent teachers in the only schools for religious education that we possess. In addition to the need for teachers, there is a constantly growing demand for trained Sunday school field secretaries and directors of religious education in local churches.

In all departments of the church there is need for the labors of men and women who have intelligently considered the opportunities that are offered the laymen for service to-day, and who are willing to take advantage of these opportunities by a serious effort to perform the duties that lie at hand.

It is to be hoped that there will be throughout the church an earnest presentation of this subject of life service from every pulpit. There must be thousands of young people who are facing the question of their life work; if they are made to see the possibilities of service in the dedication of their lives to specific forms of Christian work, surely there will be such response in the hearts of many of them that the Holy Spirit will call them definitely into that work, and one of the objectives of the Christian Education Movement would be realized: "To lead at least five thousand young men and women to pledge themselves to devote their lives to the ministry, to missions, or to some other form of Christian service, and to seek a Christian education as a preparation for effective service."

URGENT CALL FOR CHINESE FAMINE SUFFERERS.

The following urgent appeal in behalf of the famine sufferers in China has just come to us by wire:

"President Committee Chinese Relief has set Sunday, February 6, as day for collection in every American congregation for starving millions in China. Fifteen millions are facing immediate starvation. Ten thousand are dying daily. Three cents will save a life one day. One dollar will save a life one month. No call at this office ever met such instant response, but thousands of congregations have not responded. Our church is co-operating fully with National committee. Shall a single Southern Methodist congregation fall us on February 6?
W. W. PINSON."

HURRAH FOR THE BAPTISTS!

That the Baptists of Mississippi, and all other Southern States for that matter, are making rapid progress in all departments of their work, is well known. If there is a more aggressive body of religious workers in our country, we do not know where they are to be found.

But we have especially in mind what the Baptists of Mississippi are doing for the circulation of their church paper, the Baptist Record, published at Jackson. In the issue of the Record for January 27, a list is given of the Baptist churches in the State that have put the paper into every home represented in their membership—and there are forty-two of them! Included in this list are many of the strongest churches in the entire State, as well as some of the smaller ones. Columbia, Hattiesburg, Tupelo, Hazlehurst, Corinth, Crystal Springs, Shelby, Greenville, Brandon, Port Gibson, are among those that have recognized the value of the circulation of the church paper and have seen to it that their members have the opportunity of reading it. We do not know what special proposition the Record is making to those churches that put it into every home, but the regular subscription price is $2 a year.

We will not presume to say whether this large circulation of the Record is a cause or an effect of the vigorous and progressive policy of our Baptist friends—probably it is both—but we are sure it is a feature of their work that will be rich in results. An intelligent church membership is absolutely essential for the largest success of the church enterprises. Hurrah for the Baptists! Come on, Methodists!

THE ADVOCATE IN EVERY METHODIST HOME IN COLUMBIA, MISS.

Our church at Columbia, Miss., Rev. L. L. Roberts, pastor, is the latest addition to the number of those who have made arrangements to put the Advocate in every home represented in the membership of the church. There are 164 names on the list—and the cash accompanied the order.

A preacher of wide experience told us the other day that he once proposed to his official board to pay the bill himself if the increase in the basket collections did not pay for putting the official organ in the budget (this was not in Louisiana or Mississippi). As a matter of fact, the increase within three months was more than sufficient to pay the additional expense. We would not be willing to guarantee that this result would follow in every case, but it probably would prove to be so in many instances. In any event, however, we are sure the investment would pay rich returns in increased interest in the work of the church as a whole. The finest values are not expressed in dollars and cents.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. A. D. Martin, of our French Mission work in Louisiana, is now stationed at Lydia, La., where he finds a large field of labor. He was formerly at Bourg, La.

Brother D. W. McLean, of Longville, La., writes: "This makes forty-five years since I commenced taking the Advocate, and I would feel lost without its weekly visits."

The winter term of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, has opened with an enrollment of 848 resident students in the day classes, of whom 441 are men and 407 women.

"The Hinds Chapel church people on the Horn Lake charge are very much in love with Brother Floyd and his work," writes a member of the charge from Lake Cormorant, Miss.

Rev. D. R. Wasson, formerly of Glen Allen, Miss., is now associated with Dr. C. W. Tadlock in the pastorate of Centenary Church, St. Louis, Mo., one of the historic churches of Methodism.

Rev. Jas. M. Lewis, of Collins, Miss., is entering upon the year's work with high expectations of great blessings upon his charge. He ministers to a fine people, who are thoughtful of their pastor.

Brother T. W. Hand, of Nortax, Miss., formerly of Ellisville, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday of last week. He was in the city for the purpose of consulting specialists in regard to his health.

The editor had the privilege of preaching to two fine congregations at Hammond, La., on Sunday, January 23, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Leon I. McCain, who was assisting in a meeting at Epworth, New Orleans.

A note from Rev. A. C. McCorkle, of Como, Miss., informs us that the work at that place is making good progress. All departments of the church are active, the congregations are large, and the choir is rendering splendid service.

The Bulletin of the Rolling Fork (Miss.) Methodist church, a copy of which recently fell into our hands, carries a pastoral address which cannot fail to be helpful to the membership of the church. Rev. T. J. O'Neil is the pastor.

Rev. A. F. Vaughan, now a chaplain in the regular army, is delighted with his work at Camp Grant, Ill. He and his family find life very pleasant in a real army camp, where there is such large opportunity for usefulness.

The largest budget in over a hundred years has been announced by the American Bible Society for this year, the amount being $1,222,367. The Society is 105 years old, and has issued 140 million copies of the Scriptures in 150 languages and dialects.

Such words as the following, by Rev. B. H. Sheppard, of Merryville, La., greatly encourage us: "I am making an effort to increase the circulation of the Advocate, and am sure there will be more subscriptions to follow." Brother Sheppard is a genial companion, as well as an efficient pastor.

A note from Rev. F. R. Power, of Wilmar, Ark., under date of January 29, informs us that the condition of Mrs. Power, who has been seriously ill, is somewhat improved, though she is not yet considered to be out of danger. We are sure the many friends of Brother and Sister Power in Louisiana will remember them in their prayers.

According to the Amory Progress of January 22, Sunday, January 16, was a "red letter day" for the local Methodist church, the pastor's series of sermons on the Ten Commandments drawing a large and interested congregation. Mention is also made of the fact that the prayer meeting and the Sunday school are being unusually well attended.

We learn from the "Big Brother" that Bishop James Cannon, Jr., was unable to fill his appointment at Greenville, Miss., on Sunday, January 23. Dr. Geo. W. Read, of Athens, Ala., one of the leading pastors of the North Alabama Conference and a member of the Educational Commission, occupied the pulpit at the morning service on that day.

The first Annual Conference Minutes to reach our desk is the splendidly arranged and attractively printed record of the proceedings of the North Mississippi Conference. Secretary Countiss has maintained the high standard he has established in getting out a most creditable volume. The Minutes of the Louisiana Conference will be ready for mailing within a few days.

The Politevent Lumber Company, which has large interests in that territory, has presented a Ford car to Rev. L. R. Sparks, our pastor at Covington, La. This was a gracious thing to do, showing not only the Company's appreciation of the work of the church, but also enabling the pastor to render even more efficient service to the community at large. It is an example that could well be followed by large business concerns in other places.

Our work at Franklinton, La., under the leadership of Rev. L. W. Cain, is making rapid progress. The pastor's salary for this year has been fixed at $2400, an increase of $600 over last year, and it will be paid promptly on the first of the month. The congregation is growing, the prayer meeting has an attendance of between 60 and 70, and the Epworth League is active. The Woman's Missionary Society reported $319 raised the first quarter this year. Brother Cain, who recently came to Louisiana from the North Mississippi Conference, is in favor with the people.

Rev. Olin Ray writes as follows, from Macon, Miss.: "Brother Lewis did not ask for reports from the smaller Sunday schools, but we feel that the work being done in Macon is worthy of mention. Since the first of the year, we have practically doubled our attendance. Last Sunday we had present 233, an increase of seven over the Sunday before. The Wesley Gleaners' class had 34 present last Sunday, with a collection of $3.27. The total collection for the school was $16.61. We have a wide-awake superintendent, Mr. T. M. Lamberson, a splendid corps of teachers, and a host of enthusiastic workers. As a result of their labors we hope to report to you right soon that we had an attendance of 300." This note was written under date of Jan 24.

We have received the following note from Rev. F. B. Hill, our pastor at Jackson, La.: "Students of the Old Centenary College will regret to hear that 'Aunt Anna,' wife of Judge Bob Austin, passed away last Tuesday night. She was one of the many refined Christian women who, in those college days, created such a wonderful atmosphere of character building, with sound education. Of a truth she was 'a mother in Israel.' The funeral services were conducted by Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor of First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, assisted by her pastor. The church and community will greatly miss her." The Advocate joins in paying tribute to the memory of this noble woman, and in sympathy for those who are in sorrow because of her going.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTEST.

West Point—Clisby Class: attendance, 62, collection, $3.50; remainder of Sunday school: attendance, 285, collection, $12.80.

Winona—Men's Volunteer Class: attendance, 46, collection, $4.93; remainder of Sunday school: attendance, 159, collection, $8.25; total attendance, 205, total collection, $13.18.

NINE POINTS ON CHURCH-GOING.

By Theodore Roosevelt.

I. In this actual world a churchless community, a community where men have abandoned and scoffed at or ignored their religious needs, is a community on the rapid down-grade.

II. Church work and church attendance mean the cultivation of the habit of feeling some responsibility for others.

III. There are enough holidays for most of us. Sundays differ from other holidays in the fact that there are fifty-two of them every year. Therefore, on Sundays go to church.

IV. Yes, I know all the excuses. I know that one can worship the Creator in a grove of trees, or by a running brook, or in a man's own house, just as well as in a church. But I also know, as a matter of cold fact, the average man does not thus worship.

V. He may not hear a good sermon at church. He will hear a sermon by a good man who, with his good wife, is engaged all the week in making hard lives a little easier.

VI. He will listen to and take part in reading some beautiful passages from the Bible. And if he is not familiar with the Bible, he has suffered a loss.

VII. He will take part in singing some good hymns.

VIII. He will meet and nod or speak to good, quiet neighbors. He will come away feeling a little more charitably toward all the world, even toward those excessively foolish young men who regard church-going as a soft performance.

IX. I advocate a man's joining in church work for the sake of showing his faith by his works.—Selected.

A PRAYER.

Lord, help me to look for the best that is in life. All around me there is a strange confusion of good things and bad. Why should I, vulture-like, go searching about for that which is vile when there is so much that is sweet and pure? Make me like the magnet that draws the good pin out of the mass to itself and leaves the worthless ones to themselves. And, Lord, help me to look for the best that is in men. Let me not pass by the good that is in my brother to search for the evil that is in him. Give me that love which thinketh no evil, which rejoiceth not in iniquity. May I remember that if there is some evil in good men, there is also some good in bad men, and may I prefer to look for the good. Make me merciful, O Lord, even as thou art merciful, for Jesus' sake. Amen.—Edward Leigh Pell, D.D.

They that bow their heads before God may hold them erect before the world.—Exchange.

SAW HIM FIRST.

About the year 1707 William Penn became heavily involved in a lawsuit, and the author of "Quaker and Courier" says that he was greatly in fear—under the laws of the day—of being arrested. Many noble personages were in the same plight, but no other, it is believed, resorted to Penn's expedient in meeting the situation:

"In the door of his London house he had a peeping hole made, through which he could see any person who came to him. A creditor one day sent in his name, and having been made to wait more than a reasonable time, knocked for the servant and asked him:

"'Will not your master see me?'

"'Friend, he has seen thee,' replied the servant calmly, 'and does not like the looks of thee.'"—King's Treasuries.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition, we hereby make the following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.
2. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.
3. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.
4. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.
5. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate In Every Methodist Home In Louisiana And Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.
2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.
3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will be found.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

but in the providence of God she was taken. Notwithstanding the suspense and anxiety that the father, mother, and all the family suffered, no baby ever came to brighten a home more than did little Evelyn brighten the Thomas home. MRS. E. W. YANCY (nee Davis), a niece of Bishop Morris, of the M. E. Church before the Division, was born near Jonesville, Catahoula Parish, La., February 27, 1837, and died at Summerville in the same parish, November 24, 1920. She was twice married, first to Dr. W. C. Aber, in 1853. To this union six daughters and two sons were born. Dr. Aber died in 1868, leaving her with this young family to fight life's battles alone. But bravely she did her part in caring for and training her children. In 1871, she married Rev. E. W. Yancy, a member of the Louisiana Conference, M. E. Church, South. To this union one son and three daughters were born. Brother Yancy died in 1897, and for twenty-three years she was one of the matriarchs on the "honor roll" of our Conference. She was converted and united with the church in her youth, and spent her long life in the service of God. Sister Yancy was truly a good woman, a Christian of the best type, faithful in all the relationships of life, and was honored and loved by a large circle of friends to whom her pure life was a benediction. The influence of her godly life in the home is seen in the lives of her children, who, in their loving devotion to her memory, "Rise up and call her blessed." Among the last expressions of her love for her pastor's family was her originating what she called "A dollar shower." This unique plan was, that every member should send the pastor's wife a dollar at the beginning of the Conference year as a gift for her personal use, and a short time before her death she sent her dollar. Hers was a long and useful life, and crowned with a triumphant death. Truly, "The memory of the just is blessed."

MRS. N. R. GRAHAM was born July 18, 1850, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. E. Jones, at Hickory, Miss., August 26, 1920. Mrs. Graham was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Holladay. She was married April 27, 1875, to Mr. N. R. Graham. To this union six children were born, of whom one preceded her. She joined the Methodist Church in early life, and was a consistent member until her spirit answered our Heavenly Father's call. "In my father's house are many mansions," and in those mansions our dear mother now dwells. But oh, how we miss our dear mother! But our loss is heaven's eternal gain. Some day, though, we hope to meet our dear mother in that heavenly home where parting will never more come. So, dear bereaved ones, let us be comforted in trying to live the sweet and unselfish life she lived, always willing to sacrifice self for others. Mother!—the sweetest word in English and the best friend man ever had. Our dear mother has left us in this sad world to roam, but she has gone to live with Jesus in that bright eternal home. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Her devotion to her children and loved ones was most beautiful. She was always ready and willing to lend a helping hand. But rest on, dear mother, "Asleep in Jesus—oh, how sweet!" Yes, dear mother, we sadly miss you, but again we hope to meet you some sweet day. When life's battles are over, and each of us has fought the fight, we hope to gather at the portals in that city of delight, where we hope to clasp her dear, sweet hand at last, united in that fair and happy Land.

A private soldier, mustered out at the close of the Civil War, became in turn a farm hand, a tenant, a farmer of his own land, a recognized authority on farm management and farm markets, and finally Governor of a great state in the Central West.

He followed always one fixed principle. He held that the time to expand activities in any direction was when others were beginning to reduce or abandon their interest in that line. He began when others quit.

As long as he lived he put his theory to the test on his own farms and his remarkable success proved its correctness.

Today many farmers are uneasy and are said to be considering giving up the use of commercial fertilizers.

For five years conditions beyond their control have brought about high fertilizer prices and made it necessary to accept fertilizers radically different in composition from those formerly in use.

Is the solution of the trouble to be found in giving up the use of things that have proved profitable in the past or in a careful consideration of the question of the purchase of fertilizers that will be as good as, or better than those formerly used?

There has been a period of Potash Starvation. Now all fertilizer materials are obtainable. Fertilizers high in Potash, 5 to 10 per cent, can be made and if you will insist on buying them you will find that.

how to try to comfort the bereaved loved ones, when the friend who came with the body from Texas handed me this brief note from the pastor of the church of which the deceased was a member, and it read thus: "I beg to say T. S. Ueltschey was a member of my church, true and loyal. Told me he was ready to meet death twenty-four hours before it came. Sincerely, T. H. Burton, pastor, M. E. Church, South, Olney, Texas." When I read to the weeping mother the foregoing note, there were tears of rejoicing mixed and shouts of praise to God for salvation. So to the loved ones I will say, "Weep not as those who have no hope, but look forward to the Resurrection Day when we shall meet again."

MRS. J. B. A. AHRENS.

With the death of Mrs. Elise Ahrens (nee Picker) the fast diminishing company of men and women who were identified with the German Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, loses much more than a unit—in fact, there has passed away one who linked to the church of to-day with personal bonds one of the most romantic and successful of the evangelistic enterprises of American Methodism. For the most part; the currents of German Methodism in the South have been united with the larger movements and life of the church, and very little that is distinctive remains, save a history of consistency, fidelity, spiritual fervor, and heroism. Of all this, with her distinguished husband, Mrs. Ahrens was a part. Mrs. Ahrens was born in Sarstedt, Hanover, in 1840. She was the daughter of Senator Heinrich Picker, royal architect to the blind King George, of Hanover. Not only because she had become thoroughly imbued with American principles and the evangelical teaching of Methodism, but by inheritance Mrs. Ahrens looked with horror upon the late disastrous developments of Prussianism, for her father was never reconciled to the policies of Bismarck and modern German imperialism. I do not know exactly what were the educational opportunities accorded young women of Mrs. Ahrens's girlhood environment, but she certainly had enjoyed the best. Her mastery of elegant and accurate German was superior to that of most others of German birth and environment. During many years of his life Dr. Ahrens was editor of the German Mission paper, "Der Familienfreund," and was pouring forth from his large intellectual resources a stream of literature both in German and in English. This large output was possible because Mrs. Ahrens was able at any time to relieve him of all responsibility for the paper.

THIS GIRL IS A WONDER.

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You start by investing less than $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write to-day. Isabelle Ines, 344 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dr. Ahrens's English style was fine. Those competent to judge accord Mrs. Ahrens the palm for elegant writing in German. It is probable that her judicious suggestions account for some of the Doctor's happiest poetical renderings of English hymns into German. Mrs. Ahrens was a model of maternal fidelity to her three children and of beautiful and thrifty housewifery. On occasions when the Doctor invited this writer to occupy his pulpit Mrs. Ahrens's dinners were delightful episodes. Miss Picker was wedded to Dr. J. B. A. Ahrens in 1866. The end of her life came upon her eightieth birthday, December 8, 1920. The period of her widowhood, which began in 1906, was one of comparative retirement from the activities of a model pastor's wife. Her husband's thrift left her with ample means, and the proximity of her children (Henry H., Mrs. John (Ellis) Crebbin, and Mrs. E. K. (Mattie) Jennings) mitigated her loneliness. In attendance upon the services of the church and by her annual participation in the exercises of the several institutions at the Seashore Camp Ground she found intellectual stimulus and spiritual inspiration. Her piety was deep and her character well poised. Sincerity, spirituality, and intelligence combined in a remarkable degree in her character. One of her children, Mrs. Crebbin, had preceded her into the heavenly state. A multitude joined her remaining children in mourning their loss, and floral offerings from friends and churches attested their desire to pay the last tribute of love to her memory when they laid her to rest in New Orleans, the place of her residence from her coming to America as a bride, through the many years of useful and happy life to the peaceful end.

A BOY IN FACT.

He filled the house with laughter and bother and playmates in squads; a boy of muddy boots and spilled ink bottles and scratched furniture and torn clothes; a boy of sure loyalties, of sudden gusts of affection, of unexpected gentle words, and of shy tenderness when one was alone with him in the firelight—a boy like other boys in fact.

Love such a boy and be patient with him, and develop him, just because he is a warm-hearted fact, not a ready-to-wear, polished fancy.—Selected.

1. Those to whom have been given special blessings will be held responsible for their use.
2. Punishment is due those who insolently reject the overtures of grace—and it will be meted out to them.
3. The gospel call is as wide as humanity—Christianity is a missionary religion.
4. But only those will be saved who comply with the conditions of salvation.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Mid-winter Meeting of Field Secretaries and Presidents of Conference Sunday School Boards met on January 11-14. The meeting was intended to consider educational problems of the Sunday school, and this was done efficiently.

The Wesley Bible Class Federation program is about complete and will soon be in the mail. Remember the date and place—March 15, 16, 17, and Lake Charles. We will have departmental conferences for Elementary, Intermediate-Senior, and Young People and Adult; also, Mr. W. M. Brabham, rural specialist, will have the whole FEDERATION for some time. There will be regular bee-hive activities throughout the whole meeting.

Every pastor and superintendent is asked to co-operate with the Conference Sunday School Board and field workers in getting competent representation to this meeting. You will do your Field Secretary and Elementary Superintendent a favor if you will get your workers together for a session on their tour over the State in the interest of FEDERATION.

We had 45 "pastors" at Shreveport FEDERATION last March—5 from Alexandria District; 3 from Baton Rouge District; 1 from Houma District; 3 from Lake Charles District; 8 from Monroe District; 2 from New Orleans District; 10 from Ruston District; 23 from Shreveport District.

Let us move more than double this number this year. ALONZO EARLY.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

By H. L. Clark.

It was my privilege on Sunday, the 16th, to be with Brother Maddox at Hathorn, Miss. We had a nice meeting that Sunday morning and the Sunday school was organized with Brother R. R. Branton as superintendent. A collection was taken and literature ordered, and the school had its first meeting on Sunday, the 23d. We were at Oakvale Sunday afternoon. We found here a Sunday school that for determination and purpose to maintain it will rival any Sunday school I have ever seen. In face of every disappointment, having lost three or four superintendents within the past year, they are starting off the year well and with the determination not to die. Let's all pray for them.

Tuesday night, January 18, I was at Paine's Chapel, where I found another good Sunday school, considering location and the small number from which to draw. We had a nice meeting and the superintendent, Mrs. Anna Patterson, expressed the belief that her school will take on new life and felt sure much good had been accomplished.

We were at Hub Wednesday night, the 19th. Here we found a fairly good Sunday school. We had one of the best meetings of the week at this place. A great deal of interest was expressed in the Sunday school and it is believed that these people will take on new life.

Our trip to Baxterville, Thursday night, was a delightful one. We found here a live Sunday school with a live superintendent. Their Primary and Junior Departments are teaching the Graded Literature and all showing great interest in the work. This school will grade at least 75 per cent in the Standard of Efficiency. Our meeting here was very delightful.

We were at Prentiss on the 23d. Here we found another good Sunday school, with a good superintendent, Mr. Livingston. He is a live wire and they are practically making a survey of the community and are trying to draw every Methodist into the Sunday school. This school will also grade around 75 per cent or 80 per cent in the Standard of Efficiency. As a whole, our trip was very delightful and we enjoyed it very much.

By Rev. John C. Chambers.

I had the delightful privilege of being with Dr. Chapman at Poplarville on the fourth Sunday. There are many signs of life and growth there. They are planning to make a forward move for this year in keeping with their forward step of last year. Dr. Chapman is in high favor and is very hopeful of his work. I had the privilege of being in the Agricultural High School while there and speaking with those fine young men and women.

I was at Wiggins in the Set-Up Meeting for the Seashore District. Brother Campbell starts the year well and in high favor.

Don't forget to plan for the Standard Training School to be held in Jackson, June 7-14. You will be repaid many times over and the cause will be helped again and again.

Pray for the work and the workers.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Conference Standard Training School for teachers and leaders in religious education will be held at Grenada College, May 29 to June 4. Nine courses will be offered. The very best teachers available have been secured to teach these courses. We had a great school last year, we are planning for a much larger and better one this year. Decide on the course you wish to take, order your textbook and begin study now and you will be sure to make a good grade.

You will find an extended notice of Children's Week in the February number of the Magazine; read this and other articles in the Magazine and Adult Student. The literature for the observance of Children's Week will not be sent out promiscuously, but will be sent to the schools that will use it.

tion for all organized Bible classes in the Conference, including intermediate, senior, young people, and adult classes. This Federation will last two days. Perhaps two hundred will attend. So far no school has opened the way for this important enterprise of the church. Perhaps the best time for holding this meeting will be the first week in August. The time and place must be settled soon. Who cares about this Federation enough to ask for it?

This week I am teaching a class at Houlika. Fifteen earnest, busy people are meeting every night for two hours to receive instruction. We are using as a textbook, "Life in the Making." Four schools are represented in this class. I have an engagement to teach a class at Tunica and one at Greenville during the month of February. We have the promise of five men to teach similar classes. We need at least five more volunteer teachers and we need invitations to do this work. Write Rev. J. E. Stephens, of New Albany, if you desire to have a class taught in your Sunday school. The book you expect to use as a text ought to be ordered a month before the teaching work begins, so the teachers can have ample time for study. Not many of our teachers have time to concentrate upon twelve lessons in one week, but most any one can take an hour or two each week for study. It is important to make your request for a teacher at least a month before you have the class taught.

EDUCATIONAL SET-UP MEETING, VICKSBURG DISTRICT.

This meeting was held at Crawford Street Church on November 12, and was well attended by the pastors of the district, several visiting speakers and a number of laymen from the different churches, and a number of ladies from Crawford Street Church, who served at the noon hour a delightful luncheon.

Brief but inspiring talks were made on the different phases of the Movement by J. M. Morse, I. W. Cooper, A. F. Watkins, J. C. Chambers, C. W. Crisler, W. D. Hawkins, W. W. Bowie, M. M. Satterfield, Miss Chesley Hagan, J. R. Jones, and J. A. Wells, the two latter during the devotional services.

A deep undercurrent of seriousness and determination ran through the meeting and at its close the pastors of the district pledged themselves to the Movement in every way possible to make of it a successful factor in upholding the cause of Christian education. SECRETARY.

FROM PRENTISS, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: Please allow me to say through your columns that our people in Prentiss have shown us quite a bit of appreciation since Conference. There have come in a number of tokens of thoughtfulness in a material way. We are planning and working for a great year of success with these good people. WARM YOUR BLOOD.

A poet has said that "the owl for all his feathers was a-cold." Some people for all their wraps are a-cold whenever they are out-of-doors even in normal winter weather.

It is plain that they need the warmth there is in pure, rich, red blood which reaches through artery and vein, from head to foot, all over the body. They could be told by many people, from experience, that to have this good blood they should take Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine has really made it possible for many men and women, boys and girls, to enjoy cold weather and resist the attacks of disease. It gives the right kind of warmth, stimulates and strengthens at the same time, and its benefits are as lasting as those of any tonic possibly can be.

If there is biliousness or constipation, which often occurs as a result of the torpidifying effect of cold, Hood's Pills may be taken. They are perfectly compatible with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are gentle and thorough.—Adv.

BROTHER — Pleasant Florida root easily, inexpensively overcomes any form of nasty, injurious tobacco habit. Fine for stomach troubles. Just send your address. C. F. Stokes, Mohawk, Florida.—Adv.

Over fifty years ago a young physician practiced widely in Pennsylvania and became famous for his uniform success in the curing of disease. This was Dr. R. V. Pierce who afterwards established himself in Buffalo, N. Y., and placed his "Golden Medical Discovery," in the drug stores of the United States. When you feel run-down, out of sorts, blue and despondent try the energizing influence of Golden Medical Discovery in tablet or liquid form. Nearly a million bottles were sold last year.

house where my dear husband and I spent the second night after leaving my father's home in Bastrop, La., when I left home at 12:30 to catch a boat in Bayou Bartholomey, two miles away. The home was beautifully decorated and the upper gallery curtained, and a wedding supper had been spread there, my sister being the bride and Rev. Wm. Hart, a young Methodist preacher, the bridegroom. The first night we spent in a house with only one room and a back gallery, where they cooked and ate. The next night we spent in Winnsboro, where Brother H. W. May is now pastor. Brother May is a spiritual pastor; he believes in prayer meetings, and knows how to hold one—get everybody to talk or pray.

My first visit there was forty-three years ago. My husband was pastor. I spent my Christmas in that dear home. My second mother is in heaven. She lived to be ninety-three years old, and that has been one of our homes all these forty-three years. Old Santy found me there—and I am seventy years old!

I talked Advocate and Triple C there, but I tell you, my brother, times are hard, and I couldn't do much. At Oak Ridge and at Mer Rouge I got some members for the Triple C and some subscribers for the Advocate.

Our son, T. S. Randle, Jr., tells me in a letter just received that he has been reclaimed and will preach. Praise the Lord! Yours in His name, SISTER T. S. RANDLE.

FROM MAGNOLIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am not given to much writing, but just now there are some developments in connection with our work at Magnolia which I deem noteworthy.

Our Woman's Missionary Society is one of the best and most active that I know, and in its membership there are some of as thoroughly consecrated women as can be found anywhere. They meet every Monday afternoon and carry out the full program, and report annually a vast deal of effective work done and considerable funds raised.

Our Sunday school, under the able superintendency of Brother E. S. Arnold, has recently undergone a re-organization in many respects, and marked improvement along every line is the result.

We have recently organized an Epworth League and now have more than seventy members. The League meets every Sunday evening before preaching hour and presents a splendid program in accordance with the Era outline.

Church attendance is not all we would have it be, but is constantly improving. We have had several accessions on profession since Conference and some by certificate. I think a great revival is in store for us this year and we are planning and praying to that end.

Our people (and the pastor) are delighted with our new presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis, and we feel quite sure that no mistake was made in his appointment to this important place.

Our people enjoy the Advocate and "Grandpa" Goza hopes to increase its circulation this year.

We would welcome a visit from the editor at any time. Cordially,

J. EARLY GRAY.

DODSON WOULD STOP
SALE OF CALOMEL

Says Calomel is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place. "Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

Biliousness

WHEN you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. There is nothing better.

Chamberlain's Tablets

YOUR RHEUMATISM

Remove Its Cause by Purifying Your Blood.

One of the most important duties of your system is to burn up certain substances no longer of use in your body. One is uric acid, now generally held to be the cause of rheumatism. It inflames the joints, stiffens the muscles, causes pains, aches, and lameness.

The system is helped to dispose of this troublesome substance, and rheumatism is permanently relieved, by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the one true blood purifier. It is aided in many cases by Hood's Pills, which in small doses are a gentle laxative, in larger doses an active cathartic. A grand course of treatment, economical and effective.

Go to Church Day for the Y. P. M. S., February 27.

February has been designated as Life Service month in our Educational Campaign. The pastors throughout the church have been asked to preach on some phase of the subject each Sunday during the month. It is our earnest desire to have all our young people attend these services; especially do we want to make the last Sunday of the month the greatest day in the lives of our young people. We want February 27 to be "Go to Church Day" for the Y. P. M. S. Let each auxiliary appoint a committee to be responsible for inviting every member to attend church that day. Go one step further. See that every young person of the church is invited to be at the Sunday morning service. It would be well to have special seats reserved for the young people and have them sit in a body. Make it a great Young People's Day in your church. You can do it if you will.

STUDY THE BIBLE!

A Wonderful Message from Martin H. Glynn, Prominent Lawyer and Editor of "The Times Union" (Largest Circulating Daily in Albany, New York), Former Member of Congress, State Comptroller, Lieut. Governor and Governor of New York State.

If one would gain a full appreciation of the beauties of the Bible, if one would feel its solaces and enjoy its soothing effect on the irritation of life, one must begin its study early and absorb it with the passing years.

The effect that the Bible has had upon the world is beyond estimate! "Educate men without religion, and you make them but clever devils," said the Duke of Wellington. And Colton said, "Philosophy is a bully that talks very loud when danger is at a distance, but the moment she is hard pressed by the enemy she is not to be found at her post, but leaves the brunt of the battle to be done by her humble but steadier comrade, religion, whom, on most other occasions, she affects to despise."

That is the great value of the study of the Bible—In it is found the crutch of life upon which to lean when all other props are gone, the key that opens the door to the chamber of solace when all other doors are closed.—Study The Bible!—A myriad of life's lessons can be learned from its pages. It is the chart and compass by which to sail the seas of existence; the cloud by day, the pillar of fire by night by which to guide our feet along the stone-strewn journey of life's tortuous highway. It is the treasury of the world's knowledge, the custodian of the heritage of the ages, the preserver of spiritual balm that heals the troubles of the soul. It is yesterday, to-day, and to-morrow! The reflection of the past, the mirror of the present, the prophecy of the future! It is the scroll of time, the promise of eternity. It portrays the cycle of life with its sorrows and its joys, its cross and its crown. It is old, but nothing outside of it is new. It is a university of knowledge, an aeon upon aeon of experience. Study The Bible! master it—and you are brother to the kings of mind, companion to the choicest spirits of the heart. Master it—you know the history of mankind; study it, you absorb the grandest poetry in the world, master it—and life's tragedies have no terror, life's misfortunes bear no lance. Study the Bible!—catch its spirit—write its lessons on your heart—stamp its image on your mind—and though your feet are on earth you walk with your head among the stars. Study the Bible!—study it and grow in wisdom with Moses, lament with Jeremiah, sing with Solomon, suffer with Job, battle with David, and walk the golden streets with John. Study the Bible! And learn Ruth's inspirational loyalty to the ties of friendship, the claims of kin—"Where thou goest, I go, and where thou livest I live; thy friends shall be my friends, and thy God shall be my God; where thou diest I will die and there will I be buried." Study the Bible!—and with the guiding star of a spangled heaven overhead, with the treasures of the Wise Men scattered around a God-graced crib—their gold, their frankincense, their myrrh—amid the warmth of a friendly breathing kind when human hearts were cold, when palaces sacrificed the distinction of the ages to the humility of a stall—sing, sing with the angels the Celestial Carol in that lowly stable of Bethlehem, "When the snow lay on the ground and the stars shone bright," on that first historic Christmas morn; Study the Bible!—and live anew that thirty years of the life of Him who is the light of the world, the hope of mankind; stand at the foot of the cross with Mary, feel the grief that pierced her heart, and help roll back the stone of the sepulchre on that first resplendent Easter dawn! Study the Bible!—take down from your book-shelf the one your mother used to read and in the golden glow of twilight, when light is giving way to darkness just as life gives way to death, let these glorious lines of Geo. P. Morris run through the corridors of memory's sacred walls—

One in Eight.

Electric railways of the country carried fourteen billion passengers in 1917. To a majority of city folks they are fairly a necessity of life. One mile of them out of eight, the country over, is now in the hands of receivers. This includes some of the most important mileage, as in New York City. This is not encouraging to street railway investors. — (Saturday Evening Post.)

SYMPTOMS WOMEN DREAD

Mrs. Wilson's Letter Should Be Read by All Women

Clearfield, Pa.—"After my last child was born last September I was unable to do all of my own work. I had severe pains in my left side every month and had fever and sick dizzy spells and such pains during my periods, which lasted two weeks. I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound doing others so much good and thought I would give it a trial. I have been very glad that I did, for now I feel much stronger and do all of my work. I tell my friends when they ask me what helped me, and they think it must be a grand medicine. And it is. You can use this letter for a testimonial if you wish."—Mrs. HARRY A. WILSON, R. F. D. 5, Clearfield, Pa.

The experience and testimony of such women as Mrs. Wilson prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct such troubles by removing the cause and restoring the system to a healthy normal condition. When such symptoms develop as backaches, bearing-down pains, displacements, nervousness and "the blues" a woman cannot act too promptly in trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound if she values her future comfort and happiness.

DEVOTIONAL MEETING FOR FEBRUARY 6.

(During the month of February, the devotional meetings are supposed to be along the lines that will be helpful in promoting the interests of the Christian Education Movement. The topic for February 6 here given is taken from the Epworth Era, and the suggestive treatment is taken from the same source.)

Topic: "Every Man's Life A Plan of God." Text, Isaiah 45:5.

Suggestive Thoughts: The great master spirits of the world are not so much distinguished after all by the acts they do as by the sense itself of some mysterious girding of the Almighty upon them whose behest they are set on to fulfill. And all men may have this, for the humblest and commonest have a place and a work assigned them in the same manner and have it for their privilege to be always ennobled in the same lofty consciousness. God is girding every man for a place and a calling in which, taking it from him, even though it be internally humble, he may be as consciously exalted as if he held the rule of a kingdom. The truth proposed for consideration is this: God has a definite life plan for every human person, girding him visibly or invisibly, for some exact thing that it will be the true significance and glory of his life to have accomplished.

Does it seem to you impossible that you can ever find your way into a path prepared for you by God and be led along in it by his mighty counsel? Let me tell you a secret. It requires a very close, well-kept life to do this, a life in which the soul can have confidence always toward God, a life which allows the Spirit always to abide and reign, driven away by no affront of selfishness. There must be a complete renunciation of self-will. God and religion must be practically first, and the testimony that we please God must be the element of our peace. And such a disciple I have never known who did not have it for his joy that God was leading him on, shaping his life for him, bringing him along out of one moment into the next year by year.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE PLANS.

Plans are now being made for the North Mississippi Epworth League Conference, which is to be held at Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., June 9-11.

We feel that our advantage in meeting in Grenada College is two-fold: first, the fellowship, which we will be able to enjoy, one with the other, under the same roof; and, second, the number of delegates will not be limited, but as many as may choose to come from each League will be welcome!

We hope that as many as possible from each League will come to the Conference this year, as we are to have representatives from the Central Office, in Nashville, to instruct in Institute Work.

I am sure those who attended last year at Corinth could testify to the wonderful ability of our Central Office representatives, and the splendid instruction and helpful suggestions which they gave in each Department of the League work. We hope the chairmen of the departments, in every League in the Conference, may be able to attend, so they may receive the benefit of this splendid instruction, for we feel that it would be impossible for them to attend and not be more efficient in the work of their department.

We would be glad if each minister in the Conference who has no Epworth League in his charge would begin to lay plans for one, and send delegates, that they may receive the instruction and enthusiasm which this Conference plans to give.

THE DEVOTIONAL MEETINGS AND THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

I would like to call the Leagues' attention to the special topics for January, February, and March, which will be found on the first page of the Devotional Meeting in the January issue of the Era, pertaining to the Christian Cultivation Program of the Educational Movement. It is very important at this time that we co-operate in this great movement and use these topics in the place of our regular ones.

Read this page in the Era and then send immediately to Nashville for the Manual. Let us do all we can to make this movement a great success.

LEAGUE GROWTH IN MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: "Business is picking up" in League circles, judging from reports received in this office. Last quarter's reports from Seashore, Meridian and Jackson Districts show an increase of two senior chapters each in the quarter, while the first two mentioned have each added a junior chapter. No doubt, other districts have done as well or even better, but reports of their work have not been received as yet.

Not only are new chapters being reported, but increased activity is being evidenced in chapters already organized. To me this means a new era in Epworthianism. We are growing—there is no doubt about that—growing in numbers, interest and effectual work.

We appreciate the fact that you are recognizing our growth by giving us a place in the Advocate, and I trust that Epworthians will take advantage of this opportunity so kindly offered.

Very sincerely yours,

ERMA M. KILE,

Conference Secretary.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess colomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

My Mother's Bible.

This book is all that's left me now,
Tears will unbidden start—
With faltering lip and throbbing brow
I press it to my heart.
For many generations past,
Here is our family tree;
My mother's hand this Bible clasped;
She, dying, gave it me.

"Ah, well do I remember those Whose names these records bear, Who 'round the hearthstone used to close

After the evening prayer,
And speak of what these pages said,
In tones my heart would thrill!
Tho' they are with the silent dead
Here are they living still!

"My father read this holy Book
To brothers, sisters, dear;
How calm was my dear mother's look,
Who loved God's word to hear.
Her angel face—I see it yet!
What thronging memories come!
Again that little group is met
Within the halls of home!

"Thou truest friend man ever knew,
Thy constancy I've tried;
Where all were false I found thee true,

My counsellor and guide.
The mines of earth no treasure give
That could this volume buy;
In teaching me the way to live,
It taught me how to die."

This is the value of the Bible—its priceless value—in teaching how to live, it teaches how to die. Study the Bible!—read it from cover to cover—let its poetry stir your soul, its heroism fire your spirit!

Study the Bible! can it o'er and o'er, until its wealth enriches your heart, its jewels bedeck your brain. Study the Bible, study it—it's the world's greatest book, a style for your pen to follow, a lamp to guide your feet, a stimulus for effort and a restful haven of ennobling repose. Study it, and as you study it, let it carry you back to memories that are sacred and days of hallowed hue.

"So I cling to my mother's Bible, in its torn and tattered boards,
As one of the greatest gems of art and the king of all other hoards,
As in life the true consoler, and in death ere the Judgment call,
The guide that will lead to the shining shore where the Father waits for all."

Mission Home, and on the same night attended the mid-week prayer meeting, where we had the pleasure of meeting other workers in the mission, and were more than pleased with the good spirit that prevailed in the meeting. Our workers, consisting of Mr. McGlasson,
Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs.
Petty, Miss Wright, Mrs. Mann, Alma and Mrs. Annio, are all wide-awake, and enthusiastically interested in the outcome of the Mary Werlein Mission work.

Our services, the two Sunday nights we have been here, have been well attended, and there prevails a good spirit.

We had a rummage sale the second day here, which netted about $18, which goes towards the expenses of running the mission. We were glad to find a new piano, donated by the Werlein Music House, and we are now preparing a little departure from the ordinary, as we expect to put on special music, in the way of a small orchestra at the evening service, myself, wife and Juanita playing horns. You see, you might find in the second chapter of Judges that "Happy is the man that tooteth his own horn, for verily if he tooteth it not it will not be toot-ed;" and then besides this, as an added attraction, we shall endeavor to put on Bible pictures every Sunday night.

There are many poor and neglected people living in this immediate part of the city; many of them cannot, and others will not attend the regular churches, but they will attend the mission.

Mr. McGlasson is the efficient superintendent of the Sunday school, a man warmly admired by the people of the city.

Our Spanish work at St. Mark's is just beginning to open up, and we are preparing to launch a campaign in Spanish, to reach the Spanish-speaking people of the city. We are preparing to scatter copies of the gospel, with invitations in Spanish, so as to get the work before as nearly all the people speaking Spanish, in the city, as is possible.

Our Spanish service at St. Mark's Church, for the present, is held at 4:30 in the afternoon, Sundays, and we would be glad to have some of the brethren occasionally visit our work there.

Our doors at the Mary Werlein Mission are nearly always open, except when wife and I are both out visiting, and we want the people who are interested in mission work to call on us.

CARING FOR OUR OWN.

Of the 839 girls in the Mississippi College for Women at Columbus, Miss., 367 are Methodists. A large per cent of them are from the bounds of the Mississippi Conference.

A more satisfactory church-home than they now have is an urgent necessity. A lot has been secured just in front of the College, and a church building, to cost thirty or thirty-five thousand dollars, is to be erected thereon. The Methodists of Columbus will pay fifteen or twenty thousand dollars of this amount. The balance will have to be contributed by others.

The Mississippi Conference has been asked for $1,250, and the duty of collecting this has been placed upon me. It would be well to collect and pay this amount during the year, although we have five years in which to make the collections. Therefore, I am asking the adult classes of the Sunday schools of the Conference to contribute the amount, and I feel sure they will cheerfully respond. Of course we shall be glad to have contributions from others.

Please send me the name of the class, the amount pledged, and the money, when collected, to Rev. L. E.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

OVERCOMING DIFFICULTIES.

The man who gives up the fight because difficulties confront him, has not learned the lesson that labor conquers all things. On January 27, a fourteen-year-old blind girl was graduated from a public school in Brooklyn. As an infant she was thought to be feeble minded as well as blind, and it seemed impossible that the child would ever develop normal powers. But years of careful attention and painstaking instruction have developed her into one of the most accomplished pupils in the public schools of Brooklyn, and it is her intention to go to college that she may further equip herself for usefulness as a teacher of the blind. If a little blind girl can overcome the difficulties in the way of securing an education, why should strong men ever lose heart?

"MASTER MINDS."

It is quite the fashion nowadays to speak of a "master mind" in connection with the planning of the many crimes that are daily shocking the nation—and this "master mind" seems always to be able to provide a way of escape. We are wondering why it is that the criminals seem to be gifted above all other men. It strikes us that it is about time for the police forces and detective agencies to develop a few "master minds" on their own account.

WE HOPE SO.

One of the great packing companies has announced that 1920 was a very bad year for business, its net profits showing a decrease of $2,574,874. This is terrible! We know what it is for the ledger to show a loss at the close of a year's business, but we have never had any experience with such a decrease in profits as is disclosed in this statement. If we were of an emotional temperament, we are not sure that we could restrain our tears, so great would be our sympathy for those who have seen their profits melt away at the rate of more than two millions a year. To make the picture still darker, the declaration is made that no decided boom is looked for during the current year. It would be almost more than we could bear—if the naive statement were not made at the close of the report that, after all, net profits for 1920 were $4,270,597, against $6,845,471 in 1919, with the prediction that the worst has passed and that business should improve from now on. Poor packing company! Maybe it can struggle along for another twelve months on beggarly net profits of $4,270,597.

ON THE INSTALLMENT PLAN.

After mature deliberation, and after having been urged by Germany to fix a definite sum as the amount of reparation to be made as a result of the war, the Allies have notified Germany that she will be required to pay $55,000,000,000 for the damage she wrought in undertaking to run the world to suit herself. This is an amount that cannot be comprehended as a lump sum—but its payment is provided for in forty-two annual installments, which makes it both comprehensible and reasonable. Of course Germany has thrown up her hands in horrified amazement at the staggering total—but she forgets what her own intentions were in the same direction if she had been victorious in the conflict. It is not unlikely that she would have required of the United States alone as much as the Allies are demanding, to say nothing of the exactions from other nations. It makes all the difference in the world as to whose ox is gored. This amount, huge as it is, will not compensate the nations for their actual economic loss as a result of the war; and all the money in the world could not pay for the millions of lives that were lost. As we see it, this is not at all a case of kicking a nation that is down, but simply an exemplification of the principle that the violation of law always involves the payment of a penalty. We take with a big grain of salt Germany's plea that she cannot possibly pay this amount. Forty-two years is a long time—and we ourselves have paid for things on the installment plan.

SUCH LEADERSHIP!

A news item has been going the rounds to the effect that a gander on an Alabama farm, with his breast full of sympathy and his head full of responsibility, every day leads an ancient and totally blind ox to a nearby pond for water. The gander, so the story runs, walking just in front of the ox, quacks now and then in order that the sightless animal may know how to follow, and when the pond is reached, the gander stands guard while his protegee drinks his fill. Afterwards the gander quacks the ox back to the pasture. This may be a "quack" story; in any event, we have not the slightest disposition to reflect upon the alleged altruistic disposition of the gander. Our only fear is that the leadership of a quacking gander—or goose—may come to be held in higher repute than the facts of the case will justify, even when the biped does not wear feathers.

WILL THEY DO IT?

Mr. Roger W. Babson, a world-renowned student of business affairs whose statistical information concerning trade conditions is accepted as authoritative everywhere, delivered an address before one of the leading commercial organizations of New Orleans last week. Among other things, he said this: "All that we have that is worth while we owe to religion. All our troubles we owe to lack of religion. The future of American business depends on the developing of the soul of man and again permeating labor, capital, and management with integrity, loyalty, and a desire to serve. The need of the hour is not more salesmen, or more foremen, or more technical men, but the need of the hour is to get employers and wage workers to give their hearts to God." We are informed by a friend who attended the meeting where Mr. Babson made this statement that his words made a profound impression on the more than three hundred prominent business men assembled. Mr. Babson was right—the great need of the hour is for all men everywhere to give their hearts to God; will they do it?

"AN ARTIST IN PROFANITY."

"Mr. Charles G. Dawes may be a financier, favorite of banking interests and a valiant figure in the Service of Supply during the war. He may have created some amusement in his testimony to a House committee investigating the war, by indulging in profanity in the presence of women, but he probably disgusted right-thinking persons who heard him as well as those who read extracts of his testimony in the press reports. . . . After reading his testimony, one is surprised that Mr. Dawes' experience in the S. O. S. was gained as a major and by rapid promotion as brigadier general. His language rather implies that he drove a team of mules." The above quotation is not from some church periodical, or from a sermon by a preacher, as might be supposed, but it is taken verbatim from an editorial in the New Orleans Item of last Sunday. We had read, with the feeling suggested by the editor of the Item, the press reports of Mr. Dawes' testimony before the investigating committee, and had wondered how he "got by" with such unseemly outburst. We are glad the brilliant editor of the Item, who, by the way, does not hesitate to express himself vigorously on the side of morality as occasion demands, has given the gentleman (?) in question the characterization he deserves.

A TALE OF TEN.

By Rev. John W. R. Sumwalt.

Number one was just a girl in one of the great industrial centers. Her tiny home was located on a little passageway, called by courtesy a street, just in front of the ever-open door of a stable. Her responsibilities were her mother, her widowed sister and that sister's weak-minded boy. Her assets consisted entirely of the small wage she earned as inspector in one of the city's factories. When her day's work there was done, she swept and cleaned the little home, a task beyond the strength of any of the others.

Regularly and faithfully, with the cheeriest of smiles, she attended the Sunday school and services in the old church down-town. The new preacher soon learned to know her and, when a search of the church record failed to reveal her name, started a quiet investigation. Cornered, she confessed that the church letter had not been brought from the small town to the big city, because she feared that membership in the big church would "cost too much." When she found that the church was perfectly willing to receive what she was willing to do, the rest was easy. The old church letter was resurrected, and she entered formally and sincerely into the membership of the church.

Perhaps a month after her reception she came to the Sunday school one morning with Number Two and said with her smile, "This is my friend. She doesn't go to Sunday school anywhere, and I told her about ours and how I enjoyed it, and so she came with me." Number Two smiled assent and joined the school. Three weeks passed and when the invitation to join the church was given at the morning service Number Two came forward and gave her name.

A week or two passed by and again a newcomer, this time brought by Number Two, who said, "This is my girl friend, who lives across the street from me. She doesn't go anywhere to Sunday school, and I told her of ours and asked her to come with me, and she did." So she became Number Three, and on the next Sabbath brought her younger sister and brother to be Numbers Four and Five. And in the course of a few weeks Three, Four and Five together stood and joined the church.

The weeks and months rolled by, and the day at last came when Numbers Two, Three, Four and Five, with others, stood before the church to take the vows of its full fellowship. The new preacher had by this time become acclimated, and the congregation had grown familiar. In a pew near the pulpit that day he noticed three strange faces. They were those of women in middle life who showed the stress and strain of struggle with the hard tasks of the world.

When the young people had been received, the invitation to join in preparatory fellowship was accepted by these three, of whom one proved to be the mother of Number Two and another the mother of Numbers Three, Four and Five. Thus were added to the growing list Numbers Six, Seven and Eight.

As to Numbers Nine and Ten, who could they be but the mother and sister of Number One, who under the spell of the joy of her church fellowship followed her into that joy?

The sum of it all was that at the end of the year the preacher, counting up the trophies of the year's search, found on his record nine who had entered into the life of the church, because of Number One and those whom she had reached.

Let it be granted immediately that there was not much money in the group. Let it be understood that these were not of the number who would make great leaders. Nevertheless, let it likewise be recorded that these were of those "usual folk" whom the Master loved and whom his church is set to save.

Number Eight used to come to the Sunday evening service with a newspaper package which she always placed beneath the seat she occupied. It was not hard to discover that the package contained her working clothes and that after the service she went to the greatest office building in the city, donned the working outfit and scrubbed till morning. And hers was a typical case. These were they who toiled hard all week, who felt the grind of the world's rough service, who were sick and poor and burdened and who needed Him who has the Cure for Care. And the number of them in our cities is legion.

Long ago ten were cleaned and one returned to praise, while the query naturally arose, "Where are the nine?" Through the long years since, men have read and blamed the ingratitude of the nine who did not return. To-day one is received where there might be ten if the one went to the task as Jesus planned. Is it not time, then, to blame the one for the ingratitude that forgets to go after the nine? And if this is true—where are your nine?—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

WHAT ONE CHURCH IS DOING.

By Jas. W. Atkins, Chairman Publicity Committee.

That a realization of the meaning and importance of stewardship works not only a wonderful, but a rapid transformation in a congregation, has been amply demonstrated in the case of Main Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Gastonia, N. C., which last year led the entire Western North Carolina Conference in finances, and which made a remarkable record in other lines also. This progress has been achieved, too, with less than 25 per cent of the membership really entering into the spirit and meaning of stewardship. Like leaven, however, the idea is gradually permeating the congregation and the forward looking members see, in the not distant future, a church accomplishing things which now may seem almost incredible; and doing so because the individual members have arrived at a realization of the importance and the duty of tithing. With a membership of 950, there are between 200 and 250 tithers in the congregation; of the official board of forty members, over 80 per cent are tithers.

Undoubtedly, the most striking achievement of Main Street Church under the pastorate of Rev. A. L. Stanford, who is now in the third year of his ministry here, is discovered in the fact that last year the church raised the largest budget in its history, and expended $65,000 on buildings and grounds, without taking up a single public collection. In fact, it was this feature of Main Street's work which first attracted attention to it. On the front page of the weekly Bulletin, issued by the official board, stands this sentence, "The Church Where No Public Collections Are Taken." Many wonder how it is done, and yet it is a simple matter when one takes into consideration the fact that the individuals of the congregation have awakened to the fact that they are stewards; that the material things in their hands are held but as a trust for the Lord. What we might do were the membership 100 per cent strong on stewardship, is hard for even the dreamers among us to visualize.

For the benefit of other churches which are thinking along these lines, it might not be amiss to give a brief history of the development of the stewardship idea here and also something regarding the operation of our plan with reference to finances. A firm believer as well as a practitioner of tithing, the pastor, soon after his arrival here, two years ago last fall, began to inculcate the stewardship idea in the members, both from the pulpit and in private. He began on the official board and soon had a majority of that body tithing. He then extended the work among the members of the congregation with the splendid result indicated above.

In the fall of 1919, a member of the official board made the proposition that we do away entirely with the collection plates, put boxes in the vestibule of the church, and depend entirely upon free-will offerings for the budget. There were those on the board who were doubtful—not as to the merits of the plan—but as to the practicability of it. They feared that it would not work. After a full and free discussion, however, a large majority of the board voted for the plan and the others submitted gracefully to the decision of the majority, and entered heartily into the plan. It worked beautifully. From the very start, the finances were ahead of anything in the church's history. All the current expenses were paid promptly, as were all obligations of the church. When the end of the Conference year came, it was found that the free-will offerings had met every obligation and that the treasurer had a comfortable surplus. No assessments had been made, and not a single member had been asked to pledge any amount. At the beginning of the year the treasurer sent out a letter to each member, explaining the plan, stating what the member contributed the year previous, and asking each to do his duty as he saw it in the light of Christ's teaching of stewardship. From that day to the present, Main Street Church has had the most ample financial support in its history. The total amount raised in cash and expended during the year was $95,682.

At the very beginning of the Conference year there was placed in the hands of each member of the church, young and old alike, a package of envelopes, one for each Sunday in the year, and each member was asked to make a regular contribution, the amount of course to be determined wholly by the individual. As an example of the wonderful change brought about through the teaching and acceptance of the idea of stewardship, it may be pointed out that one girl in the congregation who had been giving $5.20 a year, ten cents a Sunday, and who apparently found that difficult to do, contributed last year $98. She simply set aside the tithe of her earnings and allotted a certain portion of that tithe as her weekly contribution to her church. Scores and scores of children, from the tiniest tot on up through the high school ages, have been taught the importance of contributing regularly to their church finances. It is not so much the amount they contribute, as the fact that they do contribute and that they do it systematically. A few hundred children putting in ten or fifteen or twenty cents per week each, brings the total up rapidly. Not only that, but it insures that the next generation of officers in this church will not have to spend, wrestling with financial troubles, time that could be spent to so much better advantage in planning for other phases of the church's activities.

The building program of Main Street is a most ambitious one. It has already been commenced. Its completion may require some time, but the congregation has not, even during the financial depression of the past few months, lost sight for a moment of the ultimate accomplishment of the program outlined and adopted.

A young peoples' building is now being constructed at a cost of $30,000. The main church building, as now planned, will cost when completed, $175,000; the total outlay being in the neighborhood of $300,000. When completed this will be one of the most complete church plants in the entire connection. The buildings are modern in every respect, and contain the most complete equipment for the training of the young especially. In addition to all of this, the congregation of Main Street Church has contributed $10,000 to each of four suburban developments.

While the above is a very ambitious program, it does not represent by any means all the material activities of this congregation. Substantial aid is being given in the development of several very promising suburban congregations, a number of which are also in the midst of building programs. Numbers of members of Main Street, having caught a vision of stewardship as it relates to material things, have caught a wider vision of service also. Hence, many of them have volunteered and are being used to fill in for suburban pastors, conduct Sunday schools and to do any kind of work for the physical, mental or spiritual welfare of their fellowmen in the community whenever opportunity affords or when called on.

In addition to its own building program and to rendering assistance in suburban developments, Main Street's congregation is doing other things that, we think, show that its members have begun to come to a realization of their opportunities for service and their duty. We are supporting two missionaries in Japan, Rev. and Mrs. I. L. Shaver; are educating Miss Blanche Turner at Scarritt Bible and Training School; have an assistant to the pastor in the person of Miss Lola Long, who is one of the most accomplished, untiring and effective Christian workers we have ever known and whose influence among the children especially is of incalculable value; have 165 members of the Conference Brotherhood and promoting the education of ministerial students at Rutherford College through a substantial loan fund established by the Wesley Philathea Class and Wesley Baraca Class of the Sunday school and by setting aside $13,000 exclusively for this purpose.

The facts set forth in the above are not put down in any spirit of boasting whatever; pastor Stanford and his people are devoid of any feeling of vainglory, because they know that they have not accomplished half of the things that could be done were we all doing our full duty. But the recital of these things is given in the hope that it may result in inspiring others to think on the subject of stewardship and to put forth greater efforts to accomplish bigger things for the Master and His Kingdom.

RELIEVING AND CURING FAMINES IN CHINA.

By W. B. Nance.

A recent issue of Millard's Review, published in Shanghai, has a number of interesting news items bearing directly upon the great Chinese famine. One says that the girls in a college in Peking have recently realized more than $1,000 for famine relief by giving a rendition of Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird."

Another sets forth in detail the regulations adopted by the Ministry of Communications of the Chinese Government, governing the use of a large fund realized from a surtax on railway tickets, telegrams, and income from the telephones and the post offices. These funds are to be expended for famine relief in the stricken district in the grading of certain railway lines, the construction of which has been delayed by the war.

The third item of news in this connection tells of an enterprise under the control of the American Red Cross. A fund of $500,000, gold, furnished by the Red Cross Society realized $850,000, Chinese currency, which was increased by the subscriptions of leading American business enterprises in China, to $1,000,000. This fund is being used in the construction of a modern motor road from Tschow on the Tsinpu Railway to Linching on the Grand Canal in northern Shantung. Previous experience in the organization of famine relief work in China has proved the wisdom of using funds to maintain workers on public enterprises and the families dependent upon them, instead of distributing money or food gratis. Such a program, however, calls for a very complete and efficient organization and an organization which commands the services of some persons at least with technical knowledge and skill. The organization of the Red Cross Society has gathered together engineers, business men, missionaries, and a large corps of Chinese assistants which will assure the most efficient possible expenditure of this $1,000,000, so as to keep alive as many persons as possible and leave the most enduring monument to enlightened American charity.

In connection with these famine relief methods, which are attaching the famine problem at its foundations, it is interesting to note another news item in the same issue of Millard's Review. Kiangsu province is cut in two by the Yangtze River. The southern end of the province is delta country, exceedingly rich and intersected in every direction by a network of canals. Northern Kiangsu is dry and rolling, with no canals but the Grand Canal, which passes through on its way to Tientsin. When the Shanghai-Nanking Railway was opened in 1905 it superceded the important steam-launch traffic. Before that time at least half a dozen steam launches, each towing five or six barges loaded with human and other freight, made the trip in each direction between Shanghai and Soochow every night. The railway making the same trip in two hours at no greater cost, soon ruined the business of these launch companies. It did not take them long, however, to adopt themselves to the new conditions. There were dozens of large towns on each side of the railway throughout this delta country, and soon every one of these launches was plying between some railway station and one or more of these large towns off the railway. Thus the opening up of the railway, while at first destroying the water-borne traffic between Shanghai and Soochow, was instrumental in extending steam-launch traffic from the cities on the railway to towns which formerly did not enjoy it. There is now, therefore, rapid and economic means of transportation throughout the canal district on the Shanghai-Nanking and Shanghai-Hangchow Railways. This by way of introduction to the item in Millard's Review, which says that the citizens of Hsuehowfu in North Kiangsu have recently organized a joint stock company and are building motor roads to connect this great city on the Tsinpu Railway with the other large towns in that section, and that the business men of Sutslen have subscribed liberally to this enterprise. American motor trucks have been ordered, and by the time they arrive, it is expected that a modern motor road will be ready for their use, connecting the large towns off the railway with that trunk line of north and south traffic. This indicates that in the development of transportation in China, which is one of the fundamental factors in the solution of China's perennial famine problem, the latest and most efficient means are being employed from the start.

It may also be interesting to American readers to know that a beginning has already been made in China of the use of air planes in the postal service. A young man came with me from China last summer to enter school in America. He expects to study engineering and the particular line of engineering to which he proposes to devote himself is air-craft construction. The reason he gives for this decision is that he believes the development of air-craft for commercial transportation is going to be so rapid that it will be the most feasible solution of a great part of China's transportation problem. Already the first mail line by air-plane has been inaugurated between Shanghai and Peking.

It will be recalled that the American Red Cross Society sent a commission of engineers to China several years ago to study the Grand Canal and to make recommendations for its improvement, so as to render it an effective part of the transportation system and make it a part of a comprehensive river conservancy scheme. One of these engineers took occasion to make a thorough study of the problem of the control of the Yellow River, the overflows of which are a constant cause of famine in China. He has stated recently that the control of the Yellow River, using a large part of the water for irrigation purposes, and entirely preventing the periodical overflows, is a practical problem that need not cost many millions of dollars. When the solution of the present political difficulties produces a stable government in China, commanding the confidence of foreign financiers, as well as of the Chinese people, it should be a matter of only a few years to complete the conservancy works for the control of the rivers, furnishing the water for vast irrigation projects; to build trunk lines of railways, connecting all the important centers; and to link up the important towns and cities with these railways by modern motor roads. When this is done, famines in China should become as much a matter of past history as they have become in India through the irrigation projects and the railway system created by the British Government. The heart of America is responding to the appeal for the relief of the starving in China. It should stimulate us to greater alacrity in giving to know that even in the use of the funds for immediate relief, progress is being made towards a radical solution of the famine problem.

A SUPERANNUATE ON ACUTE INDIGESTION.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

Did you ever suffer from acute indigestion, Henry? If not, you have been mercifully favored by a gracious providence. If you have been afflicted with it, you can sympathize with me. For more than a month I have been so tortured with it that I have felt that I would as soon to live as to die. I have had to cut out all meats, coffee, tea, molasses, hot biscuits, etc. I am living mainly on milk toast and postum. Isn't that too bad? Eating has been one of my favorite pastimes for 71 years, and now to have to stop eating goes mightily against the grain.

I must have spent too much time with Morse last year, eating presiding elder dinners. I may get well now as Morse has quit presiding eldering. Unless Harding or Graves should adopt me, I'll soon be all right.

While I was suffering intensely a friend handed me a clipping I enjoyed very much, wondering meanwhile if I hadn't been that kind of a fool. Mr. Hall, suffering from acute indigestion, called in a doctor, and the following questionnaire ensued:

"You smoke cigarettes?"

"Oh, yes."

"Cigars, too?"

"Yes."

"Pipe may be, eh?"

"Sometimes."

"Drink a little sometime? May be cold pop, cold soda, cold milkshake, cold lager beer, ice cold lemonade, cold cider, maybe some hot tea, some hot coffee, some hot chocolate, lots of sugar and cream?"

"Sure thing."

"You eat fast?"

"I got to, doctor, always in a hurry."

"You eat hot biscuit?"

"You bet."

"You eat greasy stuff—some fry, some boil, some roast, some stew, some bake—you mix 'em

"I'll say I do."

"You eat greasy stuc—some fry, some boil, some raost, some stew, some bake—you mix 'em all up sometime, eh?"

"Yes, everything goes with me."

"You eat pie?"

"Pie is my middle name at mealtime."

"You eat some pickles, some cheese, some nuts, some nice rich cake, some ice cream—you mix all up inside, sometime.”

“Good night! I cannot cure a ——— fool!”

After reading that, I tried to recall the various and sundry dishes that graced the tables when I was running around with or for Morse and Leggett. I am sure it was fine eating everywhere, and I never failed to show due appreciation of the magnificent hospitality of my hostesses.

Maybe I ate too much chicken pie at Walnut Grove Q. C. It doesn't matter where I ate indiscreetly, it was done, and I am now suffering from it.

I have definitely made up my mind to be more careful in the future. I shall be mighty glad if I can get well enough to eat fresh pork. Just to think of the painful privation of holding off from backbones, spareribs, sausage, souse and “chitlins.” It sure does hurt me—you may have all the turkeys, chickens and birds, but give me hog meat. It beats them all.

I troubled the doctors a good deal. They gave me a whole lot of their nostrums. I was very nervous. Could not sleep. My wife was nearly crazy with fright. She feared the worst would come to me. I imagined I had a cancer in my stomach. I called the doctor. He gave me a whopping dose of calomel. I got some more on my own account. The doctor told me to hold up—that enough of a good thing was a plenty. I feared that I was going crazy. My, what a furious time I did have! I am never going to have acute indigestion again if I can help it. I am going to be more careful about my eating hereafter.

I have suffered from many ailments in my day, but the worst thing that ever got hold of me is acute indigestion. I am sure that I'll never live long enough to forget the tortures I have endured for the last two weeks. When I was 32 years of age I was taken down with measles—a very malignant form of it. I was sure I was going to die—I was almost afraid that I would not. I gave my wife directions what to do when the end should come. I told her to be sure to marry again. Don't you think that was disinterestedly generous in me, Henry? Why not marry again? She was young, and as she had made me a good wife I felt sure she would repeat it for some other man who would take care of her. Wasn't that the right way to feel about it? I thought so then; I still think so. That spell gave me a positive disgust for the measles.

When I was 49 years of age I had a tussle with the yellow fever. I felt like I had about forty backs, and that every one of them was breaking. No more yellow fever for me; no, never! When I was 63 years of age I had a carbuncle than which nobody ever had a worse one, I imagine. I had eight doctors at work on it. I persuaded myself to believe that I was in the Job class. You can see from this, Henry, that I have trodden a thorny pathway. I know a great deal about suffering. But of all things with which I have been intimately acquainted in the distress line acute indigestion is the most despicable. I turn my back on it, renouncing and denouncing it. I beg everybody to beware of it.

THE PERAMBULATOR IN KOREAN MISSION FIELDS.

Korea is a peninsula surrounded on one side by the Sea of Japan on the other by the Yellow Sea; on the south are the Korean Straits, and it is separated from the mainland of Asia, on the north, by the Yalu River, which is the boundary line between it and Manchuria. This distance of 612 miles is traversed by the Korean Railway, a modern broad-gauge, up-to-date railroad. Our party left Fusan at 11 o'clock Saturday night and arrived at Seoul, 282 miles distant, at 10 o'clock Sunday morning. We were met by missionaries of the various denominations and immediately speakers of our party were assigned to the various churches for the morning service. It was quite unique to see an audience in which every grown person was dressed in white and all were seated upon the floor. White is the national color of Korea and their churches have no benches in them. The messages were brought to the natives through interpreters, and each speaker had the joy of getting a glimpse of Korean manners and customs, as well as worship, even if they did not have the greater joy of giving; from the handshakes and Christian greetings offered after the service to all the workers, we are inclined to believe that helpfulness was mutual.

On Sunday afternoon a great Sunday school rally was held in the Y. M. C. A., presided over by Baron Yun, who for three years has been behind prison bars, but who now happily has his freedom and is enjoying his Christian activity as much as ever. The singing was one of the memorable things of the occasion. The Korean children, both boys and girls, dressed in their bright colored kimonos with their hair hanging down their backs and eyes sparkling, were a wonderful inspiration as they sang songs in their native language and also in English. Such singing the Perambulator has not heard anywhere else, so wholeheartedly and so earnestly did they put their whole being into the music.

At night the Perambulator dropped into the Presbyterian Church, where a revival was going on. Two thousand people were present and listened intently to the message that was brought by a native country pastor, who was filled with the Spirit. The services had been going on for some two weeks, with four services every day—sunrise prayer meeting, 10 o'clock, 2 o'clock, and night. Upon returning to the sunrise service the Perambulator was surprised to see some 1500 men, women and children crowding the house and taking part in the service. This evangelist did all the preaching himself at the four services each day. We came away with the realization that the Korean Christians were tremendously in earnest about the coming of the Kingdom, and that this minister in particular believed in a full day's work.

Monday we spent in visiting the Christian schools, seminaries and hospitals of the various Mission Boards at work in this center. Everywhere the eye fell there was need of some kind of relief. The Christian forces at work have all that they can possibly handle; and yet there remain many things that should and would be done if the force were sufficient to do it. The schools are crowded and need additional instructors. The hospitals, though undermanned, are doing splendid service. All workers, both native and foreign, are standing by the job and believing in their hearts that they are rendering the biggest service for the Kingdom. Opportunities for service were offered our party at every station.

Seoul, being the capital, is also the largest and most important city in Korea. In it may be found many old palaces and temples, including the Temple of Heaven, the famous White Buddha and the Great Bell. The city was built more than 500 years ago and has surrounding it a great wall 20 feet high. It is entered by eight great gates, each surmounted by a two-story tower with heavy pagoda roof. A most magnificent hotel, entirely modern and extremely comfortable, has been erected there by the Government of Japan for the comfort of tourists. Such things may be had to eat as are readily obtained in the hotels in the States.

The Perambulator had the joy of spending a day at Songdo, a mission station of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This station has a school for boys and girls, kindergarten, hospital, a rescue home for women, and a textile school. All of its buildings are of granite, which is blasted from the mountain-side within two miles of the city. Here it was that we had the pleasure of speaking to some 1200 Korean Christians at night. After this service the Christian workers were asked to meet the Sunday school workers in a special conference, to discuss methods and plans of Sunday school activity; they remained until 11 p.m., and would have remained longer but for the fact that the Sunday school delegates had to take a train and desired to spend a short while before leaving with some of their friends whom they found in this mission field.

The Louisiana Methodists will be glad to know that the Louisiana group of delegates had the pleasure of being entertained in the home of Miss Pauline Randle, where they enjoyed a truly Louisiana meal of fried chicken, rice and gravy, potatoes, hot biscuits, salad, tea and pie. Miss Randle has been in the field just about two years. She is tremendously in love with her work, and is looking forward to a life filled with service. She sent her love to all her friends back home, and said to tell all who could, to heed the Macedonian cry and come over and help them.

The Songdo Mission differs from others in that its textile department is a self-help feature. Its object is to help the worthy poor boys in giving them a chance to earn an education by weaving the well-known Songdo School cloth that is famous throughout the East and has become a household necessity in the homes of the missionaries and other foreigners. Samples of this goods may be secured in the office of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, and orders for them will be gladly received and sent to Songdo. The price per yard is 60c American money. The plant is a two-story stone building, equipped with the latest and best machinery that America can provide. The machinery consists of machines for winding, warping, dyeing, weaving, inspecting and folding fancy cotton goods. This machinery was donated by friends in America through the church. The department is self-supporting and does not have to get money from home for operating. Each year a small profit is made. Its dividend is not merely money, for its aim is to make men. Character and well-rounded manhood are its real dividends. The raw material for such is most abundant. Last year three times as many boys as could be admitted to the department were turned away. At present there are 55 students working in the two sections for 5 hours each and 10 regularly employed men, 8 in the department as leaders or teachers, one bookkeeper and a stockroom man who attends to the mail orders. During last April over 11,600 yen ($5800) worth of goods were sold, which was twice as much as was manufactured during that month. The monthly pay roll is about 1500 yen ($750), the larger part of which is paid for student labor. Every person connected with the department is a Christian. This is particularly gratifying, since there is no requirement to that effect before a boy may enter the department. A new building for the department has just been completed, but the school is in need of further equipment, such as office and stockroom, filing cabinets, office fixtures, steel safe, standard adding machine, a yarn tester, yarn reel, typewriter, letter duplicator, and technical books and magazines. These gifts may cost anywhere from $75 up, and if any reader cares to give one or more of these things or funds to apply towards this equipment, and will send his check for same to the Louisiana Sunday School Association, 829 Maison Blanche Building, New Orleans, La., the Perambulator will gladly see that the check is forwarded immediately to the school at Songdo.

A further stop was made in Phyoong, a town of 60,000 inhabitants, of which 10,000 are Christians. Here the Northern Presbyterians have a splendid plant which meets the needs of the people through day schools, seminary and hospital. Five hundred men and women were out at the morning service in the Presbyterian Church, while at the same hour something like 2000 students assembled in another building and were addressed by some of the delegates. It was here that 3000 Korean Christians came to the depot to meet the Sunday school party that was to stop and hold a convention with them. Through an error, the party arrived a day later than the Phyoong Yang Christians expected them, but for three trains the day preceding these Korean Christians, 3000 strong, were at the station to greet the Sunday school party, the last time coming at night and in a pouring rain. Such is the Korean enthusiasm for the gospel.

THE PERAMBULATOR.

CHURCH UNION IN PRACTICE.

Dear Brother Carley: I am sending you what I think are two good stories for our friends who write and speak on Church Union. They are taken from Dr. Grenfell's (of Labrador) recently written Autobiography.

"One day a father of eight children sent in from a neighboring island for immediate help. His gun had gone off while his hand was on the muzzle, and was practically blown to pieces. To treat him ten miles away on that island was impossible, so we brought him in to a hospital. To stop the bleeding, he had plunged his hand into a flour barrel, and, as a result, the wounded arm had poisoned. We took chances on bone grafting to form a hand, and he was left with a flapper like a seal's; able, however, to oppose one long index finger and 'nip a line' when he fished. But there was no skin for it. So Dr. Beatty and I shared the honor of supplying some. Pat has been a very apostle of the hospital ever since. For though he had Episcopal skin on the back of his hand, and Presbyterian skin on his palm, the rest of him remained a devout Roman Catholic."

"The following year a dear old Catholic lady was hauled fifty miles over the snow by her two stalwart sons, to have her leg removed for tubercular disease of the ankle. She did exceedingly well, and the only puzzle we could not solve was how to raise the necessary hundred dollars for a new leg. While lecturing that winter in America, I asked for any old legs no longer needed, and soon I found myself the happy possessor of two good wooden limbs, one of which exactly suited my requirements. A deceased Methodist had left it, and a Congregationalist had handed it to me, an Episcopalian, and I had the joy of handing it over to as good a Roman Catholic as I know. As the priest says, there is now at least one Protestant leg established in his parish. F. B. HILL.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: At a meeting of the presiding elders, it was decided to make February 6 to the 13th, "Pay-Up Week" in our Conference for the collection from each subscriber of all that is due on the first and second year of their pledges made to the Centenary. (Unless this is collected, the whole subscription may be lost). There must be more activity in the local church to make possible the collection of the pledges. Allow me to urge you, as the pastor, to take the initiative, in order that you may inspire the same interest in the "Pay-Up Week" on the part of the subscribers that they had the week the pledges were being taken, in May, 1919. Would suggest that you talk to your Centenary Treasurer, and ascertain if he is interested; if not, either get him interested, or else get some one in his place, so that the suggestions herewith may be carried out. Use your "Minute Men" before each service to tell the people what is being done with their money, so that they will be interested in paying up, and have the Treasurer to secure enough collectors to help him, that every subscriber may be called upon during that week (the first day if possible).

Make the first day (February 6) a great day—either a special sermon, or a Centenary program. Get as many of the people present as possible, and collect from those present, and, in teams of two, go after those absent, and continue the campaign until all has been collected. Where possible, collect the third year; but the emphasis is to be put on the collection of the first and second year pledges.

Have your Treasurer report to W. D. Hawkins, Conference Centenary Treasurer, Meridian, the result of your campaign, and deposit the money in the bank to the credit of John E. Edgerton, or mail direct to W. D. Hawkins.

Booklet No. 3 was mailed you a few days ago, from which you can get information as to what use is being made of the Centenary money. Praying that God may use you in leading your people to pay up in full for the first two years, that we may continue the wonderful work now being done by the Centenary, I am,

A CORRECTION.

Though the matter may seem insignificant, in the interest of fairness to the good people of the First Methodist Church of Mansfield, La., it should be said that this organization "paid in full" its assessments for the presiding elder and the pastor in charge for the year 1920, the Louisiana Conference Journal statistical table to the contrary notwithstanding.

The duplicate forms which I retained show that I reported: Assessed for the P. E., $422; paid, $422. Assessed for the P. C., $3250; paid, $3250. The statistical table reads: "Assessed for the P. E., $429; paid, $422. Assessed for the P. C., $3300; paid, $3250."

If some one changed the blanks I filled in for Conference, the change was made without authority. If I filled in the form as the figures appear in the statistical table, I was in error.

Mansfield is one of the choicest charges in the State; or in our church, for that matter. No church could be more kindly disposed to the minister who serves it, judging by my own experience.

When these people say they will pay a minister a certain amount, he may be assured that the amount will not be less than this. Brother Bowman has broken into a clover patch. Of course, Dr. Steel is just "naturally entitled" to share all the good things up there with Brother Bowman.

TO THE CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Fellow Workers: When this reaches you, I trust you shall have made a success at your church in collecting all the pledges due for the first and second year, and are now enjoying the consciousness of a task well performed—and rejoicing in the fact that you and your church have done your part towards making the Centenary continue successful.

But perchance you have not completed the task, or you may not have begun; in either case you still have time to "make good," therefore, allow me to suggest and urge you to begin now and complete the work, by Sunday the 13th, but should it require more time than that, take as much out of the next week as is required to do the work.

Please let me have the report of every Treasurer, as soon as the "Pay Up" campaign is finished, whatever may be the result; please report

WHY AN AID FUND FOR STUDENTS.

From the church schools must come the church's supply of ministers and missionaries. That our schools are supplying them in goodly numbers is undoubtedly true. That the supply would be much greater if the schools were properly equipped and if we had an aid fund adequate to the demand, is a fact that cannot be honestly denied.

Rutherford College in North Carolina, with an enrollment of two hundred, has this year a ministerial club numbering forty-seven. Two of these men are volunteers and others are seriously considering the mission field for life service. There are twelve married men in the club who depend almost wholly on their own efforts while in school for the support of both themselves and their families.

The story of one mountaineer will suffice to show the situation which the men and colleges have to face. Dr. Hinshaw, president of Rutherford College, received a letter from a young man stating that he had felt the call of God to preach and, first of all of course, to preparation. He had nothing except a wife and three children and wanted to come to Rutherford College. There was no possible chance for him to find enough work, so Dr. Hinshaw had to refuse him. This happened again the next year. The third year, Dr. Hinshaw, though he saw no way out of the situation, told him to come on.

During the conference the president hit upon a plan. He would furnish the ground and material if the young man would build his own home. The arrangement was made, the home built and the mountaineer's family moved in. This man and his wife are still struggling desperately, with two more years ahead of them before the course will be completed.

This is not an isolated case, but is repeated many times a year not only at Rutherford College, but in numbers of others of our colleges. Isn't it high time that we as a church remedy these conditions and make it possible for all our ministerial candidates to get the training they so much want and need? The Christian Education Movement is presenting the opportunity for you to help. What are you going to do about it?—Bulletin.

The College Will Make Him A Leader of Men

The Christian college can save the boys of Methodism from mediocrity and transform them into leaders of men. And leadership is what the world needs at this most critical period.

Only one per cent of the American people attend college. Yet from this one per cent come seventy-three per cent of the leaders in all sections of our national life. The ninety-nine per cent of untrained people supply only twenty-seven per cent of the country's leaders. The moral is obvious.

Leadership that is Christian—men who will lead the blinded world aright—that is the only salvation for the social order. And the Christian college is the surest source of supply. For it alone injects Christianity and religion into the scheme of education.

"Character is essential to statesmanship; the Christian college is the hope of America, because it is a vital factor in the development of sterling Christian character," said James J. Hill.

Give Them the Advantages They Seek

Today Methodism turns her best young people from the doors of her colleges, because there is no room for them. We could have 8,000 more in training in our schools if we had the facilities. The Church is pursuing a policy of suicide. Instead of producing leaders we are preventing them.

The Christian Education Movement will make a leader of the boy. It will give him the chance he is now denied. It will lift him from the plane of mediocrity and give him influence. It will equip the nation's finest system of schools and colleges, and will keep them thoroughly Christian.

LOOK PLEASANT.

We cannot, of course, all be handsome,
And it's hard for us all to be good,
We are sure now and then to be lonely,
And we don't always do as we should.
To be patient is not always easy,
To be cheerful is much harder still,
But at least we can always be pleasant,
If we make up our minds that we will.

And it pays every time to be kindly,
Although you feel worried and blue;
If you smile at the world and look cheerful,
The world will soon smile back at you.
So try to brace up and look pleasant,
No matter how low you are down;
Good humor is always contagious,
But you banish your friends when you frown.

BAB'S MISSION MONEY.

By Cora S. Day.

"I wish I knew how to make that dollar for missions. Every one in our mission band is going to try to make a dollar as soon as she can," Bab said to Katie, the good-natured maid. Bab and Katie were keeping house while mother was away all day in town.

"Ask your mother for it. She will give it to you in a minute," advised Katie.

"No, we must earn it ourselves," said Bab.

"Suppose I go on a vacation for a day and hire you for my substitute," laughed Katie.

"I'm afraid I couldn't"—Bab began merrily, when she stopped short. "Oh, look, Katie, what a pretty cat! It's frightened or lost—and it's coming into our yard."

Sure enough, a big gray cat was creeping up the path as if it was afraid to walk or run naturally. It reached the porch steps and stopped. Bab went to the door.

"Come, kitty, come here. We won't hurt you," she called softly. She loved all birds and animals and did not want to see one unhappy.

The stray cat seemed to understand that he had found a friend. He came to her timidly; then, when she petted him and talked to him, he purred and rubbed coaxingly against her feet.

"I believe he is lost, Katie—and hungry," said Bab. "Please let me have something for him to eat."

Katie found some bits of left-over meat and potatoes and poured out a saucer of milk. That settled it. The visitor forgot to be afraid. He ate and drank every drop and crumb and then coolly took possession of a soft-cushioned chair for a nap. Bab laughed delightedly.

"He's going to stay with me awhile, anyway," she said.

"It's hard to get rid of a stray cat once you have fed him," Katie said. "I hope your mother will not mind."

When mother came, she didn't mind.

"He looks like a valuable Angora. Some one has moved, perhaps, and he has run away from the new home," she guessed. "You may keep him—and we shall try to find the owner."

But the owner found them first. He knocked at their door one day the next week, asked for a stray cat, identified Bab's find, and told the story.

"We were going home from our seashore cottage to town and had Majesty in the closed car with us. The first time the door was opened he broke away from my wife and jumped out. That was a mile or more from here. We tried to find him then but failed; and I have been hunting for him ever since, all the time I could spare. He is an old pet. We shall be glad indeed to get him back, safe and sound, thanks to your good care."

He took Majesty in his arms and held out a hand to Bab. She thought it was just a friendly good-bye; but he left a little gold coin in her palm and was gone before she could say a word.

"My mission money," was Bab's first pleased thought and cry.

"Thanks to your kind little heart," Katie added beamingly.—The Sunbeam.

"GUMPTION" AND A FILE.

If a boy has any "mechanical faculty," if it comes to him to use tools, let him be thankful. Such a gift of nature—"gumption" it is sometimes called—deserves to be cultivated. It will serve its possessor many a good turn.

"When I was fourteen years old," said a business man, "it became necessary for me to go out into the world and earn my share of the family expenses. I looked about with small success for a week or two, and then I saw a card hanging in a store window: 'Boy Wanted.'"

"I smoothed down my hair, brushed the front of my jacket, and walked in.

"Do you want a boy?" I asked of the clerk.

"Back office," he said.

"I walked back to the little den with a high partition around it, and pushing open the door, which I noticed was slightly ajar, cap in hand, I stepped in.

"It was a chilly day in November, and before I spoke to the proprietor, who was bending over a desk, I turned to close the door. It squeaked horribly as I pushed it shut, and then I found that it wouldn't latch. It had shrunk so that the socket which should have caught the latch was a trifle too high. I was a boy of some mechanical genius, and I noticed what the trouble was immediately.

"Where did you learn to close doors?" said the man at the desk.

"I turned around quickly. 'At home, sir.'"

"Well, what do you want?"

"I came to see about the boy wanted," I answered.

"Oh," said the man, with a grunt. He seemed rather gruff, but somehow the crisp speech didn't discourage me. "Sit down," he added, "I'm busy."

"I looked back at the door.

"If you don't mind," said I, "and if a little noise won't disturb you, I'll put that door right while I'm waiting."

"Eh!" he said quickly. "All right, go ahead."

"When I put my file back in my pocket and turned around, the man at the desk was staring at me.

"Any parents?" he asked.

"Mother," I answered.

"Have her come in here with you at two o'clock," he said, and turned back to his writing.

"At twenty-five I was a partner in the house; at thirty-five I had half-interest; and I have always attributed the foundation of my good fortune to the only recommendation I then had in my possession—the file.—Selected.

JIMMY'S ABSENT GUEST.

Jimmy sat listening to his father and mother as they talked about the hungry, cold, and ragged little children of Europe, the helpless victims of war's cruelty. For two years Jimmy had been an enthusiastic member of the Junior Red Cross, and he knew a great deal about those very children who had aroused the sympathy of his parents, for the school children of America have been busy in many ways providing food, clothing, and happiness for their little friends beyond the Atlantic.

Jimmy thought hard over what his mother had said about its being their duty to do something for the 3,500,000 children in Europe who face starvation. And then came his big idea! He was bubbling over with it at dinner time and they were scarcely seated at the table when he launched into the subject.

"Let's have one of the children here for dinner," he said.

"What children?" asked his mother in surprise.

"Why, one of the starving children of Europe," answered Jimmy. "Don't you remember? One of the children you and daddy were talking about a little while ago?"

"Just what do you mean, son?" asked his father.

"Well, it's this way," answered Jimmy. Suppose you say, daddy, that you would like to have as a guest at our table a little child like me, who is not going to have enough to eat unless we take him into our home. Of course, he won't really sit here beside me, but you can give some money to the relief committee to be put with the dollars others will give to be used to buy food for the hungry children. Then we can pretend that our little child is sitting at the table with us every day until the next harvest provides the food now so badly needed. Won't you do it, daddy?"

Jimmy's father and mother, exchanging swift glances, nodded assent, and then and there his daddy agreed that the plan pictured by the boy's imagination should be put into effect. Inquiry revealed that one dollar would provide food for a starving child in Central Europe for one month, while ten dollars would keep hunger away until next summer.

There is a vacant chair beside Jimmy's at the table each day and he eats his dinner in comfort, for he knows that their little absent guest is no longer in danger from starvation.—Red Cross Bulletin.

THE MEMPHIS CONFERENCE ON EDUCATIONAL WORK.

(Because of its interest to the church at large, we give on this page an official statement of the Conference held last week in Memphis, Tenn. by the leaders of the Christian Education Movement.—Editor.)

Several historic meetings in connection with enterprises of our Methodism have been held in recent years at Hotel Chisca, Memphis, Tenn. It was there the Committee of One Hundred deliberated concerning the Methodist Centenary and fixed the financial goal that then startled the church. Other meetings in connection with the Centenary and the Christian Education Movement have been held there during the past two years, but none more important than the Conference in session February 2 and 3.

A Representative Gathering.

This recent meeting was to give careful consideration to questions that are in the thoughts of Methodist people generally—the details of the financial plan and the date for the financial appeal in behalf of the schools of the church. It was a representative gathering. The College of Bishops was in session, both for special meetings of its own and to have part in the conference. There were present: Bishops W. A. Candler, James Atkins, Collins Denny, W. R. Lambuth, W. B. Murrah, John M. Moore, W. F. McMurry, U. V. W. Darlington, W. N. Alnsworth, and James Cannon, Jr. Our bishops helped much in the Memphis conference, and they are giving themselves to the work of the Christian Education Movement in the field with such devotion to this enterprise as makes appeal to preachers and laymen throughout the church to give their best. The members of the Educational Commission were present for the two days' session and for a meeting in advance of the conference. In addition to these were representatives of other connectional interests, the Conference Educational Secretaries, the Conference Financial Directors, and one or more other representatives from each Annual Conference in the South. The laymen were there in larger numbers than is usually found in a gathering such as this. Every Conference in Southern territory was represented.

The Educational Commission reached a unanimous decision that the period from May 23 to June 5 was the most favorable time for the financial appeal, the eight days during which the church is to make its offering of at least $33,000,000 for its schools. This decision was approved by unanimous vote of the conference. The approval was not because this company of preachers and laymen were carried away with the enthusiasm of the moment. The leaders in the Christian Education Movement and the members of the Commission had been seeking expressions of opinion from men in every section of the church's territory—from laymen who know what is the general financial situation. From a careful study of all the questions and issues involved, it was the deliberate conclusion of the Commission that the period named was the most favorable time for the Every-Member Canvass.

Now to the Work.

With this matter settled, the church is to glrd itself for this task. In due time the message is to be carried down, through Annual Conferences and districts to the congregations and to the individual members. The organization plan and the working plans were explained to the representatives of the various Conferences, and the people will not be kept in ignorance concerning any of the details. There will be carried straight to the individual Methodist the appeal of the schools of the church. The needs of these institutions will be placed before the people who own them and who are pledged to sustain them. The pressing obligation of the church to take up in earnest the work of Christian Education, to prove its faith by its works, will be emphasized as never before.

Keeping Always in Mind.

The conference at Memphis was marked by real spiritual power. Those present were conscious that the Lord was there. The difficulties were not brushed aside, but those men and women faced the real situation as presented by the general financial depression and the threatened moral bankruptcy of the nation. For the church to give up in this hour is to take away from the people the only thing that will save the nation from more distressing conditions. It is the business of the church to hearten humanity in this hour; not to give up and say it cannot be done. But a more compelling reason, as recognized by those in the Memphis Conference, is that until now the Lord has led us in the undertakings of the present quadrennium. We believe he was in the making of the four-year program. We shall not now fail to follow his leading and deny our faith in his power.

We have no easy work to perform. But in the realization of the difficulties the church will come to better understand that its help is in God. We face a new day for Methodism, and with faith in our leader, we shall go forward!

J. S. CHADWICK, Secretary.

THE FRUITS OF EVANGELISM.

According to Dr. O. E. Goddard, there were added to the church last year, as a net gain, 273,000 members. This is the largest number of accessions we have had in many a day, and it is a cause for profound thanksgiving that the tide seems to have turned at last toward the church.

The explanation of this large increase in membership is not far to seek. Last year unusual emphasis was laid upon the work of evangelism, and throughout our borders there were persistent and systematic evangelistic campaigns in our schools and colleges as well as in our local churches. Definite plans for reaching the thousands of people who logically should be identified with our church were developed, and, in many instances, these plans were followed faithfully, with such adaptations, of course, as were necessary to meet local conditions. The results of the carrying out of those plans are seen in the gratifying number of people who have identified themselves with the church.

The possibilities of evangelistic effort having thus been demonstrated, we should enter upon the same kind of work this year with renewed energy and strengthened faith. We have done well, but only as a beginning. There are still multiplied thousands of men and women, boys and girls, who can be reached for Christ and the church if we become deeply in earnest about their salvation. To use an expression familiar in the business world, we need to "go after our prospects." If these "prospects" are not already known to the local church by name and occupation, it is simply a matter of making a community survey to get them definitely in mind. While we would avoid even the appearance of seeming to limit the sphere of operations of a given church in extending its offers of grace, we do think it is entirely in keeping with the highest conception of religious duty to fix a definite goal toward which to work. We do not hesitate to record the number of those who have been reached by our efforts; why should we fear to estimate the number of those who normally ought to be reached by us in a given community?

If we fail to carry on an aggressive evangelistic campaign this year, no matter how many other urgent tasks we are called upon to do, we shall fail to take advantage of what seems to be a providential opportunity such as the church has not had within a generation. "Man's extremity is God's opportunity;" and present conditions are making many people realize that their hope of happiness must be in some one other than man. If we are faithful to the trust committed to us, we venture to predict that this will be a memorable year in our history by reason of the number of those who are saved and added to the church.

READING THE CHURCH PAPER.

Books and papers are made to be read. Some people may like to keep unread books on their shelves purely for the sake of appearances, and some people may like to have it known that they subscribe for many periodicals because they think they will be held in high esteem for their big mail; they may have their reward—but it is an empty one.

We want to see the Advocate secure a circulation that will be creditable to the Methodist people of Louisiana and Mississippi, but unless the people who subscribe for it read it, its usefulness will be sadly circumscribed. We have no reason to believe that it is not generally read by those who take it, but a little emphasis from the pulpit now and then upon the value of reading it might not be out of place. Page 1, 8, and 9 are filled almost altogether with editorial matter and we do not claim very much for them; but there are 13 other pages that have a good deal of interesting and profitable matter that ought to be glanced over at least. Once in awhile there is a single article in the paper that is really worth the price of a year's subscription. We try not to have anything in it that is absolutely valueless.

THE RULE CONCERNING OBITUARIES.

We regret to have to call attention again to the rule concerning obituaries: "Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries."

This rule is not arbitrarily made, as some might think, but is based upon experience. It was in operation long before the present editor came to his position. It is practically the same as is in force with practically all our church papers, and it is inexpedient to change it. Hereafter, therefore, unless provision is made for the payment of excess charges at the time the obituary is sent, the "copy" will be edited to the required number of words without correspondence about it.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. L. Blackwell, the pastor, reports a promising outlook for the year on the Vaughan charge, Mississippi Conference.

The famous "Big Brothers' Class," of Greenville, Miss., is planning for its annual banquet, which will take place in the near future.

We learn from the Baltimore Southern Methodist that Bishop Jno. C. Kllgo, who has been taking a radium treatment at a private sanitarium in Baltimore, has returned to his home in Charlotte, N. C., with the hope that he has been greatly benefited.

Rev. T. W. Pipes, a local preacher of Shreveport, La., passed away recently.

"Our work is moving on nicely—we have a fine people to serve," says Rev. J. S. Maxey, of Ethel, Miss.

Rev. John Franklin, of Anacoco, La., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for fifty years—and he expects to continue to take it "till the end."

Rev. and Mrs. P. M. Caraway, of Sicily Island, La., announce the birth of a daughter, Minnie Lu Nell, on January 31. May God bless the little one!

The new Board of Trustees and Managers of the Seashore Camp Ground and School has been called by Rev. H. M. Ellis to meet at 10 a. m., February 10.

Rev. J. W. Booth, of Keener Memorial, Baton Rouge, La., writes that January was a fine month for that church. Seventeen members have been received since Conference.

"Our new church is not completed, but we held our first service in it on the 16th, using it again yesterday," writes Rev. E. B. Sharp, of Inverness, Miss., under date of January 31.

The attendance at Sunday school at Greenwood, Miss., broke all records Sunday before last, the total attendance being 363. There were 69 in the Men's Bible Class. The offering was $32.12.

According to the report of the pastor, Rev. C. E. Fike, things are moving along splendidly at De Ridder, La. The Epworth League, the Sunday school and the prayer meeting are growing.

The pastor, Rev. R. S. Walton, reports that forty people have pledged themselves to daily Bible reading, and that eleven family altars have been established in our Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, La.

Mrs. N. E. Cunningham, of Wilson, La., in renewing her own subscription to the Advocate, did a beautiful thing—she had it sent to each of her five children. We count this a genuine expression of motherly affection.

"It would not be pleasant to have a friendship of more than sixty years unduly broken; hence I am continuing it by renewing my subscription to the Advocate," writes Mrs. (Rev.) J. F. Evans, of Cleveland, Miss.

Sister T. S. Randle, writing from Gilbert, La., to send a list of eight subscriptions to the Advocate, says: "Brother Roy preached a good sermon about the church paper. I do wish all the brethren would do likewise." So do we.

Rev. D. E. Kelly, Mississippi Conference evangelist, began a meeting at our Queensborough Church, Shreveport, La., on February 2. Thirty-seven members have been received by the pastor; Rev. W. A. Mangum, since Conference.

Dr. C. C. Daniel has recently resigned the presidency of Birmingham Southern College, which position he has filled with credit to himself and to the institution for several years. So far as we know, his successor has not yet been chosen.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, preached a helpful sermon to our West Monroe congregation at the 11 o'clock hour on the last Sunday in January. At the evening service the pastor, Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, received a class of twelve fine boys and girls into the church.

Rev. and Mrs. Paul M. Brown, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Brown, Jr., were welcome callers at the Advocate office on Monday morning. Rev. Paul M. Brown is spending sometime in the city pursuing special studies in connection with the work of the American Red Cross.

Rev. Hugh C. Castles writes from Long Beach, Miss.: "Every indication points to a great year at Long Beach. The laymen are loyal and true and with their co-operation the Sunday school and church attendance has practically doubled, and eleven new members have been received."

A recent note from Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference, informs us that nineteen of the twenty-eight quarterly conferences have been held without a reduction in pastors' salaries, and some increases. The outlook is good for a great year.

Rev. D. L. Griffin, our pastor at Oil City, La., reports that he has just moved into a parsonage which has been bought and paid for since Conference. Plans are on foot for the building of a new church, to cost not less than $5,000, of which amount $2,000 has already been secured in good subscriptions.

A revival meeting was begun at Emory University last Sunday, the preaching being done by Dr. Plato Durham. There is a feeling that this meeting may result in a spiritual awakening that will reach far beyond the university itself, and the committee in charge has asked that daily prayer be made throughout the church for the meeting.

We regret that the report of the Sunday school at Grenada, Miss., did not reach us in time to include it in the report of the North Mississippi Sunday school contest last week. It was as follows: Wesley Bible class—attendance, 39, offering, $2.87; remainder of the Sunday school—attendance, 172, offering, $7.68; total attendance, 211, total offering, $10.55.

Brother W. L. Spinks, who has evangelized for some years in the West, is now located at Brookhaven, Miss., and has some open dates. Any pastor who needs help for his meetings may address him at Brookhaven, Miss. He gives as references Rev. H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, and Rev. W. H. Lewis, pastor at Brookhaven.

A press dispatch from Meridian, Miss., to a local paper, under date February 5, carried the distressing news that Rev. H. B. Watkins, pastor of Central Methodist Church, is seriously ill with heart trouble. We join earnestly with his multitude of friends in praying that his valuable life may be spared for many years to come, that he may continue the work which has been so signally blessed of God.

Rev. R. S. Walton, pastor of Texas Avenue Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., writes as follows: "Aunt Jennie Rudder, one of the founders of Texas Avenue Church, and a life-long subscriber to the Advocate, fell a few days ago and broke a bone in her wrist and probably fractured another in her hip. We request the prayers of the Advocate family for her." We are sure this request will be heeded by our readers.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Mrs. Agnes Jones, Coldwater, Miss., 2; Mrs. T. S. Randle, Gilbert, La., 8; Rev. E. B. THE EGOTISM OF YOUTH.

"If they want us young people to come to church, they must have good preachers."

Such was the remark recently addressed to the editor. It characterizes the spirit of many young people who have thought little upon the meaning of church attendance and are oblivious to its real purpose. If it were not for the good of the young people, we would not be interested in getting them to church. The only benefit there is in going to church is not what is conferred upon the church but what is received from it. People who attend church services are not conferring favors, they are securing benefits. It is this spirit of modern times which organizes many young people in a boycott upon a high school because of some fancied injury or slight. Young people sometimes forget that they do not go to school for the benefit of the school, but for their own benefit.

The culture of the religious instinct is more important than those which are sometimes falsely termed purely intellectual. There is no one thing which young people can do in life which will add more to this culture or to their insight into the meaning of life than the simple habit of attendance upon public worship on Sunday. Because a person likes or does not like a certain sermon is not adequate evidence of its quality. Persons have to study to be able to appreciate a beautiful picture. It takes considerable time and culture to perceive the beauty of so-called classical music. It is no evidence of superiority for one to boast of preferring to listen to "jazz" music in comparison with a great symphony. But, after all, it is the part of the Christian teacher, as well as the college professor to open the eyes of the blind and to give hearing to the deaf, lest youth shall make shipwreck of life.—California Christian Advocate.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition we hereby make the following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.
2. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.
3. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.
4. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.
5. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate in Every Methodist Home in Louisiana And Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.
2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.
3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will be found.

Thy coolness and Thy balm!

Idle Hens Start Laying 104 Eggs, Instead Of 5

Steady Egg Gain Each Week for Mrs. Pierce in Winter Weather.

"The week before we tried Don Sung, we got 5 eggs, from 50 hens. The next week, from a package of Don Sung, we got 72 eggs, and the next week 104. Some of our hens are mere pullets and Don Sung started them laying."

Mrs. B. F. Pierce, R. F. D. 1, Butler, Tenn. Mrs. Pierce selected a severe time for her test—the middle of January. Yet she got the eggs. Your hens can lay well, in cold weather, and we'll prove it.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) is a scientific tonic and conditioner. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health and makes her stronger and more active. It tones up the egg-laying organs, and gets the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather.

Don Sung can be obtained promptly from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer, or send $1.04 (includes war tax) for a package by mail prepaid. Barrell-Dugger Co., 214 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

sion of law for his life work. He became junior member of the law firm of Brantley and Sweatman at Greensboro, Choctaw County, Mississippi. At the outbreak of the Civil War, he enlisted in Company "D," Fifteenth Mississippi Regiment, and later became a member of General Brantley's staff, with the rank of Captain.

In 1866, he was married to Miss Mary Peebles, of Lodi, Miss. To this union two daughters were born, Miss Mary Sweatman and Mrs. W. S. Webster, of Winona, Miss. His wife died in 1879. Later he was married to Mrs. J. C. Kittrell, who survives him. In 1868, he moved to Winona, Miss., and engaged in the practice of law. He became a member of the law firm of Sweatman and Williamson. After some years this firm was dissolved, and he became the senior member of the firm of Sweatman and Trotter, which later became Sweatman, Trotter and Knox. This firm was one of the leading law firms in the State for twenty-five years, until Captain Sweatman retired from the practice of law. He was a public-spirited man. He was called on to occupy many places of trust and honor, in civil and church life, which he always filled with credit. He was interested in any movement for the upbuilding of his city, county, State, nation or church. He was largely instrumental in organizing the Bank of Winona, Montgomery County, led by this strong man, was one of the first in the State to have prohibition. He was also a patron of higher education. He was one of the first trustees of the I. I. & C., and of Millsaps College. It was in his law office at Winona that Bishop Galloway and others formulated the plan for Millsaps College.

Captain Sweatman was a life-long Methodist. He was superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school in Winona for many years. He was a steward and trustee for more than forty years. He was one of the leaders in building the beautiful and commodious Methodist church in Winona. He loved his church, and was a regular attendant at Sunday school and the preaching service as long as he was able to go. He was the president of the board of stewards for a long time and was the honorary president when he passed away. He passed to his eternal reward on Thanksgiving day, November 25, 1920. Had he lived one month longer, he would have been eighty-eight years old. He left the rich heritage of a good name. He will be greatly missed in the home, church, and community. He was always his pastor's friend. He loved his home, family, children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren with a devotion that was beautiful. He was a true and considerate husband; kind and affectionate father; useful and influential citizen; warm and congenial friend; honest and successful business man; faithful and charitable Christian.

This writer found in him a wise and safe counsellor, and shall ever cherish the memory of his pleasant association with him as his pastor. Funeral services were held at the residence, Saturday afternoon, November 27, 1920, conducted by this writer, assisted by Rev. J. A. Hall, a former pastor, Rev. J. P. Anderson, of the Presbyterian Church, and Rev. T. M. Bradley, the present pastor. Interment was in Oakwood cemetery, Winona, Miss.

Many and beautiful were the floral offerings, expressive of love and sympathy.

We deeply sympathize with the bereaved ones and pray the Heavenly Father to comfort them.

J. B. RANDOLPH.

On November 17, 1920, the death angel took from his earthly home Mr. ELMER NALLY WALTERS. His death brought great sorrow to the home and the entire community. He was born, June 1, 1898. He joined the Shiloh Methodist Church at 10 years of age, of which church he was a member at his death. Nally was a bright, good and noble young man and loved by all who knew him. He joined the army and was trained for service at Millsaps. On June 20, 1920, he was married to Miss Dalsy Patrick. He departed this life on November 17, 1920, and was laid to rest in Shiloh cemetery, in the presence of a large congregation of friends and loved ones, who covered his grave with flowers, as an expression of the high esteem in which he was held by the people. His going away is sad. He leaves a wife, father and mother, three sisters, two brothers, besides a host of relatives and friends. May God bless those who are left behind, and help them to see the brightness of the Great Beyond. Loved ones, trust the wisdom of God and pillow your heads on the bosom of his love.

THEY THAT ARE CHRIST'S.

They do not want to shine in the world, or to be rich or popular, or to have their own way and assert themselves, or to enjoy the relish of success. * * * With all simplicity their hearts are bent in moving, doing, suffering, as the spirit of Christ in them may will. They have done with worldliness; they have done with self-seeking; they do not look for an easy life in the world where Christ was crucified. * * * Their faces are set toward God, and the light that glows in them comes from him.—Selected.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

TOPIC FOR FEBRUARY 13.

"The Fulfillment of Life," after G. Campbell Morgan's sermon, "The Fulfillment of Life."

What do we mean by a vocation? "The fact of life is far greater than the mysteries surrounding it. This is not to deny the greatness of the mysteries or the fascination afforded by searching for their solution. The consciousness of personality brings us all, sooner or later, face to face with the question, 'What am I?' 'Why am I?'"

"Life itself is greater than any surrounding circumstances which affect it or any current opinion held concerning it.

"To every individual the great consciousness is that of existence; the great knowledge is that of the nature of existence; the great victory is that of fulfilling the purpose of existence.

"The greatest victory attainable in this life is that of fulfilling the possibilities of personality, and the greatest defeat is that of failure in this direction. Words of Jesus, having another first intention, nevertheless prove this position: 'For whosoever would save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's shall save it.'

"The fulfilling of life consists in realizing to the full the life bestowed. Full-orbed life admits of no atrophied powers. * * * Success consists in living, not in gain; not in the reward of doing, but in the doing."

How are we to find our vocation?

—Epworth Era.

A SERIOUS OMISSION.

To Pastors and Presiding Elders: I have just observed that in the blanks for the Quarterly Conference Minutes designed to conform with legislation of 1918, there is no mention under Question -1 of Epworth Leagues, although the superintendent of the Sunday school and the church lay leader are mentioned with the expectation that written reports will be made, neither of which seems to be provided for in the Quarterly Conference legislation. In the Discipline, Paragraph 108, occurs the question: "Is there a

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 231G Marcellus Avenue, Manassas, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

written report from the preacher in charge on the general state of the church?" The direction following is: "Let this report embrace the following:

- (1) Epworth Leagues.
- (2) Sunday schools.
- (3) Pastoral instruction of children.
- (4) Membership.
- (5) Missions, including Woman's Missionary Societies, and Church Extension.
- (6) Other items worthy of record.
- (7) Plans for future work."

Further, an explanatory note follows, which I quote:

"Note—This report should consist of facts rather than comment. It becomes the written history of the local church. Let it be supplemented by written or oral reports from Sunday school superintendents, Epworth League Presidents, Lay Leaders, and presidents of Woman's Missionary Societies."

Now as there is room in the blank for mention in the same category with Sunday school superintendents and church lay leaders, of the presidents of Epworth Leagues and presidents of Woman's Missionary Societies, who are both mentioned in the explanatory note and both mentioned in the items enumerated under the question, it is evident that the Epworth Leagues and the Woman's Missionary Societies have been disparaged, unintentionally no doubt, yet none the less really and perhaps harmfully, by the Commission charged by the General Conference with the preparation of these blanks. The blanks certainly should conform with the law. In so far as they fail by the omission, the error should be corrected. Whether the General Conference Commission considers itself still officially in existence or not, I cannot say. Probably no correction will be made during the quadrennium. Possibly the fact that the Epworth League and the Woman's Missionary Societies are in the law placed on a parity with the agencies mentioned may have escaped the attention of some presiding elders and pastors.

I am asking of the Connectional editors the privilege of calling attention to this omission in the blanks in order that this injustice to two of the most important organizations of the church may be corrected.

A RECORD OF SIGNAL GAINS IN THE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

In the statistical tables of the Minutes of the Annual Conference for 1919 as one reads across the distressingly well filled column representing decreases a bright exception in one of the tables says that the Epworth Leagues have scored an increase of eighteen chapters and 2313 members. With all our rejoicing this year because of gratifying gains in membership and elsewhere, we have especial cause to rejoice that the Epworth League has scored the largest gain in many years, both in Chapters and members. The number of Chapters has increased from 3476 to 4129, a gain of 653, or 18½ per cent. The number of Epworth League members has grown from 119,331 to 145,393, a gain of 26,076 or 21 per cent.

A LEOPARD CANNOT CHANGE ITS SPOTS

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up, and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

New Method Makes Music Amazingly Easy to Learn

Learn to Play or Sing—Every Step Made Simple as ABC
TRY IT ON APPROVAL
Entire Cost Only a Few Cents a Lesson—and Nothing Unless Satisfied.

How often have you wished that you knew how to play the violin or piano—or whatever your favorite instrument may be—or that you could take part in singing.

How many an evening's pleasure has been utterly spoiled and ruined by the admission, "I can't sing," or "No, I am sorry, but I can't play."

And now—at last—this pleasure and satisfaction that you have so often wished for can easily be added to your daily life.

No need to join a class. No need to pay a dollar or more per lesson to a private teacher. Neither the question of time nor expense is any longer a bar—every one of the obstacles that have been confining your enjoyment to mere listening have now been removed.

My method of teaching music—in your spare time at home, with no strangers around to embarrass you—makes it amazingly easy to learn to sing by note or to play any instrument.

You don't need to know the first thing about music to begin—don't need to know one note from another. My method takes out all the hard part—overcomes all the difficulties—makes your progress easy, rapid and sure.

Whether for an advanced pupil or a beginner, my method is a revolutionary improvement over the old methods used by private teachers. The lesson I send you explain every point and show every step in simple Print-and-Picture form that you can't go wrong on—every step is made as clear as A B C.

My method is as thorough as it is easy. I teach you the only right way—teach you to play or sing by note. No "trick" music, no "numbers," no makeshifts of any kind.

I call my method "new" simply because it is so radically different from the old and hard-to-understand ways of teaching music. But my method is thoroughly time-tried and proven. Over 250,000 successful pupils—from boys and girls of 7 and 8 to men and women of 70—are the proof.

Largely through the recommendations of satisfied pupils, I have built up the largest school of music in the world.

To prove what I say, you can take any course on trial—singing or any instrument you prefer—and judge entirely by your own progress. If for any reason you are not satisfied with the course or with what you learn from it, then it won't cost you a single penny. I guarantee satisfaction. On the other hand, if you are pleased with the course, the total cost amounts to only a few cents a lesson, with your music and everything also included. When learning to play or sing is so easy, why continue to confine your enjoyment of music to mere listening? Why not at least let me send you my free book that tells you all about my methods? I know you will find this book absorbingly interesting, simply because it shows you how easy it is to turn your wish to play or sing into an actual fact.

Just now I am making a special short-time offer that cuts the cost per lesson in two—send your name now before this special offer is withdrawn. No obligation—simply use the coupon or send your name and address in a letter or on a postcard. Instruments supplied when needed, cash or credit.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 13.

Lesson Topic: Christian Standards of Citizenship.

Scripture Lesson: Matthew 22:15-22, 34-40; Romans 13:7-10.

Golden Text: "Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Matt. 22: 37-39.

Teaching Points.

1. Jesus taught us our duty to our fellow-man as well as our duty to God; if we will comprehend his teaching, we shall know what to do.
2. Duties never conflict—we cannot set our duty to God against our duty to the State.
3. The real Christian is always a good citizen.
4. When we subject all our actions to the test of the law of love—love to God and love to man—we shall be much less concerned about our "rights" than we are about our "oughts."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The Four-times-a-year Circuit Sunday School Institute for the Harrisville charge was in many respects the best institute I have been in. Every school was represented and officials from all the churches were present. They gave us a fine hearing and a big dinner. The following officers were elected: W. L. Hilton, president; I. T. Bell, vice president; T. M. Price, secretary-treasurer.

They have set for their goal for this quarter the holding of the Sunday school regularly, campaign for Sabbath observance, support of the Methodist Orphanage, campaign to increase the membership and to hold a Workers' Council. The next meeting will be held at Wesleyana Church, and we are expecting a better meeting there than at the other place.

Our Conference Training School will be held in Jackson, June 7-14. Don't fail to have a representative from your school present. We have secured a strong faculty. Your expenses will be cut to the minimum, and we expect to do all we can to make the work profitable and pleasant.

Don't forget the starving babies in China. Make your checks payable to J. D. Hamilton, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Above all, pray for the work and the workers. JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

If you want a class of teachers taught in your Sunday school; if you would like to help your district by having a Standard Training School established in your charge, say something about it before the other fellow speaks.

If you would like to render your Conference a great service, you might ask that the Wesley Bible Class Federation be held in your church. Big men can and will do big things.

Have you made any plans for observing Sunday School Day? How many of our schools are willing to put themselves in the hundred-dollar class? How many in the fifty-dollar class? How many in the twenty-five-dollar class? How many in the zero class? Oh, God, have mercy on us and help us do something more than we have done to save our people!

Thirteen of the class at Houlika took the examination. Three of the class took the course for the benefit of their own children. Two Baptists and three Presbyterians attended regularly; the two members of the Baptist church took the examination. Brother and Sister Builard brought a young lady in from one of the churches and entertained her during the week to give her the benefit of the instruction. This was a noble deed. After the class finished the book, one and all testified that they had learned how little they knew about teaching religion.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, of New Albany, has started a class in his school. He says his school must lead the other churches in giving religious instruction. A man ought to sit up with his church all night or make it lead the other churches in doing good work. Our people make like they do not want to do the big thing, but at heart they do.

Rev. E. M. Shaw has organized a class of eighteen at Houston. Brother Stephens is to teach the class some time this month. Brother Shaw has ordered the books to give his teachers the opportunity of study beforehand. The school at Houston is doing some excellent work, but the teachers are not satisfied with present attainments.

We held a service at Vardaman—seventeen teachers enrolled and Brother Murf means to get one or two teachers from each school on his circuit to join the class and thus reach every school in one week. As has been said, we have five men who have volunteered to teach one or more classes. We could easily use fifteen more in the next three months.

Brother Guerry, on the Shuford circuit, has a class in waiting for some one to teach. This is the most encouraging news we have ever had. It means that we are to have schools in the country that will do more for the constant and effective building of the kingdom of God. The best of all is, God is with us in this work.

Teachers, do you realize that you have as your privilege the making, in a large measure, the future fathers and mothers, the teachers, preachers, and other leaders of a great church? During this month let us pray God to call three hundred of our young people into definite religious service. Read again the address of our bishops on Life Service and ask yourself the part you are to play. There is no need to fuss at the world because of its undone condition; we must help to remake our share of it.

REV. W. A. WILSON AT WEST POINT.

After much hesitation I finally decided to ask our newly appointed Conference evangelist, Rev. W. A. Wilson, to come and help me in a revival effort at West Point. He kindly consented, coming to me on the 16th of this month, and he has been holding two services daily ever since. Our congregations grew from the very first service, reaching the high-water mark and going beyond Sunday night. We had to move out of our building and ask the loan of the large Presbyterian church here in order to take care of the crowds, but even that failed to hold them Sunday night, notwithstanding the extra benches and chairs brought in. Cates, Cuiepper, and Morrison have held meetings here, but I am told that the crowd that came to hear Wilson Sunday night beat anything they had ever had here. At this writing, the latter part of the second week, the crowds are still coming and we have had several professions and the interest still increasing.

I do not believe our Conference did a wiser thing in its sessions at Charleston than when it decided to put Brother Wilson in the field for evangelistic work. He is a wonder. Convert-

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT NOTES.

On invitation of the Shreveport Methodist Men's Club, Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus, of Chicago, recently visited Shreveport and made two great addresses at First Church.

On invitation of the Shreveport Ministerial Association, Dr. E. L. House, a Congregational preacher of national reputation both as author and public speaker, delivered a series of twenty-six popular lectures and sermons in Shreveport that received an unusually wide hearing. At each lecture the auditorium of the First Baptist Church was taxed to its capacity and at the closing service the lecture was delivered twice in succession to entirely different audiences. Dr. House is orthodox, evangelical and has great intellectual resources. He is a believer in the healing ministry of the church, and his lectures have been a splendid antidote to the many popular errors on this subject. He has been a deep student of psychology and has shown in a brilliant and effective way the aid of this science in the interpretation of Christian doctrine and experience. Both Dr. Gunsaulus and Dr. House were originally Methodist preachers.

Both First Church and Noel Memorial have purchased moving picture machines for the purpose of providing wholesome and instructive entertainment for young people. This innovation is condemned in some quarters as partaking of a worldly character, but in my judgment it will be an invaluable adjunct in the social and educational work of the church and opposition to it is as unreasonable as former opposition to musical instruments in a church.

The Caspiana congregation on the Bayou La Chute charge are planning to erect a beautiful church edifice in the near future as a memorial to Mrs. W. J. Hutchinson.

Brother A. L. Harper, with his family, is enjoying one of the neatest little parsonages in North Louisiana. The Ringgold church remodeled their old parsonage last year and are rightly proud of the result.

Brother Schuhle is much encouraged with the outlook in Coushatta. A liberal salary has been assessed and there are many indications of interest.

Brother Clegg, who succeeded Brother Schuhle at Logansport, has received a most hearty response in the congregation and the work is progressing most favorably.

Rev. Dan Kelly is assisting Rev. G. D. Anders in a revival service at Longstreet, which is said to be one of the best in the history of the town. Brother Kelly will soon assist in a meeting at Queensborough.

Rev. T. W. Pipes, local deacon, formerly a resident of Ruston and for some years a resident of Shreveport, passed away on Monday, January 24, and was buried from the Texas Avenue Church, of which he was a member.

R. H. WYNN.

FROM COURTLAND, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We are entering our third year as pastor of the Courtland circuit. As a whole, we are serving a very loyal people. They gave us a very hearty reception on our return for this pastoral year. We thought it was good of them to ask that we be returned for another year before we went to Conference; then we thought it nice of them on our return to tell us, both publicly and privately, that they were glad that we were sent back for another year. Then, too, all along they were sending us such things as spareribs, sausage, potatoes, etc. But when Christmas arrived the people of Courtland and Chapel Hill sent in things by "wholesale" and "retail." They sent such things as ham, sausage, lard, butter, canned goods in abundance, sugar and almost everything. They did not forget to enclose a few checks for spending money. Well, we just had a big Christmas; and we have enough of some things to last a long time yet. We could not express our gratitude in words if we were to try, but we hope to live before the people in such a way that we will show our appreciation of such kindness, and be a help to the cause that we represent.

With the co-operation of the Woman's Missionary Society we are re-papering the parsonage. They are furnishing the material and the preacher and his wife are doing the work.

We have been able to hold but few services in country churches this year, owing to so many rainy Sundays, but we have been busy all the time trying to do something that would be uplifting to the charge.

There is a great opportunity here at Courtland. The Panola County Agricultural High School is located here, which is one of the largest and best in North Mississippi. The seating capacity of our church is taxed to its limit at almost every preaching service. Sometimes people have to go away because they can't be seated. We need some Sunday school rooms so badly. We are hoping and praying that we may have some after awhile, when money gets a little easier.

We are praying and hoping that great things may come to pass this year, and we intend to work harder than ever before to see our prayer answered and our hope realized.

W. D. BENNETT, P. C.

FROM WEST MONROE, LA.

Dear Advocate: My predecessor, Rev. J. R. Roy, held a meeting in 1919, in Clalborne schoolhouse, and received eleven members into the church, placing their names upon the roll of West Monroe membership. Last year we increased that number to twenty-eight. About two weeks before Conference we organized them into a separate church. When we went to Conference, timber stood on the ground where now stands a beautiful little church with a seating capacity of 250. The cost of the building completed is $2400. They owe nearly $600. That is quite an achievement for this little band during these pressing times. The Church Extension Board gave them $50. Great credit is due J. H. Cloyd and his committee. They have a W. M. S., and start well. Yesterday was Opening Day, with dinner on the ground. There were present about three hundred or more people. I had the pleasure of preaching the first sermon, and Rev. E. K. Means preached in the afternoon. It was a fine day. Cordially,

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

"Red Letter" Days For Baton Rouge.

February 22, 23 and 24 will be "red letter" days for Baton Rouge and for over one hundred and twenty representative women of the State as they gather at the capitol for the annual meeting of their splendid Conference Missionary Society.

Mrs. N. E. Joyner, chairman of the entertainment committee, writes us, asking that the word be passed on to the auxiliaries, of how they are making ready for the delegates, expecting them to arrive, in as many instances as possible, on the afternoon of the 21st. Mrs. Joyner asks that all who are coming to Baton Rouge will study their railroad schedules and notify her, at 531 Florida Street, just as soon as they can possibly do so. The women there are justly proud of their society and will welcome the opportunity for contact with the State-wide organization and with leaders of the woman's work.

Mrs. Luke Johnson, chairman of the Council Commission on Race Relationships, will be a guest of the Conference and will discuss the question of present interest to us—Our work for the Negro.

We hope that besides the regular delegates there will be many day-guests present, motoring from all nearby towns and cities, bringing with them eager interest and hearts ready for an overflow of good fellowship and enthusiasm.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

How Hazlehurst Auxiliary Nearly Doubled Her Membership.

Dear Mrs. Snelling: If you can spare the space in our department, I want to tell something of the plans and activities of our auxiliary.

We are beginning the new year greatly encouraged over the interest shown by the entire membership.

The second Monday afternoon of each month is devoted to mission study. We have finished the "Gospel of John, the Greatest Book in the World," and are just beginning "Women and Missions."

Every fourth Monday we have a social meeting at the home of some member.

Mrs. J. S. Wise, our president, entertained the auxiliary on last Monday when a most delightful and profitable afternoon was spent.

The members were notified in advance that the price of admission would be the bringing of a new member, and as a result, the enrollment was increased from 45 to 85.

One pleasant feature of the entertainment was the matching of cut up pictures of scenes and faces from mission lands. After the fun and excitement of getting the couples "matched" had subsided, there followed interesting accounts and latest news from the various mission fields from which the pictures were taken. This brought before the audience in a concrete way, the work that is being done in these fields.

The annual pledge was taken, which amounted to $175.

We are planning to make this the best year in the history of our work.

ANNIE CARUTHERS,
Supt. Study and Publicity.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Annual Meeting.

The Ninth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of North Mississippi, will be held in Okolona, Miss., March 8-11, 1921.

Mrs. J. W. CONGER, Pres.
Mrs. G. C. JONES, Sec.

Children's Department.

"Three Cheers for our Juniors!" The record for 1920 shows much progress, and proves faithful work has been done. Despite the financial depression, the report for the fourth quarter was good, and for the year there is a very substantial financial increase. Perhaps the greatest increase has been in mission study classes, and since mission study is foundation work, this is exceedingly gratifying. Seventy-two new circles were reported, while the preceding year there were forty-eight.

The following are Honor Roll societies: Amory, Nettleton, Okolona, Tupelo, Shannon, Artesia, Columbus Central, Starkville, Corinth, Iuka, Louisville, Holly Springs, Holcomb, Grenada, Byhalia, Charleston, Hernando, Como, Sardis, Senatobia, Tutwiler, Itta Bena, Greenwood, Dublin. There are others perhaps, for many failed to report on this important item. The fact that all have not reported makes it impossible for me to give the societies making the highest number of points.

The success of the past year is due largely to the faithful and efficient Junior Superintendents. Surely no other Conference has a nobler, more consecrated band of Children's Workers. Too much can not be said of their faithfulness and loyalty.

A hearty welcome is extended to all newly elected superintendents of the Conference. With the new Junior Hand-book as a guide, no one need be at a loss as to how to carry on the work of a children's society. Both new and old superintendents should study the Hand-book carefully. Greenwood ordered seventy-five extra copies of the leaflet, Mistress Mother. Greenwood expects to mail this leaflet to every mother in the church. This should result in great things for the Baby Division.

From the encouraging letters that have come to me, the indications are that all the Juniors of North Mississippi expect to make the adults sit up and take notice in 1921. The outlook was never more encouraging.

A great work was done in 1920. Here's to a greater work in 1921!

CORINE ROGERS.

LEARN

One in Eight.

Electric railways of the country carried fourteen billion passengers in 1917. To a majority of city folks they are fairly a necessity of life. One mile of them out of eight, the country over, is now in the hands of receivers. This includes some of the most important mileage, as in New York City. This is not encouraging to street railway investors. — (Saturday Evening Post.)

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes. To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Ousts Rheumatism.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expels the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. pectation. Who said the "Delta people" cared nothing about the church, anyway? Well, you can tell them that it isn't true in every case. Regardless of the financial depression, the people here have started out with renewed interest in every department of the church work. The Sunday schools are doing splendid work, and there is an increasing attendance each Sabbath. The Woman's Missionary Society is well organized in Anguilla, and the good women have pledged themselves to assist the pastor in every way possible to the upbuilding of the spiritual condition of the community. I wish you could read the papers which were read and adopted at the last meeting of the Society; e. g., on subjects like the following: "How to make Our Auxiliary A Better One," by Mrs. W. W. Ellis; another, "How The Missionary Society Can Help The Community," by Mrs. Green; still another, "How The Missionary Society Can Assist The Pastor," by Mrs. Chisholm, all of which were excellent indeed, and carefully prepared. Space forbids the giving of these splendid papers for publication, but an extract from one will give you an idea as to how the spiritual pulse of our women is beating here in Anguilla. Paragraph 2, in one paper reads like this: "How can we assist the pastor in his pulpit duty?" Let him fail here and he can scarcely be a success in any other line of his work. To be a success in the pulpit the pastor not only must have experimental religion, and be filled with the Spirit, but must have thought in his sermon and force with which to deliver his message. All of this, however, demands time; time to agonize with God for the filling of the Spirit; time to think and carefully weigh the import of his words; time to absorb the truths which he has prayed down and picked up for his message; time to rest that he may husband his nervous resources, so that when the hour comes to deliver the message he will not be a 'spent force.' But time is the one thing which the faithful pastor does not have; hence the question, 'How can the Missionary Society help the Pastor?' deserves much prayerful thought; and as some one has said, the question is answered by the three p's—Prayer, Presence, and Purse." Now don't you think, Brother Carley, the above is worth while? Well, to say the least thing about the work here, we are well pleased. The stewards have made the assessments for the pastor at $2000 minimum, and are paying monthly the assessment. They tell me the assessment levied by the board to each member was in all cases agreeable, and in some instances it was raised by the individual.

With best wishes for the Advocate, I am,

Yours very truly,
C. A. SCHULTZ.

FROM EDEN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Tidings from Eden! The people here received us kindly. They had many good things in the pantry for our benefit. On January 23, just after we had finished dinner, our parsonage caught fire and quite a hole was burned in the roof. But for the heroic work of our townspeople, we would have been without a home. The men came in Monday and made good the burned place, so everything is as it was before, with the exception of a new strip of shingles up on one side and on top of the house.

Our people have been very thoughtful of us, and we are expecting great things to happen on the Eden charge this year.

HOW WOMEN AVOID SURGICAL OPERATIONS

Some Are Extremely Necessary, Others May Not Be

Every Woman Should Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYBOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Vermont woman adds her testimony to the long line of those fortunate women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after it had been decided an operation was necessary:

Burlington, Vt.—"I suffered with female trouble, and had a number of doctors who said that I would never be any better until I had an operation. I was so bad I could hardly walk across the floor and could not do a thing. My sister-in-law induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it certainly has helped me wonderfully. I keep house and do my work and have a small child. I have recommended Vegetable Compound to a number of my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. H. R. SHARON, Apple Tree Point Farm, Burlington, Vt.

In hospitals are many women who are there for surgical operations, and there is nothing a woman dreads more than the thought of an operation, and the long weary months of recovery and restoration to strength if it is successful.

It is very true that female troubles may through neglect reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. In fact, many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

THE REVIVAL AT EPWORTH.

Dear Brother Carley: Epworth has just closed a series of revival meetings which have been in progress from Sunday, Jan. 9, until Tuesday, Feb. 1. Rev. W. C. Childress opened the meeting for us with an appropriate and helpful sermon; on Monday Rev. Leon I. McCain came to us and preached every night except one Saturday night, until the 28th and twice on Sundays. He also gave four very fine story sermons to the children in the afternoon.

The meetings were well attended, and there was some good work done. Many of our people took part in altar services, some were reclaimed, some converted, and the whole church revived—that is, those who came were revived. Twelve were taken into the church Sunday morning the 30th, six by vows and six by certificate. There are more to follow. I am to baptize two and receive at least three into the church next Sunday morning.

Brother McCain preached with the old-time vigor and power. One person said he called a spade a spade. Another said he made a conscience for those who did not have one. God alone knows how much and lasting good has been done.

By his preaching Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Brother Childress won the hearts of our people, and will always find a hearty welcome whenever he can come to us.

We are always glad to have Brother Snelling with us and to hear him preach. He came out last Sunday morning and preached a fine sermon and administered the Sacrament to practically the whole congregation.

We had a large and interesting prayer meeting last Wednesday night and are looking for a larger one this week.

Our first quarterly meeting will be held to-night with a full report along all lines for the first three months.

JAS. E. SELFE, Pastor.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

When I was pastor at Berkley, California, I became acquainted with Rev. A. M. Shaw, who was then pastor at Oakland, California. I found him to be a big-hearted Methodist preacher and one that had the fire of a holy enthusiasm for the souls of men. As he was from Arkansas and I from Louisiana, we had a fellow-feeling for each other, out in the West. His wife and children loved to entertain and frequently in our social gatherings we would speak of the Sunny South and sing the good old songs of "Dixie Land."

I secured Brother Shaw to help in a revival meeting at Berkley. He preached a series of great sermons that gripped the hearts of our people. On Sunday afternoon at the Y. M. C.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

A. building, to a full house, he preached a soul-stirring sermon to "Men Only." This is a sermon that ought to be heard in many of our great centers where a large crowd of men can be gathered.

Last year Brother Shaw transferred to our Conference from Arkansas and was stationed at Trout and Good Pine. Here he found himself congenially situated in the midst of friends from his native State. The progress at Trout and Good Pine has been phenomenal. They have two good Sunday schools, two fine congregations and all financial claims were met this past year. For the coming year they have assessed $2500 for the preacher-in-charge.

When I met Brother Shaw at the District Set-up Meeting at Alexandria he told me that he would celebrate his twenty-fifth anniversary on January 22, and Sister Shaw and the children wanted me to be there. I told them, sure, count on me. So on January 22, sure enough, I was on hand to congratulate Brother and Sister Shaw on their silver anniversary.

I found the Social Hall beautifully decorated in a well blended color scheme of pink and white, with ferns, native pine and flowers artistically arranged with a large bell in the center of the room under which the bride and groom of twenty-five were again to greet their friends. The introductory words were spoken by the writer. Congratulations were in order, then the happy couple were showered with many valuable presents coming from their numerous friends.

The refreshments of the evening carried out the color scheme of pink and white. The toastmaster was Mr. O. F. Wyman, who is Sunday school superintendent and chairman of the board of stewards, and who, in most excellent manner, discharged his task. Throughout the evening charming music was rendered by Mr. McIntyre and his well trained orchestra. This was indeed a great occasion and one that will be long remembered by those in attendance.

I am glad to greet Brother and Sister Shaw as workers in Louisiana. They have spent all of their married life in the itinerancy, having had many and varied experiences, but as they look back they can see how God has blessed them in building up his Kingdom and enabled them to rear a most excellent family of Christian children. Blessings upon them—and may they live to enjoy their golden jubilee!

ALBERT S. LUTZ.

FROM GLOSTER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Here I come with that "report from the field" you asked for. Will say, first, that our Sunday school is about the most encouraging feature of our church work just now. We had a Sunday school Christmas tree in our church, which proved an impetus. New teachers have volunteered their services as the school grew. The above is relative to Gloster. Liberty is moving right along, too. In the number enrolled, interest, and average attendance, these two schools keep mighty close together. We have just these two Sunday schools on our work this year, since Mt. Vernon Mission is not a part of this work now. The Ladies' Aid at Liberty has recently been converted into a Woman's Missionary Society. They are few in number at Liberty, but a mighty faithful and loyal crowd of ladies. The society at Gloster moves right on, too. Some more interest is being manifested in our prayer meeting at Gloster. Liberty's finding it necessary to have their prayer meeting the same night we have it at Gloster interferes with my going to Liberty.

We had the largest crowd of officials and other interested men at our first quarterly conference that I have had in three or four years. I am glad to say that Brother W. W. Simmons was able to attend and give wise counsel and encourage all of us. He is still keenly alive to every interest and movement in the church, and helps this little preacher out a lot. Brother J. R. Jones preached three times during the quarterly meeting visit, twice here at Gloster and once at Mt. Carmel. He did us no little good. He is certainly a fine fellow to have in your midst. He preaches the gospel with no uncertain sound. Rev. N. S. Loftus was an attendant at our quarterly conference. I will say in this connection, that Brother Loftus is moving along fine on Mt. Vernon charge. He resides here in Gloster, but easily moves in and out among his parishioners. His official family is taking right hold of the work. I predict a good year for Brother Loftus and Mt. Vernon circuit.

I am having a mighty fine time visiting my people in their homes, reading the precious Word, and calling upon the Lord. I just know Paul was wonderfully blessed as he "taught from house to house." Am trying to preach some, too. My experience is sweeter. My faith is strengthened. My hopes are brighter. I feel pretty much like Paul felt as he was writing to the Philippians: "I therein do rejoice, yea and I will rejoice." Amen! Everybody pray for me, and love me too, if you can!

Secure in the Lord,
J. A. WELLS.

FROM BERNICE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I served the Bernice charge in 1912, and often cherished pleasant memories of these good people, not dreaming I would repeat myself. But to my surprise when the appointments were read at De Ridder, I was read out for Bernice circuit. We found the same big-hearted people we had eight years ago. I will put them against any bunch when it comes to being loyal to their pastor and knowing just how to treat him and his family to make them know they are appreciated; more than once has the pantry been replenished, all unexpectedly to us. Just yesterday two ladies stopped, came in and told me there was a man out in the car that needed my assistance in getting out. I looked out with earnestness to see him and they remarked, "He is low down in the car." I then took the hint, and went and helped him out.

Later in the afternoon a car stopped at the gate, and a gentleman called for me who knows how to do things tactfully, and, after the passing of a few pleasant words, he handed me a little piece of paper neatly folded and said, "I had this fixed out for you some few days ago, but it got misplaced somewhere. This is not to be charged against you; use it in helping the girls in school."

Brother Carley, you can't imagine how I felt when I looked and saw what it stood for. I can never forget such kind remembrances. I wonder if I have merited them. We are looking for a good year. I never look for any other kind.

Brother Dodson has been up and made a favorable impression on my people. We like him very much; in fact, Brother Carley, I have never had a bad presiding elder. They are all good and better.

My meetings are scheduled and most of my help secured, and I am already engaged for some work during the revival season. I will do more for the Advocate as I can.

Sincerely yours,

J. C. PRICE.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

OUT OF THE INFINITE.

Man does not draw his strength from material resources or worldly places—his help comes from the spiritual realms that stretch beyond the stars. In a vain endeavor to satisfy his longings, he reaches out his hands for silver and gold and all precious things; but his soul stays hungry until he opens his heart to the silent yet powerful influences that come streaming upon him out of the infinite. Man must live in the midst of the tumult and strife of contending passions and struggling desires, but his retreat is in "the shadow of the Almighty." The soul that will not enlarge itself with the bounty of heaven will ultimately perish as do the bodies of those who have no food.

DEPRAVED TASTES.

A sad commentary upon the level upon which many people live is the fact that the announcement of an entertainment that presumably will appeal to the sensual passions will draw a crowded house, while a high-class artistic performance will hardly pay expenses. If it were not still somewhat fashionable to be seen at a good concert, it is doubtful if the most renowned virtuoso could make a living by his art.

THE SINNER WILL SUFFER.

An unusual thing happened in Louisiana recently—the sheriff of one of the parishes forgot that a Negro prisoner was to be hanged on a certain date, and it did not occur to his mind that the unpleasant duty was to be performed until nearly a week had passed. The sheriff's explanation—and a reasonable one it is—was that the criminal had been in jail in another parish for three years and there was nothing to remind him that the day of execution had arrived. It seems to be pretty well settled that the hanging will not take place at all, and there is a possibility that the convicted man will eventually be pardoned, in the light of a new examination of the testimony upon which he was convicted. In any event, he owes his life to the fact that an officer of the law forgot. But the sinner against God will have to pay the penalty of his sins—the All-seeing Eye never overlooks the record that is written. Technicalities do not enter into the administration of divine justice. When we stand before the judgment bar of the Almighty, even the intents of our hearts are revealed—and the sentence passed is in keeping with our deserts. The record of a man's life stands as it is written—and there are no lapses of memory on high.

INDEFENSIBLE AT ANY TIME.

Very properly, the police authorities of New Orleans are waging vigorous war against the operators of "handbooks," the device by which gambling on horse races is carried on in many places in the city, it is claimed. In connection with this expressed determination to put the operators of these devices out of business, we notice that some of the local newspapers are advancing the argument that a forty-day racing season is enough for New Orleans, and that certainly all gambling on the races should be stopped when the season closes. We agree with the proponents of racing that a forty-day season is enough—in fact, it is just forty days too much. But if it is wrong for the people of New Orleans to bet on races in Mexico, or Cuba, or somewhere else in the United States, why is it not wrong to bet on them at home? And if it is wrong to gamble on the races by placing bets downtown, why is it not wrong to bet on them at the track? If any question has been settled beyond the shadow of a doubt, it is that gambling is economically, as well as morally, wrong; and it has been as definitely established that horse racing without gambling is an impossibility. A thing that is essentially wrong, is wrong anywhere and at any time, and it should have no countenance in law. It seems to us that the time is at hand when so monstrous an evil as horse racing should be absolutely prohibited, and we hope the General Assembly of Louisiana will pass a law against it that will stick in any court in which it may be tested.

LAX SOCIAL LAWS.

It is not surprising that there are serious criticisms throughout the land upon the low moral standards that seem to prevail in social circles. For a long time modern styles in dress have come in for severe condemnation on the score of at least semi-indecency, and those who have persisted in following extreme fashions have given much aid and comfort to the enemies of righteousness. The inevitable results of such disregard of simple propriety is seen in the fact that in many places even high school boys and girls are engaging in social diversions that have required attention from parents and school authorities. Unfortunately, it is true that parents, in many cases, are not able to control their children, a condition having arisen in which many fathers and mothers are helpless in undertaking to direct the social activities of the community. The problem is serious enough to demand concerted action by all those who are concerned for the moral welfare of the rising generation. The ineradicable social instinct of young people will inevitably find expression in harmful ways if wholesome recreation is not provided by those upon whom the responsibility of rearing children rests. There is always a vicious element in society that will hold in contempt moral restraints; but we believe that the average young person will follow right leading. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and if parents will enter into the social life of their children with the determination to keep them pure as well as happy, they will save themselves many a heartache.

THE SMILE HELPED.

This interesting item recently came to our notice: On February 1, Mr. George T. Wilson became an active vice president of the Harriman National Bank, of New York. Forty-five years ago he became an office boy for a great life insurance company. Gradually he worked his way up until he became one of the most successful and best known men in the insurance world, and now he is an official of one of the great banks of the country. But it is his explanation of his success that interests us. He declares that it is his ability to smile that has opened the doors of opportunity and fortune for him. We are not willing to admit that a simple smile has done all this for him—but doubtless it has helped. Young man, if you want to get along in the world—SMILE!

THE HARDEST WAY OUT.

According to recently announced statistics, 6,171 people committed suicide in the United States last year—3,567 men and 2,604 women. This was an increase of more than 1000 over the preceding year. The causes assigned for some of the suicides were most trivial, the following being given: a man distressed because his new clothes were unsatisfactory (we should have thought this would be a woman); a woman peeved because her husband refused to eat the pie she had made; a couple in dispute as to how far a window should be left open for necessary air during the night; a woman because of trouble over a powder puff. Divorce, however, was the exciting cause in many cases, more than 100 killing themselves for this reason. We presume it is useless to present an argument against suicide with the hope that it will have any weight with those who are bent on taking their own lives; but it is not amiss to remark that self-destruction is the hardest possible way out of any difficulty or embarrassment that may arise, no matter how serious it may be. Death ends all chance of the solution of a problem—while courage, and penitence if necessary, will overcome the most tragic situation. "While there is life, there is hope"—spiritually as well as physically.

THERE IS HOPE.

There is hope for those who stumble and fall

And have still the courage to rise;

They journey on with a watchful step

And see through kindlier eyes.

For the mountain peaks would not seem so high

Were it not for the valley between,

And lofty thoughts would inspire us less

If we had not known the mean.

There is hope for those who face the storm

With a strong and steadfast trust;

Who wait for the dawn with a confidence

And turn from the blinding dust

To scan the heavens expectantly—

They shall not look in vain.

Such souls are lifted above the stress,

And strength is born of their pain.

There is hope for those who try again,

Who will not yield to despair,

Who make of failure a stepping stone

To mount life's winding stair.

For the morning star shall sing for them

And the rose shall bare its heart,

The hills shall be glad because of them,

And the rivers of hope shall start.

—Vivian Yeiser Laramore, in Leslie's

WHY MEN DO RIGHT.

If a man does right, we rank him as a righteous man, on the principle that the tree is known by its fruit. But we soon learn that actions which upon the surface appear to be very similar may turn out upon investigation to be as wide apart as the poles. The action depends for its moral value upon the motive which prompted it, and a discovery of motives is altogether a different thing from a survey of deeds. John's smile may be much more friendly than Peter's, but John's may have a business basis and Peter's may be pure friendship. A $100,000 gift to the church looks big, and yet it may not be half so valuable as the poor widow's two mites. The Lord trieth the hearts. Men stand revealed not so much in what they do as in what they purpose. The justification or condemnation of any deed lies back of it, in the motive which produced it. And so of two men who seem equally to "work righteousness," one may be vastly more righteous than the other.

What lies back of our right-doing? In most cases, probably, there is the desire to do right because it is right. The voice of God has spoken, we have heard the command, and there is nothing left but to obey. Our eyes are not keen enough to pierce the future; we cannot tell whether our deed is to bring us sorrow or fame; we do not know whether it will add to our friends or create new enemies; but even if we know that it would cost us much it would make no difference; we do the right because it is right. Somewhere in our career we have met our God, and from henceforth His law is our sole guide, and no number of real or imaginary lions in the way can ever turn us aside.

But humanity often does right from a less rigorous motive. Many a good deed is done because it promises to pay. Even the Ten Commandments, in their received form, recognize this when they say, "Honor thy father and mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." There can be no doubt that many a man refrains from certain evils because he recognizes that they are costly, and he practices certain virtues because he has found them to be profitable. Neither saints nor sinners are wholly blind to their own welfare, and the fact that certain actions will win us friends, or assist us in business, or add to our pleasure, does influence us, to some extent. It may be true that we would do certain things because they are right, apart from other considerations; but it is also true that the consciousness that they will profit us in this world or the next helps us to do those things with greater zest. We do not follow Christ because of the "loaves and fishes," but we follow Him more confidently because of them. This is not very flattering, but it is very human. And even where the good deed is done wholly or chiefly because we see that it will be profitable, it remains true that even so it is better done than undone, although its moral value, as measured by our motive, is very small.

And then we reach another stage where our good deeds are not done consciously because they are good, but because they express our very hearts. The Christian really needs no law. Christ put the matter clearly when He said, "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me." God Himself is under no law but that of His own nature, and Christians, who represent Him upon earth, are in a similar position. The man who clamors to have everything in black and white, and who acknowledges no duty for which we cannot quote a definite and specific, "Thus saith the Lord," has not yet reached a very exalted plane of Christian living. The Christian who is still "under law" has yet to discover what "love" means. The highest ideal of Christian living is where all actions flow spontaneously from a heart where love sits enthroned, and in such cases no promise of present or future reward has much control over the action. When we reach that point we do right because love inspires the deed, and the only reward we seek is to know that we are helping others. The highest form of goodness is not the made-to-order kind, but the kind which is the outgrowth of a redeemed soul.—The Christian Guardian.

TIME FOR THE FINANCIAL APPEAL.

By Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Director General.

To every question that comes before the Christian Education Commission is given serious and prayerful consideration. No question has received more careful consideration than fixing the time to present the financial objective of the Every-Member Canvass. The question has been under consideration for three months and in that time we have sought the advice of the best business and professional men of the South. They have been consulted individually and in groups. Included among them are big bankers, planters, merchants, manufacturers, bishops, and preachers.

Over nine-tenths of these men from Norfolk to Galveston have advised that the appeal be made in the late spring. Accordingly the commission at Memphis on February 1 unanimously fixed May 29 to June 5, inclusive, as the date. Two days later this action was unanimously endorsed and approved by a group of 150 laymen and ministers assembled in Memphis from all parts of the church, consisting of bishops, connectional officers, conference educational secretaries, conference financial directors and other prominent laymen.

The financial depression received thorough consideration. Even on this point business men are hopeful of steady improvement. There is every reason for faith and courage. A year ago the American people needed caution, now they need courage. Strange to say, the foundations for most great private fortunes in this country were laid in times of depression by strong men exercising faith and courage when weaker men fled in a panic. There never was a time when faith in the immediate future of American business would yield larger dividends than to-day.

In the face of the present situation, what should the church do with this educational movement? Some men are writing and telling Dr. Beauchamp that he should cease collecting Centenary obligations, and others are telling me that I should call off the Educational Movement. This is just the course which weak men take in periods of depression. Is it what the church should do? Does the church not have access to sources of courage and power unknown to the marts of trade? Indeed, in times like this when men are losing their grip, has the church no message for the discouraged, no hope for the despondent? Does not, in fact, the church owe it to the discouraged credit merchant, the disheartened farmer, the careworn banker to sound a note of faith and to inspire in them courage by opening up to them the wealth of spiritual verities? Can the church do this by ordering a retreat? Will not such a course add paralysis to the situation? On the other hand, if the church orders an advance along all lines, rallies its people to a big program and shows faith in God and the orderly processes of organized society, will it not render even to business an inestimable service of restoring to people faith, hope and courage, the very things most needed in times like this? Such a course by all churches will not only be healing to tried souls, but will even hasten the return of normal times in the economic world.

The Christian Education Movement is timely. It is a challenge to our faith in higher values. It will promote sanity in thinking and purity in living. The Movement was launched by the General Conference of 1918 when we were on our knees asking God to save the world from the haughty, triumphant Hun who was just then making his big line plunges towards Paris. That historic General Conference was trusting God, not prosperous times. Shall the church have less faith now than when we were spending billions on war, and had no assurance that we would have even peace times for putting the big program into effect? Have two years of unparalleled prosperity transferred our faith from God to mammon?

If the church now exercises large faith and inspires courage in the people, she will lay the foundation for great spiritual fortunes in the near future. The Commission is not calling upon the people for cash. They are asked to relieve the financial needs of our schools by subscribing. They are allowed to scatter their payments over a period of five years, fixing the time of payments to suit themselves.

A DAY FOR FASTING AND PRAYER.

Thousands of churches are now preparing for the pre-Easter revival campaign. Many thousands of sinners were reached in this campaign last year. There is every reason to hope that this Easter campaign will be vastly more effective. Let every possible thing be done to make the most of it this year. To this end let there be first a day of fasting and prayer for power which the Holy Spirit alone can give for this campaign. Friday, March 4, has been set as a day for the whole church to join in prayer and fasting for the greatest revival we have yet had during the Easter season. Each church will use its own plan for the observance of the day. In the cities, sunrise prayer meetings can be held to great advantage. In the country churches an eleven o'clock service might be held. In every home there can be special services other than the regular worship. At least the family worship can be made unusually impressive and fervent. In homes where there has been no family altar, why not begin this day?

Let every church and every individual in the church take this suggestion seriously. Let one day be given to this one thing so far as possible. If the Southern Methodist Church is to have that revival for which we have all been hoping and praying, we must win on our knees. Preachers and laymen, pulpit and pew, need the power which came upon the disciples on the Day of Pentecost. Why not make the 4th of March a Pentecostal day in Southern Methodism? So may it be.

O. E. GODDARD.

LEAVES FROM THE LIFE OF DR. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

Dear Brother Carley: One of your suggestive editorial paragraphs in the Advocate of January 27, calls to mind my life-long experience in the matter of saving. You ask for expressions on the subject "from some of your readers." As I have been writing leaves from my experience, I will venture a few on this subject. I have had experience. I cannot say that I have always been thrifty except in so far as thrift signifies "frugality and economical management." True I count myself fortunate in that I have been a little more successful than otherwise, and a little better off than a good sister represented herself and family, when she said to my father, whom she had not seen in twenty years: "Brother Boswell, we were very poor when you first knew us, and we have held our own mighty well."

With the experience of a preacher extending over the average length of life I feel free to speak. To begin: I was born the son of a poor preacher—born at the time when the people said: "If the Lord will keep our preacher humble, we will keep him poor." My father was a saving man—he saved everything worth saving, but he was not miserly. He spent less than he earned, and he earned more than he spent by selling books. His allowance as a preacher, called "quarterage," about covered family expenses. What he realized on book sales was clear gain. The book trade was a big thing to me. Every time a new supply came, I was sure of a new book.

I came along only a few years before the church began to pay salaries instead of quarterage. Paying a salary simplified matters, but I don't think the preachers got any more money. I didn't, not for a long time. I had been in the ministry nearly thirty years before I received as much as a thousand dollars a year. For ten years I was on circuits—some of them good ones—the others as poor as any in the Conference. Only one of the circuits was able to pay anything large. It operated under the quarterage law, and the quarterage was divided between the senior and the junior preacher. My first station was about second-rate in point of ability, and it paid (or promised) only sixty dollars a month. I didn't get the full amount until the third year I was there. At the close of that year I was transferred West and appointed to the second best church in the Conference with a salary of one thousand. But I didn't get the thousand. Still, I had a splendid living among a splendid people. By the way, I will say that I didn't go West empty-handed. I had some money—several hundred dollars. I never bothered the stewards of that church about quarterage. Judge John W. Stayton said I was the only Methodist preacher he ever met that had any money. My next appointment was to a district, with a salary of twelve hundred dollars, but I didn't receive as much as one thousand. And so on up to 1888. And I always had a little money—not as much, though, as I had when I first went to Arkansas. A growing family to feed and clothe and educate greatly increased expenses.

Between 1859 and 1888 I moved eighteen times. If three moves are equal to one fire, then my losses were equivalent to damage done by six fires. It wasn't that bad. But I could tell a funny tale about my neighbor who helped me pack up for a move across the hills from Searcy to Batesville. In a big box he packed loosely a five gallon jug of sorghum, a pound or two of pulverized sulphur, a couple of pairs of heavy fire-place irons, trace-chains, horse collars and hames, and a dozen other things. Be it understood I was not present when that packing was done. Readers can imagine better than I can describe just what a fix that box was in when it reached its destination. The sorghum and the sulphur were well mixed and had spread all over everything. I scattered the contents over the yard, and they remained there until the winter rains had done their work.

How did I manage to get along during all these years of poverty? I will not say of hardship, for the hardship, as I look back now, was nothing to be compared with the joys and pleasures experienced as I advanced in life. In fact, only once was I in a real strait, and then but for a short time. A brother-man, by the name of Nathan Johnson, by some means, learned of the condition of things in the home, and brought relief inside of three hours. Bless his memory!

Several things conspired to help me. 1. I rigidly adhered to the determination not to spend more than I received. I sometimes was forced to go the limit, but never beyond. Of course I was never in debt beyond ability to pay. I did once leave a charge owing a bill, but it was with the consent of my creditor. I had the money, but was making a long and expensive move, and didn't know what was ahead of me. 2. I learned to economize. The lesson was hard. I had to deny myself things—not only things that I desired, but sometimes things that were needed. The necessity for economy was deeply impressed. The lot on which I lived the first year of house-keeping was not supplied with water. My neighbor who furnished the house kindly let us have water from his cistern. But in late summer the cistern did not supply water enough, and I had to haul from a well about half a mile distant. This began during protracted meeting season. Every two days I had to go home and haul wife a barrel of water. I learned how to economize on water. To this day, though I have nothing to do but turn a faucet, I don't waste water—nor anything else, not even a scrap of paper, if I can make it useful. 3. My young wife was a woman of good sense, tact, judgment, and heart. She sympathized with me, and we were congenial partners. The life was harder on her than on me. She was reared in luxury, but not in what is called high life. Like thousands of her Southern sisters, she was left poor at the close of the war, but with her good head and warm heart she adapted herself to the situation, and met its issues bravely and uncompromisingly. 4. I made good use of my opportunities.

The outcome: When I got to the point when I could save a little, I saved it, and added to it, and after a while I invested in a piece of land, lost it, and had to begin again. I recovered my footing in a few years, and for nearly four decades I have had all the money I needed. Even when I had charge of the New Orleans Christian Advocate as editor and publisher I never lacked—never borrowed, never met a bill that I didn't pay on the spot. I can't say that for my management of the Memphis Advocate. I borrowed a small amount, paid it back, but lost on the enterprise.

To-day, at the close of life, I am not rich except in my children—two sons and three daughters. They are worth more to me than money. But I have a comfortable home, and some other things that can be turned into money when needed. Possibly I may soon be classed among the so-called "Forgotten Men," and somebody may plead in my behalf, but the plea will not be made on the score of poverty. If, under the plea, anything should be forthcoming, I shall accept it, not as a pauper, nor as a bonus, but by virtue of my relation to the church as a worn-out preacher.

A SPIRITUAL CHURCH.

By Rev. Lottie N. Hoffpaul.

Just before His ascension, Jesus Christ called the disciples' attention to His teachings and the teachings of John the Baptist concerning the coming of the Holy Ghost, and the conditions upon which He would come to give the church spiritual power for service. Hence Jesus commanded them. "Not to depart from Jerusalem, but to tarry for the promise of the Father." Jesus loved His church and wanted it to measure up to the standard in spiritual things, for that is the thing most needed. In these evil days we should remember that the spiritual state of the church is the most important thing. The disciples were standing between the gentle command of Jesus and the Father's blessed promise that would make them spiritual and prepare them for life work. If the disciples had gone away from Jerusalem not heeding the Lord's command and the promise of the Father, their lives would have been a failure, and three thousand souls would not have been saved and the city moved toward the Lord Jesus.

We have reached a very critical time in the religious history of our country and of the world. Men everywhere are full of anxiety and concern for the stability of the government, the spiritual state of the church, the peace of the nations, and the progress of our civilization. Men of thought and conviction in the church are saying that there is a need of a great spiritual awakening and a revival of pure religion. The only thing that will make it a reality is the "baptism of the Holy Ghost." We are very busy thinking, talking plans, holding "get-together meetings," securing the best trained instructors that we may accomplish a great task; but are we heeding our Lord's gentle command, looking for the promise of the Father to be fulfilled, giving us the power to do the work assigned? Jesus said, "Tarry," and power would be given so that the work would be easily performed.

Under the power and influence of the Holy Ghost, the impossibilities of yesterday will become the realities of to-day. The deeper and stronger the spiritual state of the church, the sooner will the given task be accomplished, and the Father's influence be felt, revivals break out, and the witnessing believers be more than conquerors, moving onward, carrying the gospel message to the men and women that are lost in sin. The baptism of the Holy Ghost will solve all our problems. Hence, that is just the reason Jesus was so positive in calling the disciples' attention to the promise of the Father. Yet, in the face of this fact, there is a tendency to resort to other things than obedience to the command of Jesus Christ. The church that "waits" and prays through, becomes a power, and the mighty problems that are put before her are soon solved under the direction of the blessed Holy Ghost. The disciples were doing some hard praying when the Holy Ghost came on the Day of Pentecost, which, of course, explains the mighty results that came to the church in one day. What the church needs to-day more than great programs, is a return to the "old paths" of Bible doctrine, revival power and holy living. When we fail to do this, we shall lose our pre-eminence and the halo of glory, which surrounded the heads of our fathers and made them such soul-winners. It has always been the great desire of God that his church should be spiritual and ready for service. So, on the day of all days, Pentecost, Peter was so transformed and filled when the Holy Ghost "fell" upon him that his glowing heart and burning words led 3000 people to accept the Lord Jesus Christ.

A SUPERANNUATE AND HIS CONFRERES.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

The Annual Conference session is the greatest of all occasions to Methodist preachers. It is the time of happy reunion to them. Having completed their labors for the year, they gather and spend six days in joyous fellowship, and report their achievements for the past twelve months—their campaigns, their battles, their triumphs—and lay their plans for the year to come. They sing and pray and shout with hearts exulting in the love of God. What a glad time they do have! Forgetting the privations and hardships and discouragements of the year just gone, remembering only the joyous victories that came through faith, they receive their appointments for another year, and take up its burdens with courage—some of them. Many of them have glad hearts—some have sad ones.

"The love of Christ constraineth me," is the motive impelling and compelling them. Without the urge of this spiritual dynamic, many of them would turn their feet into other paths, and their brains and energies into other fields. Methodist itinerants are the noblest and most self-sacrificing heroes in the world. I have greatly marveled at their fidelity and courage. Loyalty to their church with its rigorous system is the principle that dominates them. They deserve better at the hands of the church, especially the old ones who have spent their lives in the ministry and are now bowed under the weight of many years and in feebleness extreme. When will our church awake to the obligations she is under to these unselfish worthies? I am sure that the preachers of no other church would stand for what they endure and remain faithful at their posts of duty and service.

I sometimes wonder if I am worthy of a place of honor and trust among these valiant soldiers of the Cross. I esteem it a great honor to have spent more than forty years in their company and to have shared with them in the glory of this service for the Kingdom. To be true and successful in their work these heroes must forget themselves and all of their worldly interests and be "all things to all men that by all means they might win some." One and all deserve the best the church can do for them. They have made the church what it is, as God's evangelists of truth. I have always admired and loved them, and greatly rejoiced in their soulful fellowship.

But when I was superannuated I felt that I could never again enjoy a session of the Conference. The contrast between an active and a superannuate membership would be painful. I would be out of place, and would be painfully conscious of the difference. I found it to be just as I had anticipated. I had been happy all the year, visiting the brethren, preaching for them, and enjoying their gracious and loving hospitality; but when they were all together at Conference I felt lost. Nothing seemed right. I did not fit in at all. I had nothing to do—everybody was working at something but me. I had to pinch myself to see if it were I. I cannot say that I was unhappy—I simply felt unnatural. It was quite a break away from the active and hustling past. It will never be to me what it once was. Can I ever attend another Conference? I don't know.

I have noticed that but few of the superannuates attend Conference. Dr. Cooper arranged to entertain all who would come. Their rooms were near the church, making it very convenient and comfortable for them. Only five, however, came, and two of them stayed only two days. But few of them are able to pay their way. Some who do come do so because some kind, generous friend pays the bill. The money often comes from the purse of a poorly paid pastor. They are not able to spend money for such a purpose when they get barely enough from the church to keep soul and body together during the year. Poor old men! My heart bleeds for them. Is there any heart in the Methodist Church? There can not be much if we judge by the way she is dealing with the men who have given their lives and their all to build her up and make her a power for righteousness in the world. May God open the eyes of our church people! Let everybody say, "Amen."

When we consider that the church owes her superannuates $3,000,000 on salaries not paid, can we wonder that we are so lacking in soul-saving power? It is a wonder to me that we maintain our ecclesiastical existence, even. I have always paid my debts, and preached that men cannot be saved or even honest if they do not pay their debts. What about our church owing this huge sum to her old men for service and will not pay it? May God make us sensible of our sin!

Four of the five superannuates who attended Conference served in my districts, and I served them as presiding elder. This association drew us very close to one another. The memory of those years of trustful co-operation in the Lord's work came up to me in great gladness of heart. Brothers Ira B. Robertson, W. W. Simmons, R. Bradley and J. W. Brown looked old and worn, but in spite of their years and infirmities their faith is strong, and their love for God and His holy Kingdom is a consuming passion.

The aggregate service of these four old heroes covers 139 years. The Mississippi Conference has laid heavy burdens on them, but they never faltered. They said, "Here am I, send me." I have never heard of a complaint raised by one of them. They accepted every appointment given them, and filled it to the best of their ability. Some of the hardest works in the Conference were served by them. What they have done is written in God's book of remembrance; and when He comes to make up His jewels they will find their day of glory. This will pay them for all their sacrifices, even if the church did let them go hungry and naked.

In thinking of these old heroes I wonder what were the results of these many and long years of service. How many sermons did they preach, and how many prayer-meetings did they conduct? How many souls were saved from sin under their appeals? How many precious little babes were dedicated to God in holy baptism? How many loving hearts were united in matrimony? How many funeral services were held to the comfort of sad hearts? How many burdened hearts were helped by them as they pointed to the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world? How many times have they on bended knees at the bedside of the sick and dying called down the power of God to help and to save? How many breaches have they healed by their prayers and godly counsel? How many wandering feet have they turned into right paths? The world will never know in how many ways the ministrations of these heralds of the Cross have gone, and the wealth of blessings that have come to thousands of souls. God knows if the world does not. The world is richer and better because these men have lived and labored in it.

Since Conference my thoughts have largely centered in our heroic band of superannuates. They are still in the world, but not much of the world. Their hopes and ambitions and activities are all in the buried past. They are now alone, cut off from what has been their lives hitherto. They have nothing left but God. The world beyond the shining stars is calling to them to come. It will be a happy day when they answer that call. They have no parsonage home, no board of stewards to provide for their needs, no parishioners to care for them when they are sick and suffering, nobody to look after their comfort and welfare. I feel like crying when this picture comes to my mind. But for heaven, their lives would be a sad tragedy.

Our active preachers could do some good if they would write to their old preacher comrades, and let them know that they think of, and pray for them.

Brookhaven, Miss.

THE PERAMBULATOR AMID ANCIENT SPLENDOR AND MODERN DIRT.

Mukden, the capital of Manchuria, is a city of some 200,000 population, and when one alights from the train to all appearances it is as if one were stepping into any American city, except that the people are all Japanese and Chinese. The new Mukden is entirely Japanese, as the Japanese Government enjoys certain concessions which give them the privilege of maintaining this city in the very heart of Manchuria. The Chinese city is some two miles distant and, like all Chinese cities, is behind high walls. We were met by a committee who gladly took us for a tour of the city, visiting the Imperial Palaces and Tombs. This city is the home for the Manchu Dynasty, who in 1644 overthrew the great Ming Dynasty and seated themselves on the throne of China and who held sway over the Chinese Empire until February, 1912. Because of their great victory and to cause perpetual remembrance of their defeat of the Chinese, the latter were compelled to wear queues. The wall of the city of Mukden has been erected since about 1630. In the city itself are the Palace of Chinlan built in 1642, Wensoko, with its four libraries containing 6732 book cases, Chungchen, where the ruling monarchs transacted their regal duties in olden times and in which the royal throne is still preserved, and Chingning, a hall of worship where the Emperor Taisung breathed his last. There are two mausoleums, one ten miles from the city and the other about five miles. This latter stands on a wooded eminence and is reached after a pleasant drive over land that reminds one very much of the southwest Louisiana prairies. Here lies buried the first Emperor of the Manchu Dynasty. In the days of the Empire all traffic was stopped about a mile from the wall which enclosed the courtyard, and all persons were required to walk from this point to the tomb, as the ground was sacred. Upon entering the wall we are in a courtyard where for 600 yards extends a wide roadway, which is intersected in the middle by another similar road. Some 200 yards to the left rises the great three-story building, pagoda roof, and on each side are similar buildings, though smaller, wherein the priest and his attendants formerly resided. Twenty yards beyond the center building, through a great wall, one comes upon a slab upon which is inscribed an epitaph written by the Emperor Kang Chi. Turning to the left and mounting the great stairway to the first floor of the center building, one for the first time sees behind another great wall the mound in which Emperor Taisung is buried. The whole arrangement is built on a big scale and one wonders that so much space should be given over to the burial of just one body. The courtyard is lined on each side with statues of horses, camels, elephants, lions, dogs, etc., that have been there for hundreds of years.

The Sunday school rally at Mukden was held in the Presbyterian Church. The attendance was the native Japanese, and strange as it may seem to us Americans, the men outnumbered the women two to one. The attention was splendid, thanks to the good interpretation that our Japanese pastor gave to the audience for us.

We rode through the Chinese city of Mukden, which is behind a wall 35 feet high, 16 feet wide at the top and 26 feet at the base. The main streets of the city which lead to the eight gates are wide, while, leading into them, the side streets are very narrow and in some instances only lanes.

Leaving Mukden the next morning, we rode across the great plains of South Manchuria and Eastern Mongolia. This country also reminded us very much of the prairies of southwest Louisiana. There is scarcely a grade on the line, while in the distance only a few hills are visible. The entire region is under cultivation and for miles and miles one sees rows upon rows of Chinese corn, beans, potatoes and vegetables of various kinds. The crop was rather poor. An odd thing in this trip is that for miles one sees fields, but not a house is in sight, it being the Chinese fashion for the people to live in villages enclosed by high mud walls, from which the workers walk to their fields to labor. Occasionally livestock is seen. The Chinese village is usually built of mud houses with flat roofs. Of course, when the overflows come, the houses are washed away, but are very quickly erected when the waters have subsided.

Peking is a city of gates and walls, as well as being a world city. It is a typical illustration of the old saying of "wheels within wheels." First, there is a wall surrounding the Chinese city; next comes the great wall of the Tartar city; then come the walls of the Imperial city; then come the deep moat and double walls of the Forbidden City. Behind each wall is a city unto itself. Through each wall are great gates, the only entrance into the cities beyond. Peking, seen from the outside on the great dusty plain, appears to be only great gray walls and the pagoda towers which surround the gates. There is nothing to indicate the wonderful golden-tiled temples and palaces of magnificent splendor to be found within, nor the store of things wonderful to behold that may be found upon the inside of the city when an opportunity is given to see what there is in this ancient city of splendor.

China goes back to antiquity. The wall around the Tartar city was 50 years old when Columbus discovered America. To-day it does not appear any older. For two centuries it withstood every attack, but it was not proof against treachery, which was the only way the invaders entered the city and brought the great Ming Dynasty to its end in 1644. Upon the streets may be seen vehicles of all kinds—donkey wagons, rickshaws, automobiles, wheelbarrows, camels, etc. Within its stores the shopkeepers bring to your view many wonderful patterns of lace and embroidery, carved beads and amber ones, mandarin coats and many other things which are pleasing to the eye and create within you a desire to possess. Amid all the splendor one is constantly rubbing up against dirt in all of its forms and phases. The children are dirty, the side streets are dirty, the coolies are dirty; in fact, there is dirt everywhere, and, seemingly, not a broom to sweep it.

Since the days of the Republic there have been many changes. The public tread now where in days of the Empire only royalty put forth its foot. Tourists can now visit the Altar of Heaven, the Temple of Heaven, the Temple of Agriculture, the Summer Palace, the Hall of Classics, the Temple of Confucius, the Lama Temple, and even that part of the Forbidden City which is now occupied by the president of the Republic and the Houses of Congress. The dethroned Emperor is a lad of about 14 years of age, who lives in another part of the Forbidden City with his household, the buildings and grounds of which occupy about one-half of a square mile of territory. Even though China is a republic, it does not lightly shatter precedent, for reverence for the past has a mighty hold on the Chinese heart. So strong is it that the Republic pays the dethroned Emperor three million dollars per year for his support.

Leaving Peking, 908 miles lay between us and Shanghai, with a break at the Yangtse river 631 miles away. Instead of having a bridge or even ferrying the coaches, the line stops at Pukow and all passengers and baggage are carried across in Chinese boats to Nanking on the opposite shore. The river is just about a mile wide. Arriving at Nanking we again boarded a train and continued our journey into Shanghai, the time for the trip being 36 hours. Parts of the country through which we rode raised wheat, corn, rice, and vegetables of various kinds. We arrived at Shanghai at 9 o'clock and immediately went to the hotel and secured our rooms. As we were to leave Shanghai the following day at noon, our party decided to take a rickshaw ride through the city at night. It was well worth it. Shanghai is an international port and had we not known we were in China and had not seen the Indian "skeiks" as policemen, the traveler would think he was in an American town. The Perambulator and a friend took in the Chinese part of the city and were not surprised to find human nature was the same in China that it is in America. The places of amusement were crowded, the streets were filled with people upon pleasure bent, the tea houses were having their round of gaiety, while those from the lower strata of life were plying their trade in the street. The next morning we spent our time visiting the China Inland Mission, and it was refreshing to find so large a plant conducting its business for the Kingdom solely on the basis of prayer. Of course we must visit a modern Chinese store, so a trip through Wong & Company was given us. Here we found a store such as one would see in Chicago, New York or New Orleans and, true to the American custom, they were having a great sacrifice sale and everything was marked at a reduction. In China when one bargains with the natives, it is the part of wisdom never to pay the price first asked, for the reason that the Chinese seems to size you up as to what they think you can pay and ask you accordingly. If you do not offer a lower price, then all the loss is yours. If you do, in some cases the gain to your pocket-book is rather large. From here our party proceeded to the dock and there took the ship for Nagasaki, 430 miles across the Eastern Sea.

But more of this in our next.

MASS MEETINGS OF THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

During the month of February and the first two weeks in March, public meetings in the interest of the Christian Education Movement are to be held in some twenty-five of the cities of our territory. On February 6, such meetings were held at Knoxville, Montgomery, Macon, Charleston, Tampa, Richmond, and Baltimore. On February 13, there were meetings at Washington, Norfolk, Kansas City, Tulsa, Mobile, Savannah, Dallas, and Huntington. The meeting at Memphis was held February 11, and at Waco, February 18. On February 20, there will be meetings at St. Louis, Little Rock, Ft. Worth, Jackson, Shreveport, Raleigh, Roanoke, and Lexington; and those scheduled for February 29, are Oklahoma City, Houston, San Antonio, Chattanooga, Jacksonville, and Columbia. The schedule for March will be announced later.

At these public meetings in the principal cities of our territory the message of the Christian Education Movement will be carried to many thousands of our laymen. Among the speakers are all of our bishops, except several who are not now able to give active service, a number of representative ministers of our church, and laymen who are prominent in public affairs as well as in the work of the church. These meetings are not primarily for the generation of enthusiasm that will help to carry through a "campaign," but to carry to the thousands who will be reached the message that the church and the nation need to hear—that except we take up in earnest this work of Christian education, that unless the conscience of the nation be stirred as touching this vital thing, the future holds for us little of promise. And these meetings will carry to the people the case of the church school. They will help much in bringing our people to see what is the value of the Christian college and to understand that except we make secure the future of our schools, there is little of promise for Southern Methodism in the years that are before us.—Bulletin.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL, 1921 SESSION.

By every token the 1921 session of the Seashore Divinity School, to be held at the Seashore Camp Ground in Biloxi, Miss., June 14 to 23 inclusive, will be up to the high standard of the best that has gone before.

Dr. Geo. L. Robinson, of the McCormick Theological Seminary of Chicago, Ill., will have charge of the 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. services from the opening, Tuesday night, June 14, through Saturday, and will probably preach at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Bishop William A. Quayle, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will preach both 11 a.m. and 8 p.m., Sunday, June 19, and will occupy the platform at the same hours through the remainder of the session, which closes Thursday night, June 23.

Both of these gifted scholars, preachers and lecturers have been on the Divinity School program before and their services then assure the heartiest welcome and highest expectation this year.

Our good Bishops McMurtry and Cannon will also be present and have a helpful part on the program.

Remember the date, June 14 to 23. Set that time apart for Seashore Divinity School by the Southern sea.

H. M. ELLIS, President.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, AND CENTENARY TREASURERS.

My Dear Fellow-Workers in the Big Task: I am sure you will be glad to know that the Mississippi Conference is now in the fifth place, and though we are rejoicing over this good news, we are still not satisfied, and are asking that you continue to co-operate, so that we may reach the top.

After you have completed your "Pay-Up Week" Campaign, be sure that you make a report to me, but if you haven't finished, or even haven't begun, "It is never too late to do good;" therefore, follow out the plan we have suggested, or use a better one if you have it, and secure the unpaid pledges for the first and second year. Those who have completed the Campaign, and those who are still working at it, and to those even who haven't begun, allow me to say to you, it is very necessary that you keep on "at it," and keep it actively before your people, for the collection of all the pledges, so that you will not get behind.

I wish to thank every one for their co-operation in making possible the wonderful work of the Mississippi Conference, but let's "all together now," for the final pull in reaching the top.

Yours for Service,

W. D. HAWKINS,

Conference Centenary Treasurer.
Conference Missionary Secretary.

One of Frances Ridley Havergal's poems tells us of an Aeolian harp which a friend sent to her with a letter describing the wonderful sweetness of its tones. Miss Havergal took up the harp and thrummed upon its seven strings, but there were no thrilling strains—only common music. She read the letter again and found instructions which she had overlooked. Then she raised the window and put the harp under the sash. Now the wind swept over the strings and the room was filled with melody that no human touch could produce. It took the breath of heaven to bring out the wondrous music. The human soul is so much like that harp. Breezes from the hills of God must sweep its chords. Would you let the harmony be lost by the touch of your unskilled hand? Put the harp in the window of the house where you live. Let zephyrs from the glory land blow over your soul. Then you will hear the music soft and low.—Selected.

She'll Be Safe at the Christian College

When girls go away to the college they are at the danger period in life. The years just ahead of them will determine their destiny for weal or woe.

In this critical period an atmosphere charged with Christian principles, an environment dominated by high and holy ideals, the safeguards of the most deeply spiritual influences—these are imperatively demanded in the development of well-rounded Christian character.

Where else are these found save in the colleges of the Church? Girls are safe at the Christian college—and assured of Christian character.

The Christian Education Movement undertakes to provide for the girls of Methodism the finest system of Christian schools in the nation. In these the womanhood of the country will be trained. The character of the home will be determined. And thereby the future of the land will be assured.

THE TEMPER TINKER.

Down the wide street, with his push-cart a trundle,
A droll little tinker comes limping along,
With the queerest-shaped tools in his magical bundle,

Puzzling the town with his comical song:

"Tempers to mend! Temper to mend!

Any bad tempers to mend?

Crooked ones—spoiled ones—double-edged keen ones—

Fuss-button snappy ones—pickle-sour mean ones—

Sharp ones that cut when you didn't intend.

Temper! Bad temper to mend! To mend!"

Other men tinker your furniture flimsy,

Your broken umbrella, or leaky saucepan;

But never, I warrant, a tinker so whimsy,

So nimble and deft as this gay little man:

"Temper to mend! Temper to mend!

Ho! Bring me your tempers to mend!

Prickly ones—thorny ones—sputtery, squeaky—

Latches off—hinges loose—raspy and creaky—

Fly off the handle and hurt your best friend!

Temper! Bad temper to mend! To mend!"

He rubs them with patience and sweet oil. Ho patches

The holes that gape ugly from overmuch use.

He files down each claw-pointed corner that scratches.

He shines them with essence of Bide-a-wee Juice.

"Temper to mend! Temper to mend!

Oh, say, are there tempers to mend?

Mend them in time. If you wait they'll grow double,

Leak you a heart full of bitterest trouble,

Put out the firelight of love in the end.

Temper! Bad temper to mend! To mend!"

He capers and smiles with his quaint head a-wobbling

Like a Japanese doll, or a funny old clown;
And straightway the children stop snarling and squabbling,

And laugh till he calls us the Happy-Face Town.

"What! Smiles to lend? Do you mean to pretend

You haven't a temper to mend?

I'll give you a secret worth oodles of pelf:

Just follow my method—and mend it yourself!

There are towns where they need me.

Good luck to you, friend!

Temper! Bad temper to mend! To mend!"

TUCK'S ADVENTURE.

Tuck, the fairy, had been ill, and the fairy doctor advised a change of scene for him.

"Send me to Mortal Land," Tuck begged. "To Mortal Land to see Tom Newherrie."

Tuck had often heard of this Tom Newherrie and was sure he would be good company.

The fairy's parents dressed him warmly and charged him not to stay more than two hours.
Then they clapped their hands, and presto—he was gone!

He found Tom fast asleep in bed. Such a curious place—the room was not at all like a room in fairyland. Tuck could not imagine what the bureau was for; the rug looked to him like a big mullein leaf, and the window seemed to be made of clearest ice.

The strangest thing of all was a bright object that stood on a table by the head. It had a round face and it talked constantly, though all it seemed to say was one word over and over.

Suddenly it began to ring; the ringing was as loud as all the bells in fairyland put together, and Tuck jumped a foot high.

Some one else jumped, too—Tom Newherrie, who immediately bounced out of bed.

"All right, Mr. Clock," he said, "I hear you!"

Not seeing Tuck, of course (for the little fairy had made himself invisible), he rushed across the room and opened a door. Tuck flew after him.
They went into a smaller room, and there another remarkable thing happened.

Tom turned a silvery handle, and a torrent of water rushed out into a deep white place. The smoke (it was really steam) made Tuck sneeze.
He drew back a little frightened. Cold water running into a basin among the rocks was a familiar sight; but what did this mean?

He withdrew hastily to the bedroom and sat down on a foot-stool. Presently Tom returned, walked over to the other side of the room, and took his stand in front of a clear, deep pool. At least Tuck thought it looked more like a pool than anything else. Was Tom going to swim?

But no; Tom began to brush his hair vigorously.
Fairies do not brush their hair in the way mortals do, and at the sight of Tom hanging away at his head Tuck came perilously near laughing aloud.
All at once Tom reached up and turned a little handle. Something snapped, and a lovely bright thing began to shine on the wall, like a flower that had burst suddenly into bloom. It made all the room bright. A moment later Tom turned the handle once more, and the object was dark again.
Tuck wished he could carry the brilliant flower home with him.

After breakfast there were more marvels. Tuck followed Tom and watched him pour some milk into a pan and carry it over to what looked like a big black box. Setting down the pan, Tom took a little stick from a box and scratched it on his shoe.

"What's he doing that for?" said Tuck to himself. And then he instantly added, "Woof!" and clapped his hands to his face, for the little stick burst into flame. Fire from a stick! He stared while Tom laid the stick on top of the big black box, which caught fire at once.

Tom set the pan over the flame; then, a few minutes later, he turned a handle ("So many handles!" thought Tuck), put out the fire, and called the cat to drink the milk.

The next moment a bell rang, and Tom hurried into the hall, with Tuck after him. The noise came from a queer object on a table; it stopped when Tom held the thing to his ear.

"Hello, Smithers!" said Tom. "All right; I'll be ready by the time you get here."

"This is the most remarkable country!" thought Tuck. "Here are two people talking to each other through the walls. How is it done, I wonder?"

But before he could puzzle it out there was a new noise, "Honk, honk!" in the distance. He had learned that in Mortal Land a noise generally means that something is going to happen, and so he watched Tom eagerly.

Tom picked up his books and went out of doors.
Tuck followed, of course. The noise grew louder, and at length a great box on four wheels rushed into view. It was not pulled by dragon flies or by field mice, as carriages are hauled in fairyland; in fact it was not pulled at all. It simply went.
Tuck was astounded.

All at once a clock struck, and Tuck knew that his time was up. Hopping on the back of the nearest bird, he was soon at home.

He told the other fairies about the wonders: the strange bright flower on the wall, the fire stick, and all the rest. Some of them would not believe him.

"But it's the truth," insisted Tuck. Then he looked wistful. "Fairyland seems stupid," he said.
"No strange things happen here. How wonderful it must seem to he Tom Newherrie and live in a place like Mortal Land!"—Agnes M. Bass, in The Youth's Companion.

THE BOY BISHOP.

Perhaps the most remarkable of all celebrations in honor of St. Nicholas was the old one of the boy bishop. The boy bishop assumed his office on St.
Nicholas day, December 6, and held it till Holy Innocents' day, December 28. The custom originated on the continent of Europe and was adopted in England, where it reached what was probably its fullest development. A boy was chosen to represent a bishop and was clothed with all the robes and invested with all the insignia pertaining to the station. Other boys represented priests, deacons and other suitable persons for the bishop's train. The boy bishop conducted a service in the church, and in some cases he and his companions went about from house to house singing and collecting money, which they did not ask as a gift but demanded as a right.

The boy bishop attained his fullness of dignity at Salisbury cathedral, though he was known all over England. There he was chosen from among choir boys, the rest forming his retinue, and he ruled with the highest pomp and most absolute authority. He is said to have conducted all the services of the church except the mass.

There is a record of a boy bishop at Salisbury filling a vacant prebend by the appointment of his schoolmaster, and there is in the cathedral the tomb of one who died while holding his office. On the top of it is an effigy of the child in full episcopal robes. The office of the boy bishop was abolished by Henry VIII.—St. Nicholas.

Good Old Cat!

Mr. Penn—They say the streets in Boston are frightfully crooked.

Mr. Hub—They are. Why, do you know when I first went there I could hardly find my way

"That must be embarrassing."

"It is. The first week I was there I wanted to get rid of an old cat we had, and my wife got me to take it to the river a mile away."

"And you lost the cat all right?"

"Lost nothing! I never would have found my Pure Grit.

The cold snap, hardening the pond near six-year-old Harold's home, gave him an opportunity to try his first pair of skates. Of course he made a poor job of it and was down every minute or two.
Observing the hard time he was having, a woman on the bank said kindly, "Why, little man,
I wouldn't stay on the ice and keep falling down so; I'd just come off and watch the others."

The tears from the last hard hump were still on the rosy cheeks, but the little fellow looked from his adviser to the shining steel on his feet and said pluckily, "I didn't get some new skates to give up with; I got 'em to learn how with."—Boston cane in hand, said she would give him five minutes

THE MEMPHIS MEETING.

We gave last week an official account of the Memphis meeting in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. We trust every member of the church has read that account carefully.

The meeting was of special interest in that it fixed definitely the time for the every-member canvass to secure the amount fixed upon as the financial goal of the Christian Education Movement—$33,000,000. This matter was taken up and, after due consideration, the period of May 29-June 5 was designated as the time for making the canvass.

According to the reports, representative bankers, lumbermen, cotton men, merchants, and planters from all sections of the church were called into consultation, and the unanimous opinion was to the effect that the time is ripe to go ahead with the work of securing the gifts that will mark the greatest forward movement in the educational history of the church. So strong was the spirit of optimism that the prediction was made that the goal would not only be reached, but that it would even be exceeded by a considerable margin. As an earnest of what is to be, one advance pledge of $100,000 was announced, and another of $30,000.

There is now but one position for every loyal Methodist to take—the position that the best effort possible should be made to carry the Movement forward to complete success. As we see it, the real test before us is not the securing of the full amount asked for, though that is supremely important, but the aligning of all our forces for the successful accomplishment of this great undertaking. Can we all work together enthusiastically and determinedly, in spite of very real difficulties, to put our educational institutions upon a foundation that will enable them to do the work that must be done if we are to maintain our position as an aggressive force in the life of the nation?—that is the question we have to answer. If we can, all will be well; if we cannot, the future is not very bright for us.

This is no time for pessimistic prognostications as to the outcome of the Movement, or doleful disquisitions upon the economic evils that envelop us. Here is a plain case of our very own institutions calling almost frantically for the help they must have if they survive. It is not a theory, but a fact that is confronting us. The drowning man will go down the third time if the onlookers spend their time lamenting his misfortune in falling into the water, or arguing the question as to who should furnish the rope to save him. The time for action has arrived.

If those who can give but little will give that little, and if those who can give much will give much, the goal will be reached. As never before, we need to adopt as our motto now, "We can, and we will."

IT WORKS.

An article in last week's Advocate, "What One Church is Doing," has attracted unusual attention, as we believed it would. It is an account of the financial prosperity of a church—our Main Street Church, Gastonia, N. C.—which takes no public collections, makes no assessments, and never asks a member to pledge any amount, all its expenditures being provided for by free-will offerings. Lest doubting Thomases have ground for saying that the amount raised under such circumstances would necessarily be small, the figures show that this church actually raised and expended during the year the magnificent total of $95,682.

The explanation of this remarkable achievement is so simple that it will doubtless be hard for many persons to accept it—but the facts speak for themselves. The secret of this unusual record is to be found in the fact that a part of the membership of that particular church has entered into the spirit and meaning of stewardship as expressed in tithing. With a membership of about 950, there are between 200 and 250 tithers, the official board setting the example in that more than 80 per cent of its membership of 40 are tithers.

We must avoid the fallacy of arriving at a general conclusion from an examination of too few cases; but this is only one of many similar instances where material prosperity has followed the conscientious practice of tithing. We are justified, therefore, in saying that tithing works as a practical solution of the financial problem that confronts practically every church.

All our lives we have had experience with churches which had a struggle every year to meet their moderate financial requirements. We have met with boards as they have labored in the beginning of the year to make the probable income from assessments reach the total required for the budget throughout the year; and we have become perfectly familiar with the strenuous effort at the close of the year to get in all the pledges in order that the preacher might be able to report everything "in full" at Conference. We have become familiar with this sort of thing because, with a few happy exceptions, it is the rule throughout our hounds. We have felt that there is a better way—that there must be a better way—and here is a demonstration of a way that works.

We must not suppose, however, that this church at Gastonia reached its happy state without effort. There was education as to the duty of tithing, and there was the definite agreement on the part of individuals to practice it. The matter was thoroughly discussed in the official board, and the plan was adopted only after it had been definitely settled that that was to be the policy of the church. And we doubt not that the educative process is kept up throughout the year. People have a way of "backsliding" if their interest is not maintained in whatever they undertake.

We wonder if there are not some churches in Louisiana and Mississippi that are ready, or could be made ready, to go wholly on the tithing basis. We dare say there is not one that would not experience such prosperity as it has never dreamed of if any considerable proportion of its membership would agree to the plan and faithfully follow it. It is a challenge—a ringing challenge—to the whole church, this record of Main Street Church, Gastonia, N. C. Who will accept it?

REASON FOR REJOICING.

We take the following from the Alabama Christian Advocate of February 3:

"Brethren, rejoice with us! We received 1004 subscriptions in Monday's mail. Think of it! Over 1000 in one day's mail. It was the best day in the history of the Alabama Christian Advocate, and if any other paper in Southern Methodism can heat that record, let it speak now, or else hold its peace forever. YOU DID IT, BRETHREN! No editor under the sun could have done this without the splendid co-operation that you have given us. We thank you a thousand times.

"We are well on our way to the 30,000 goal. Just keep up the good work, and we will do our best at this end of the line. Now, all aboard for 5000 new ones!"

We think our readers will agree with us that Dr. Branscomb has ample reason for rejoicing—and we rejoice with him over the remarkable record the Alabama Christian Advocate is making in its circulation. But we wish we could do a little rejoicing on our own account. This is the season when we have been accustomed to receive our largest number of new subscriptions, as well as renewals, but the season is somewhat "backward" this year. We earnestly hope that we can soon begin to report a constant stream of subscriptions pouring into the office. If we can, we shall give all the credit to our pastors. With Dr. Branscomb, we will say, "YOU DID IT, BRETHREN! No editor under the sun could have done this without the splendid co-operation that you have given us. We thank you a thousand times."

THE STEWARDSHIP MANUAL.

We desire to call the attention of our pastors to the Stewardship Manual which has been prepared by the Christian Education Commission in order to assist our preachers who wish to present Christian stewardship to their people. It covers briefly the whole range of the subject, and gives in practical form information and suggestions that will be invaluable in preparing sermons and addresses.

The month of March has been set aside for the special presentation of the subject of Christian Stewardship in all our churches. It may seem strange that this should be necessary after so long a history of heroic giving on the part of some of our people; but it seems to be a fact that a great many Christians still hold to the idea of absolute ownership by the individual of time and money, which Christ taught are held in trust. About one hundred thousand of the more than two million members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, signed the stewardship pledge card during the Centenary campaign; there is still a large work of education to be done among those who have not yet given the subject the consideration it deserves. Get the Manual and use it.

A HELP TO FAMILY PRAYER.

We do not know of any religious influence that could be brought to bear upon the life of our children that would have greater power to bring them to a serious consideration of the religious life than a family altar. The simple reading of the Word of God and the offering of even a faltering prayer in the family circle will make an impression on tender minds that will last as long as life itself, and in ways undreamed of that impression will, in many cases, ultimately turn the feet of the children into the paths of righteousness.

The embarrassment of parents in beginning family prayer can be largely overcome if they will make use of some of the helps that have been provided for this very purpose. Among others, we especially commend the pamphlet, "Keep The Home Fires Burning," issued by the Department of Spiritual Resources of the Christian Education Movement. This pamphlet furnishes an appropriate Scripture reference and a short, simple prayer for every day from February 1 through June 26, with helpful suggestions for taking up this Christian duty. We hope those who need this assistance will secure and use the pamphlet.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. B. G. Gallardo, a brother of Mrs. Browning, and his wife are visiting Dr. and Mrs. Marlon Browning at Mary Werlein Mission, having recently arrived from Cuba.

Mrs. S. D. Dove, of Memphis, Tenn., has been a reader of the Advocate for nearly sixty-three years. Although she is in her eighty-second year, she still reads it with great interest.

Rev. P. H. Grice, of Meadville, Miss., left last Monday to attend the Moody Bible Institute, at Chicago, Ill.

"The dear old Advocate has been making its weekly visits to my home since 1893," writes Miss Belle Shoemaker, of Rose Hill, Miss.

We have seen a statement to the effect that the Baptist laymen of Iowa have put their State church paper into every Baptist home in the State.

Rev. A. A. Simms, our pastor at Johns, Miss., reports that the outlook on his charge is encouraging. The congregations are large, and steadily growing.

Rev. W. W. Nelson, our pastor at Foxworth, Miss., was operated on for appendicitis on February 6, in the hospital at Columbia. We are glad to learn that he is doing well.

The Durant News, in its issue of February 4, gives a full report of the sermon preached by the pastor of the Methodist church at Durant, Miss., Rev. R. P. Neblett, on the preceding Sunday.

According to announcements in The Junaluskan, the program for 1921 at Lake Junaluska, N. C., will be the best that has yet been arranged for that great center for rest, recreation, conference, training, and inspiration.

In sending us the renewal subscription of Mrs. J. T. Buckley, Winona, Miss., the pastor, Rev. T. M. Bradley, gives us the information that Mr. Buckley first gave his wife the Advocate as a wedding present forty-seven years ago. Good for him!

Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, formerly of London, will deliver a series of lectures on religious themes in the First Presbyterian Church, this city, beginning Sunday evening, February 20, and continuing every evening, and also on week days every afternoon at 4 o'clock, through the evening of March 6.

"The Messenger" is the name of the official organ of the Union City District, Memphis Conference, published and edited by the presiding elder, Rev. Robert A. Clark. The first issue, a copy of which the editor kindly sent us, is filled with interesting information for those for whom it was intended.

A "get-together meeting" was recently held in the parlors of the Methodist church at Durant, Miss., the Woman's Missionary Society and the Epworth League acting as hosts. We judge from the report of the meeting in the Durant News that Methodism in that community is in a flourishing condition.

The February number of "The Church Outlook," the monthly publication issued by Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, this city, contains an interesting sketch of Rev. James D. Parker, the founder of Parker Memorial, written by Mr. A. F. Godat, one of the leading Methodist laymen of the city.

On last Sunday morning Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer occupied the pulpit of the Westwego Presbyterian Church, addressing the children of the Sabbath school, whose live superintendent is Brother Hayes. He reports that the young folks gave his message splendid attention, and that he greatly enjoyed the service.

Our Sunday school at Rayne, La., has increased its enrollment 40 per cent since Conference, and it has the largest Men's Bible Class in the Lake Charles District. We gather these facts from the published calendar of the spring revival campaign, the campaign to run through April 3. Rev. Elmer C. Gunn is the pastor.

A revival meeting was held at Mansfield College recently, in which there were several conversions and accessions to the church. The meeting was begun by Rev. W. W. Holmes, our pastor at Lake Charles, La., but when he was called away to attend a funeral, the meeting was continued by Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District.

The second quarterly conference for the Standard and Olla charge, Louisiana Conference, showed the work to be in a flourishing condition. Twenty members have been received since Conference. The congregations are good, the Sunday schools and two Epworth Leagues are active, and the officials of the charge are efficient. The pastor, Rev. H. B. Thomason, is in favor with his people.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, our pastor at Rayne, La., requests us to call attention to an error in the Journal of the Louisiana Conference in connection with the financial report from Rayne. Instead of showing that the pastor received $1900 on a $2000 assessment, it should show that he received $1900 on an $1800 assessment.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference, honored the Advocate office with a call on Wednesday of last week. He was en route to Biloxi, Miss., to attend a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Seashore Divinity School. It is an interesting fact that the Shreveport District is one of the largest districts in the church, having, if we recall correctly, thirty-five charges, with additional work in the oil fields.

The weekly bulletin of our Sunday school at Gulfport, Miss., is full of interesting information concerning that great school. The attendance on Sunday, February 6, was 565—the largest in the history of the school. The Cradle Roll, with an enrollment of 120, is the largest in the Conference, according to the statement of the Sunday School Field Secretary. Col. J. C. Hardy is the superintendent of this wide-awake school, and Rev. W. L. Linfield is the pastor.

The Educational Rally for the Mississippi Conference will be held in Jackson on next Sunday, February 20. Instead of having the rally in the afternoon, the services will be held in the churches both morning and evening. On Monday evening, February 21, in Galloway Memorial Church, the great motion picture prepared by the Educational Commission will be shown. At least two of the outstanding leaders of Southern Methodism will take part in this rally, which is expected to do much toward advancing the interests of the Christian Education Movement.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition we hereby make the following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.
2. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.
3. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.
4. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.
5. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate In Every Methodist Home In Louisiana And Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.
2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.
3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will be found.

Nothing soothes the sorrowing like prayer and service for others.—Selected.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

NANCY S. CARRUTH was born, November 8, 1835, near Liverpool, La., and died, January 13, 1921. She was married first to J. A. Newsom, February 17, 1855, who preceded her during the Civil War. She was married again to M. A. Carruth, March 16, 1866, who also preceded her several years. Her mortal remains were laid away in the family graveyard, near the old home, January 14, 1921. She professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Church in early childhood. A host of sorrowing friends and relatives attended the funeral service, but did not weep as those who have no hope, for they are assured, if they trust Christ for salvation, they will see her again in that better land. Her present relatives left behind are: J. C. Newsom, of Baton Rouge, La., an only son; his children, and a grandson by a daughter who preceded her many years; two sisters, and one brother; a number of nephews and nieces. This dear old saint of God had told this writer she had been reading the New Orleans Christian Advocate more than 60 years. It and her Bible were her spiritual food. Might we not say in the language of the poet,

Servant of God, well done;
Thy glorious warfare passed,
The battle fought the victory won,
And thou art crowned at last.

EDWARD BENJAMIN WHEELER was born at Harpersville, Ala., June 8, 1887, and died at Shubuta, Miss., July 28, 1920. He joined the Methodist Church at 14 years, abiding in his Christian faith all his life. From serious illness in 1913, Bennie's health was permanently impaired. Tuberculosis set in, making the last years those of the invalid. Peacefully, as tiring of a long summer day, he breathed his last and slept the sleep that waits. This outline of a life of 33 years is brief—but the value of this record is to declare how clean and full of strength and sweetness life can be and is, trusting in and trusted by the Heavenly Father. Used to suffering, Bennie, as his people always called him, smiled cheerfully through his many prisoned days. Fortitude and patience were familiars. With effective study he had prepared for a business man's life—study maturing into blessings later, with reading, good reading, to which he was given. From his mother's lips is quoted this tribute to her son's memory, "He was dedicated to God when he was born—and he has never given me a moment's concern." Much sadness followed the death of this exemplary son and brother. Like grief from losing a child, he had been so long dependent. But there was no shadow of distress as to the life entered, after earth's fitful fever. His way is clear, his Redeemer lives—and he lives also. In very earnest sympathy with the mother and sisters, who lovingly tended him living, and who mourn him much, this affectionate tribute is written. With the body of his brother Walter, Bennie rests in the place of his birth, Harpersville, Ala.

WILLIAM WALTER WHEELER, son of G. W. and Willie C. Wheeler, was born at Harpersville, Ala., March 23, 1877; died at Shubuta, Miss., September 23, 1920. On September 2, 1909, he married Miss Elizabeth Neville, of Decatur, Ala. His widow, with Mabel, their 9 year old daughter, survives him. At the age of 18, Walter joined the Methodist Church, living consistently the Christian life to its close. With fixed purpose to obtain a good education, alternate years were employed in teaching and study at Greensboro, where his diploma was won in 1907. Brother Wheeler's health began to fail during 1913. Tuberculosis drove him West for recovery. Failing this he returned, coming to Shubuta. Here his home has been shadowed with trouble. Benjamin, the other brother, lay in an adjoining room, under the doom of the same disease. An admirable soldier has met his last roll call. Unfailing courage shone steadfastly from eyes remarkably deep and luminous. Walter Wheeler made every effort to get well, and to make his life the full and fruitful success for which he had prepared. But, to friend or pastor, there was only calm acceptance of his serious, critical condition—it served to help the weak of faith to sit a while with the steady spirit always simple and strong in reliance upon our Lord Jesus Christ. The lamp of life dimmed perceptibly, death was expected. The sufferer's last word, as in some perplexity, not from fear, to his physician, was, "I do not know about going to sleep—you know this is a serious situation—breathing is involved—and I may forget to wake." Eyes closed then, sleep came from which the good man waked in the Hand of God. Prayer for and true sympathy are due the tender wife; and to the mother, growing older now, the great record of 9 daughters and two sons, to her family. Both sons, with few days between their going, have gone—it seems untimely. They were good sons, giving comfort, never an anxious day to their mother. God knows of time or timeliness. And the devoted wife and mother look to meet again the husband and son, dearly loved and lost awhile. Brother Wheeler's body was taken to Harpersville, Ala., for interment.

SARAH E. COWAN passed from this life, December 5, 1920. She was the daughter of Brother W. B. Inabnett, a local elder of our church who lives on my charge. Sister Cowan was born, July 27, 1884; she was married to Mr. J. H. Cowan, December 17, 1903. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and lived a lively member of same until her death. She leaves a husband, six children, father, mother, several brothers and sisters, and a number of friends and relatives to mourn her departure. I never knew her personally (for I just came to the charge this year), but friends tell me that she was a devoted wife; gentle, loving mother; always cheerful, and trusted her God in sun or shadow. Her death almost brings to our mortal minds a doubt of the wisdom and justice of providence.

"Oh how strangely the course of nature tells,
By her, small heed of earthly suffering
That she was fashioned for a happier world than this."

Or is it not better to say that it reminds us of an immortality, a future life where the pains and ills of mortal man are lost in the realms of eternal bliss? an immortality where—

"No grief shall know the heart,
And never shall a tie be broken."

Her pastor, L. W. SMART.

REV. T. W. PIPES.

The Rev. Thomas Washington Pipes was born in Lincoln Parish, La., February 4, 1849, and died in Dallas, Tex., January 24, 1921. He was married to Czarina Brooks, February 1, 1872. To this union were born five sons and five daughters. His wife, one son and two daughters had passed on ahead. Surviving him are Mrs. Beulah Eliot, Mrs. E. B. Ward, both of Dallas, Tex., Mrs. Clarence Piper, of Coleman County, Texas, Arthur, of Shreveport, Cleveland and Thomas, of Monroe, and Charles of California. Brother Pipes was converted in his childhood days. At 14 his father passed away and upon him and his mother rested the care of a large family. Early in life he felt a call to preach and was licensed. He was never a member of the Conference, but served several years as a supply. While living in Lincoln Parish he was held in high esteem, not only by the people of his own faith, but all had great confidence in him, for in 1896 he was elected to the Legislature by the voters of his parish.

At his death he was a member of the Texas Avenue Methodist Church, Shreveport, La. While on a visit to his daughters in Dallas his end came suddenly. His remains were brought to Shreveport and his funeral was conducted by Dr. R. H. Wynn and the writer in the church that he loved so well. By the side of his wife in the Greenwood Cemetery of Shreveport, his body was laid to rest. To him the battle is over, the struggle is ended, the victory is won. To his church he has left an example of a long life of faithful service and deep consecration. To his family he has left the rich heritage of a godly and devout father.

FOURTEEN WAYS OF KILLING AN EPWORTH LEAGUE.

1. Don't come. If you come, come late.
2. If the weather doesn't suit you, don't think of coming.
3. Come bound to find fault with officers and members.
4. Never accept office. It is easier to criticize than to do things.
5. Whatever you do, don't encourage the leaders of devotional meetings.
6. Never use front seats; sit back, whisper, but don't sing.
7. If strangers come in, don't find them a seat, don't give them a book, don't ask them back.
8. Let your president do all the work. That's what he is for.
9. Visit other Leagues most of the time, don't bring new ideas back to your own.
10. Hold back your pledges as long as you can.
11. Be selfish and ask, "What do I get out of this?"
12. When you see everything running smoothly, do something to start strife.
13. Don't try to get new members, "Let George do it;" never speak of the service to any one.
14. When others put forth effort to work for the good of the League, talk about the chapter's being run by a clique.—Exchange.

FROM LAKE ARTHUR, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I spent four very pleasant years at Winnsboro, and trust that my efforts there will bear fruit for many years to come.

At the meeting of the Annual Conference at De Ridder, Nov. 3, I was assigned by the Bishop to Lake Arthur. We left Winnsboro on Friday morning, Nov. 19, and reached Lake Arthur Saturday evening about 7:30 o'clock. We were met by a large number of the officials and conveyed to Brother Buchanan's, where we had a good supper. Then Brother and Sister Buchanan brought us over to the parsonage, where everything was ready for

THIS GIRL IS A WONDER.

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $30.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You start by investing less than $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write to-day. Isabelle Inez, 244 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

living. Nice things in the way of groceries had been put in the pantry. Before leaving Winnsboro I contracted a severe cold, which left me very hoarse—and I have not gotten over it yet, but am better.

Lake Arthur is now a station, and I preach every Sunday. Our congregations have been large and appreciative.

The board of stewards met shortly after we reached Lake Arthur and fixed the pastor's salary at $1500 as a minimum, with the presiding elder's added.

I preach the second Sunday evening at 3 o'clock at Thornwell.

We have organized a mid-week prayer meeting, and the attendance is increasing and interest growing. We believe God will give us victory here. The people are kind and appreciative. The Woman's Missionary Society has put a nice stove in the parsonage, and is planning to do much more.

Our Sunday school is fine and doing efficient work.

The Epworth League is well attended.

Rev. C. A. Battle, our beloved and efficient presiding elder, came over and held our first quarterly conference on Dec. 26, and preached a fine sermon. We are planning for the Educational drive.

The good men and women have pounded us quite a bit with ducks and fish, which is always in order, and appreciated. Pray for us.

Yours fraternally,

S. D. HOWARD.

FROM TAYLORSVILLE AND MIZE CHARGE.

Dear Mr. Editor: I will just have to tell you about the two Sunday schools we have on the Taylorsville and Mize circuit. Prof. R. W. Reynolds is superintendent of the Sunday school at Taylorsville. He makes a good one, too. This school is taking on new life. Our school here is small, but we can make it larger by a little more effort. We do not have the young people here as one might expect. Mostly the older ones, even to the age of 50 and over, attend.

The other school is at Mize. Prof. J. W. Overstreet is superintendent. He, too, is a fine one. Here we have a fine company of young people, and they are wide-awake and on their job. The Senior Class is composed of the young people. They have a regular attendance of about 30 each Sunday. Mrs. Mattie McMullin is their splendid teacher. This class has made a challenge to the entire school for a contest in attendance and contributions, figured on a percentage basis.

The Sunday school has accepted the basis. The school has accepted the challenge. Each class has room to grow, and this means, come regularly to hold up the percentage in attendance. At the end of the quarter a banquet is planned. You know, this contest is pretty hot. The winning side will be entertained by the losing side. The results are, we have good attendance, good collections, and stay for church service.

If the Senior Class wins in attendance and collection over the school, they are planning to offer a challenge to any other school our size. We will let you hear from us again.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 20.

Lesson Topic: Christian Watchfulness.

Scripture Lesson: Matthew 25:1-13; Ephesians 6:13-18.

Golden Text: "Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." Matt. 24:44.

Home Readings: Monday, the Wise and the Foolish Virgins, Matt. 25:1-13; Tuesday, By Their Fruits Ye Shall Know Them, Matt. 7:15-23; Wednesday, Ready and Watching, Mark 13:28-37; Thursday, Watch Without Being Anxious, Luke 12:22-31; Friday, Watch Without Ceasing, Luke 12:32-40; Saturday, Faithful While Watching, Luke 12:41-48; Sunday, Seek Ye the Lord, Isaiah 55:1-9.

Teaching Points.

1. The King will surely come in his glory, though the time of his coming has not been revealed.
2. Only those will be prepared to welcome him who are doing his will. If preparation is not made beforehand, it will be too late.
3. Every man must make his own preparation. The "foolish virgins" could not get a supply of oil from the "wise virgins."
4. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

From Friday to Tuesday I taught a class in the "Pupil" at Purvis, Miss. We had a most delightful class and everything went off well. I was disappointed that some did not take the examinations, but I believe that the work will do good anyway.

As a result of these days the Elementary Department was reorganized and four new classes formed and a new superintendent of the Cradle Roll appointed. The Purvis school is growing and with the proper care will become a great school. While there I had the pleasure of visiting both the public school and the A. H. S. I also had the pleasure of visiting the Negro Agricultural School. I enjoyed this visit and feel that much good was accomplished.

There were fifteen hundred people in the Methodist Sunday schools in Jackson on Sunday—627 at Capitol Street, 751 at Galloway Memorial, 92 at Rankin Street, and 30 at Millsaps Memorial. This marks a record for Jackson. Yazoo City had an attendance of 277. Out of 110 enrolled in their Men's Bible Class, they had an attendance of 92. Is there a Men's Bible Class that can beat this? If so, let us know.

The district officers of the Jackson District met at the home of the presiding elder, Thursday, the 10th. Plans for the district institute were adopted and the work in general discussed. Brother Burton served us a bountiful dinner.

A MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTEST.

Dear Brother: I note with considerable interest the reports you are giving from week to week from some of the leading Sunday schools of the North Mississippi Conference. I think it would help the Mississippi Conference for a similar plan to be pursued among our churches. I think it will help to increase the efficiency of the work in the several churches, and also make it easier to secure subscriptions to the Advocate. We are trying to get every family into active touch with the Sunday school and church. To see that people in other places are working at the same religious task will be encouraging to all of us. Yesterday, the 6th, was the banner day in the Methodist Sunday school of Yazoo City. Never before did this church have as many at Sunday school, and these from our own membership, very few visitors being present. Our total attendance was 277, or fifty-five per cent of the total membership of the church, as reported to the Annual Conference.

The most remarkable feature of this Sunday school, however, is the Men's Bible Class. It has been only four months since we got the men of this town interested in the church and Sunday school. Yesterday we had 92 men present in this Bible class out of an enrollment of 110. I would like to hear from Centenary (McComb), Columbia, First Church (Laurel), Hattiesburg, Brookhaven, Jackson, and Meridian, or any other church, Gulfport especially, to see if they are beating this record on the basis of church membership.

Yours fraternally,
L. E. ALFORD.

REV. R. H. B. GLADNEY AT HOULKA, MISS.

We have had the pleasure of just completing the study of "Life in the Making" for the graded Sunday school work under the guidance of that able instructor, R. H. B. Gladney, Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference.

Brother Gladney began his work here on January 23 and finished on the 30th; and to say that the thirteen that took this course of study were more than repaid for this privilege, is putting it mildly, as Brother Gladney is one of the foremost instructors in this line of endeavor. We can heartily say that we are proud of his being among us and certainly want him in our midst again soon.

A WORD FOR THE LIVING.

By G. W. Barr.

In a helpful way, it is seldom the case that enough has ever been said about a good man, but it is often the case that nothing at all is said to encourage the faithful and true. It is true, also, that our good word is generally spoken after death. We should not wait till the appetite is gone to give our crumb. So for turning a new leaf, a better time than now will never come. Brother Isaac L. Peebles is the man for whom I have a word. I have been acquainted with Brother Peebles for quite a number of years, and from the time I first knew him until now his walk has been just the same. He meets all people with a smile and a word of good advice. His visits are attended with the very best results because his purpose is to build up. I do not know when the call came for his service in the Divine field, but I do know that he obeyed. The life he is living clearly indicates to us that his chief delight consist in telling his people about Jesus, the great light of the world. In these chaotic times no variation in his step can be seen, but all the while he is devoting himself to service, and not to self. Self-denial keeps his cup of happiness full and running over. Brother Peebles is Christlike, and for all people to be like him, is all that is necessary to make this world a paradise.

"Give courage to him who speaks and acts aright;
Show him our gratitude, while he is in 'sight.
He is our friend now, and after he departs,
His voice will still reverberate in our hearts."

FROM PURVIS CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: This is my second year at Purvis. The Purvis church is still living and making some progress. The country part of the charge has drawn up some. We let Brooklyn have one church, and we buried one church (it was dead when I came here), so we have only two churches in the country. We are trying to move one of them and consolidate two communities and have one good, live church. I am preaching on "Spiritual Resources" as directed by the Educational Movement. The people are becoming very much interested; and large congregations attend the services. I believe that this is one of the greatest movements that the church has ever launched. I am trying to carry out every part of it. There never was a time when it was needed more, or when it would do more good. God is in this movement. It will succeed.

Brother J. C. Chambers will be with us from Friday of this week until the next Wednesday, to teach our Teacher-training Class. We are putting on a campaign at the same time for increase in membership.

We have the support and co-operation of the people and feel sure of success.

Your brother,
W. M. WILLIAMS.

INCOME TAX FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW.

Births, deaths, and marriages during the year 1920 affect materially income tax returns for that year.

Millions of babies were added to family circles, each of whom brings an exemption of $200 in the parents' income tax return.

Widows and widowers who lost their husbands or wives during the year are especially affected. They are single for the purpose of the income tax law and are granted only an exemption of $1,000, unless the head of a family.

Persons who were divorced or separated by mutual agreement during the year also must consider themselves as single persons.

The status of the taxpayer on December 31, 1920, determines the amount of the exemptions. If on that day the taxpayer was married and living with wife or husband, claim may be made for $2,000 exemption. If single, or married and not living with wife or husband on December 31, the exemption is only $1,000.

Persons who reached majority during the year and whose earnings for that period amounted to $1,000 or more, or $2,000 or more, according to their marital status, must file a return and pay a tax on their net income in excess of those amounts.

To avoid penalty, the return must be in the hands of the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which the taxpayer lives, or has his principal place of business, on or before midnight of March 15, 1921.—Bulletin.

LEST WE FORGET.

By Rev. S. Curtis Yates.

This is our first year in the Delta section of the Magnolia State, but it takes no second process of the mind to perceive that this is indeed a favored land. In the days of the American exploration a man whose vision had the sweep of a prophet's said of the Mississippi River Valley, "'Tis the grandest realm ever prepared by the hand of God for man's abode." And when the Creator rested from his labors his eyes filled with delight as they surveyed his handiwork; and they must have rested on the "wide extended plains" of the Mississippi Delta when he said, "It is good." The Delta is a realm with a history that reads like a romance; it is one with a mighty destiny before it—it takes no gift of prophecy to foresee this. One day the world's highest type of civilization expressed in material and aesthetic accomplishments may center here, and, if civilization continues to move in cycles, the spade and pick in other millenniums be employed in revealing historic truth as they so reveal it amid the buried cities and vanished empires of the Euphrates and the Nile. When the earth is wrapped in darkness and silence, there may be seen at least one grey streak of light and that is over some river valley; and when the sun of a new day rises to conjure a new life in old earth, up some river course it advances, and over some fertile valley it reaches the zenith. We ought to thank God every day we live for the Methodist Joshuas and Calebs who spied out this land and whose valor asserted itself, though the giant sons of Anak towered, when they said, "Let us go up at once, and possess the land; for we are well able to overcome it."

In the pioneer days of the State, the Methodist preacher in the Mississippi Delta walked by the side of the frontiersman, enduring every hardship and braving every peril the trail-blazer knows. Girded as with camel's hair, fed as on locusts and wild honey, the early Mississippi Methodist, at once a Puritan and a Cavalier, laid broad and deep the foundations of his church, and from his labor has risen the structure that to-day is pre-eminent in the Delta. John Robertson, Newt Vick, John Ford, Matthew Bowman, what a magnificent constellation in the morning sky of Mississippi Methodism, Bishop Bascom saying of such men, "They labored, suffered, triumphed in obscurity and want. Principle alone sustained them, and their glory was that of action." There are in this county (Washington) seventy-five miles of concrete roads and a goodly portion of the remaining roads are hard-surfaced. What a contrast with the roads over which the early Methodist ministers had to ride! One of the members of the infant Mississippi Conference wrote: "Many days that I travel I have to swim through creeks and swamps. I tie all my plunder fast on my horse and take him by the bridle, and swim sometimes a hundred yards. But this I can say: while my body is wet with water and chilled with cold, my soul is filled with heavenly fire."

Doctor Durham, of Candler School of Theology, told of his making the rounds as a young presiding elder in North Carolina. He was driving through the hills complaining to himself of the hardships through which he was passing, although he was riding in a spring buggy drawn by two horses. A negro driver held the reins and the doctor reflected upon the hard life of a presiding elder. A hard drive brought him one day to a home where he was to spend the night. It was not a sumptuous home, but the family received him gladly. The negro attended to the horses while he, cold and dejected, tried to feign cheerfulness with the family about the fireside. The supper consisted of fat bacon, huge soda biscuits, and thick, bitter coffee. The doctor said he seriously thought of giving up as presiding elder, so hard was the life. Sitting around the fine wood fire that night, it was told him that very house used to be the stopping-place of the sainted Asbury, and that many were the hard days' ride the man used to make—the man, old and infirm, driven at times by pain and weakness to dismount and lie down on the roadside for a moment of respite—to reach this home. Doctor Durham said that in that hour his soul became mightily stirred, for over the selfsame road he had passed in comparative luxury, in a spring buggy, drawn by two horses, driven by a negro; and a moment later in the privacy of his bedroom he broke down and wept because in secrecy he had dared to complain. So sacrifice and fidelity did not cease to be a virtue in the ministerial life with the passing away of the pioneers of the Methodist Church: worthy men and brave caught up the "flaming torch" from falling hands and bore it, and are bearing it, in a manner worthy of the best Methodist traditions. Methodism has kept pace with the growth and development of the country, its influence overspreading the land like a hallowing benediction. In all good conscience we may sing,

"Faith of our fathers; living still

In spite of dungeon, fire, and sword:
O how our hearts beat high with joy
When'er we hear that glorious word!

Faith of our fathers! holy faith!
We will be true to thee till death!"

The church is not "marking time" here; its song is not "Hold the Fort;" it does not believe in "retrenchment;" it is not content to "hold the ground already won." Such policies have no place in the economy of the church, such expressions no place in Methodist terminology. Every apparent silence of the church is a signal for a concerted, triumphant cry; every seeming pause, a momentary poise for a mighty blow. However, there are many who insist that "the church is not what it used to be," and they bemoan its infirmity; they say we do not have the revivals we once did, charging it to the "ungodly preachers" of the church, while many of the preachers say it is because the devil has got the world by the tail with a down-hill pull. Neither is right. While the possibility of great revivals such as we once had has about passed away, the church is leading the people to see that religion is more than being converted every year, more than "fleeing the wrath to come," more than a vehicle on which to ride into glory, more than a door through which one escapes hell. Any spiritual upheaval that is worthy of the name does more than stir the emotions of men: it reaches and consecrates every relationship of life. We have begun to learn what "entire sanctification" is, which Bishop McConnell says is the sanctification "of everything we can get our hands on." But not a few refuse to believe that a religion is more than a lachrymal process and praising God with a loud voice, yet the fact remains that the conserving, interpreting program of the church upon which we have at last entered must center in any religion worthy of the name. It takes a potent influence to break one's grip upon his money; to make of him a "profitable servant;" and to move him to say, "I am a steward of God." The Methodist Church erred in the past in failing to emphasize this Christian fundamental; the people were, in this matter, fed on sour grapes, and the children's teeth have been set on edge ever since.

The Program for 1921.

In January I mailed to each auxiliary a personal message from our Council officer, Mrs. Perry, in regard to the "Missionary Tour" we are to take in 1921. I quote below from Mrs. Perry's letters to me and from the Voice in regard to the new plan. Please read carefully:

"I think the plan of the programs for next year is going to be the most attractive that we have had. The Yearbook is arranged as a "Missionary Journey," six months to be spent in the United States and six months in the Orient. There will be a round-trip ticket and a passport in each Yearbook and if the young people will only throw themselves into the spirit of the plan I am sure that they will get a great deal out of the year's study.

"It is most desirable for each member to have her own Yearbook, and if the president will order a supply I do not believe she will have a great deal of trouble in selling them at five cents per copy. The ticket and the passport were prepared with the thought of each member having one, and also to add to the reality of the trip. Some one should be appointed to be at the door each month, give a word of welcome as the members arrive, and to tear off the coupons from the ticket. If the name of the member is written on the back of each card, the record of attendance could be easily kept in this way; also helping to exercise the idea of travel.

"The histories of the United States, Japan, Korea and China should be consulted freely. Books of travel in these countries will be of inestimable value. These and other material may be found in the public libraries, and each month should find groups of young people frequenting the libraries for information on the next month's program."

Each auxiliary should secure good maps of the countries to be visited and the journeys should be traced on them.

The program material will give suggestions for the impersonation of a number of our deaconesses and missionaries, and it will make the journeys more real if some are appointed to play these parts.

I hope you ordered pledge cards for the January meeting. They may be had free from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Nashville, Tenn. Let us go to Okolona prepared to pledge liberally. Make a pledge that means sacrifice.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The "Vieux Carre de la Ville."

The Woman's Missionary Society of Rayne Memorial met with the Young People's Society in a joint meeting at St. Mark's Hall on Saturday, January 29, at 2 p. m., with seventy present. This was to carry out in reality a part of the Young People's Missionary Tour Program for 1921. As both societies were to study New Orleans for February, it was decided to meet on the last Saturday in January in order that the young people could attend and, at the same time, not interfere with their school duties.

After a short business meeting the party left St. Mark's Hall to see some of the old French quarter with its romantic history, to realize again its need of redemption, and to know some of the plans for work established for righteousness within its gates. The main streets of the "Vieux Carre" have always been Royal and Chartres, and in a lesser degree, Bourbon and Rampart. On the side of Dumaine, between Royal and Chartres, stands a quaint low-browed old building with wide, shadowy porches. This building figures in Cable's Story, "Tite Poulette." It is there described as "the legacy bequeathed to M. Adam John by M. John of the Good Children's Social Club." The large three-story building on the upper side is known as the "Haunted House." This was the home of M. and Madam Labaurie. With wealth, education, and position, they entertained lavishly and the elite of New Orleans were wont to frequent their salons. Here Lafayette was a guest for a short while during his visit to the city. On one occasion the building caught on fire and in the attempt to extinguish the flames the upper portion of the residence was invaded by firemen. On entering the attic they discovered seven negro slaves, all more or less mutilated and almost dead from hunger. Further investigation of this place revealed numerous instruments of torture; it appeared that Madam Labaurie was in the habit of devoting her leisure hours to the torture of her slaves. After some time the residence was rebuilt and it became, in turn, a school for girls, a private residence, a factory, and a cheap boarding house.

The still existing church of St. Mary Archbishopric dates from 1846 and contains some interesting stained and painted windows. One that is set near to the altar is adorned with a curious picture of the battle of New Orleans and depicts the fact that during the night preceding the engagement the nuns kept vigil in their chapel, praying for the success of American arms.

The site on which the St. Louis Cathedral stands was selected by Blenville for that purpose when he laid out the town in 1718. The church remained there for seventy years, when it was destroyed by fire. For several years the site lay vacant; then Don Andres, almonaster of Roxas, a wealthy Spanish nobleman and official of the city government, undertook to replace it with a large and handsome structure entirely at his own expense. The building cost $500,000. The only return which the pious founder asked for his generous gift was that forever after, on Saturday afternoons, mass would be said at its altar for the repose of his soul.

In the center of a triangular plot, in another part of this interesting district, is a statue erected to the memory of Margaret Haughery, the philanthropist. Margaret was a native of Baltimore, of Irish parentage; she came to New Orleans with her husband, but soon afterward his death, and that of their only child, left Margaret alone in the world. She obtained employment in the Orphan Asylum established in New Orleans by Julian Poydras, and when the Sisters in charge of the institution removed to an establishment of their own, Margaret became manager of their dairy.

Later, she went into business for herself, her dairy prospered, and in 1866 she acquired a large bakery. This good woman never learned to read or write, and was always extremely simple in her dress and manners, but her memory will live in the hearts of the people for years to come.

Another great woman was the "Little Lame Woman," Miss Sophie B. Wright, who had a high school for girls, and later instituted a night school for boys.

Last, but not the least we will mention, was our beloved Mrs. Lilly Meekings, of Mary Werlein Mission, whose love for her Master and for humanity caused her to be known and remembered as "the angel of the Irish Channel."

When the afternoon was spent and night gathered us all to our homes again, we felt that we had lived through a chapter of the past, and that the old French town must yield to the call of the better day—and we are glad that St. Mark's stands there as a herald of that better time. May the work and workers at St. Mark's be as a fortress for righteousness as the church life is taught and interpreted to the people of many nations who now live within the borders of the interesting and romantic old "Vieux Carre."

My work is promising this year. A real Santa Claus came Christmas (I did not know who it was) and remembered every one. The preacher, his lady, and the kiddies were all included, and Santa even remembered the cow with good hay and the red chickens with a treat. Salary was increased at the first meeting of the Board of Stewards, something more than $300 over last year. This is a great field. I preach in six different communities and could occupy as many more if I had more spreading capacity. The Lecompte High School has an enrollment of 450 and the two Sunday schools an enrollment of 125 combined. What do you think of that for an opportunity? Lemorrie had 250 in public schools and no Sunday school until October 1, last year. I could go on and name a half dozen places with the same proportion of needs and opportunity. No part of missionary money is being spent in this country either. Our Conference Board seems to be forgetting the country places, or ignoring them. If we continue, we will have time for bitter repentance, too. Holy Rollers, Seventh-Day Baptists, Mormons and What Nots are in the field. We are doing our best under the circumstances and are hopeful for the outcome. The year promises well. Our leaders are optimistic and at work. The preacher expects to preach three times each Sunday, unless it be the 5th Sunday, and then sometimes in the week. FROM BROOKLYN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have begun our second year on Brooklyn charge with bright prospects for a good year. We have had our first quarterly conference. Brother Sullivan was with us Sunday and Sunday night, and preached some very valuable sermons that every one seemed to enjoy.

The people of our charge gave us a real "pounding" for a New Year's gift.

To Stop a Cough Quick take HAYES' HEALING HONEY, a cough medicine which stops the cough by healing the inflamed and irritated tissues.

A box of GROVE'S O-PEN-TRATE SALVE for Chest Colds, Head Colds and Croup is enclosed with every bottle of HAYES' HEALING HONEY. The salve should be rubbed on the chest and throat of children suffering from a Cold or Croup.

The healing effect of Hayes' Healing Honey inside the throat combined with the healing effect of Grove's O-Pen-Trate Salve through the pores of the skin soon stops a cough.

Both remedies are packed in one carton and the cost of the combined treatment is 35c.

Just ask your druggist for HAYES' HEALING HONEY.

From Bond we received a linen shower, and from Brooklyn Missionary Society we received other household furnishings, which we appreciate. We feel that we have a good people to serve, and pray that we may do a better work this year than last for our Master. Pray for us.

FROM VAUGHAN CIRCUIT.

Well, Brother Carley, I reckon a few words from this part of the field will be of interest to some of the readers; so I will try and give a sort of outline of my arrival, and what I find here and about, on the circuit.

We arrived on the parsonage grounds, December 21, 1920. Found a few of the choice ladies of the little town of Deasonville at parsonage to give us a very cordial welcome, which they did in more ways than just a handshake and "We are glad to see you."

Some of the choice laymen were at the depot to convey us out to our place—the parsonage—and, altogether, we felt as if our lot had fallen in a goodly heritage, indeed.

I find here on the Vaughan circuit a choice people; all seem to be trying to outdo the other fellow in their courtesies towards and thoughtfulness of the pastor and his family, for which we are very thankful. Thank the Lord for such a good people to live among and to try to labor for and with!

We have met with encouragement at every church on the work. Good congregations have met to welcome us at each appointment, the services being attended with the presence of the Holy Spirit. And we feel that there will be revivals at every church on the charge. The fact is, we are already planning to that end; and many have pledged to pray that God, our Heavenly Father, will grant these things for which we are praying, because we are asking it in the name of Jesus, His only Son.

Our new presiding elder—not new in the P. E.'s office—was with us January 22 and 23, preaching at both the churches—Ellison and Vaughan—to large and appreciative audiences. The sermons were of a very high order and gave no uncertain sound in condemning sin and the evil practices of the day.

While the assessment for the support of the ministry was not what it should have been, as we thought, yet it will take care of the pastor by his being frugal and economical. That we have always tried to do.

We hope, Mr. Editor, to be able to show our grateful appreciation of the good things done for us by a kind and thoughtful people, by rendering good service in preaching, praying, visiting, and taking care of the Master's vineyard which it has been our lot to fall heir to for this year.

May the Lord continue his blessings abundantly upon you, and enable you to continue sending out so good a paper as the New Orleans Christian Advocate is. My only regret is, that I cannot get the people to see the need of putting this splendid religious paper in their homes. But we shall keep hammering away at the matter and get as many subscribers as possible. Your friend and brother,

W. L. BLACKWELL, P. C.

Vaughan, Miss.

WE MUST KEEP STEP.

Dear Brother Carley: I have just read, "I Must Keep Faith," by a Methodist Layman; I pronounce it fine, and if large quantities could be distributed throughout our Methodism I am sure it would do good. But one reason he did not mention that I wish to call attention to: The Centenary is our forward movement for missions; if we withhold from missions, we shall surely die as a church. Now, in regard to our Educational Movement: we must keep step with this much-needed forward movement, or surely be trampled by the chariot of God's kingdom "as God goes marching on." To this end we will want to enlist each and every organization and arouse every latent energy and power of our church—the Woman's Missionary Societies, both adult and juvenile, Epworth Leagues, and even talk and pray about this in our prayer meetings. We must arouse church and denominational pride in our people, and recognize that all that we call our own, in reality, is the Lord's. But above these, there is the indisputable fact that education, or information, which are synonymous terms, must precede religion. Then let that education be Christian. "How can they believe in a God of whom they have not heard?" We have some fine schools begun; I should like to see them well endowed that they may become a fixed part of our church in this great country of ours. Let our motto be: "In faith, in hope, in love, all together for success in this great movement"—failure is not in our vocabulary. While we do His good will, He abides with us still!

O. P. ARMOUR.

HOW DOCTORS
TREAT COLDS
AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

NOTES FROM JACKSON DISTRICT.

Dear Brother Carley: The Jackson District Stewards met in Galloway Memorial Church on January 5, with our new presiding elder, Rev. M. L. Burton, in the chair. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. J. P. McKeown. Rev. J. A. Foreman led in prayer. Mr. M. S. Enochs was elected secretary. A committee was appointed to fix the presiding elder's salary and to apportion it with the Conference assessment to the various charges.

During the session splendid speeches were made by Dr. A. F. Watkins, Prof. J. M. Sullivan, Prof. G. L. Harrell, Rev. B. F. Lewis, Rev. J. M. Morse, and Rev. M. L. Burton. These speeches were in the main along educational lines.

Every pastor present promised to read at least one book each month during the year, the presiding elder taking as his minimum two books. In spite of low prices of cotton and lumber and the high prices on things to eat and wear, there was an optimistic tone running through the whole day's sessions.

The work in the several charges in the district, as far as I have heard, is starting off very satisfactorily. One of the outstanding features of the work in Yazoo City is the Men's Bible Class, which is steadily growing and wielding a splendid influence in that community. Brother Alford is to be congratulated on having such a splendid organization.

Rev. H. M. Johnson reports a substantial increase in the Sunday school at Bolton; and good crowds attend the services at Raymond.

Rev. H. A. Gatlin, our new pastor at Canton, is reported to be preaching to full houses each Sunday. I hope under the inspiration of this good man they will be able to build a new house of worship soon.

Rev. W. L. Blackwell reports that his work is starting off well at Vaughan, Mississippi.

Of all the preachers in the District who should feel complimented, Rev. F. L. Applewhite should lead them all. His people gave him a warm welcome on arriving at Rankin Street, and then on Tuesday of last week they gave him a royal reception, at which reception nearly all of the Methodist preachers of Jackson were present and, best of all, Bishop, McMurtry was there and made a speech. Judging from the spirit of that evening, Brother Applewhite should have a fine year in this new charge of his.

The work at Brandon is moving along well under the leadership of our consecrated pastor, Rev. J. G. Galloway.

Otto porter is one of our busiest men, being the pastor at Sharon, Miss., and student at Millsaps College, driving his flivver back and forth daily from his charge to the college. However, it does not seem to worry him as his health seems to be about the same.

Rev. C. H. Ellis is finishing his new church at Camden, and is very hopeful for the year.

These are some of the items of interest that have drifted to my ear. Our presiding elder tells us that only one or two charges have sought to decrease the pastor's salary and several have raised it over last year.

About one hundred additions so far since Conference have been reported.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and give a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

a great many of these on profession of faith. We are hoping and praying for a good year all over the Jackson District.

The Lord has been good to us and we certainly should do nothing less than our best for him. We are praying and working for at least twenty-five volunteers for the ministry and mission fields from the District this year. Some volunteers have already been reported.

As I get track of items of interest from over the District, I will be glad to send them to you.

Sincerely,
H. F. TOLLE.

A GREAT REVIVAL AT SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY.

The greatest revival in the history of Southern Methodism was brought to a close Sunday night with a great Jubilee service. Under the leadership of President H. A. Boaz, assisted by John A. Rice, professor of Old Testament interpretation, and Sherwood Eddy, international Y. M. C. A. secretary, and with the hearty co-operation of the entire faculty, practically the whole student body swept into the Kingdom of God. More than two hundred dedicated their lives for special service. The entire life of the university has been filled with the Spirit of God. Southern Methodist University faces the future with new zeal and confidence in the possibilities of Christian education. Great gratitude fills our hearts for the outpouring of His Spirit upon us.

Dr. Rice spoke in chapel the week preceding the revival on the subject of "Christianity in Modern Terms," setting the students to thinking. Dr. Boaz, executive head of the university, who has successfully completed a drive for $1,000,000 endowment fund, preached twice each day except Saturday, when Sherwood Eddy addressed the students in the morning and Mrs. Eddy in the evening, with a great power over the entire student body not only because of his messages but because of the life that the students know to be behind them. Mr. Eddy's presentation of the world's needs as a challenge to life service was responded to by many students. The Jubilee service represented the highest point of the meeting with many conversions and with testimonies by many students. Mr. Eddy, speaking to the pastor of the Highland Park church, the Rev. Glenn Flinn, said that the faculty of the university was "the most earnest Christian faculty" that he had ever met.

A Conservation Committee of students assisted by faculty advisors will follow up the revival services by starting Bible and Mission Study classes, and by determining the exact number of students who have volunteered for foreign missionary and special life work.—Reporter.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE LITTLE THINGS FIRST.

The ambition to accomplish some great thing in the world is both natural and legitimate. It is in the heart of every man to rise above the level of mediocrity by doing something that will stand as a monument to him in days to come—to realize the full development of the powers he feels stirring in his soul. But it is very seldom that a man springs suddenly from the ranks of the "nothing-doers" into the heroic company of the mighty in thought and deed. Even in those cases where a man has burst from obscurity into fame, a careful investigation will show that there has been a process of preparation that involved the doing of many apparently insignificant and unimportant things. It is a kind of law of success that the little things always come first. As a matter of fact, there really are no small things. Whatever lies in the line of duty, whether it seem great or small, is the big thing at that time and for that person. There may be no glamour of glory about a commonplace task—but it is a part of the foundation upon which a great life is builded.

VERY STRANGE.

We had never thought of it in that light before, but it must have become a strange thing in some circles for a woman to love a little child. At any rate, we saw this interesting news item the other day: "Lady —, wife of Sir —, is passionately fond of children." That was all there was to it; it was enough.

THOUGHT DOES IT.

No matter what people generally think of Henry Ford, all will have to admit that he has accomplished some remarkable things in the industrial world. In the application of his gospel of high wages, low cost of production per unit, and large output, he has developed one of the greatest manufacturing plants the world has ever known. In explanation of what he has already achieved and of what he hopes to do, he gives full credit to the thinker. People hate to think, he says; yet it is thought and planning that count in the accomplishment of any great undertaking. If a mere preacher, or college professor, or philosopher should state this fundamental truth, a great many people would be inclined to turn up their noses at such academic nonsense; "thinking is all right," they would say, "but give us the man who does things." Well, Mr. Ford has done things as a result of his thinking. Now, children, run along to school.

TOO BAD!

We learn from the newspapers that some of the followers of racing in New Orleans, thwarted in their design of continuing the "sport" in this city during Lent, have succeeded in getting a foothold in Shreveport, where they hope to establish a permanent track after running an abbreviated season this year. The statement has appeared in the press that the promoters of this new enterprise have little hope of making a great profit out of the races now, but after the people of Shreveport have become "educated" in betting on the ponies, they expect to reap a rich reward. It is too bad that this beautiful, prosperous, progressive city of North Louisiana is to have to contend with an institution that has not a single thing to commend it, and that has many a crime, many a ruined life, many a broken heart to condemn it. Horse racing cannot be maintained without gambling; unless the citizens of Shreveport want to see many of their young men—and young women, too—demoralized by the gambling mania, they will leave no stone unturned to block the plans of those who are promoting a "sport" that is already outlawed in most of the cities of the country.

PAY IT WITH TOBACCO MONEY.

We saw a statement the other day to the effect that in one of our States the total annual expenditure for education amounts to only six dollars per child, while the amount expended each year for tobacco in the United States is fifteen dollars per capita. We suppose Southern Methodists spend their proportion of this fifteen dollars per capita; if we would spend a little less for tobacco and a little more for education, we could go a long way toward raising $33,000,000 for our schools and colleges without touching the fringe of our financial resources.

A RUMINATION ABOUT RUTS.

A rut is the groove worn by the passage of anything in following the line of least resistance. The longer a rut is followed, the deeper it becomes. The deeper the rut is, the harder it is to get out of it. A deep rut has ruined many a good road. It is easier to fall into a rut than it is to climb out of one. A rut always ends at the same place—a blind man can follow it. Minds, as well as buggy-wheels, sometimes run in ruts. It is a misfortune for a man to be in a rut and not know it. It is a pity for a man to know he is in a rut and yet be unable to get out of it. It is a tragedy for a man not to want to get out of a rut he knows he is in. Moral: Beware of ruts.

SERVICE VERSUS SOCIETY.

One of the most heartening things we have read recently is the account in local newspapers of the determination of a young lady of one of the wealthiest Jewish families in New Orleans to give up a brilliant social career for the profession of a trained nurse. This determination is not a mere fancy on her part, since she has already spent three years in one of the leading hospitals in strenuous preparation for her chosen work, and on last Saturday evening received her diploma as a graduate trained nurse. We do not know the influences that entered into her decision, but it must have been that the call to service in behalf of her fellow-man was stronger than the appeal of social enjoyment. This call to service is a wonderful thing that stirs in the heart of our young people and leads them to make what the world calls sacrifices for the sake of the good they can do. The world may see the sacrifices—but it cannot know the joy that rewards those who serve others rather than self. If it could, it would speak, not of sacrifice, but of salvation.

WE HOPE HE IS RIGHT.

A distinguished actor in New Orleans last week was interviewed by an enterprising newspaper with reference to his opinion of the stage to-day, especially as to the so-called sex plays. His statement is interesting from the standpoint of those who maintain that human nature is essentially clean—that good makes a stronger appeal than evil. We hope he is right in his prediction as to the future of the stage. He says: "The clean plays will live long after the bare-legged and sex plays have ceased even to be known. I have studied the problem thoroughly, and it is one in which I am intimately interested . . . Some of these shows, being well press-agented, have made money, but they died. They cannot live. They teach nothing. They do not raise the drama. They accomplish naught. . . . I cannot see any future for the problem, sex, or vulgar play. The one that is going to succeed is the clean, wholesome play that makes people think and puts them in mind of the home folks. You will see in time that I am right." We hope some of the play writers and theatre managers will take his view of the case.

MY FATHER KNOWS.

"Your Heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things."

By Wilbur Fisk Tillet.

My Father knows my every want;
No help he ever fails to grant
When'er I seek his mind to know,
His will to do, his love to show:
He knows, he knows, my Father knows,
And safe his child where'er he goes.

My Father sees my every need,
His watchful eyes scan every deed;
Nor can I wander from his sight
Whose presence fills my life with light:
He sees, he sees, my Father sees,
And from all ill his child he frees.

My Father hears my every cry,
His listening ears catch every sigh;
Nor can I call to him in vain
Whose power and love my life sustain:
He hears, he hears, my Father hears,
No prayer of faith escapes his ears.

My Father cares, he cares for me,
However low my lot may be;
However great, however small
My burdens be, he cares for all:
He cares, he cares, my Father cares,
His children's burdens all he bears.

My Father loves with love so strong,
It fills my heart with grateful song;
Nor life nor death nor depth nor height
Can hide me from his loving sight:
He loves, he loves, my Father loves,
And safe his child where'er he moves.

My Father knows, my Father hears,
My Father sees, my Father cares,
My Father loves because he knows,
And, knowing all, his love o'erflows:
He sees, he hears, he cares, he knows,
With love for all his heart o'erflows!

RELIGIOUS BOOKS A NECESSITY OF THE SOUL.

By Bishop William A. Quayle.

Just one thing in the world, of the world, has cubic dimensions. That one thing is the soul.
Out of the world and in the world both is that Vast Cubic Dimension, the Almighty God. The soul is God's relative, the one majesty that history knows, and whose carryings on are the romance of earth.

The one thing that appertains to the entirety of the cubic measure of the soul is religion. So viewed, religion is the only great thing with which to reckon. When a man gets religion the whole he is, has the tide of the eternal sea invade it.
Every bay and creek and rivulet and island and continent and trivial neck of protruding sand, is visited by religion. This is the graphic and immense procedure of our rugged world. Religion takes all man is into account for all the lands and seas he shall dwell on or sail on for eternity. How less than gossamer seem the other hawsers which anchor the soul compared with this vast grip which is the grip of God. Students who delight in majestic circumstances and inclusions and excursions have here the lure of the ages. Star dust and the universe-in-the-making, what is that to match with the soul in the making? Religion is our one worth-while endeavor, our sole earthly occupation. As the planets take the same road as the sun, so all earthly matters but trail the soul in its tremendous orbit.

Religion, then, being the one sufficient occupation for the soul, whatever fosters religion is the soul's friend. You cannot expect an angel to read a last year's almanac. He reads the road-book of eternity. Every reading we engage in as living, growing, deathless men and women is as a last summer's daily paper filled with advertisements of bankrupt stocks compared with religious reading.
Religious books are by any mensuration the vascular reading of the soul. Every worthiest book in fiction, poetry, history, biology, philosophy, heads out into religion as the headlands reach out into the sea. Who wants to measure up to his vastness must read religious books. The reason Shakespeare will not let go of us is because he is getting out to dim sky lines of life where we feel the breath of "that bourne from which no traveler returns." Greatly stated, Shakespeare is a religious poet. All great things are religion-bound.

Consider religious books. Read them. The danger to our generation is that we read papers but not books. Papers pass; books abide. The residents are books. They who mean to be residents of times and eternities would do well, therefore, to read permanent literature. If all Christian people could be prevailed on to read religious books, we should not be so flurried, so apt to catch each peevish gust of passing unbelief and malbelief.
The things which hammer people in the face like a sword-stroke as being new things like the vagaries of "The invisible king" (I spell it with a little "k" because it is impersonal) would be known as an often appearing vagary known these thousands of years and bobbing up about every so often like a water-logged stump below a waterfall.
We should get safe and impregnable in our large reaches if only we were familiar with the yesterdays of religious and semi- and pseudo-religious thought.

When anyone gets in the Gulf Stream he hits summer. There is a Gulf Stream of the soul which, if one frequents, he shall have weather which is propitious to the spirit. He shall escape the fetters of ice and arctic zones where no ships sail but only remain prisoners of frozen seas.

I do not believe any one can become cubic by reading simply periodical literature. He must do that and move farther than it. If Lowell rejoiced to name himself a "bookman," more should each religious person record himself "a religious bookman." Religious books are always nosing about even when in little bays, in the somewheres of a very great sea. The Mediterranean or Great Sea is what the classical geographies called their major known sea. The Mediterranean of human life is The Soul; and all voyages in it are religious; and the guide books of this vast water are Religious Books; and whoso would sail and sail and have no wreck and fear no frowning storm clouds, how-soever black and bleak they were, must familiarize him with the Chart called The Bible and other books less in bulk than that Holy Book but questing in the same vast seas, where man at every prayer and looking for the Cross and struggling up to God makes the master quest, which is the search for God and the finding Him.—The Christian Advocate (New York).

THE BIBLE'S INFLUENCE ON LIFE.

Proportioned to the grandeur of its contents has been the beneficent influence of the Bible upon human life.

This influence has been attained, and it will continue, not by reason of minute accuracy as to the years of Methuselah, or the number of armed men in the Exodus, or the genealogical tables of the Old or the New Testament. In things immeasurably deeper, higher, broader than these is the hiding of its power. In its disclosure of God, in its holy law, in its provision of redemption from enslaved and condemned souls, in its doctrine of brotherhood and of immortality, lies its victorious strength—and there it will remain, whatever the issue of the present study.

Let all be summed up in the words of Wendell Phillips: "The answer to the Shaster is India; the answer to Confucianism is China; the answer to the Bible is the Christian civilization of Protestant Europe and America."—Edward G. Andrews.

CHURCH ARCHITECTURE.

By Rev. J. A. Baylor, D.D., Architectural Secretary, Board of Church Extension.

Article I.

In the years immediately preceding the world war, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, invested annually in the building of churches and parsonages a sum exceeding $3,500,000. For a period of at least five years all building has been very much restricted. Taking into consideration the increased cost of building, and the new vision of building needs which has come to our people, we are justified in believing that within the first two years following the return of reasonably favorable conditions enterprises will be set forward totaling at least twelve or fifteen millions of dollars.

It is certainly of the utmost importance that reasonable care be taken to secure the best possible return on such a tremendous expenditure; hence the importance of any agency or department within the church which may in a measure influence helpfully the shaping of such a program. Herein lies the opportunity and the responsibility of the Architectural Department of the Board of Church Extension. The selection of an architect for the development of a plan is of vital importance. The architect determines the appearance, and, in a large measure, the arrangement of a building, and specifies the materials to be used in its construction, and in doing this determine to a very great degree just what return the church shall receive on its investment. Exercise care, therefore, in selecting an architect.

A church is a place for preaching. The preached Word has always occupied a central place in the Methodist Movement, and in this we are in accord with the New Testament. Methodism has a message for the masses; so a prime requirement is an auditorium, spacious, attractive, cheerful and comfortable, where all the people can see the preacher and hear his message. If by poor arrangement, or defective proportions, the acoustics are such that only half the audience hears distinctly, the church is getting only 50 per cent return on this part of its investment. The writer knows of some large and recently completed structures against which this objection might be fairly lodged. Not only is a good auditorium essential, but the arrangement of choir, platform, and aisles should be such as to favor, and not hinder, the evangelistic activities which have been so honored of God in the past.

The church has a teaching function. More and more, the importance of religious education is being recognized. The Sunday school now is being directed on lines of efficiency. Sound and proved principles of pedagogy are being applied, and standards developed in the practice of the public schools are used for arrangement and equipment.
Unless the architect has studied these problems and is familiar with these standards, he cannot work out an arrangement favorable to the greatest church efficiency.

The appearance of the church building is important. The structure has a silent message of its own, and to every passer-by it speaks of unseen values, spiritual realities, of heaven and of God. Strength, dignity and beauty belong to it, so that naturally the words of the Psalmist will come into mind: "How aimable are thy tabernacles, oh Lord, God of hosts"; "Walk about Zion; go round about her; tell the towers thereof."

Durability is an essential feature, when we consider that the church building is an investment. The life of the structure measures the return on the investment. Durability is determined largely by the materials chosen for the construction. It is not wise to erect a "cheap" building. As in everything else, cheapness is apparent. The tawdry, tinselled, gingerbread effect soon shows wear. Somehow we feel that this is unworthy of the house of God. It is better to go more slowly and build surely. The great cathedrals represent generations of pious effort and devotion. The architect whose greatest claim is that he will build a church more cheaply than any other, is seldom the best architect to employ. Time confers an element of attractiveness which nothing else can give. The traditions, memories, sentiment and devotion of vanished multitudes enrich the stones of the old church, and fill its shadowy aisles like rich incense. Not long since the author was in a certain Southern city, and while waiting for a train visited two or three churches. The inscription on the corner-stone of one venerable pile indicated that it had stood there considerably more than a century, but the building was well preserved. There were no cracks in the walls, and it seemed good for other centuries. Various tablets, statues and memorial windows showed something of the pious sentiment woven about it since its erection. There was something restful and reassuring in its quiet strength. Down the street a little way stood another building of pretentious proportions, but showing much evidence of poor planning and cheap construction. Weathered paint and disjointed sheet metal all too soon proclaimed the attempt to deceive the eye with the appearance of more lasting materials. Walls too thin for the loads they carried were disfigured by ugly cracks, and yet, as evidenced by the inscription on the corner-stone, this building had been standing less than a score of years.

The Architectural Department of the Board of Church Extension is prepared to assist greatly pastors and building committees in building enterprises. Suggestive plans, showing various types of modern church buildings, large and small, are furnished on request; also suggestive plans for parsonages, full information as to modern standards of Sunday school equipment and arrangement, church lighting, heating, furnishing, and the names of competent and reliable architects cheerfully furnished. Special study has been given to an improved type of church for rural communities. Mistakes can be avoided and money saved by consulting this Department in the beginning of a building enterprise. Where competent architectural service is not otherwise available, plans and specifications for any kind of building can be furnished directly from the office of the Board.

OUR NEW AMERICANS.

By Dr. R. L. Russell.

The big problem before the American churches is playing the part of the big brother to the foreign-born brother in our midst. We must first learn that he is our brother and treat him as such. He is unacquainted with our customs and is, therefore, timid and shrinking, and will not approach us for guidance. We must make the approach. He is our problem, but we must not neglect him. To make him a Christian—loving our ideals, believing in our religion—is our real task. But we must undertake it unafraid. The Father who loveth all alike will help. Christ, our Savior, has power to lift them, and the Holy Spirit can enlighten them. Suppose we undertake this problem in a big way.

Recently I came across this little poem by Edgar A. Guest, which is wonderfully significant. If you clearly analyze it, it will make you a better American and a bigger brother to this stranger in our midst:

The Big Problem.

He's a hunkie or a wop, he's a dago or a Greek,
And the language of our country is a tongue he cannot speak.
He has sought the land of freedom, for the dream is in his breast,
And he's groping rather blindly for the things he knows are best,
He's a power for good or evil, he will hate us or revere,
And become a friend or traitor from the way we treat him here.

He has heard about our country in a vague and hazy way,
It's the land where men are happy and where little children play;
But he's strange to all our customs that surround him, now he's here,
And he misses much that's spoken, but he doesn't quite know how,
And he'll never grow to like us if we neglect him now.

There's a mighty force within him if we only understood;
We can spurn it to our danger, or can mold it to our good;
We can turn our backs upon him, or can make of him a friend,
Who will come to speak our language and the flag we love, defend;
But it's not enough to pay him for the labor of his hand—
We must teach him all our customs till he learns to love our land.

He's a hunkie or a wop, he's a dago or a Greek,
But he's very busy thinking, though his thoughts he cannot speak;
In the future he'll be something—that is true of every man—
And the blame may be upon us if he's not American.
So let's make of him a Yankee and let's treat him like a friend,
And let's teach him love of freedom—it will pay us in the end.

WHEN A YOUNG MAN QUIT.

Yes, it is always a time to think about when a young man resolves to quit. He comes to a cross-road. One goes to the right, the other to the left. He does not know which way to take. He has come down one highway and given himself to its tasks, and did not flinch under any difficulties. But the crossroads demand that he shall decide whether he shall quit the one and choose the other. If he goes on the way he has started, he knows about what the end will be. He has seen others go that way, and he has seen how they came out. He looked forward. He used his powers to take a glance ahead as he saw those engaged in his occupation arriving at the end of the day's work and the close of their lives. He was not satisfied as to the outcome. The vision threw him into a period of discontent. He could not be satisfied, as he once was. Should he go on in that way? The forces of decision came closer and closer upon him until they had encompassed him round about. He had to decide. He faced them. He resolved to quit and take another tack on his life course.

The years fly past. Ambition and industry mark the way. Education is obtained. The profession of law is entered. Life brings its remunerations. The young man is past middle life. But there he stands, strong and honored with recognition and position and fame and high respect surrounding him. He made the decision and was willing to pay the price of success.

This is the story given by Mr. Harry First of a young man in the United States postal service:

"Back in the middle eighties a young man just out of school was appointed to a position as railway postal clerk with instructions to report at headquarters located at Cincinnati. This boy—for such he was—happened to be a product of the old commonwealth of Kentucky, the interior town of Columbia, in the country of Adair. Almost a giant in size, of keen intellect, and exceptionally strong in personal appearance and clean-cut address, he was not long in making his presence observed in any gathering. This young man entered upon his duties with zest and enthusiasm, which naturally resulted in rapid promotion until he had attained a 'clerkship in charge' on one of the heavy railway postal lines. His studious habits, genial disposition, and all-round high type of man won for him special distinction among his companions in the postal service, and it was generally predicted that he would rise to some high position in the Post Office Department, so completely did he seem to fit into the service of which he was a part. After a period of several years he startled one of his friends one day by remarking: 'Coming up the road to-day I got to thinking what a poor business the postal service is for a young man to enter as a life career, and so I have decided to resign and go back to the good old town of Columbia in the commonwealth and resume the study of law, that was interrupted when I accepted the appointment in the mail service.' Putting his decision into action, the next morning he tendered his resignation to his superior officer and retired from the service. The incident related is a leaf taken from life that happened over thirty years ago. This young man followed his determination to a complete fulfillment; he completed his law course and was admitted to the bar, at which he practiced his profession for a long period of years with honor and distinction. Some years ago he was advanced to the bench as a judge of the appellate court, and on January 1, 1921, Judge Rollin Hurt (for such he is) took the oath of office as Chief Justice of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, the highest tribunal of justice of the State, and thus this career, started in a postal car through 'self-determination' plus pluck, persistency and ability, coupled with character and manhood, reached the height of a cherished ambition."

The judge is an honored member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. His eminence is such as to make all his friends take a delight in his success. But back in his life stands that moment of a great decision, the lone hour when no man can help, when a man wrestles with his future and, like Jacob, resolves that he will not desist until the right comes and the power is released to execute a great decision that will change the entire course of life. That meant up from the dead level to the heights. That meant a rise from the ways of mediocrity to power and fame. That meant to break away from the ranks and to assume the position of generalship. That meant the full realization of life; for no man can come to the full expansion of his powers if he is not willing to wager a decision to quit what he is doing and take the chances in trying to learn a new way and follow new ideals.—Western Christian Advocate.

INTRODUCING J. G. HOUSTON.

Allow me to introduce to you Mr. J. G. Houston, of New Albany, Miss., the Director of the Christian Education Movement for the North Mississippi Conference.

Mr. Houston is a young man, one of the youngest Directors in the church. He is a progressive business man, a merchant, president of the Houston Dry Goods Company of New Albany. He is the superintendent of our Sunday school, and has one of the most progressive, successful Sunday schools in the church. He is the grandson of the Rev. Alec Houston, one of the great pioneer preachers of Mississippi. He is the son of Mr. James Houston, of Cleveland, Miss.

Mr. Houston comes to this new work with the determination that nothing shall be left undone to make a success of the Christian Education Movement in North Mississippi. We invite the hearty co-operation of every District Director, Charge Director, Presiding Elder, and Pastor of our Conference with this young man who enjoys the perfect confidence and enthusiastic support of his local church and community and all who know him.

J. H. HOLDER,
Conference Secretary.

Christ is to human beings what the climate of Florida is to the orange and magnolia trees—their own native home. He lures us on to a goodness and harmony like his own, because the chords of divine music in us answer to his fingers.—James W. Lee.

THE PAGAN NOTE IN OUR LITERATURE AND DRAMA.

By R. F. Bishop.

Are the American people growing tired of the novel, or only surfeited with an arbitrary, unsatisfactory, present-day type of fiction, and registering their protest in the only effective way known to them? Certain it is that novel readers, or at least novel buyers, are not as much in evidence as was the case a decade or two earlier.

A mild sensation was occasioned several years ago when the announcement appeared in a literary journal that a certain publishing house, detecting the changing taste of the reading public, had ceased to bring out books of fiction and would henceforth confine itself to standard works, such as history, biography, school books, etc., as less hazardous and more profitable, on the whole, than the current run of novels.

About the same time the Literary Digest, in a comprehensive review of book publication since 1890, made it clear that "fiction has not kept pace with the general increase of book publications," and that in 1912, 9.3 per cent of the whole number of books published belonged to the fiction class, whereas in 1890 the percentage of fiction to the whole was 24.5 per cent, and in 1900 it was 20.1 per cent."

Still more recently the New York Times, in its book review department, notes a "changing order," in the type of fiction now appearing, as if the reading world had at last grown weary of the vacuities, the inane sayings and doings of the idle rich and is demanding useful information and books that deem it worth while to deal with the real issues of life.

The Stuff of Recent Fiction.

No intelligent critic will charge the waning interest in fiction to deterioration in form or slovenly, ineffective style; for never were the higher qualities of literary craftsmanship so much in evidence as now. But "the body without the spirit is dead." The trouble seems to lie in the fiction-stuff itself; much of it smells to heaven, as the result of lingering long and with ill-disguised preference among humanity's diseases; lifting aloft in a thousand varied forms the ooze of its running sores while utterly impotent to heal; strangely insensible to the higher spiritual interests; blind to the teachings of history; often hostile to the only curative agency known to the loftiest intelligence and the widest experience.

"Paganism forever trying to force back Christianity and claim the world. . . . One would not know that there was such a thing as Christianity in existence from reading these novels. . . . We are being flooded with a lot of fiction that attacks everything the world has called morality, and holds up a frantic individualism as the only dominant life-principle worth considering. Marriage is a conventionality of old-fashioned people and must not stand in the way of 'love.' . . . In three modern novels out of five of those one buys at the news stand or on the train, one wonders if the writers of these books have any sense of right or wrong left."

To these extracts, taken from the Christian Work and Evangelist, we may add the following from the editor of the British Weekly, in discussing several of the more widely read recent novels: "This again is Paganism. Fatalism is only another doctrine of Paganism. In Paganism man is powerless before the forces that play through the physical or human world. He may accept them resignedly if he will, and thus rise to be a stoic. But accept them he must. . . . The only power that can unfailingly or in any degree lift men out of nature, out of the sloughs of despond, out of entangling circumstance, . . . is Christianity. And yet after 2,000 years of universal testimony eight-tenths of our novelists forget this. It is one of their limitations."

It would seem that these "limitations," which are undoubtedly the bane of the present-day novel, are also to pronounce its doom, unless writers and publishers return to the spirit and method of the earlier day, when fiction had a wider range, serving frequently as a vehicle of truth and as a motive to duty, when great gripping works of imagination opened the highest heavens to human gaze, at the same time impelling their readers to full-orbed purposeful living in this present world, and were at least as winsome, as entertaining as the anemic novel of the present day, which so frequently lacks the vitality to pay the cost of its useless publication.

A Slogan of Paganism.

"Art for art's sake" is the slogan of a paganism that is often insolent, sometimes rankly unchaste in its suggestiveness, and always densely unaware of the profounder spiritual needs of normal human beings. To assume that nothing is to be accounted artistic, or worthy to rank as literature, which deals sympathetically with Christianity as a redemptive force is a canon of literary criticism in far too many of the houses which make a specialty of fiction. Within two years a book on the art of fiction, written by an author of large experience in the ways of publishing houses, cautions intending writers against employing religion as a motive in either the novel or the short story, as neither good literary form nor good policy.

"The object of fiction is to entertain"—only this and nothing more—so various self-elected arbiters of public taste have constantly and confidently affirmed; and publishers have blindly followed them—into a blind alley, as it now appears, so that novel publishing has come to be a dismal and unprofitable business, even—if we may credit a publisher writing under this caption in the Saturday Evening Post. Yet the common run of novels that glut the market and fail to pay the expense of publication have not been guilty of having any high moral or spiritual aim.

On the other hand, it may be recalled that several of the greatest American novels were not written from the theatrical standpoint, nor with a view merely to entertain the feeble-minded, or pleasure-sated populace. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe was not aiming to amuse the crowd when she wrote Uncle Tom's Cabin—a phenomenally popular book. But "Uncle Tom's Cabin is not literature," so it has been affirmed over and over again by a certain school of critics who are dumfounded by their failure to gauge the public taste. Certainly Mrs. Stowe's book is not "art for art's sake," but it has cast its weird spell over more people, and drawn more tears from human eyes, and roused more righteous souls into effective action against a mighty wrong than all the questionable books of the present generation taken together. And the same observation is true of another great popular work of imagination representing the more recent period and deriving no support from national or sectional feeling.

Is It a New Day?

A few months ago the startling announcement was made in various literary journals that a big mail-order house in Chicago had placed an order with the Harpers for a million copies of Ben-Hur, to be ready for their Christmas trade—so large and steadily increasing has been the demand for this entrancing book as the years roll by. A book with a message, a book that can present in a vitally sympathetic way "the spell of the Man of Galilee" and deal faithfully with the higher interest of life may be just as engaging and even far more profitable to publishers than the endless procession of much-heralded new exploitations of loose marriage and easy divorce, to say nothing of other inane, freakish or criminal antics of certain unsavory elements of society.

But the sky brightens. In a story running in a popular magazine a literary woman actually gives an account of her "conversion," and of the new inspiration and the new fullness of life growing out of that radical change. Then, too, the protests of subscribers against the really stupid descent of some of the magazines into the gutter cannot longer be ignored. Since commencing this article there has come to my table the current number of one of the best-known monthlies, which refuses to handle "faint fiction." From the letters of its correspondents the following extracts are taken:

"I want to pat you on the back for the excellent and timely 'Straight Talk.' . . . Too much contempt cannot be heaped on those publishers who prostitute their pages and debauch their readers' minds for the sake of a few extra dollars. . . . Cannot the postal authorities be invoked to stop this vicious flood?" "Even that pink-sheeted journal never dreamed of printing the vicious illustrations that boldly wink at us from the pages of so-called family magazines to-day." "Some months ago I wrote a letter of protest to another magazine on this very subject. I shall not renew my subscription." "I find out that I must cut out at least two well-known magazines that have been on my table for years. They have become insufferably foul, and henceforward it is the clean ones for me."

The church papers must at least keep even pace with the cleanest and best of the secular journals; they must "cry aloud and spare not," distinguishing between the clean and the unclean; pointing out, especially to our young people, that there are with us still masters of the art of fiction who are developing a wholesome philosophy of life; in whose pages one meets real people, winsome and lovable, whose acquaintance it may be well worth while to make.—Selected.

A MODERN ITINERANT.

Log of Auto Trip from Canton to Enterprise, Miss.

Started, with the writer as chauffeur and only passenger, eight miles from Canton, Miss., in little 4-cylinder Buick; cargo as follows: 2 handbags, comfort, steamer rug, pair man's shoes, 2 pairs lady's shoes, man's raincoat, lady's raincoat, box containing suit of clothes, dressing robe, lady's sweater, child's sweater, shoe-shine apparatus, razor, comb and brush, man's hat, lady's hat, 1 gallon of syrup, bucket containing sundries, 3 jars fruit, 5 canned goods, jar jelly, can Wesson oil, 9 hens, oil lantern, electric flashlight, hatchet, saw, auto tools, extra tire, extra inner tube, 8 pots flowers in galvanized tub, 3 flower baskets, china vase, 3 glass vases, set ice cream saucers, plates and saucers, 4x6 rug, 2 books, 6 copies Atlantic Monthly, several church papers, child's tricycle, 3 dolls, several other toys and playthings, 1 quart bottle of engine oil.

Two miles from Canton, at County Farm, took Carriage road, but crossed Pearl River at Ratliff's Ferry. Got out of river swamp in good shape, but beyond that backed into bad rut and got stuck for 50 minutes in sight of where Gammill Lumber Co. is having "right of way" cut through virgin forest. Saw some wonderful timber. A man who drives Ludlow Consolidated School wagon arriving at the room nearby where himself and mules lodge, proved a friend and pulled car out. Reached Ludlow at dark, finding boarding-house full, willing to crowd another in, but advising that lodging could be secured at home of Mr. White, three miles ahead. Little piece out mistook soft ground for hard, and was delayed 15 minutes; a negro man and his son, who said that they had helped 50 cars out along there during the season, gave speedy relief. Meant to stop with Charles White, who takes in traveling people, but at G. Pleas White's, where inquiry was being made, the sight of the luggage elicited the information that it was a Methodist preacher moving, and he was not allowed to go further that night, was given clean bed, good supper and breakfast, nice luncheon for the next noon, and started off at 8, with all needed directions. Some ice, and radiator had to be thawed out a little before engine would start.

At Lillian, 8 miles on, stopped to warm, and had quick success 'phoning to Mrs. H. that I was safe en route. Pressed on through Hillsboro and its sands without stopping, and reached Forest about 10:15. Took on 5 gallons of gasoline, and talked ten minutes to Brother W. A. Davenport in his office, who advised the upper or common dirt road into Lake, instead of gravel one. Took up en route a footman. Stopped at Lake only long enough to allow him to alight, then sped on to Lawrence, which point was reached exactly at noon. Wrote and mailed a card to Rev. J. G. Galloway. Ate the lunch. Splendid road on to Newton. Took on one quart of engine oil, learned that Pastor Jones and wife and Presiding Elder Moore were both away for the day, but talked to Sister

Moore 15 minutes.

Drove south to Garlandville, then turned east.
Stopped at a Mr. Ratcliffe's to make inquiry, and bought 60 cents worth of pecans grown on the place. Drove up to Dr. McCune's in Enterprise at 5:15 p.m., just 25½ hours after starting from Madisonville. The speedometer showed miles of trip, 101. The gasoline consumed was 10 gallons. The actual hours of driving were eleven; if all the road had been like some of it, it could have been covered in five.

One of the ladies who saw the articles removed from the car at the parsonage remarked that the trip ought to be written up; hence these lines.
When Mrs. Hawkins arrived by train the following day, she was regretting that many more things had not been loaded into the car, which could easily have been done.

WE GIVE BECAUSE ———!

By Wm. C. Allen.

A beautiful little girl has been lying ill in Philadelphia the past few days. The curly hair has been matted, the laughing eyes have lost their luster, the merry voice has been stilled. She caught a cold coming across the Atlantic because, although about treble prices compared with pre-war charges were paid, the great steamship company furnished only one blanket for each passenger and did not always turn on the heat in the midst of winter. As I looked on the exquisite form and the once rosy cheeks of my precious grandchild, I knew that her sufferings and the family anxiety on her account were direct results of conditions which were the inevitable sequences to the accursed war.

But our little one had two nurses, loving hands ministered to her, an intelligent physician knew what to do, she had milk and medicines, warm covering and a warm room. And now—thanks to the compassions of God—she is getting well!

This has made me think of the little children of the poor of Central Europe—of how millions of them have suffered the past few years and are suffering and starving to-day. I think of their wan faces, of the rickets and tuberculosis, the empty stomachs, the coverless beds, the cold rooms. I remember that when they want milk they can not get it, when their doctors prescribe medicine, they cannot furnish it, when they need warm clothing, it cannot be obtained. The poorest child in America can be taken care of, but these little ones of Australia, Germany, Poland or Serbia sink into their tiny graves by the hundreds of thousands because of the cruel blockade and the accursed war.

When I remember that relief is in sight for these foreign victims of governmental failures and crimes, I know how the great heart of my beautiful America throbs with pity for the oppressed in distant lands. We who honor Christ, and have different thoughts about Him, all know that He loved little children most of all. We know that we, too, love them and that in every land they are just as innocent of responsibility for what their elders do as, in America, are the little people who prattle around our feet. So we want to help them. We want anxious parents and friends abroad, to whom their children are just as precious as are our babies to us, to have their heart-loads lifted even as we rejoice when our dear children are called back from the yawning grave.

And then we want to give! We give because of our common humanity. We give because the fearfully torn fabric of international life can best be mended by the services of love. We give because the Savior has declared, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least—ye have done it unto Me!"

HE TOOK IT UPON HIMSELF.

Some time ago a daily newspaper printed the incident of a young man who, having completed his collego course, went to a great city to begin his business career. He first looked up the nearest church of his own denomination and said to the pastor: "My name is Jones. I have just finished college and am starting in business. Here is my church letter—I am ready for work." "He took it upon himself."

I have heard of another young man whose father died, forcing the son to leave his studies and return to the farm. The church in his neighborhood was closed. No one took any interest. No one went to church. "He took it upon himself" to canvass the community and excited enough interest to warrant inviting a minister. He then waked up parents to send children to Sunday school. He got out his cornet and his wife played the piano. They had church because "he took it upon himself."

Who does not know the story of Jacob Riis, who went about hunting opportunities to help.
"He took it unto himself" to redeem the city and lift the poor.

Any man may take the initiative in his town to talk up the church and make Christianity practical and operative. The motto to the indolent in both mind and body is, "Let George do it."

The Christian character of your church and community is as much your affair as it is your preacher's. Why fool yourself that the preacher must prove his mission by pulling you out of your obstinacy in spite of yourself? A Consistory in each Reformed church with a will to make the church go and talking Christ day by day "in season and out" will create a revival. The average man is the real evangelist. Take it upon yourself to gather a group for Sunday school or church. It makes life worth living. Nothing like it.—The Intelligencer.

HUXLEY ON THE BIBLE.

By T. L. Lewis.

In 1871, Professor Huxley, the great English agnostic, wrote one of the most glowing tributes that we have on the Bible. It is said that he influenced his children to read it, and admitted that it was a good mental stimulus for any children.
Here are three sentences from the pen of that master with 250 words of glowing praise for the Bible:

"Take the Bible as a whole; make the severest deductions which fair criticism can dictate for shortcomings and positive errors; eliminate as a sensible lay teacher would do if left to himself, all that is not desirable for children to occupy themselves with; and there still remains in this old literature a vast residuum of moral beauty and grandeur.

"And then consider that, for three centuries, this book has been woven into the life of all that is best and noblest in English history; that it has become the national epic of Britain, and is familiar to noble and simple from John O'Groat's House to Land's End as Dante and Tasso once were to the Italians; that it is written in the noblest and purest English, and abounds in exquisite beauties of mere literary form; and, finally, that it forbids the veriest hind who never left his village to be ignorant of the existence of other countries and other civilizations, and of a great past stretching back to the furthest limits of the oldest nations of the world.

"By the study of what other book could children be so much humanized and made to feel that each figure in that grand historical procession fills, like themselves, but a momentary space in the interval between two eternities; and earns the blessings or the curses of all time, according to its effort to do good and hate evil, even as they also are earning their payment for their works?—Contemporary

IMPORTANT STATEMENT BY THE TREASURER OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you say to the brethren of the Mississippi Conference that the Treasurer of the Mission Board has received the 10 per cent Conference Centenary money, which amounted this year to $11,970.32? This will aid the Board in meeting very urgent needs at present. With the help of the Journal of 1920, or such information as I can rely upon, we will render such help as can be given to each mission charge. The illness of Brother H. B. Watkins, who is Secretary for the Board, leaves the new treasurer to look for some necessary information to other sources. I feel sure the Journal will be out in a few days, and we can know the appropriation of each charge and the pastor serving. My address is Fernwood, Miss., and not Tylertown, as handed you by Brother Watkins.

We find plenty to do in our new field of labor, and our people are very kind and generous. God is very precious to us these days. Our faith is strong for a good year. Wishing you a happy year in all things, I am,

Sincerely,

A. M. BROADFOOT.

gates are elected in due time and their names

ference Board, Rev. J. T. McCafferty, Minter City,

THE YELLOW HEART.

They say there are ten thousand millionaires in America; but how many would be millionaires do you suppose there are?

In the terminology of Jesus a rich man is one who puts his trust in riches; as He said, "How hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the Kingdom of God!"

To trust in riches is to make them the supreme goal of life, to regard them as the highest good, to put them first instead of God. Money does not make misers, but the love of it.

A workman at his bench may trust in riches as really as Dives clothed in purple and fine linen and faring sumptuously every day.

It is as easy to hypnotize with a dime as with a double eagle.

There are Shylocks lounging on the benches in our parks, rich without a farthing because they are full of covetousness.

of God!"—The Intelligencer.

WHO WILL TELL THE OLD, OLD STORY?

The world does not yet sufficiently understand the story of the Cross. It must be told and retold, over and over again, in all the nations of the world.

For this story is to be the basis of safety, civilization, and salvation for all the people of all the nations.

But who will tell it?

The M. E. Church, South, has a shortage of 1,048 preachers. We can find scarcely ten per cent of the missionaries that we need. There is a deplorable lack of properly trained men and women in all the avenues of our work.

The great war caused a dearth of 5,000 missionaries. In five years the various denominations will need 100,000 men and women to properly man the foreign fields.

Where Will Workers Be Found?

These workers will come from the Christian colleges or they will not be forthcoming at all. The schools of the church furnish 95 per cent of the trained laborers.

Secularized colleges do not supply them. How many preachers and missionaries do you know who came from secular institutions?

Our own colleges gave us 236 out of 288 missionaries, and the colleges of the other churches gave us 10 of the others. Only 30 came from state and independent schools.

In five years one college of the M. E. Church sent out nearly as many missionaries as all the state universities combined. One great state school, with 1,000 Methodist students, 3,000 members of other evangelical churches, with 8,000 alumni, turned out less than 20 Christian workers in fifty years.

Pray Ye the Lord of the Harvest

Prayer is an appointed method of securing laborers for the white harvest fields of the Kingdom of God. With one accord, Methodists everywhere should pray to the Lord of the harvest that He will send forth reapers into His harvest.

This will also mean that Methodists everywhere must pray for the schools and colleges of the church. How long since have you prayed--how long since have you heard a prayer--for our schools, their faculties, their students, their work?

Is it reasonable to demand of them the highest Christian character which we expect--and which they maintain--while we withhold from them the moral and spiritual support and dynamic of our prayers?

THE SNOWBIRD.

When all the ground with snow is white,
The merry snowbird comes,
And hops about with great delight
To find the scattered crumbs.

How glad he seems to get to eat
A piece of cake or bread;
He wears no shoes upon his feet,
Nor hat upon his head.

But happiest is he, I know,
Because no cage with bars
Keeps him from walking on the snow,
And printing it with stars.

WHY BEN WENT TO THE BABY CLASS.

He did not look in the least like a baby as he started off to Sunday school in his blue suit and white necktie, and he did not feel like a baby either. Why should he, when he had been going to school for two years and had brought home a good report card every month out of that time?

But there was a mischievous spirit in Ben that morning. He did not sing with the rest of the school, though his teacher found the place in the hymn-book for him. He took no part in the opening exercises, and the lesson was hardly begun before he started to whisper a long story to Herbert Joyce.

The patient teacher reproved him gently, and tried to interest him in what she was saying, but Ben would not be interested. He kept on talking, till the other boys could not pay close attention to their lessons, and it seemed as if the hour was likely to be wasted.

Just then the superintendent passed, and the teacher spoke to him: "Mr. Berry, what do you suppose can be the trouble with a boy who will not listen to the lesson and will not let the other boys listen either?"

The superintendent looked at Ben. "If a boy acts in that way," he said, after a minute, "I think it must be because he is not quite old enough to have learned how to behave in a class like this. I know a better place for him."

He took the astonished Ben by the hand, and led him down to the baby class, where there were a lot of little fellows in kilts and curls. "I have brought you a new scholar, Miss May," said the superintendent. "This seems to be just the place for him."

The teacher smiled as she made room for Ben, but her pleasant welcome could not lift the cloud from his spirits. His cheeks grew red and hot. It was all he could do to keep from crying. He, Ben Henleigh, the best scholar in the whole second grade, put into the same class with little boys, some of whom did not even go to kindergarten! He did not know how to bear the disgrace of it.

He hated to think of telling his mother, what had happened, but he could not keep the uncomfortable secret. Out it came the minute he was in the house. "Just think, mamma! They s'posed I belonged to the baby class, and I'm seven, and my suit's the eight-year-old size."

Then he cried and mamma asked some questions. "Which is the thing to be most ashamed of, dear," she asked at length, when she understood it all, "to be thought a little boy who doesn't know just how to behave, or to be thought a big boy who will not do as well as he knows—a boy who is old enough to understand what is right, and yet chooses to do wrong?"

Ben looked bewildered. For a moment he thought hard.

"I guess it's worse to be big, and to act as if you was so little that you didn't know anything," he admitted at last, in a faint voice. "I never thought of that before."

And, what is better, he never forgot it.—Happy Hours.

THE RED RUBBER BALL.

The long train on which Dwight was travelling had been standing at a little way station for half an hour. Something was wrong with the engine. But Dwight did not care. He had been watching a freckle-faced boy about his own age who was playing ball. At last the boy saw Dwight at the window. They grinned at each other.

Dwight cupped his hands as if he were waiting for the ball. "What kind of ball is that?" he called.

"Red rubber," the freckled boy called back. Then he added, "Want to look at it?"

Before Dwight could answer he had raised one arm and tossed the ball. Dwight caught it. He pulled his pocket knife out. "This is what I play with on the train," he said.

The freckle-faced boy looked eager. "I never had any knife," he said, grinning cheerfully at his friend.

Just at that moment some one called the freckled boy quickly, and he turned to run. "Back in a second!" he called to Dwight.

The red rubber ball was not much of a ball. Dwight thought. It already had a hole in it, and the bounce was nearly gone. He was so busy looking at it that he did not notice when the wheels slowly began to move. All at once he looked up. The train was well under way, and the little yard and the freckled boy were gone.

"I've carried off that boy's ball!" cried Dwight in dismay. He told his father what had happened. "I don't even know his name," he finished.

"I'm afraid there's nothing we can do but wait till we come back this way two weeks from now," his father said. "The train always stops here a few minutes for water."

A fortnight later, when the long train stopped again at the way station, Dwight was looking out anxiously. "What shall I do?" he said. He held the ball tight. There was something heavy with it, and a string with a note tied to it. The heavy thing was a slim pocket knife with three bright blades. The note said: "I had to put something with the ball to give it ballast, so it wouldn't fall in the wrong place. Keep the ballast."

The precious minutes were flying, but Dwight did not like to throw the ball without seeing the owner. If he only knew the boy's name he could call. Then all at once he saw a face, round and jolly and peppered with freckles. Perhaps they called him Freckles for fun.

Dwight leaned out of the window and put his hand to his mouth. "Ho, Freckles!" he called.

Instantly the jolly face appeared at an open upstairs window. It looked surprised and then pleased. The signal was given for the train to move; there was not an instant to be lost.

"Catch!" cried Dwight.

The other boy made ready, and the red rubber ball flew through the air. The boy in the window caught it squarely. He looked more puzzled than ever at sight of the string and the note. Then Dwight, gazing back as the train moved faster and faster, saw him jerk the knife out. The freckle-faced boy broke into a broad grin. He leaned out of the window of the little house and waved with all his might to the boy at the window of the speeding train.—Herald and Presbyter.

A MIRROR.

"What church do you attend?" was asked of a bright young fellow doing business in one of our large cities.

"O, I just run around," he answered, gayly. "I don't understand the difference between the churches—in fact, there is a great deal in the Elblo that I don't understand, and until I do, of course, I can't join any church."

"How many hours a day do you spend studying this matter?" asked the questioner.

"Hours?" he repeated in surprise.

"Well, then, minutes?" The young man was dumb.

"Ah!" said his companion, with patient sadness, "not one. If you thought a knowledge of geology necessary to your success in life, or astronomy, or shorthand, you would not think of spending less than one hour a day in its study, perhaps two, perhaps three; and you would not expect to know or understand it without that exertion. But the knowledge of God, of Jesus Christ, of salvation—the highest and deepest of all knowledge—you sit around and wait for, and it would come like a flash of lightning."

Does any reader see a likeness of himself in this young man of business?—Our Young Folks.

"TIME OUT."

Which?

Prisoner—There is but one question that has been puzzling me ever since I came here.

Warden—And that?

Prisoner—Is this suit which I am wearing, white with black stripes or black with white stripes?—Exchange.

No Time to Celebrate.

The storm was increasing in violence and some of the deck fittings had already been swept overboard when the captain decided to send up a signal of distress. But hardly had the rocket burst over the ship when a solemn-faced passenger stepped on to the bridge. "Captain," he said, "I'd be the last person on earth to cast a damper on any man, but it seems to me that this is no time for letting off fireworks."—Boston Globe.

It Was.

The small boy's parents had distinct ideas of discipline. The walls of the sitting room were lined with mottoes, and the cane was always kept behind "Love one another." One day everything went wrong, and the little boy was whipped eight times. After the eighth caning he said, between his sobs, "D-d-don't you think it's time to take the cane from behind 'Love one another' and put it behind 'I n-n-need Thee every hour?'"

Very Simple.

He had fallen through the coal-hole. It was a quiet street. He called for help in vain. Meanwhile the pain increased until he almost fainted. He opened his eyes to find an old gentleman regarding him. "Dear me!" said the kind-hearted pedestrian. "Have you fallen through the coal-hole?"

"Not at all," replied the man, trying to smile. "As you seem to be interested, I will tell you what happened. I chanced to be in here when they built the pavement round me."—Weekly Telegraph.

Embarrassing.

A famous Scotch minister of the last century was very absent-minded and many amusing stories are told of this awkward failing. On one occasion he had arranged to preach in a certain church a few miles from Aberdeen. He set out on a pony in good time, but when near the end of the journey he felt a desire to take a pinch of snuff. The wind was blowing in his face, so he turned to enjoy the luxury. Pocketing his snuff box, he started the pony without thinking to turn it in the right direction, and he did not discover his error until he found himself back in Aberdeen, at the very time when he ought to have been preaching seven miles away.—New York Globe.

Make It Short.

The danger of overdoing an argument, political or otherwise, is illustrated by Mark Twain's experience at a meeting to raise funds for foreign missions. "When the speaker had talked 10 minutes," said Mark, "I was so impressed I decided that I would give every cent I had with me. After another 10 minutes, I concluded that I would throw into the treasury all the silver I had about me! 10 minutes later I decided I wouldn't give anything; and at the end of the talk still 10 minutes later, as the contribution plate came around, I was so utterly exhausted by the argument that I extracted $2 for my own use."—Selected.

THE DAY FOR DECISION.

Next Sunday, February 27, ought to mark a glorious culmination of the month's work in presenting to our young people the subject of Life Service. Already there has been the definite presentation of the matter for decision in some of our congregations, and the response has been of such kind as to show that many young men and women are ready to face the issues of life seriously.

We do not believe that the question of life service should be presented by high pressure methods that would cause decisions to be made under the stress of an emotional excitement that would soon pass away; but we do believe that it is part of the function of the church to bring clearly before its young people the urgent need of trained workers to carry on the organized activities of the Kingdom, along with the duty of each person's facing the facts and determining his life calling in the light of God's will.

Next Sunday is the day appointed for securing signers to the Life Service pledge; there will be no signers unless the opportunity is given. In every congregation there is probably at least one young person whose heart is already turned toward the fields of service that invite the enlistment of the whole life. Give that one person at least—and possibly many others—the opportunity of committing himself definitely to some form of Christian life service.

A GREAT SECULAR NEWSPAPER AND THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

We have studied the Sunday school so much from the view-point of the church that we may have failed to see its immense possibilities as an agency for developing the true spirit of democracy, of upright Americanism, of justice-loving citizenship. One of our great secular newspapers, the North American, of Philadelphia, has been looking at the Sunday school from this angle, and, as a result, it has launched a campaign for its strengthening against the forces that are menacing civilization. Believing that our readers will be profited and inspired by reading this pronouncement of one of the outstanding secular journals of the country, we reproduce the following editorial from the North American of January 29:

"Is democracy to live or die?

"Is Christian civilization to endure, or is it to perish?

"These grave questions are being asked everywhere throughout the civilized world. The inescapable great war, while it required bloodshed that was abhorrent to all normal men and women, aroused patriotism so exalted and a spirit of self-sacrifice so sublime that for a time it seemed as though it had created new spiritual values which would immeasurably enrich mankind.

"But the passions of greed and selfishness which everywhere so strongly manifested themselves after the war have shown that the primitive instincts are still dangerously strong in the human race.

"At the same time, democracy, which, through the defeat of the Hun, was believed to have triumphed over the forces of evil, is menaced by a power more dangerous and despotic than all the thrones which the war overthrew.

"Christian civilization, the fine flower of the democratic ideal, confronts in Bolshevism and like systems of destructive radicalism and class tyranny the supreme peril to its institutions.

"The American government and the governments of all other enlightened nations are bestirring themselves against the menace, at once so insidious and so audacious. Throughout the Union, State authorities are moving energetically to check the growth of the peril. All law-respecting elements of society and business are combining to that purpose.

"The greatest unorganized defense against the red menace is found in the American Christian home and springs from the hearts of the multitude of God-fearing, pure-minded individuals who make up the vast majority of this nation.

"The chief organized defense lies in a few institutions which have declared relentless war on the new philosophy of despotism.

"These institutions comprise the public school, the parochial school, the church and the American Sunday school. Still another institution with heroic possibilities in this respect is found in the rabbinical schools of the Jewish faith. But notwithstanding the large Jewish population in urban communities, the Jews are so small a fraction of the entire American people that it is not necessary for our present purpose to make a survey of their distinctive work against the Bolshevik propaganda.

"The Roman Catholic parochial schools have behind them the tremendous force of that highly organized church, the very corner-stone of whose philosophy is individualism as opposed to the various scholastic cults. Under the fostering care of a vast ecclesiastical system the parochial schools are well marshaled, and their resources will be utilized to the utmost in the fight against the menace of Bolshevism.

"The public schools, owned and supported as they are by the entire community, are fundamentally democratic and are the most widely diffused of the forces aligned against the red peril. Their very first purpose is to instill into the minds of their pupils a love for the democratic principle. With the resources of the State behind them and under the watchful eye of the authorities, the public schools can be counted upon to do their utmost in the war against the philosophy of disintegration.

"Equally democratic in ideals, and perhaps more democratic in administration, is the American Sunday school.

"While the public school makes its fight for democracy by teaching its civic side, the Sunday school implants in the minds of its members a love and understanding of the doctrines of Christ, which are at once the inspiration and the guiding principle of democratic civilization.

"The Sunday school is more democratic than the public school not only in administration, but also in its social side. The difference arises from the very nature of the work of the two institutions.

"The public school is for children of legal school age. The Sunday school admits every member of the family, young and old. It is to a vast population the chief agency through which acquaintance, friendships and social relations may be safely formed. It is the center of that social contact which unites large numbers of families and individuals, gives them a common interest and inspires in them fidelity to American democracy and Christian civilization.

"But the American Sunday school has the disadvantage that necessarily accompanies the volunteer system.

"While the public school is State supported and attendance is compulsory under the law, the Sunday school depends on free gifts for its support and on the voluntary effort of a large army of earnest workers for its administrative and teaching forces. Even attendance is dependent on the volunteer principle.

"Our public schools have behind them the force of public opinion and the support of the public press. On the other hand, the Sunday school, though a great democratic institution and a powerful democratizing force, is virtually ignored by the secular newspaper because of a sensitiveness toward the religious background of the Sunday school.

"The Sunday school is the only great institution in the country whose possibilities are not fully utilized in the defense of democracy against those forces which have declared implacable war on the democratic ideal.

"As a result of serious consideration of all these facts and conditions, The North American to-day starts a campaign to develop the latent resources of the American Sunday school and to bring it in our home territory to its utmost fighting strength against the forces menacing civilization.

"In this connection The North American maintains its position of an eminently secular publication. The religious side of the Sunday school we leave to those trained to the work and moved by its inspiration. Our concern is to co-operate with them to develop the Sunday school to its greatest power as a source and instrument of democracy, of right-living Americanism, of clean, justice-loving citizenship.

"In this important work we ask the earnest support and co-operation of those who regard the Sunday school as the normal gateway to church affiliation.

"But with equal earnestness we plead for the cordial help of those who are without church relationship, but who agree with us that the Sunday school is a prodigious factor for the promotion of social health and democracy, a factor which should be employed to the utmost in meeting the attacks of those evil forces bent upon the destruction of democracy, the American ideal and Christian civilization."

"WHAT HAVE YOU DONE WITH THE MONEY?"

People who invest their money in an enterprise want to know, and they have a right to know, what use has been made of that money. This is no less true of religious enterprise than it is of secular undertakings.

The Centenary Movement was a great religious enterprise undertaken by our church for the promotion of its work throughout the world. In response to the appeal made through that Movement, our people subscribed, according to our latest information, the immense sum of $36,973,848, of which amount $9,826,383.22 had been paid to January 31, 1921. It is altogether proper, therefore, for those who contributed this amount to ask of those who have been charged with the responsibility of administering it, "What have you done with the money?"

This is treated as a fair question by the Centenary Commission, and it is frankly answered in a booklet that has just been issued by the Commission. Without going into unnecessary details, the booklet shows where the money has been expended, for what purpose, and how much has been given to each cause. The reading of this booklet will answer definitely and satisfactorily the questions that are in the minds of those who have given this money, and we hope every one of them will read it. If it is not otherwise available, write to the Centenary Commission, Nashville, Tenn., for a copy—and rejoice that you have had a part in so great a work.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Of the 288 missionaries of our church, 236 came out of Methodist schools.

Our Sunday school at Gulfport, Miss., is making a fine record in attendance. There were 576 present on February 13. The goal has been set at 700 for Easter.

Bishop W. F. McMurry arrived in New Orleans on Tuesday morning of this week, coming from Shreveport, to keep in close touch with the work of the church in this important center.

Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, has announced that the district conference will be held at Utica, Miss., beginning at 9 o'clock, a.m., May 11.

The Annual Meeting of the Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society is in session at Baton Rouge this week. A large delegation left New Orleans on Tuesday morning to attend its sessions.

Dr. Theodore Copeland writes us, under date of February 15, that he has just held a great meeting at Clifton Forge, Va. Sixty-five people were received into the church on profession of faith at one service.

Rev. Walter M. Jones, of Guntown, Miss., has our thanks for a convenient blotter, on the back of which are the announcements of the services at the various points on his charge, with an invitation to attend.

The Durant (Miss.) News, of February 11, gave prominent space to an account of the services in the Methodist church on the preceding Sunday, and to a general statement concerning the Christian Education Movement.

Rev. Jas. S. Duke, a member of the Mississippi Conference, is doing a great work as industrial secretary of the Y. M. C. A., at Laurel, Miss.—so we are informed by a friend who is in position to know of his activities.

A card from Rev. Paul H. Grice, who is now attending Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, states that he is greatly impressed by the work of the institution. Rev. R. H. Barr is filling Brother Grice's appointments on the Meadville and Bude charge during his absence.

Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpaur, of Amite, La., favored the Advocate office with a call on Monday of last week. He gave a good report of the work under his care. The prayer meeting at Amite is one of the best we know of, the attendance being unusually good.

In eighty of the ninety schools of our church, there are 689 young men preparing for the ministry. All of these could be used as pastors to-day without displacing a member of an Annual Conference, and we should still have nearly four hundred charges to be supplied.

Since Tuesday, February 22, was a national holiday, no mail was delivered in the city, and it is likely that some of the reports from Sunday schools participating in the North Mississippi contest did not reach us in time for this week's issue of the Advocate on that account.

The Men's Bible Class of Rayne, La., has planned a "Rice Luncheon" for Thursday evening of this week, at which, in addition to a delicious repast, there will be speeches by various guests. The editor of the Advocate has been honored with an invitation to attend. Rev. Elmer C. Gunn is the efficient pastor at Rayne.

Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, our pastor at West Monroe, La., requests us to make a correction in the figures of the Annual Conference Minutes by stating that the pastor was paid $1258 on an assessment of $1200, and that the presiding elder was paid $180 on an assessment of $180. Everything was paid in full by the church.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation to attend the marriage of Miss Ruth Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Briscoe Carter, to Mr. Alfred E. Soderman, at the residence of the bride's parents, Minden, La., on Tuesday, March 1, at five o'clock p. m. In advance of the happy event, we pray that the richest blessings of Heaven may rest upon the young couple.

Rev. George Fox, of Bunkie, La., Rev. Jno. F. Foster, of Franklin, La., and Brother W. T. Holland, of Greensburg, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Tuesday of last week. They were in the city to attend the meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge. Brother Foster and Rev. C. C. Wier were honored with election to high positions in the fraternity.

Our work at Glenmora, La., is prospering under the leadership of Rev. W. W. Perry, who is in fine favor with his people. An annex to the church is now being built, at a cost of $2000, which will greatly increase the usefulness of the building. A Woman's Missionary Society has recently been organized which promises to be very fine, and there is a Scout organization with about thirty boys in it.

Bishop W. B. Murrah honored the Advocate office with a call on Monday of this week. He was in fine health and spirits, and gave a good report of the meetings at Jackson, Miss., the day before, in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. In spite of inclement weather, the attendance was large, and much interest was evident. The Bishop preached at Galloway Memorial Church at the morning hour.

A note from Rev. J. L. Evans, our pastor at Oakdale, La., says: "We have a church membership of 225, and a Sunday school of 221. The pastor teaches a Men's Bible Class of 42. During the past month, seven men, all over thirty years of age, joined the church by vows and on profession of faith." We are not surprised to learn that this energetic pastor is preaching to large congregations every Sunday.

Dr. W. W. Drake, pastor of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, La., conducted a meeting at Whitworth College during the first week in February that had most gracious results. A considerable number of the students committed themselves definitely to the Christian faith and life, several joined the church, about thirty-five signed the stewardship covenant, and twelve offered themselves for life service.

Our First Church, Laurel, Miss., has made a fine beginning of the year's work. More than $10,000 has been subscribed on the budget. The pastor's salary has been fixed at $3000, an increase of $600 over last year. A fine feature of the weekly bulletin is an itemized report of the treasurer, from which the membership may know just exactly the financial status of the church. Rev. Osmond S. Lewis is the efficient and popular pastor.

Bishop W. F. McMurry is doing a great deal of very efficient work in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. We note from his engagements as given by the Commission that he is greatly in demand throughout the church. At the same time, he is keeping in close touch with the situation in Louisiana and Mississippi. He is expected to be in New Orleans this week, and at Grenada, Miss., on March 2, in attendance on the North Mississippi Conference Set-up Meeting.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. George Fox, Bunkie, La., 4; Mrs. L. C. Wellborn, Columbia, Miss., 2; Rev. Jas. M. Lewis, Collins, Miss., 4; J. H. Jamieson, New Albany, Miss., 2; Rev. P. M. Caraway, Sicily Island, La., 4; Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, Fernwood, Miss., 25; F. A. Howell, Durant, Miss., 8; Miss Madge S. WINTER FRIENDS.

When winter skies are dull and gray,
And summer birds have flown away;
When not a flower decks the hill,
And even insect sounds are still;
When winds go moaning through the trees,
And all the beauty that one sees
Is cloud sailing to and fro,
How good it seems to see a crow!

To see a crow and hear it caw,
What though the winds are bleak and raw!

This speck of black with flapping wings
Unto the drooping spirit brings
A feeling of contented cheer,
As though a long-lost friend drew near,
He brightens winter's dreary days,
This crow, with all his homely wads.

And when a flock of them invade
The stillness, and on dress parade,
O'er snow-white fields with stately tread,
Or circling darkly overhead,
Disport in antics that proclaim
Them despots, still their very name
In winter makes our pulses glow—
We love them, though their name is Crow.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition, we hereby make the following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.
2. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.
3. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.
4. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.
5. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate in Every Methodist Home in Louisiana and Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.
2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.
3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will be found.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Mrs. W. C. POTTS, wife of Mr. William Calrel Potts, near Byhalia, Miss., was born December 21, 1847, and died on January 4, 1921. She was the daughter of Dr. F. E. Williams. When a young girl she professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Church. Another mother in Israel has fallen asleep in Jesus. To those like this good woman, death has no terror. The good but see death; the wicked taste it. Amid the duties and responsibilities of life, the religion of Jesus and the promise of God to the righteous were her guide and consolation. To her mourning relatives, may I extend my sympathy and say: "Your loss is her eternal gain. We must bow in humble submission to the will of our Creator." A. I. S.

Mrs. MARTHA EMELINE McEWEN was born, July 29, 1846, and died, December 10, 1920, at the old home near the Topisaw Camp Ground. In 1864 she was married to Mr. Archie McEwen. To this union twelve children were born. She leaves four daughters, two sons, thirty grandchildren and fifteen great-grandchildren. She joined the Methodist Church in early life. She loved her Bible. "In my Father's house are many mansions"—and in those mansions our dear mother dwells. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, Brother Castles.

Her daughter,
JOSEPHINE McCORMICK.

MRS. SARAH ELIZABETH TERRY (nee Johnson) was born and reared in Baldwin County, Ala. She was sixty-five years old at the time of her death, and had been married about forty-two years. She was the mother of five sons and one daughter (Mrs. Allen). She was converted in her early married life and united with the Methodist Church. While she was not of the nature to sound a trumpet about her religion, she was pronounced in her convictions and clear and sure in her religious experience and life. She knew and loved Jesus. Her intimate friends and her relatives could see the religious fire and fervor kindling and brightening in her life as the years came and went. When she approached the end she was called upon to suffer many severe pains, but her brother, Rev. H. T. Johnson, of the Alabama Conference, who visited her in her last illness, also her pastor and many friends who visited her, could see that it was well with her soul—that at eventide it was light with her. Brother L. A. Darsey, who had been her pastor more than once and who had visited her a number of times in her last illness, conducted the funeral service, assisted by Rev. M. B. Sharbrough and the writer. We expect to see her again at the Father's right hand.

WALDO W. MOORE.

In the sudden death of Mrs. HALL PEYTON, on January 8, 1921, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Many Methodist Church has lost one of its beloved members. We desire to express our love and esteem for a friend whom we shall hold in affectionate remembrance; therefore be it resolved:

First—That we rejoice in the fact that Mrs. Peyton was a true and loyal Christian, that she loved and strove to emulate the teachings of Christ.

Second—That we extend to the members of the bereaved family, husband, children, and parents our heartfelt sympathy and prayers.

Third—That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Society, also copies be sent to her family.

Signed by: Mrs. J. G. Brown, Mrs. E. M. Fraser, Mrs. A. R. Peterson, Committee.

On the night of December 27, 1920, the death angel visited the home of O. N. Parker, near Hopewell, and took Mrs. KATE STUCKEY to her final reward. Mrs. Kate McLeod Stuckey was born on March 1, 1841. She united with the Methodist Church in her girlhood, and remained a faithful member thereof during the remainder of her life. Mrs. Stuckey was married twice. Her first husband was J. W. Parker, to whom she was united in marriage in 1867. To this marriage were born four sons, one of them dying in young manhood. Her good husband was taken from her in 1890. She was married to J. G. Stuckey in the summer of 1893. He was called home in 1914. Mrs. Stuckey leaves one sister, one brother, three sons, six grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Her going was sad, but the sadness was turned into joy because they know Christ has claimed his own. I never knew a saintlier person than was Sister Stuckey. It was always a pleasure and benediction to call upon her. A better friend or more loyal supporter a pastor never had. May her loved ones follow in her footsteps. Her remains were laid away in the cemetery at Harrisville, Miss., the services being conducted by her pastor, assisted by Brother Breland, of Hopewell.

I. H. SELLS, P. C.

Mrs. ELLEN MORGAN (nee Hoffpauir) was born near Indian Bayou, Lafayette Parish, Louisiana, December 1, 1842, and died at Ridge, in the same parish, January 28, 1921. She was married to Saul Morgan. To this union six girls and two boys were born. The old Indian Bayou church lost one of its oldest and most devoted Christians, having been a member of the M. E. Church, South, from childhood. She was converted when only twelve years of age and spent her long life in the service of God. Sister Morgan was truly a good woman, a Christian of the best type, faithful in all relationships of life, and was honored and loved by a large circle of friends to whom her pure life was a benediction. Her shouts and praises will be missed in the old Indian Bayou church. Her works and name will ever be kept sacred by her many loved ones. Her family has much to be thankful for, knowing that their loss is heaven's gain. Besides her eight children, she leaves thirty-six grandchildren, forty-four great-grandchildren, four brothers, three sisters, and a host of relatives and friends. Her remains were laid to rest beside her companion in the old Indian Bayou cemetery. A large crowd attended. The funeral services were held by her pastor.

T. H. HOFFPAUIR.

On January 19, 1921, at his home near Hanna, La., Brother H. S. CROW passed to his reward. He was born at Darlington, S. C., December 8, 1849. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Crow, moved to Louisiana when he was quite small. Brother Crow gave his heart to God and united with the Methodist Church early in life. He was united in marriage with Miss Mary Rudd, June 18, 1895, and two fine boys came to bless their home. Brother Crow had been a constant sufferer for the past ten years, but through all his suffering he showed the spirit of a Christian. He was patient, kind and thoughtful to all, and especially his good wife, who was so tender and attentive. No one could do for him quite so well as could his wife. I always found the home a place where God was honored and loved. There are a host of relatives and friends who sympathize with Sister Crow and her two sons, Burton and John, in their sad experience, and our prayers are that God will throw His arm of love around them, and cause them to realize more fully His fatherly care. The funeral of Brother Crow was conducted by Rev. S. S. Bogan, and his body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Butler, La., January 20, 1921.

Epworth League.

LIFE SERVICE OF THE EPWORTH LEAGUE IN THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

The Methodist Church has consistently held that there is a divine impulsion for responding to Christian work, without which we should not be willing to recommend young men and women to undertake the tasks of Christian service as a life career, or to present to them the opportunities to serve the needy.

The great leaders of Israel responded as they were conscious of the divine leadership. The founders and leaders of the early church were those who responded, not by the will of men but only by the will of God. No lesser conviction must persuade those who respond now.

For sake of convenience in administration we find the forms of separated service divided into three groups, (a) The Christian Ministry, (b) Home Missions, (c) Foreign Missions. Actual service in any such grouping will often overlap, but the field of service as presenting distinct opportunities is clear.

Those who undertake the separated tasks of the church need that they be free for the ministry distinctly belonging to their office and that the Christian laity assume the responsibility of "serving tables." There are increasing fields of service belonging especially to the laity; many of such fields are now served largely by Christian ministers who have been released because of the necessity for such work. The most outstanding places are such as, (1) teachers of religious education in colleges, (2) a limited number of directors of religious activities in our large churches, and (3) various salaried administrative and field workers as are employed in the field work of the Sunday school, Epworth League, and other lay organizations. There are other various fields of service that preferably belong to the service of the laity, such as presidents of schools and colleges, editors and business managers of our church papers.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 231G Marcellus Avenue, Marasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv

But to every one that is called to the separated tasks of the kingdom there will be thousands who will serve by maintaining the activities of the local church as they follow their business pursuits; and even those of the laity who can qualify for the tasks opening to them will be few as compared with those who fill the ranks of our membership. The question then arises, "Is there no special task for the ordinary member to do?" Unreservedly we answer, "There is." To this end there has been prepared a plan of part-time service and cards for enlistment which will be furnished free on request. These cards are to be kept on file in the local church for the use of the pastor.

In the Christian Education Movement the life service activities of the Epworth League represent the normal program intended for every chapter. As life service is presented in the chapter or other meetings, for those who have not previously signed declaration cards, let these lines of service be clearly defined:

1. For those who respond for Christian service as a life career—a separated task—these fields are open: (a) The Christian Ministry, (b) Home Missions, (c) Foreign Missions.

2. For the laity there are limited fields to serve in, as (a) Teachers of religious education in colleges, (b) Directors of religious activities in large churches, (c) Salaried administrative and field workers in the several societies.

3. For all who remain in the local church there are many avenues of service. These should be interested either at this time or later in signing for part-time service.

Those who have not previously signed declaration cards for (1) or (2) should enlist while the opportunities are presented by the Christian Education Movement. Such declaration cards will be taken up by the visiting speaker, but duplicate copies should be first made. One copy should be kept in the local church for the information of the pastor and the second copy sent the Conference Life Service Superintendent.

Life Service Bands should be formed for those who sign under (1). Literature fully explaining the work of the Band may be had from your Conference Life Service Superintendent.

GARFIELD EVANS.

FROM SEMINARY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Things are moving along smoothly with us here. We have been most cordially received by these good people. We have been here long enough to be pretty well acquainted on this splendid charge, and we like the people just fine. They convinced us from the beginning that they know how to make a pastor feel at ease in their midst. A lot of real nice things have been put in the parsonage for our comfort, and the end is not yet. The Seminary church gave us a substantial "pounding" some few evenings since, which has proved to help wonderfully in our work along the way. We are preaching to splendid congregations every Sunday. The services have been of a high spiritual order, and helpful to us all.

The Rev. W. W. Graves, our beloved presiding elder, was with us Sunday, February 6, and preached three soul-inspiring sermons to the delight of all those who heard him. His messages were clear, logical and forceful. On Monday following, we had what I would call a delightful quarterly conference session, and all seemed to enjoy the business side of the conference fully as well as they did the many good talks which were made by various ones who were present on that happy occasion. The outlook for the year is encouraging. We are all hard at work, happy and on the way "home."

Yours to help and save,

HILARY S. WESTBROOK.

FROM GUNTOWN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: May I make, through the Advocate, a correction of the Minute report from the Shaw charge, North Mississippi Conference?

I do not think it was my mistake; however, it may have been, that the Minutes show an indebtedness of $6,000 against the parsonage. This $6,000 should have been in the column representing Insurance on Churches and Parsonage.

Prospects are somewhat favorable on our new charge. We landed amongst a host of old friends who have made it very pleasant for us. The usual courtesies have been abundantly bestowed upon us. We have had fine congregations at the services. We have a new Epworth League at Baldwin, with 28 members.

We boast of a good presiding elder on this, the Corinth District. In a letter from Brother Randolph to-day, he said: "I have held 22 quarterly conferences and no preacher's salary reduced; some have been raised."

Our official board is made up of as fair-minded men as Southern Methodism can produce. Cordially,

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and 1/2 oz. of Argemone. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

SOUTH IS TURNING AGAINST CALOMEL

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Responsible for Change for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.

Teaching Points.

1. God will require an account from us of every gift he has placed in our hands.
2. We have to wait for the Lord's coming—but we must work while we wait.
3. Our ability to please God is not dependent upon the number of talents we possess, but upon the use we make of the smallest gift that is ours.
4. We ought to do what we are capable of doing, and not waste our time trying to do another man's work.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Twelve of the denominations are preparing to call attention to the most important thing in the world, namely, the childhood of the church. The last week in April through the first week in May is the time designated. Literature will be furnished such schools as care to enter into this helpful campaign in behalf of our children.

Just preceding Children's Week, all our schools are expected to observe Sunday School Day. It is not too early to make plans for the observance of this day more generally than ever. The truth is, this day can be observed anywhere you can get a dozen people together.

We have been talking about family altars and how to establish them. We all know it is important to have fam-

A TONIC

Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is simply Iron and Quinine suspended in syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs QUININE to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. Destroys Malarial germs and Grip germs by its Strengthening, Invigorating Effect. 60c.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

ily worship, but we do not fully realize the far-reaching influence of such an institution. The first step to take is to have an altar in your own home that amounts to real worship and you will have the power to get others to follow your example. Use the Home Quarterly as a help in family worship and note the results.

The Fidelias, an organized class of young men, has accepted a missionary special, a Korean language teacher, at $120 a year. We have one hundred classes in the Conference that could do the same thing with all ease. While money is hard to get is the time to have a great faith in God. Let him show us what he can do without "easy" money.

Rev. C. A. Parks, pastor at Tunica, invited me to teach a class of his teachers this week. The class is using the text, "Life in the Making." Several members of the class have said they had no idea there was so much practical, helpful material in this book. The school at Tunica has more than filled the church building. The next step for the church to take is to provide room to accommodate the children and young people.

If you want to know the kind of work you are doing for the children four and five years old, use the following as a test. It would be a good thing to cut this out and paste it in your teacher's textbook for future use:

1. Do the children associate God with the common objects and duties of life?
2. Have they learned to talk to God in prayer, and do they know several beautiful prayers appropriate to their years?
3. Have they been taught to love to and sing beautiful songs appropriate to their years?
4. Do they know well a large number of stories showing God's love and care?
5. Do they try to please papa, mamma, and God?
6. Are they growing helpful, tender-hearted, considerate of others?

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

From Saturday, the 12th, until Wednesday, the 16th, I had the delightful pleasure of being at Picayune and teaching a class in "Life In the Making." I feel that this was a successful class and that much was accomplished. Two Bible classes were organized, an adult class and a senior class. This school needs more room badly. It is hoped that the way will be opened for them to have more room. There are some fine workers at Picayune. Their new superintendent has taken charge and, as he put it, "A new broom sweeps clean," and he expects to be a "new broom." I visited the High School at Picayune and the Industrial Consolidated School. I feel that our church at Picayune is in better shape than it has ever been in.

Thursday, the 17th, was spent in Brookhaven in consultation with the presiding elder and workers in the interest of the District Institute.

From March 20 to April 29, I will have the slides that were shown at our Annual Conference in the interest of Sunday school work. I hope to be able to show these slides every night of the time that I will have them. Won't each one of the brethren who would like to have the slides shown, drop me a card? I can only reach about one-third of the Conference in this time, but am extremely anxious to do this. Let me hear from you.

Don't forget, whatever else you do, to pray for the Sunday school work and workers.

The Brookhaven District Institute will meet at Topisaw, May 10, at 2:30 p.m.

The Jackson District Institute will meet at Brandon, May 11, at 9:30 a.m.

The Conference Standard Training School will be held in Jackson, Miss., June 7-14. Yours in the work,

JNO. C. CHAMBERS.

FROM RECTOR, ARK.

Dear Brother Carley: I will try to give you a few items from Northeast Arkansas. As I wrote you some time ago, I am stationed at Rector, in the Paragould District, North Arkansas Conference; to say that this is the best work in Arkansas is putting the matter mildly.

My wife has just recovered from a very severe attack of pneumonia, and during the entire period we had all that could be wished for in the way of assistance, and all furnished by the church. On the morning of the fifth day of her sickness, a brother came and called to me and said, "Here is a little token of remembrance that the town has sent you." On inspection the package was found to contain $100; at another time a deposit slip was handed me by the cashier of the bank, which showed $51 as coming from the members of the church. The Lydia Class of our Sunday school procured a trained nurse from Memphis at their own expense, and last but not least, special prayer was held not only in Rector for wife's recovery, but at Paragould, Bono, Jonesboro, and other places.

I am glad to say wife is now able to be up most of the time, for which I am thanking God. Our work moves along well. General summary of Feb. 13: 153 present at Sunday school, collection $11.83; good congregation at church service, three additions; 58 at Epworth League. Inclosed find a copy of church bulletin. Success to the Advocate and its editor, also love to all the brethren.

Gratefully,
A. W. O'BRYANT.

LET US "KEEP" THE DAY.

Do you "keep" birthdays and anniversaries in your home? Of course, you do, and they are red-letter days in the year, especially for the children. Holidays, birthdays and anniversaries always ought to be joyful occasions which shall stand out in memory because of the happiness they brought and still bring. There is no foolish sentiment but a very pleasing suggestion in this plan which was adopted by one church, which helps to make men and women and little children know new sources of strength, peace and lasting happiness of the best kind. The pastor designed a very simple blank form which he sent out to every member of the congregation, asking them to give him the dates of certain anniversaries, birthdays, wedding days, baptism and confirmation days, etc. The purpose was this, to cultivate the habit of prayer, and the plan was to have each person in his place at church on the Sunday nearest to his birthday or wedding anniversary to thank God for his blessings. There was sent to each person filling the slip a reminder of the anniversary and invitation to the service at which he would be specially remembered. There is a special promise to united prayer, and co-operation proved very helpful. "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." Suppose you try it.—Selected.

SITUATION AS TO ARMY AND NAVY CHAPLAINS.

The Army.

The Re-organization Act approved June 4, 1920, provided for the commissioning of 240 Chaplains. Since the passage of this act, we have been earnestly seeking qualified men to fill the vacancies in this number and had within 50 of the total and a number of applications in process of development.

The present Congress, however, has decided to reduce the Army to 175,000 enlisted men, and there are indications of further reductions in the near future. The wording of the Chaplains' section of the Army Re-organization Act appears to permit the construction that the number of Chaplains is dependent upon the strength of the Army, "authorized" by Congress "from time to time," and not upon the original authorization of June 4, 1920. If this construction prevails, we now have 24 more Chaplains than an Army of 175,000 would call for under the law. Pending decision as to the construction, we are informed that no appointments will be considered. At the normal rate of death and resignation, it will take three years to absorb the 24 now commissioned in excess of the number of Chaplains permitted in an Army of 175,000. It appears extremely doubtful, therefore, as to any additional Chaplain appointments being made in the Army for several years to come.

The Navy.

While there is in the present Congress a definite determination to reduce the personnel of the Navy as well as of the Army, even with the proposed reduction in the Navy, eighteen new Chaplains will be necessary to fill the number permitted by law. In view of this we desire to make special effort now to fill these vacancies. They are distributed as follows in order to fill the quota in each of the denominations:

Baptist, South, 3; Congregational, 1; Disciples, 1; Lutheran, 3; Presbyterian, South, 2; Methodist Episcopal, 2; Methodist Episcopal, South, 2; Roman Catholic, 4.

The maximum age limit for entrance as a Chaplain in the Navy is thirty-one and a half years. One enters with the rank of junior grade lieutenant; after seven years' service he becomes lieutenant; after four years as lieutenant, or eleven in all, he becomes lieutenant commander; after this, promotion is according to record by selection. The highest rank to be reached is that of Captain, which corresponds to that of a Colonel in the Army.

Navy Chaplains should be well educated, not only having a college degree but also a full course in some Theological Seminary. It is highly desirable that Navy Chaplains should have had experience in work for men and in athletics. The type of man required is virile and red-blooded, yet genuinely consecrated and truly pious; tactful and a good mixer; standing four square and not easily led away by surroundings. He must be a real man and a man's man.

The Navy needs these eighteen Chaplains and needs them now. There is no finer field for service. Surely we can find in each of the denominations listed above suitable men, fully qualified, willing to enter this branch of service! Full particulars will be furnished any who may apply to the General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains of the Federal Council of Churches, 937-41 Woodward Building, Washington, D. C.

GOD'S INSTRUMENTS.

The great sterling duties, the exact truth, the resolute refusal to countenance wrong, the command of temper, the mastery of indolence, the unstained purity—these and such as these form the character and fashion our souls into instruments in God's hands for high heavenly purposes in his providence. But the carefulness over details; the watchfulness against faults which we know to be faults, but which, notwithstanding, seem venial; the devout regularity and attention in our private prayers; the invariable good humor of our manners; the seeking for occasions of kindness and unselfishness; the avoidance of little temptations; the care not to cause little annoyances and little troubles—to attend to all this for the sake of Christ, our Master, is the natural and fitting expression of a loving heart.—Fredrick Temple.

HOW WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

May Escape the Dreaded Sufferings of that Period by Taking Mrs. Block's Advice

Hopkins, Minn.—"During Change of Life I had hot flashes and suffered for two years. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the paper and got good results from taking it. I recommend your medicine to my friends and you may publish this fact as a testimonial."—Mrs. ROBERT BLOCK, Box 542, Hopkins, Minn.

It has been said that not one woman in a thousand passes this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms. Those dreadful hot flashes, sinking spells, spots before the eyes, dizzy spells, nervousness, are only a few of the symptoms. Every woman at this age should profit by Mrs. Block's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., about your health. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

McComb Hears The Call.

A Woman's Missionary Society was organized in the South McComb Methodist Church in the home of Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Terry, January 5, 1921. Seventeen members were enrolled and a complete corps of officers were elected.

Rev. W. A. Terry conducted the devotional exercises and the organization immediately afterward was effected. The work was begun in a beautiful spirit, each officer assuming her responsibility as a call to service. This church is indeed fortunate to have had Brother Terry returned to them for the new year. In every department of the church work interest is manifested as a result of his untiring efforts with his people.

May the members of this missionary society receive a vision of the world's needs, and by rendering this service become God's messenger, his representatives among men.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

From Thirteen to Thirty-four—Lucky Rochelle Women.

Our Missionary Society was organized January 4, 1920, with 13 members, and before the end of the year the membership had increased to 34. A large number of our members were subscribers to the Missionary Voice, and we are now adding many others to the list.

We had a Mission Study Class the entire year and studied two books: "Making America Safe," and "The New Christian." We did some Social Service work and expect to devote more time to that phase of the work during the months of 1921.

A number of family altars have been established in homes of our members, and we have several tithers.

One delegate attended the Annual Conference at Lake Charles and two delegates were sent to our district conference at Bunkie.

We expect to have a Junior Society and Baby Division in working order in a few days, as our plans are ready for organization.

The financial report is as follows: Dues, $79; Week of Prayer, $10.28; to Mary Werlein Mission, $10; Scarritt Bible and Training School, $5; Relief and Retirement Fund, $5; Undirected Pledge, $66; District Parsonage, $5; Clothes for Polish Relief valued at $125 and Express on same, $17.07; local work, $458.15; amount in Treasury $30. Total, $810.50.

What we have accomplished the past year has been due largely to the untiring energy and determination of our beloved president; her deep spirituality and prayer life has been a blessing to the entire society. We have the same president this year and expect to accomplish much more than in the past. Will meet you at Baton Rouge.

How wonderful it is that God will accept even the pasting together of a scrap book as service to him, when it is done in his love and for his sake! Christmas, a year ago, we had planned a Community Christmas service in one of the most distant sections. The attendance was a great surprise, the appreciation was touching, and the results through all the following year in spiritual things were so manifest that we planned to enlarge the work for the Christmas of 1920. Trusting in God and in the generous interest of the women of Louisiana and of more distant friends, we planned for a share in a Christmas service in each of four different communities. Our faith was abundantly rewarded and boxes of gifts soon began coming in. To wrap and mark 570 presents is no small undertaking, so the Wesley House family was a busy one for days before Christmas. The girls took great delight in assisting, and so did the neighbors and visitors, so things were all ready in time.

"The Island" is a well, populated strip of land just out from Lockport, but the inhabitants are almost entirely deprived of church privileges, schools, or any such helps, because they are cut off from the main land and because many are too poor to have even one extra dress to wear. Some are members of our own church and to these we planned to take some Christmas cheer. You may be sure they were all there when the time for the service came on. Their hearts were open and responsive to the Gospel songs and messages, and there was great joy in every heart because of the gift each one received. A toy, a bag of candy, a pair of stockings, a dress, or a sweater, whatever the gift, it brought a glow of pride and happiness to the child, or to the older one receiving it. Even a cup of water given in Christ's name brings a reward, but those who sent the supplies would have needed no other reward had they been privileged to see the children receive them. Mr. Robert Martin had charge of this service and he tells us that for days afterwards the children were coming to him to thank him for the gifts, and that so many other children came with hungry, wistful faces saying that they did wish that their names could have been on the list so they could have gotten a gift. He says, "Let us get more next year and have a big tent and give a present to every child who will not have any." I am sure we shall all want to do this. To give the first Christmas gift and the first Gospel message to any one is a privilege indeed. We shall not want to miss the opportunity.

Christmas week found us in the hands of the painters. The girls were away but the house was not empty; as Brother Bryson, the Lockport pastor could find no habitation for his family on his arrival we took them in. His wife was called away by her father's death and he and the three children stayed with us. The two boys of seven and nine made "close and intimate" acquaintance with the new paint, sad for the mother's part; but we all had good times and we missed them greatly when they left.

January 5 brought us joy because on that day Miss Griffin, our new homemaker, for whom we had long been praying, came. From the Head Resident to the "we-est" girl, all fell in love with her. We now know why our Father kept us waiting so many months for this helper—that we might have just the right one—one who would really fit in.

The annual report for this work shows some interesting figures: Visits made, 2737; visits received, 2387; number of boys and girls helped by summer institutes, 45; number of garments distributed, 781; number of Christmas packages wrapped and distributed, 570; number of Christmas cards and messages sent out, 300; number of miles travelled in mission work, 6463; number of rides given to people in Missionary Ford, 778; number of boxes received, 55.

Men name Him Prince Immanuel,
With attributes divine;
But, O 'tis sweet to think of Him,
A little child like mine.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using the well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FROM NATCHITOCHES, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Things move on well here. We have secured quite a few subscriptions to the N. O. Christian Advocate, and Missionary Voice since we came here. I have 60 per cent of our Conference assessment subscribed and are trying hard for the balance. We have organized Junior and Intermediate Leagues, which gives us three Leagues. Our Sunday school attendance has increased about 50 per cent. We are compelled to buy extra chairs for seating. Fourteen have joined the church—all adults. Quite a few have professed faith in Christ. My people show a great desire to work for the Master.

Our Woman's Missionary Society is second to none in the whole church—their influence is being felt as far as the Pacific coast. This Society is showing what can be done without suppers, sales, etc., to raise money.

I have a fine body of men composing my official board. They work, and have raised my salary to date.

We are doing our best here for the Education Campaign. May God give it success throughout the church.

Our revival begins on March 27. I am to do the preaching, we will have a singer, and we all will do the work. I take this means of calling upon my friends who read this, to put us, the meeting, and the needs of the many lost of the town on their prayer list. I am grateful that I can still say, "I love God and man."

NATIONS DEBATE DISARMAMENT.

By Robert E. Eleazer.

At last it appears that grim necessity is about to compel an international agreement looking to limitation of armaments. Common sense and conscience ought to have brought it about long ago, but unfortunately conscience and common sense have heretofore figured very little in international affairs. The spectre of bankruptcy raised by the Great War promises to be much more effective. England and France, with debts so large that they cannot pay even the interest, are under the imperative necessity of finding some means of reducing expenses, and reduction of armaments offers the only chance of saving of any consequence. Japan, while in better financial condition, is nevertheless suffering heavily under the burden of maintaining the third largest naval power of the world, and appears ready for an agreement to lighten the load.

As a matter of fact, the United States is in much the same position. With a war debt of twenty-five billions, or nearly $250 per capita, and an annual budget of five or six billions, something must be done to reduce expense. And with us also the army and navy are the chief extravagances, taking something like a billion dollars a year and asking for half as much more. An agreement to reduce armaments, therefore, seems absolutely necessary.

Strangely enough, the United States, which counts itself the least warlike nation in the world, is just now the only one that is blocking the way. The League of Nations, which took up disarmament as a major question, could make but little progress because the United States was not a participant. The others, perhaps naturally enough, were not willing to act without us.

Then came a suggestion from Great Britain and Japan, which appears to have had official sanction, that the United States join them in an agreement that the three suspend naval construction for a period of five years. But, strangely enough again, Secretary Daniels would have none of it. Such an agreement, he said, would be regarded with suspicion by the other powers. One can hardly take that statement seriously. A more plausible explanation of his position was his other statement that the United States must either have the strongest navy in the world or else enter the League of Nations. Even that was not convincing, and the Secretary later, felt under the necessity of explaining and modifying it somewhat, and expressed himself in favor of a conference of nations looking to disarmament. Doubtless his heart is in the right place.

Meantime Congress has taken up the matter and resolutions have been introduced favoring the suggested tripartite agreement, and also an international disarmament congress. In 1915 the President was authorized to call such a congress, and it seems probable that the incoming President will act on that authorization.

Meantime every good citizen should let his representatives know that the Christian sentiment of America will no longer tolerate the militaristic policies that have been heretofore the curse of the world. It would be well also to urge President-elect Harding to call the proposed conference on disarmament.

A CONSECRATED HOME.

By Rev. Jas. M. Lewis.

Much is being said and written of late on Christian education; it is indeed a great subject, one that calls for the best that is in the preacher to interpret to the people. It has never received the close attention and careful study by the church that it deserves.

The slogan adopted by the committee in the preparation of the little manual on Spiritual Resources for the month of January is of far deeper, wider, and broader meaning than perhaps they ever dreamed. "The Family Altar is the greatest school of religion in the world."

If the readers will pardon me for personal references, I will bring before your minds the fruits of a consecrated home. About ninety years ago, a young man and his bride were gloriously converted in a camp-meeting. The first thing they did after their conversion was to erect an altar of prayer in their home. It was rather trying at first on the young man to get down on his knees before his companion and pray aloud unto God, but as time went on, as the good wife assisted from time to time with her prayers, as the little ones began to come into the home, that noble father began to grow eloquent with fervor in his family devotions. The fires never ceased to burn on that altar as long as that couple lived—God wonderfully blessed them for the consecration of that home to Him.

It was because of the family altar in the home, of teaching pure and undefiled religion to the children, of living a life of purity and holiness before them, that there sprang from that one couple such a vast host of servants of God to preach the Gospel to the world. I do not know the exact number, but I do know that there are more than fifty preachers, scattered over many States, who are the direct fruits of that family altar erected some ninety years ago.

Let me remind you, also, the fires have never gone out. They are still burning on the altars of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of those noble saints. For forty-one years I have been partaking of the Bread of Life around the family altar—some thirty years ago, God, for Christ's sake, forgave my sins and I was gloriously converted at the family altar. I had rather do without a night's restful sleep than to miss one of those sweet family devotions with my wife and children.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

BEARING BURDENS.

It is, perhaps, true that the heaviest burdens that we have to bear are those that are unseen, because they rest upon the heart and not upon the shoulders. The world cares very little for our burdens, though, so it is well that they are hidden away. An aching heart may wearily pump the vital stream through throbbing arteries—and not a word fall from parched lips; a wounded soul may wander on through the crowd—and not a murmur betray the pain. Our friends would help us bear our burdens if they could—but too often they are helpless. The friendliest thing sometimes a friend can do is not to add to the burden.

EMINENT QUALIFICATIONS.

According to a recent news item, a citizen of an Illinois town has announced himself as a candidate for the mayoralty, and among his qualifications for the office he enumerates the following: he is the world's foremost checker player; he discovered the cause of baldness; he discovered the secret of selecting laying hens. In addition to these remarkable achievements, he enumerates many other reasons why he should be elevated to the office. We are beginning to understand now how it is that some men come to occupy positions for which they apparently have neither natural nor acquired fitness—their eminent qualifications for some other work have led them or their friends to believe that they were equal to any demands that might be made upon them. A man may be a fine barber, but a mighty poor banker.

GRAND LARCENY.

We learn from press reports that Congress, in a final effort to clear its calendar before adjournment on March 4, has begun to hold night sessions. In one sense, we think this distinguished body of legislators is to be commended for its determination to finish its business, even if it does have to work overtime; but we cannot help wondering why it has put off to the last minute matters that should have been attended to weeks ago. As a rule—there are some exceptions, we admit—there is time enough to do things that need to be done just about the time they need to be done. But Procrastination, that sly thief of time, gets in his work—commits grand larceny, as it were—and orderly procedure gives way to frantic haste. The current opinion is that Congressmen spend too much time in talking and too little in doing. Well, we must not be too hard on them—most of us are guilty of the same offense.

DISTINCT ISSUES.

The leniency of Judge Kennesaw M. Landis in dealing with a young bank clerk, working for a salary of $90 a month, who embezzled $96,500, and the more recent sensational theft of bonds to the value of $772,000 by a bank clerk who was receiving $65 a month, have given rise to considerable discussion concerning the responsibility of employers who pay low salaries to men occupying positions of great trust, for their moral delinquency. If newspaper reports are correct, Judge Landis specifically charged, in the first case, that the bank officials themselves were directly responsible for the fall of the young man because they placed his moral nature under an abnormal strain. We think we can see the case from the Judge's point of view, and we are in utter sympathy with his outspoken condemnation of men who pile up profits for rich institutions at the expense of those who are employed by them. But if personal honesty is dependent upon what the person himself may think is adequate compensation for services rendered, it is degraded from the rank of a moral virtue to that of a mere item of expediency, and the safeguards of legitimate business are destroyed. Even if we admit that it is an outrage against common decency for a bank to pay only $65 a month to an employee who handles millions of dollars daily, we must still hold that the obligation to be honest is independent of any outward circumstance. We ought to hold in execration the oppressors of the poor and count them guilty before God and men; but we must not forget that a thief is a thief, for all that. The issues may be related—but in their personal application they are distinct.

WHAT COUNTS.

We saw this statement not long ago: "God cares more for apostolic success than apostolic succession." The writer of those words, whoever he may be, hit upon an aphoristic way of stating a great truth. We do not discount doctrine—perhaps we need the abstract discussion of the fundamental verities oftener than we are accustomed to have them. But the thing that counts in the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth is the working out of the doctrines in terms of an activity that produces fruit in the regenerated lives of men and women. When there are added daily to the church those who are in the process of being saved, we know that the doctrine has authenticated themselves and the seal of God's approval has been placed upon our labors. Apostolic success!—that is what counts.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE?

Everywhere we are hearing people say that the world wants peace; yet, so far as we are able to judge, appropriations are being voted for army and navy on a scale never known before. The explanation is offered, that if we want peace, we must prepare for war. We are wondering just now what the difference is between preparing for peace and preparing for war. The Senate Naval Affairs Committee has just reported in favor of an appropriation of $196,000,000, an increase of $100,000,000 over the amount proposed by the House. Of course it is better to have the burdens of war without the horrors of war itself—but it is usually the man who carries a gun that kills somebody.

TOO SILLY TO BE SERIOUS.

We recognize the fact that vessels under American registration find it hard in some respects to compete on an equality with foreign lines, and we earnestly hope that some equitable arrangement may soon be hit upon that will at least place them on an equal footing. We confess, however, that we have very little hope of a solution of the problem if it is to be discussed upon the basis of some suggestions that are reported to have been made recently to the Shipping Board, namely, that liquor and jazz music on American passenger vessels would enable them to meet the competition of foreign lines. We do not profess to be familiar with the law concerning jazz music—so far as we know, there are no restrictions upon it hereabouts—and we do not suppose the Government has concerned itself especially about the kind of melody ship orchestras discourse; but we do know that the American people have unmistakably declared themselves opposed to the liquor traffic, and they are going to stand by that declaration. If a ship agent supposes that fundamental economic and moral principles will be thrown aside to enable the interest he represents to make money, he is too ignorant to be anything but a deckhand on a raft, and too vicious to be comfortably received in good society. It takes men of sense to deal with big problems.

FOREARMED.

The man who knows in his heart that he has earnestly striven to do his duty, unpleasant though it may have been, can face with equanimity the fiercest assaults of his enemies. Consciousness of rectitude is an impregnable fortress because it is defended by the cohorts of righteousness. The man who is guided by the principle of expediency rather than of right is courting both unhappiness and defeat.

THE SIN OF BEING BEHIND THE TIMES.

By the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, D.D.

In one special realm the perils of a belated mind can be clearly illustrated. Consider the financial responsibilities which in an early American settlement a Christian might be expected to assume! They were few and simple. To support his family, to pay taxes, to contribute to the local church, to help his neighbors in their need—whoever did these well was a good Christian and a generous man. If famine raged in India, he did not hear of it. If Turks massacred Armenians, no rumor of it reached his ears. Or if at last the news did come, of what benefit was that? No railroads, no steamship lines, no cables, no world-wide credit system that makes money fly faster than the wind, were at his service. No possibility of world-wide helpfulness was opened to him, no responsibility for extensive generosity rested on him.

How many who call themselves Christians live in this new day as though the old day still were here! They, too, support their families, pay taxes, contribute to the local church, and on occasion give to the neediest cases in their town. That is the limit of their financial output. In this modern world they are anachronisms. They are as out of date as horse-cars on New York City's streets. At least a century has passed over their heads without their knowing it. For one of the miracles of our age is the power it puts into the hands of a man with a few dollars to join himself with other men who have a few dollars, and within a few hours to put the pooled resources of all at work anywhere on earth from the center of China to the heart of the Congo. One marvel of this new era is the romance of stewardship.

Oneself in Monetary Form.

When an appeal for money is made in church or town or nation, it commonly is regarded as a necessity to be endured or a nuisance to be avoided. Nor is there any wonder that such distaste is associated with financial campaigns, when one considers the frequent tone of their appeal. You ought to give; you ought to be generous; it is your duty—how commonly are we assailed by such injunctions! Yet modern opportunities for money's use are more marvelous and enticing than "Arabian Nights" and more romantic than the folklore of any people. A Christian missionary, Armenian by birth, American by education, was slain by the Kurds on his sick bed in the presence of his wife. His family escaped. Once, no matter how dearly his American friends had loved him, no matter how ardently they had wished for his sake to help his children, they could have done nothing. But in this marvelous era they at once reduce a little of themselves to monetary form, the most portable shape into which human personality can precipitate itself, and in that form they go straightway overseas to Persia and bring back their friend's wife and children to a safe home and a liberal education. One who can see in such an opportunity nothing but duty is blind. Who would not love to play with this new white magic by which a man can put himself at work around the world?

Once in an isolated settlement of the old world of slow communications, a man could hear of cruel need in the antipodes and could go home with nothing but sympathy to offer. Let no man in this modern world express sympathy with any need anywhere on earth unless he means it! The acid test can straightway be applied. For we can do something, no matter where the need may be. The agencies of human helpfulness now reach in an encompassing network over all the earth. The avenues are open down which our pennies, our dollars, or our millions can walk together in an accumulating multitude to the succor of all mankind. Each of us can take some of his own nerve and sinew reduced in wages to the form of money, and through money, which is a naturalized citizen of all lands and which speaks all languages, can be at work wherever the sun shines. It is a privilege which no one knew before our modern age. It is one of the miracles of science, mastered by the spirit of service, that a man busy at his daily tasks at home can yet be preaching the gospel in Alaska, healing the sick in Korea, teaching in the schools of Persia, feeding the hungry in India, and building a new civilization at the head waters of the Nile. Consider, then, the shame of one who in such an era is still a spiritual inhabitant of an age gone by! Only a man who with generous, systematic stewardship is taking advantage of the new opportunities is fully abreast of his times.

New Avenues of Usefulness.

What is true of opportunity for financial service is true of many new agencies for usefulness which the modern world has given us. Once our fathers living under absolutism could not control at all the processes of government; now, a democratic state offers new chances of usefulness through citizenship and new obligations to employ them well. Once our fathers, never having dreamed of such an invention as movable type, had neither chance nor responsibility to use the printed page; now, the printing press offers a supremely powerful agency of education and evangelization. Once nations, lacking all vital contacts with one another, could become international neither in their spirit nor in their political arrangements; now, nations are woven by countless vital relationships into each other's lives and these accumulating contacts offer the supreme opportunity of all history to bring in the day of international co-operation. On every side new powers and new possibilities are put into our hands. The best hopes of mankind cannot be realized save as these new powers are converted, baptized, Christianized, and harnessed for ministry to human weal. A belated mind, therefore, is fatal to large usefulness:

New occasions teach new duties; Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still, and onward, who would keep abreast of Truth;
Lo, before us gleam her camp-fires! We ourselves must Pilgrims be,
Launch our Mayflower, and steer boldly through the desperate winter sea, Nor attempt the Future's portal with the Past's blood-rusted key.

HENRY BIDDLEMAN BASCOM, ONE OF THE DECEASED BISHOPS OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Payton A. Sowell.

One of the products of every age, if it not so of every generation, is great men. They do not grow every year. They really appear to come in shoals. A few days since, on the street I heard a smart, red-haired young man advertising a book, which seemed to teach that our bent and success could be accounted for according to what sign, of the twelve of the Zodiac, men were born under. Besides being ashamed to buy, I did not have the dollar, but I really wanted the book.

It is presumed, when the times are propitious, environments will nurture and prepare men of great capacity. Some way, I cannot help believing what the red-haired advertiser said: "Men (especially great men) are born, not made."

Such men grow as the trees grow. I have cleared land in the forests of Tennessee; on the same hills and valleys grew the brush, the saplings, the runts and the great trees. If there are no colleges, or if there are; if there be poverty or if there be wealth, the matter of great men is undisturbed. Environment elevates and evens up from the bottom, but plays only a small part at the top.

Some way, even contrary to rule, God makes men—great men.

Abraham rose to an elevation which as yet has not been attained by any one else. When the greatest religious dramatist seeks to present the loftiest idealism in obedient faith, he goes back to the wooded crest of Mt. Moriah.

In spite of or out of the obscure mountains and dews of the long nights, David came to renown and leadership. His religious poetry is the ballad and idealism of all lovers of the Muses.

Washington was a stalwart farmer, and a hardy surveyor.

God, and God only, builds great men. He can cradle them in the mountains, in the cabins. The Rockies were not shoveled up with spade or dredge; God piled them east of the sunset.

Henry Biddleman Bascom, so far as the natural processes of his entrance on life depended, was the son of Alpheus and Hannah Bascom; and as to the date of his entrance on these earthly activities, he was born May 27, 1796.

More than possible, beneath the rustic, frontier exterior, Hannah Bascom had hidden in her spirit some element of genuineness on which God could lay the primal elements for making a great man and preacher. However, neither of his parents was educated.

The best asset young Bascom had, so far as his parents were a part of it, was that their whole lives and natures were permeated with the spirit of religion; they lived by faith and died in rapturous expectation of eternal life. They really thought there was a shining path—if not a chariot and horses—from their cabin to heaven.

Every step and stage in the life of this great Christian preacher was one of simplicity and genuineness.

A plain, zealous, backwoods Methodist exhorter won this young genius to Christ. His religious experience laid its influence deep and abiding in a spirit undisturbed by show, or the superficial. First of all, this great soul, yet in its almost embryonic state at least yet unconscious of its greatness, had stirred in it a heroic faith, and wrought into its very fiber a profound experience—a faith and an experience that after exaltations did not make dizzy by their altitudes.

At fourteen he became a believer, at seventeen was licensed to preach, and, with James Quinn as presiding elder, he was assigned to Brush Creek circuit, in Ohio. American Methodisms have inheritance in Bascom.

He was poor—split rails to pay for a horse to ride his first circuit. He was handsome—even home-woven jeans, cut and made in the old-time Methodist style, instead of lessening his handsome appearance only enhanced it.

At fourteen he chose the lowly Jesus. At seventeen he laid his lofty imagination, his golden tongue, his possible attainments, his lofty genius, on the altars of the Methodist Church.

He was so far above the ordinary in appearance, in the sweep of his vision, in the masterly creations of his messages, that he could not be understood. All bard, exacting methods were used to break him, and, as it was thought, to humble him.

From hard to harder tasks were put upon him. From rough and uncomfortable, to more rough and more uncomfortable circumstances he was sent into.

No dimmer could put out the flame of his genius. While pastor in Danville, Ky., I asked an old Methodist: "Did you ever see Bascom?" He said: "Yes, many a night I passed his dwelling place in Lexington, Ky., and I never passed so late that his light in his study was not shining."

This great man was a hard student. By persistent toil, out of a rich mine of intellect and sincere religious experience, he built his matchless sentences and sermons. His contemporaries in State and church had among them stars of the mightiest magnitude; still he was only more visible by their light. But few men, if any, are able to meet every test. Though the eloquent statesman of his own Kentucky, Henry Clay, secured the chaplaincy of the Senate of the U. S. for him, his long sermons tired the men of the Senate. But everywhere else he was the admired and matchless orator of the American continent.

He became a learned lecturer of philosophy, the president of a college, the editor of the Review—a bishop. In 1850 the church chose him to the episcopal office. He preached the sermon at his own ordination. In his presence, the most gifted and eloquent were modest. Before his election to the episcopacy, excessive use of his vocal organs and exposure through many years of service had damaged his voice. We know what he came to before he was chosen bishop. We cannot say what he would have done as bishop—if he had not been cut off. At the close of his only conference—the St. Louis—cholera destroyed this noble worker. He never reached Lexington, Ky., his home, but at Louisville, Ky., September 8, 1850, his soul went to God.

CHURCH ARCHITECTURE.

What Constitutes Real Architectural Service.

By Rev. J. A. Baylor, D.D., Architectural Secretary, Board of Church Extension.

ARTICLE 2.

Church people sometimes fail to secure the best results in building because of a hazy understanding as to what constitutes real architectural service, and an inadequate idea of what such service is worth. An architect of high standing, who had just completed the erection of an imposing building in another denomination, said to me: "I am not particularly desirous of building another church." When I asked him the reason for this attitude, he said in substance, "Church committees too many times expect a great deal of service for a very small fee." I have heard similar expressions from other architects, and I am persuaded that there must be some ground for this complaint on the part of the architects.

The best architectural service cannot be secured without adequate remuneration. Architects of high standing are bound by certain ethical standards in the matter of fees. A disposition to seek a bargain in the matter of plans often results in the employment of a "cut-rate" architect or builder, often incompetent, whose plans are such only in name and appearance. The writer has abundant opportunity to observe, and knows whereof he speaks. I would say also that the regular fees charged by architects are based upon actual practice, and are entirely reasonable, if the best service is to be rendered. The services of a really competent architect will usually result in the actual saving of an amount in excess of his fee. I believe it worth while to show briefly what is included under the head, "Architectural Service."

Judging from the letters sent to the office, and from expressions often heard, the idea obtains in many quarters that the sum total of the architect's work is to furnish "blue prints," showing more or less in detail the construction of the building, and if possessed of blue prints a building committee is fully equipped to carry out the entire enterprise. It is hardly necessary to explain that anybody, architect or other, can make "blue prints." This is simply a cheap method of photography, and by no means as involved as making and developing kodak views. The all-important and essential thing is the original drawing, of which the blue print is a reproduction. Much time and study is required to work out the various elements of the complete plan, and to execute the various drawings necessary to make the construction plain to the workmen. In addition, the architect must employ a number of trained and skilled draughtsmen, who can only be procured by the payment of good salaries.

Every plan of any importance begins with a study of the site and surroundings, for the building must be carefully adjusted to its setting. Then the various requirements of the situation must be known, how many seatings in the auditorium, how large a Sunday school is to be provided for, how many departments can be separately provided for, and what other special features are to be incorporated. The architect is told about what the total cost must be, and this must be kept carefully in mind. The committee may give suggestions as to any particular type of building thought most desirable, and the materials most available for the construction. With these as a basis, the architect usually makes some preliminary drawings or sketches, showing the floor arrangements and exterior appearance. This may be made a subject for further conference between the architect and the building committee. After a complete agreement is thus reached, the working drawings are begun. As these are developed, the specifications must also be worked out, as the drawings in many features must show the exact materials to be used. Bearing in mind the cost limit fixed, the architect must ascertain the cost of various materials, and the quantities required. For a building of any considerable cost, the preparation of plans and specifications will keep a number of men busy for several weeks.

The drawings, if executed in the best manner and fully detailed, will be extensive, beginning with a plat plan usually showing the entire building site, finished grade, walks and approaches, and the location of the proposed building. Then plans of foundation, showing depth and width of footings, and of each floor of the building, elevations carefully drawn to scale, showing every side of the building; sections, longitudinal and transverse, showing the interior constructions as though the completed building had been cleft in twain on a given line. Other sheets will show the plan of the roof, steel construction, if any, trusses and all necessary details. All stone work must be detailed, and all kinds of millwork, as doors, cabinets, windows, and inside trim of various kinds. When it is remembered that on one set of plans thousands of figured measurements must be shown, and that all of these must check up correctly to the fraction of an inch, it can be seen that careful training and experience are necessary. All this is but the beginning of the architect's service.

The committee is now ready to deal with the contractor, and here is where they need the architect most of all. The committee usually has only a very general idea as to what the cost should be. Various proposals will be placed before them by competing builders. The architect, from his knowledge of the quantities and the cost of materials, will advise the committee whether any of the proposals can be accepted. He can also advise them safely as to the ability of various contractors to handle the work. His advice and guidance are absolutely essential in making a safe contract covering the construction. Then as the work progresses, his supervision is needed to see that the plans are correctly carried out, and that the materials specified are used. However competent, honest and reliable the contractor may be, mistakes in the interpretation of the plans will occur.

Points of dispute will arise. Unforeseen emergencies will develop, and the mediation and the assistance of the architect will be needed. Very often his influence is necessary to prevent some change on the part of well-meaning, but short-sighted committee members, who, by mistaken efforts at economy, would mar the entire building by some form of cheapening.

I have written this in an effort to show the cost of real architectural service, and would urge upon our people the importance of securing always the best architectural skill. When "so-called" plans are offered for a merely nominal sum, if for a building of any considerable cost, one of two things is true; the plans are of little worth, and the architect does not intend to give you any real service, or else he proposes making a very substantial contribution toward the erection of the church. In too many cases it is the former. I have more than once been shown "so-called" plans for the erection of buildings to cost forty or fifty thousand dollars, which consisted merely of three or four small blue print sheets, showing the bare outlines of the building drawn to very small scale, with no details whatever, and no specifications worthy of the name. Such a plan as this leaves the building committee wholly at the mercy of the contractor who undertakes the work.

In closing this article I will say that the Architectural Department of the Board of Church Extension will be glad to advise any committee in the selection of an architect. We have an extensive correspondence with architects, and believe that we can save you from making mistakes at this point.

BACK BAY METHODIST MISSION CHURCH.

Across Back Bay from Biloxi, Miss., within four hundred yards of the granite stone that marks the spot where D'Iberville in 1699 landed and there formed the nucleus of the first white settlement of the present State of Mississippi, the Methodist is the first Protestant church to own a plot of land upon which to build a house of worship. The land was deeded to the trustees this year. It is well located, with one hundred and ninety-two feet street front and having a depth of 500 feet. It cost five hundred dollars.

We have planned to build a house of worship on this land, with modern Sunday school rooms and a hall for a reading room and community service, at a cost of two thousand dollars. The Mississippi Conference at its last session authorized the initiative that we are taking. When we remember that this original settlement of our State was four years old when John Wesley was born, and thirty years old when Methodism was born in a university of England, and a hundred years old when Methodism came to Mississippi in 1799, and that Methodism has been in the State one hundred and twenty-two years and has not hitherto touched this original settlement that now numbers more than a thousand souls, one naturally asks why this oversight, this neglect.

This is truly a home missionary field, and the thousand people here need the full benefits of the Gospel of Jesus Christ as preached and taught by the Methodists. The Church Extension Board has promised us nothing, and we are dependent upon the liberality of our friends here and elsewhere in the State. Methodism is growing here, but is still weak on the coast. Every Protestant in this State should feel an interest and take a pride in giving a liberal donation toward building this church in this original settlement of our State. Send donations at once to the pastor or the building committee, Biloxi, Miss.

WHAT HAS COME TO STAY?

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Confronted by an evil custom, or by a vicious institution, good people are sometimes tempted to consider it as a fixed and immovable thing with which they are to get along the best way they can. Opposition to it they regard as both foolish and futile. They are, therefore, ready to compromise with it, or, at least, to leave it alone. And not infrequently we find a few good people who argue that the church of God ought to lay hold of the evil thing, reform it, and turn it to good.

After this manner the saloon was considered in former days. It was said of it, "The saloon has been with us always." And again, "Men will have intoxicating liquor, and prohibition cannot prohibit;" or, "Why not regulate the saloon and thereby reduce to a minimum the evil which arises from it?"

All sorts of plans for the continuance of the saloon were proposed because it was alleged that it was "here to stay."

In New York City an Episcopal clergyman worked out a plan for a kind of a denatured saloon, and tried for a short time to carry out his plan. But it proved to be something worse than a failure, demoralizing men and dishonoring him.

The idea that anything evil "has come to stay" in God's world springs from a lack of faith and leads to cowardly compromise.

Long-standing evils do appear quite permanent. They often root themselves in the covetousness of commerce and become entwined in established social customs until they appear to many people ineradicable. Timid, faithless souls do not oppose them.

But in truth there is no such thing as a necessary evil. Good alone is necessary; but evil is needless, and is doomed to death. However fixed wrong may seem to be, let us be sure that it has not come to stay. Not infrequently it falls from one sturdy blow by the feeble hand of an unexpected or despised foe, even as Goliath perished by a stone cast by the youthful David.

All history is strewn with the ruins of despoiled strongholds of evil which for generations withstood the moral progress of the human race and caused cowardly souls to tremble before them, saying, "These things have come to stay."

There was a time when the Assyrian powers protected and promoted the most monstrous wrongs, and defied God and man, proudly saying, "Have any of the gods of the nations delivered them?" And Hezekiah confessed, "Of a truth the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations." (Isa. 37:18.) But where now are Babylon and Nineveh? When the Hebrew prophets denounced them, those kingdoms were dominant and domineering. The Israelitish seers, who in the name of the Lord condemned them and predicted their downfall, seemed to their contemporaries as little more than foolish fanatics. Men said these nations with their idolatries and immoralities "had come to stay." But now their ruins are the haunts of bats and owls, while for living men they possess nothing more than an antiquarian interest.

And what has come of Capernaum? For a time Jesus dwelt there, but the sleek merchants and prosperous traders of the place outranked Him in the esteem of his fellow-townsmen. Little cared they for anything that was said or done by the youth from Nazareth who had come among them "on a foolish errand." They thought themselves to be somewhat, and their customs and institutions they vainly imagined had come "to stay," while he was no more than a freakish and fanatical reformer who would run his course speedily and then be forgotten utterly. But one day the young teacher from Nazareth said, "Thou Capernaum, which art exalted to heaven, shalt be thrust down to hell." (Luke 10:15.) And where is Capernaum now? Its destruction is so complete that the most learned archaeologists cannot settle with certainty its site.

That which is wrong is doomed, however powerful it may seem.

There was a time when duelling was a fixed custom in our country and in all Christendom. A formal code was framed and observed for the conduct of duels. Men said, "The duel is here to stay." One who refused to recognize the "code duello" was called a "pusillanimous coward." Such men as Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr appealed to the duel to settle their differences, and the former was slain by the latter. A preacher, Rev. Eliphalet Nott, taking occasion from the death of Hamilton, preached a powerful discourse against duelling, and he gave the evil custom such a staggering blow that it began to totter from that day, and now it has about disappeared from decent society.

And how long ago was it that most men in our country were saying, "The saloon is here to stay; let us regulate it and use it for good. Certainly we cannot suppress it. It is the workingmen's clubhouse," etc., etc.

But was the saloon here to stay? Has not its suppression reduced crime throughout our land, even in Chicago? Does any sane man expect the saloon to come back?

Now we have the worst public teacher that has ever appeared in America. It is but recently come, but already millions of dollars are invested in it, and millions are wasted on it. It draws to its evil exhibitions young and old. And men are saying, "It has come to stay." The magnitude of the evil is enough to make faithful souls imagine it is eternal. But the mischievous movie is not immortal.

The journals devoted to amusement publish figures regarding the receipts of the show business (principally moving pictures) as ascertained by the United States Department of Internal Revenue, and these figures are enormous. The box receipts for five months, from July 1, 1920, to November 30, 1920, were $366,208,782. From these gate moneys $36,620,000 went to the United States Treasury as war tax. In November alone the gain of receipts over the corresponding month of 1919 was over $2,000,000.

What should be said of the American people's expending $75,000,000 a month on shows while starving nations in Europe and America cry to us for bread?

Already the moving picture show has produced a heartless, pleasure-loving constituency, which is in itself sufficient to condemn it.

And the institution has already drawn into its service a strolling multitude of non-producing idlers, sometimes mis-called actors.

Hundreds of millions of capital have been invested in the business largely by men who have a sectarian, as well as a commercial motive, in overthrowing the Christian Sabbath. Meanwhile many enterprisers of a legitimate character cannot secure the money required to carry them on.

Worst of all, the children and youth of the country are being debauched by the "movies" as they never were by any other form of show or type of theatre which has ever before appeared. While it is possible that there may be shown now and then pictures which may not demoralize, every informed man knows and every candid man will admit, that the overwhelming majority of the exhibitions at the "movies" are "evil, only evil, and that continually."

Like the usual type of theatre which has heretofore existed, the "movies" exist under a law of degeneration which forces them to descend to low levels of immorality. Their advertising matter on the outside establishes this fact, to say nothing of the exhibitions on the inside. To what type of minds does this advertising appeal, and what is the essence of the appeal it makes? Do not these showmen know that their show will not pay unless their pictures gratify the prurient desires and salacious imaginations of a majority of their patrons?

And yet, not a few good people are crying that, "The movie has come to stay. Let us use it and not abuse it," as if any use could be made of such an institution which would not abuse good taste and good morals.

And even some preachers are saying, "The church should use it to get attention for the Bible, and draw congregations otherwise impossible."

Bah! Think, if one can think without profanity, of St. Paul turning showman to secure the attention of the Ephesians! Or imagine Martin Luther, or John Knox, winning the men of their day with low-grade spectacles in cheap playhouses! Or conceive of John Wesley restoring the religious life of the English people of the 18th Century by tawdry pictures and "jazz music!"

He is a poor preacher of the gospel who cannot proclaim the wonderful words of life with sufficient power to get a hearing without supplementing his efforts with a moving picture show. A preacher who resorts to such a device to get and hold a crowd, at once confesses to the failure of his ministry in the past and foreshadows greater failure in the future.

This evil institution has not come to stay. It has stayed too long already. It should go.

The only safe rule for a Christian man to adopt now with reference to it is to avoid it altogether and to forbid his children attending it. The number of clean pictures exhibited is so small compared with even the tolerably good ones that he who regards good morals and the welfare of society will not patronize the demoralizing institution.

Henry Ward Beecher said, "When an amusement becomes infected, it cannot be disinfected. Leave it alone."

LEAVES FROM THE LIFE OF DR. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

In receiving members on trial by the Annual Conference the law was different when I joined in 1859 from what it is now. Applicants went before an "examining committee," though it was not absolutely necessary, and they stood before the Conference and answered the questions now asked by the bishop for "admission into full connection." On the date above mentioned, there stood before Bishop Andrew five applicants: W. T. J. Sullivan, J. W. Shelton, John Barcroft, J. V. Fly, and Jno. W. Boswell. Another member of the class of applicants was received, though not present to be examined, or to answer the disciplinary questions before the Conference. This was James Blackman, one of the best of men. He was discontinued at the close of the year at his own request. Gilderoy Porter was not a member of our class—was one year ahead of us. I mention him here because it is of him and John Barcroft that I desire to write.

John Barcroft was the son of a plain country farmer—one of the holiest of men. He was not a preacher, but known far and wide as a great helper in revivals. He and his team-mate, Frank Damore, could pray Satan's kingdom down in any community. John, his son, was started early in life in the right direction, and he kept it to the end. Until we met in Memphis, I never saw him. In the good providence of God, he was appointed to the Macon circuit, then next to the best country charge in the Memphis Conference. My father lived at Macon, and in my frequent visits home I always met "Brother Barcroft." Thus began a warm personal friendship that lasted as long as he lived—a period of thirty years. After our second year we were never closely associated, but we kept in touch with each other by letter. Our correspondence was regular to the close of his life. And such letters as he did write! They were not little, short notes. They were long, interesting and profitable letters. I owe much to them. He was a model and I did my best to follow his example. On the receipt of a letter, I seldom failed to say to myself before opening it, "now for fun, fact and philosophy," and was never disappointed.

Brother Barcroft was not a college-man. Up to the time he joined the Conference he had proceeded no further than the best high schools could carry him. As far as he went, he was thorough. I will not say that he knew the English grammar by heart, but I will say he understood it as well as any man I ever met. In all our correspondence I never knew him to make a mistake. In his letters he was as exact as if he were preparing a literary essay or a sermon for some special occasion. And what is quite as remarkable, during the thirty years we wrote to each other he misspelled only three words. He was the first secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, in which capacity he served acceptably and efficiently nineteen years. His journal was a model of neatness and always rated high at the General Conference.

Brother Bancroft ranked higher as a pastor than as a preacher. On this account he was always acceptable as well as useful. I do not mean to discount his ability as a preacher. The substance of his sermons put him high up towards the front. Besides, he was exact, painstaking, systematic, and thoroughly orthodox. He was familiar with the theology of Methodism, and knew how to defend it. He dealt only in the highest and best themes of the gospel, and put Christ foremost in all his preaching. In this respect he was entirely conscientious. His sermons would have appeared to great advantage in print. In the pulpit he was slow and deliberate, especially so for the first fifteen or twenty minutes. He halted in his speech, and seemed often at a loss for the right word. This is true of his early years. I had no opportunity to hear him later in life. Towards the close of the discourse there was plenty of animation and stirring of the heart.

Brother Bancroft was a companionable man. He was a good talker and entered freely into conversation. He did not hesitate to tell a joke, and told it well. He never failed to see the ridiculous, and call attention to it. In 1861 we were in adjoining circuits—he on the Coffeeville and I on the Oxford. The circuits were five or six times larger then than now. Both of us had some experience that year. At Mayhew's Chapel I struck an old Irishman, who, for some reason remained for the class-meeting—didn't know any better, I guess. I talked to him and advised him as I did others. He was a stranger and my first question was: "My friend, are you religious?" His answer was prompt and attracted the attention of every one: "No," he said, "I never was neither." "But," said I, "my friend, you are old and according to the course of nature you must soon die, and go to eternity." His reply was a stunner, and broke up the class-meeting: "More than that, I'm unsound too." Of course I reported to Bancroft, and this came in return: "In one of my class-meetings I met a young man and inquired as to his religious condition. In reply he said: 'Now, preacher, I'm going to tell you the truth: sometimes I serve God and sometimes I serve the devil.' But, brother, you ought to serve God wholly and make an efficient Christian? 'I'm not so sure of that. I don't know whose hands I'm going to fall into and I'm afraid to serve God too much for fear I will offend the devil.'"

That John Bancroft was my friend I count one of the greatest honors of my life. I hope to renew the friendship some day.

The next man to enter intimately into my life was Gilderoy Porter. For eleven years after I joined Conference I met him only at our annual sessions. We were intimate nearly forty years, yet, except at Conference, we never spent as much as four days in each other's company. Our intimacy was brought about by correspondence. What was the occasion of the first letters passed between us I do not now recall. But I do remember that soon we were engaged in a controversy—two subjects being in dispute, the human will, and the moral state of infants. There was a streak of Calvinism in his theology, and in spite of his faith in free grace he could not fully reconcile the freedom of the will with divine sovereignty, nor could he see that depravity was not sin. We wrangled over these two questions for more than a year. How much I helped him, if any, I am not able to say. But about this time he got to reading Bledsoe's works—was enthusiastic over them, and they brought him around in fine shape. Not a bit of Calvinism—its peculiarities—was left in him.

Porter was a great correspondent. His was "the pen of a ready writer." He wrote for almost every paper in the church—newsy letters mostly, but often he discussed serious and practical subjects. Of the extent of his private correspondence I am not informed. He wrote to me regularly. During the time I was in Arkansas—sixteen years—he kept me informed of all the doings of the preachers in my old Conference. He wrote rapidly, always with a stub pen, never re-wrote anything, and made fewer mistakes than anybody. In a batch of letters, at my elbow as I write, comprising more than forty pages, large letter size, there are less than a dozen erasures and interlineations combined. That is as good a record as I know.

He wrote much for the young folks—especially for boys. "Gilderoy's Stories for Boys," for several years was a popular book. It is now out of print. The story goes that a young lawyer, when a boy, was a great admirer of "Gilderoy" and everything he wrote. In the course of time "Gilderoy" was appointed to the lawyer's church as pastor. He did not know that R. G. Porter and "Gilderoy" were one. But somebody mentioned the fact one day in his presence. "That can't be so," he said, "Gilderoy has got lots more sense than Porter."

He was not clownish, but he hardly had an equal as a story-teller, and could play as fine practical jokes as any one. I guess his wife never forgot one he played on her. He got home from a trip on his district very tired, and felt in no mood to tell the news or answer questions. He did venture to tell one bit of news: "I saw a woman, back a few miles, with a baby, and one side of the baby's face was right black." That was distressing to the wife. It was not long until every mother in the immediate neighborhood heard of the baby with one side of its face perfectly black. Late in the afternoon an inquisitive sister came in, and in a matter-of-fact way said: "What sort of a tale is that you've been telling about a baby with one side of its face black?" As solemn as a judge, Porter replied, "It's the truth." "Well, tell me," said the sister, "what was the color of the other side of its face?" "It was black too," said Porter. And the women felt like mobbing him.

My two friends, friends of my early life, long since "ceased from their labors and entered into rest." I hope to overtake them by and by.

ENCOURAGING NEWS FROM MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Brother Carley: I am now constantly in the field in the interest of Christian Education. I have been in several charges this week in the Meridian District. The preachers have received me kindly and given good audiences. I was in the home of Lane at Lauderdale, Broadway at Porterville, King at De Kalb. These brethren are hard at work and say we are going over the top. I had supper while at Lauderdale with Uncle Billy Lyle—a real turkey supper. No elder gets such a supper as that. How well the people and preachers are treating me! They assure me that they are with me in the work. Christian Education is getting on the heart of the church. Prayers, Christian service, and stewardship will carry us over. Let every preacher stress these. J. M. MORSE.

THE PASTOR'S PLACE IN THE MARCH PROGRAM.

By Rev J. J. Stowe, D. D., Stewardship Secretary.

The church, speaking through the Christian Education Commission, designated March as the month when the great subject of stewardship and tithing is to be emphasized throughout the connection. The purpose is to bring our people to accept in practice, as well as in theory, the truth Christ taught with such great emphasis, namely, man is a steward in possession of God's property. The purpose is to get men right with God on this vital point. When men in larger numbers come to live by this law of stewardship, much more money will be paid for purposes of the Kingdom. But this added amount for church work is a by-product, and not the main objective in view.

As we enter upon the month of March, the question arises, what is the pastor's part in this work? His place in this Movement is his place in every other vital and far-reaching movement of the church, namely, he is the leader, the one who more than any one else will determine the success or failure of the month's effort. An occasional church will go ahead with a big program, regardless of the preacher, but these cases are very rare indeed.

In some instances the utmost effort of the pastor will fail to bring from the church the response he so ardently desires, but in such cases failure has not resulted in an absolute sense, and the partial failure cannot be laid at the parsonage door.

With most churches the pastor's attitude types the church, determines in large measure what the church does. He is called of God, and commissioned by his church to be a leader of the congregation, an awful responsibility, a glorious privilege which he cannot shift to other shoulders if he would, and which the earnest preacher would not evade if he could.

What is done during March in this vital matter of Christian stewardship and tithing will very largely, in each case, be determined by the pastor; not that the pastor will be able to lead his people as far as he would like to have them go, but whether they make headway or remain static he will determine.

He cannot, and should not, do all the work that is necessary, but he must instruct and inspire, must lead and organize and utilize his forces if anything worth while is accomplished.

In the great Centenary Movement the vast majority of the pastors of Southern Methodism were diligent and faithful leaders. The same splendid sort of work is being done by them in the Christian Education Movement, and to them the church is confidently looking for this sort of leadership in the March program, so vitally related to both Centenary and Christian Education Movements, and to all the spiritual and financial work of the church.

SCHOOLS FOR RURAL PASTORS AND OTHER CHURCH WORKERS.

Important Notice.

Owing to the financial drive for our Education Movement coming on May 29-June 5, the School for Rural Pastors and Other Church Workers at Junaluska has been postponed. Because of other conferences at Junaluska in the summer, we have been compelled to put both the Schools for Rural Pastors and Other Church Workers in the month of June, and, therefore, have had to shorten the terms of both.

The dates are as follows: Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., June 8 through the 17th; at Junaluska, June 21 to June 30. The school at Hendrix College will open the morning of the first day, and the school at Junaluska will open the evening of the first day.

Let all those interested in a better rural church life and rural church work take notice and make their arrangements to attend the school nearest them. We want bishops, presiding elders, pastors and other church workers to attend these schools. R. L. RUSSELL.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express as best we can the abiding gratitude which we feel to the friends who responded so nobly to our needs at the time of the death of our husband and father, John J. Beck. It seems that every one did all that could be done for our comfort and solace, and we pray God's blessings upon each one.

"To educate the reason without educating the desire is like placing the repeating rifle in the hands of a savage."

HERBERT SPENCER

IN the Jungle days, when men killed each other with clubs, an education which simply taught them to make guns would have made bad matters worse. Along with the science of gun making men must learn that it is wrong to kill with either guns or clubs. In other words, civilization progresses as technical and moral education keep pace with each other—as men learn to develop more perfect material things and also how to apply these things to higher ideals in life. Better things without higher ideals will make men more paganized pagans.

Christian Education is Complete Education

Moral education has fallen far behind technical skill in America. Our things often outrank the use we make of them.

It will take Germany a century to live down the effects of an education minus the Christian element. And all other nations also.

The Christian college is the only college which trains head and heart together. None other places the emphasis jointly upon character and brains. Therefore the Christian college is the hope of the world.

IF AND PERHAPS.

If every one were wise and sweet,
And every one were jolly;
If every heart with gladness beat
And none were melancholy;
If none should grumble or complain,
And nobody should labor
In evil work, but each were fain
To love and help his neighbor—
O, what a happy world 'twould be
For you and me—for you and me!

And if, perhaps, we both should try
That glorious time to hurry;
If you and I—just you and I—
Should laugh instead of worry;
If we should grow—just you and I—
Kinder and sweeter-hearted—
Perhaps in some near by and by
That good time might get started;
Then what a happy world 'twould be
For you and me—for you and me!

PARTNERS.

By Emma A. Robinson.

It was still winter; the air was sharp and had a snap to it; and yet there was a suggestion of spring, too. Dr. Ellis and the boys had hiked all the morning and were now eating buns and "hot dogs" around a roaring fire.

My, but the "eats" tasted good! But there was a limit even to a boy's capacity, and Ned, heaving an audible sigh, said, "Well, what next?" Then he added, "I say, Dr. Ellis, this is a good time for you to finish that stewardship business. Do you know," he said a bit sheepishly, "I have been kind of curious to know how it was coming out?"

"What say, boys," said Dr. Ellis.

"Go to it. We're game," and several other responses came.

"All right," said Dr. Ellis, "but first I want to tell you a story I read the other day in that new book, 'Jungle Roads,' by Henderson. It is a Roosevelt story.

"You know when Theodore Roosevelt was a boy he was sickly and frail, having to spend a good many days in bed. His eyes were weak, too. Not much doing for him from a boy's view-point.

"When he was nine years old his father fitted up an out-of-doors gymnasium for him. When it was finished he said: 'My boy, you've the brains, but without a strong body your mind cannot do anything. Here are the tools, now will you build yourself?' Teddy, after a moment's thought, replied, 'I will make my body.' I presume you would say it was up to him. His father had done his part. He could do no more, even though Teddy was his own son."

"I think I begin to get wise," said the irrepressible Ned. "Well, I don't," said Howard. "Go on, Dr. Ellis, what's the rest?" said John.

"Ned, what is your idea?"

"I am not quite sure, but it was this father and son business, I suppose—that is us, and our gymnasium is where we live. I don't get the tools."

"That's easy," said Frank; "the tools—why they are, 'most anything." The boys laughed, but Dr. Ellis said, "Frank is right just the same. We decided last week that we ourselves and the boddies that we live in belong to God, even more than Ted belonged to his father. He has put us in the world and has said, 'I have done all I can do. Here are your home, your food, your schools and gymnasium—your tools. Build your body, make it strong and sound for you, the real you, to live in.'"

"But wait, Dr. Ellis; God can do everything. Can he not?"

"Can he, John, are you sure? Can he make you eat beefsteak when you insist on eating 'wiener's'?" The boys fairly shouted at that question for Dr. Ellis had suggested beefsteak for their lunch that day, but the boys had insisted on "hot dogs."

"Stop and think a minute. Can God do anything with you unless you work with him? Could he make you eat, or sleep, or take exercise, or study? Now, could he, really? What do you say, Howard?"

"When you put it that way, I guess not," said Howard. "But it seems queer."

"It would be queer if we were machinery or even slaves, but we really are partners with God. He furnishes everything with the expectation that we will use it and share the profits with him. He supplies, as part of your stock in trade, your body, with the tools to make it strong. What is your part, Ned?"

"Why, to make it the best possible," said Ned, "so that it will be some good to him; but I don't just see what God is going to get out of it. Oh, yes, I know they sometimes want us to carry baskets of stuff to folks, but that isn't it."

"No," said Dr. Ellis, "but you remember how many of our boys during the war found out that their bodies had a great deal to do with their giving themselves. You remember how hard some of them worked to gain weight so as to be able to give themselves—their very lives—to their country.

"Sometimes it was because a man's eyes did not see right, that he could not fight for the right. Sometimes it was a crippled finger, a weak heart or even a flat foot that kept him out of service. Did you ever hear your mother say, 'Frank isn't himself this morning. He had the toothache last night.' What did she mean?"

"Meant that he had a grouch," interrupted Ned, as he ducked to get away from Frank's fist.

"Exactly," said Dr. Ellis; "she meant that because his body was not up to par, the real Frank was not there. What about last Sunday morning when Ned did not show up to tell us about that map as he had agreed?"

"Aw, that's not fair," said Ned. "You know a fellow could not stand up in front of the class and do that when his head ached."

"We might go on," said Dr. Ellis; "but I think you see the point. We haven't really touched the thing we were after yet; but I think we will have to have an adjourned session." — Northwestern Christian Advocate.

THE LITTLE PINE TREE HOUSE.

By Carolyn Sherwin Bailey.

The children had watched the robins' nest in the old pine tree on the lawn with much interest. The robins had built it with great care in the spring, and had raised their family in it, in plain sight of Donald and Ruth. Then they had flown away, and in their places a pair of quarrelsome catbirds had rented the little house in the pine tree, and had lived there at intervals all fall.

Now, though, it was the snowy winter time, and the nest rocked in the wind that blew the tree and made the branches creak and cry. It looked rather lonesome there, and Donald thought once or twice that he would take the nest down and put it in his treasure cupboard in the playroom. But whenever he spoke of it, Ruth, his little sister, always objected.

"You see, it has been such a useful, busy nest so far, Don," she said, "and who knows but some bird will want to rent it next spring."

So the nest stayed there in the pine tree, empty, and tossed about.

When it was near Christmas time, Donald decided to build a shelf part way up the pine tree, fastened to the trunk, to be a winter party table for the woodpeckers and the squirrels who hopped and scurried about the lawn in the snow.

"We shall keep it covered with seeds and suet to keep their little hearts warm," Ruth said.

So Donald built the shelf in the garage, and then climbed up a ladder to nail it in place. He was right on a level with the little nest house, and as he looked inside of it, he exclaimed, for a pair of bright eyes peeped at him over the edge, and then a pair of pointed ears disappeared inside of it.

Donald peeped in the nest, then he climbed down the ladder, and called Ruth.

"The little house in the pine tree is rented for the winter," he said; "go up the ladder quietly, Ruth, and look inside."

Ruth went cautiously up the ladder until she was close to the old nest, and she, too, peeped inside. There, snuggled close and warm, was a little chipmunk in a striped overcoat. He fitted very well inside of the nest, and had quite a collection of cherry stones, grain, and acorns with him for his dinner when the weather should be too bleak for him to go down the tree.

"Aren't you glad we didn't touch the nest?" asked Ruth.

And Donald, thinking how much the little wild creatures need help and shelter in the winter, was as glad as Ruth.—The Intelligencer.

A Real Predicament.

A little Boston urchin named Mary, aged five years, is a Christian Scientist to the marrow.

Mary fell one day and barked her shin, and rubbing the hurt with her hand she began to cry. Her aunt, an unbeliever, happened along at this moment. The aunt was mindful of Mary's faith and of those contradictory tears, and with a mocking smile, she said:

"Why, Mary, are you hurt?"

"No, I ain't hurt," sobbed the little girl, restraining her sobs as best she could.

"But if you are not hurt, why are you crying?"

"I am crying," said Mary, "because I am mad."

"What are you mad about?"

"I am mad—boo-hoo!" wept the little girl, "because I can't feel I ain't hurt."—Exchange.

The Arrangement Makes a Difference.

A teamster charged with using loud and profane language on the street, was brought before a police magistrate, and one of the witnesses was an aged colored man.

"Did this man use improper language?" inquired the lawyer for the prosecution.

"Well, sah," replied Uncle Ans; "he did tawk mighty loud, sah."

"And did he indulge in profanity?"

The witness looked puzzled but did not answer, so the attorney tried again.

"What I mean, Uncle Ans," he said, "is this: did he use words that your minister could use in a sermon?"

"Oh, yessah, yessah," answered Uncle Ans, with a grin; "de ministah could use dem words, sah, but he suttingly would hab ter errange dem different."—Exchange.

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP.

In the cultural program of the Christian Education Movement, Christian stewardship is expected to receive special attention during the month of March. We earnestly hope that this subject will be presented to our people from every pulpit in the connection. If it is given the attention its importance demands, it will be the theme of as forceful a discourse as our preachers are capable of making.

While its bearing on the ultimate financial goal of the Christian Education Movement cannot be misunderstood, it has a far greater significance than that. Christian stewardship is the basis upon which we must ultimately take care of all the financial obligations resting upon the church. In times of emergency, or to meet pressing needs, it may become necessary in the future to enter into special campaigns to secure in as short a time as possible funds that must be had for a special cause; but the day of the "big drive" is rapidly passing. The normal income of the church must be brought to the point where it will take care of the normal needs of the church—and the normal needs of the church must be kept within the bounds of what our people are able and willing to give as a result of their training in the permanent obligations of the Christian life. Emergencies will arise now and then, and they must be dealt with according to their urgency; but the church cannot be financed year after year on the emergency plan.

When our people—and preachers—are brought to see that the practice of systematic, proportionate giving must be the method by which all our institutions are to be provided for, then we shall begin to put our work upon a basis that will stand the severest test of consecrated common sense, and the distress signals of imperiled causes will not have to be made so often. The month of March is a good time to begin this course of instruction that will provide for our future as well as for our present needs.

SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY GLEE CLUB IN NEW ORLEANS.

On Tuesday evening of last week, the Glee Club of the Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, gave an entertainment in New Orleans under the auspices of the Union Epworth League of the city. The splendid auditorium of the Baptist Bible Institute, which was generously given free of charge for the occasion, was well filled by an attentive and appreciative audience. The program was well rendered, the local press making complimentary mention of its various features.

The thing that especially impressed us, however, was the fact that our great university is being brought favorably to the attention of the public through the activities of this student organization on a rather extensive tour through a considerable portion of the South. Nobody believes more strongly than we do that the first work of a student is to keep up with his studies by regular attendance upon the class room exercises; but we are as fully convinced that a reasonable amount of time devoted to developing student organizations is not a hindrance, but a help, to the best scholarship. It is especially true of college students that "all work, and no play, makes Jack a dull boy." And the publicity given an institution by the properly regulated tours of such organizations is worth a great deal to the institution itself. We venture to say that several hundred people in New Orleans have a much more definite interest in our school at Dallas as a result of the visit of the Glee Club than they could have had without it. Southern Methodist University may well be proud of these fine young men who are representing it so creditably before the public.

We were glad to learn that several students in the School of Theology are members of the Club. It will be of special interest to many of our readers in Louisiana to know that Mr. Marlin W. Drake, son of Dr. W. W. Drake, pastor of our Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, is the efficient business manager of the organization.

WESTERN ASSEMBLY ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Commissioners who were recently appointed to represent our Conferences in Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, and Arkansas are called to meet in First Church, Fort Smith, Ark., on Thursday, March 17, at 9 a.m., to consider the establishment of a Methodist Assembly west of the Mississippi. It is probable that the two questions to be considered will be (1) the desirability and feasibility of such an enterprise, and (2) the things necessary to establish it. If it is decided to undertake the enterprise, committees will doubtless be appointed to visit different localities and examine grounds and advantages. It is scarcely possible that the location will be selected at this initial meeting; hence it is not necessary that representatives of communities desiring the Assembly should appear; but if any have definite propositions, there would be no impropriety in presenting them. Invitations to visit and inspect locations may be sent at once to Rev. A. C. Millar, care of the Arkansas Methodist, Little Rock, Ark., and they will be submitted to the Commission on March 17. It will facilitate action if definite statements of advantages are made, such as altitude, scenery, drinking water, running water, lake, springs, power possibilities, land available, hotel and other living facilities, railroads, and character of community.

CHANGE OF DATES OF SCHOOLS FOR RURAL PASTORS AND OTHER CHURCH WORKERS.

We desire to call attention to the change of dates of the Schools for Rural Pastors and Other Church Workers, an announcement of which appears in another column. On account of the time fixed for the financial campaign of the Christian Education Movement—May 29-June 5—the School at Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., will be held during June 8-17, the session opening on the morning of June 8, and the School at Lake Junaluska, N. C., will be held, June 21-30, beginning on the evening of June 21. We trust that everybody who has it in mind to attend either one of these Schools will make a note of these new dates and be governed accordingly.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The forty-fourth annual convention of the Mississippi Sunday School Association will be held at Jackson, Miss., April 5-7.

In a business note to the Advocate, Rev. L. C. Wilson, of Athens, La., states that the outlook for the year on his charge is good.

Our church at Rose Hill, Miss., which was destroyed by a tornado last April, has been rebuilt, the new structure being better than the old one. Rev. M. R. Jones is the pastor.

Rev. O. P. Armour, of Houlika, Miss., requests us to say that he is ready to help the brethren in revival meetings anywhere and at any time. He can furnish a trained singer when necessary.

Rev. Wm. A. Powell, of Liberty, Miss., in renewing his own subscription added $5 to help send the Advocate to such superannuates as might otherwise be unable to take it—a most gracious act.

A note from E. W. Varner, superintendent of our Sunday school at Senatobia, Miss., informs us that Senatobia will enter the North Mississippi Sunday school contest, beginning with February 27.

We rejoice to learn that Mrs. T. B. Holloman, widow of the late Dr. T. B. Holloman, is recovering, though slowly, from a long, critical illness. She is at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. E. Robertson, at Itta Bena, Miss.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, has announced that the Brookhaven District Conference will be held at Topisaw, May 10-12, convening at 1:30 o'clock p.m., Tuesday, May 10.

"The Advocate has been taken by our family for a long, long time. My father first took it, and then, at his death thirty-one years ago, my mother took it and has been taking it ever since." So writes Miss Carrie Green, of West, Miss.

Mrs. John A. Ellis, of Amite, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, speaks of the paper as "a friend loved and prized from its first birthday." We wonder if there is a subscriber whose acquaintance goes further back than that.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, of Corinth, Miss., in sending to the Advocate a nice list of subscriptions, makes special mention of the good Sunday school at Corinth, 379 having been present on a recent Sunday. The congregations, as might be expected, are large.

Dr. F. H. Thompson, of Bogue Chitto, Miss., in renewing his subscription, expresses a sentiment with which we are in hearty sympathy. He says: "As a loyal Methodist, and one who loves the church, I can ill afford to miss the New Orleans Christian Advocate."

Mrs. B. F. Coursey, of Decatur, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate takes occasion to say that the Woman's Missionary Society of Decatur is in a flourishing condition. The financial report is especially gratifying. Plans are being made for a new parsonage this year.

Rev. Delos Cassels, of Gloster, Miss., in a note to the Advocate, expresses his very high appreciation of the ability and scholarship of Dr. R. E. Smith, acting president of Centenary College, Shreveport, La. Brother Cassels came under the influence of Dr. Smith as a student at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky.

We learn from a note from Rev. Carroll Varner that work is progressing on the new church at West Point, Miss., though the present financial stringency is making the work somewhat difficult. When the building is completed it will be one of the finest churches in the State. The recent revival meeting at West Point added a large number of members of the church, and the interest in all departments is good.

Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir, a local preacher of our church, of Estherwood, La., favored the Advocate office with a call on Saturday of last week, while passing through the city en route to Amite, La., where his brother, Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, is pastor. He gave a good account of the work at Estherwood, where Rev. A. A. Bernard is the efficient pastor. An item of special interest was the recent organization of a Junior Epworth League, with a membership of about twenty-five young people.

"All goes well with us on the Houka charge," writes Rev. B. F. Bullard, of Houka, Miss.

Rev. W. A. Langley, our pastor at Sturgis, Miss., is planning to make a tour of Europe, Egypt, and the Holy Land during next summer and fall.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Rev. C. A. Battle, and Rev. R. F. Harrell honored the Advocate office with calls at different times while in the city recently.

The annual meeting of the Board of Education will be held at the office of the Board, in Nashville, Tenn., June 21-22. Bishop W. B. Murrah is president of the Board.

Miss Nell Drake, principal of the Susan B. Wilson School, Shanghai, China, and her mother were visitors in Greenville, Miss., last week. They were tendered a reception at the Methodist church. Miss Drake expects to return to China about the middle of August.

Rev. John Ritchey has been appointed by Bishop W. F. McMurry to the Olive Branch charge, North Mississippi Conference, and he has entered hopefully upon his work. Brother Ritchey is one of the strongest preachers in his Conference, and any people should count themselves fortunate to have as their pastor so able an expositor of the Word. His present address is 760 Court Street, Memphis, Tenn.

The Shreveport Methodist Ministers' Association held its first meeting of the year on February 17, at First Church. Officers were elected as follows: Dr. R. H. Wynn, chairman; Rev. R. S. Walton, vice chairman; Rev. H. B. Hines, secretary. Among other items of business transacted, resolutions were adopted condemning horse racing, a nefarious "sport" which seems determined to establish itself in Shreveport. Good for those Methodist preachers!

Rev. Leland Clegg, of Logansport, La., is planning to make the second Sunday in March "Christian Literature Day," and follow it up with a campaign for the Advocate. Good! Seventeen members have been received into the church at Logansport since Conference, all but five on profession of faith and by restoration. The budget for the year has already been nearly half paid in cash, the envelope system being used for the first time. It is not surprising to learn that large congregations greet the preacher each Sunday.

The report of First Church, Columbus, Miss., failed to reach us last week in time to be included in the report of the North Mississippi Sunday school contest. It was as follows: Baraca Class—attendance, 38, offering, $39.17; remainder of Sunday school—attendance, 298, offering, $46.39; total attendance, 246, total offering, $85.56. A note from Brother A. H. Pegues, superintendent of the school, stated that the offering was not inspired by a spirit of rivalry, but that it was a free-will offering for the famine sufferers in China. A beautiful expression of gratitude to God and love for his suffering children it was!

We learn from the Lincoln County Times of February 24 that a handsome residence has recently been purchased by the trustees of Whitworth College, to be used as the president's home. The residence was in reality a gift from Dr. Cooper, who presented to the trustees the college furnishings, which were his personal property, the trustees preferring, however, to set aside their value in cash to be used in some other way. It was from this fund that the residence was purchased. The trustees have also provided for the election of an assistant president, this being a part of the program for a "Greater Whitworth."

Rev. J. C. Baker, D.D., pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, Urbana, Illinois, and director of the Wesley Foundation in connection with the work for Methodist students at the University of Illinois, honored the Advocate office with a call on Friday of last week. He has been spending some time in the South, recuperating from a recent severe attack of the grippe. Dr. Baker's work at the University of Illinois has attracted wide attention, Zion's Herald giving, a week or two ago, an extended account of the remarkable results following his efforts to provide for the social and religious needs of Methodist students at State institutions.

Just before the Advocate went to press this week, we received the following note from Rev. S. A. Brown, of Lula, Miss., under date of February 26: "Yesterday afternoon we buried Dr. A. C. C. West at Dundee, Miss. He was one of the charter members of Dundee Methodist church, and had been living in Dundee longer than any other one there. Dr. West was a good, true man, a friend of God, a man who loved the church and used the blessings of God upon his life as a blessing to others. He leaves a wife, two daughters, and one son, with other relatives and friends. It was my privilege to visit him often during the last few months of his illness, and I always found him enduring as seeing him who is invisible. Although his suffering was intense, he was patient and bore it with Christian fortitude. Brother L. A. McKeown, our pastor at Merigold, Miss., who has been his friend for more than twenty-five years, was with me in the funeral service and paid a beautiful tribute. We shall miss him." The Advocate joins in sympathy with those who are in sorrow because of the death of this good man.

BISHOP McMURRY RECOMMENDS SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The Divinity School to be held at Biloxi, Miss., June 14-24, should have a place in the plan of the undergraduates of the patronizing Conferences, and I desire to emphasize the importance of attendance upon the sessions of this school to the undergraduates of the Mississippi, North Mississippi, and Louisiana Conferences. The preachers and lecturers are men of unusual ability, and the faculty in charge of the undergraduate work is strong and competent.

Full information will be furnished those interested, and I sincerely trust that every undergraduate may find it possible to avail himself of the opportunities and advantages presented by the Divinity School. No better investment could be made by a station or circuit served by an undergraduate, or any other faithful preacher, than to see to it that the funds are in hand to pay the expenses of attendance.

Brethren of the Conferences who are no longer in the undergraduate class will find the program interesting, inspiring, profitable, and should attend in large numbers.

W. F. McMURRY.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Indian Bayou, La., 3; Rev. Carroll Varner, West Point, Miss., 20; Rev. O. W. Bradley, Corinth, Miss., 14; Rev. L. C. Wilson, Athens, La., 2.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition, we hereby make the following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.
2. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.
3. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.
4. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.
5. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate in Every Methodist Home in Louisiana and Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.

2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.

3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will be found.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Brother EDWARD BYERLY was born in Portsmouth, England, February 6, 1850. At the age of 21 years he moved to Cumberland County, Va., where he purchased and had developed a typical Virginia farm, though he pursued his chosen profession, bookkeeping. A few years ago, he moved to Cary, Miss. On October 16, 1874, he was married, to Miss Lelia Alice Goodman. To this union were born two sons and four daughters, all of whom are left to mourn the loss and cherish the memory of their father. Early in life, Brother Byerly joined the Wesleyan Methodist Church. When he moved to America, he transferred to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was faithful to its tenets till death. In his prime, Brother Byerly was a strong man physically, but a few months ago, his physical strength began to decline. In company with his wife, he went to visit his old home in Virginia, to rest and recuperate; but physical decline continued, and it was evident that the end was near. On January 20, 1921, surrounded by his wife and six children and other relatives, he quietly left his earthly house and went to live with God. His body was buried at Tubberville, Va., while a host of friends and loved ones attended the obsequies. May a double portion of his spirit be given to us who follow in his steps, and whose lives have been enriched by having been associated with him! T. J. O'NEIL.

Rolling Fork, Miss.

On January 14, 1921, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Slack and took from it ARIE DONNIE, born April 3, 1908. Swamp fever was the cause of her passing away. Doctor and loving and tender hands did all in their power but failed. So we must bow our heads in humble submission and say, "Thy will be done, oh God." Little Donnie was a sweet and obedient child. She gave her little heart to Jesus while it was young and tender and united with the M. E. Church, South, at the age of ten years and testified, in the presence of many, that she was saved. Oh, what a glorious thought! Dear loved ones, press forward, onward and upward and meet her at the Golden Gate in her white robe, crown on her head, harp in her hand, new song in her mouth. She loved singing, and we will miss her, but our loss is Heaven's gain. The angels came and quietly bore her away on their snowy wings to meet our Savior in the air. I feel that she is in the beautiful mansion where Jesus is—in the new Heaven where the flowers bloom forever. She was a dear little rosebud just budding into bloom. Her remains were carried in the Rocky Mt. Church, where her membership was, and Brother A. L. Harper, of Ringgold, our well beloved pastor, gave us some fine thoughts, that will long be remembered. She was then carried out to the beautiful little cemetery, by careful hands, where she was laid away to rest until the resurrection morning when we all shall rise. Weep not when you have such hopes to meet, and part never more. Mrs. G. B. MAYFIELD.
Ringgold, La.

Early Sunday evening, October 17, 1920, the death angel passed over the home of Brother and Sister S. G. Armstrong and claimed the spirit of Rev. D. C. Farmer. He was born, November 12, 1836, in Columbia County, Georgia. He first married Miss Mary Saxon Bransome, December 13, 1859. She died, February 2, 1901. On May 28, 1902, he was married to Elizabeth Francis Patnot. She died, October 29, 1915. The funeral services were held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. S. G. Armstrong, the writer officiating, after which the body was carried to Carroll County for interment. He began preaching about the year 1860. He was an effective preacher, and an untiring worker, many souls having been born into the kingdom under his ministry. He was a power in revival work. His last days were spent with his daughter, Mrs. S. G. Armstrong, of D'Lo, Miss., who was very much devoted to him. She gladly, cheerfully and lovingly answered every call made by her father. Though old and feeble, he never missed a prayer meeting, Sunday school, or preaching service, only when too sick to go. He sought to lead men to Christ up to the last hour. When he became too feeble to attend church, he sent the writer (his pastor) this message: "Tell Brother Smith I stood by him just as long as I could." We miss him so very much. May God's blessings be upon his loved ones. His pastor, JASPER L. SMITH.
Mendenhall, Miss.

MR. CADE HAVARD was born, February 7, 1835, and died December 10, 1920, at Knoxville, Miss. He was a devoted and consistent member of the M. E. Church, South. He joined the church in his early days and at all times beautified the life of the world around him. Our loss is Heaven's gain. He has left behind—that the life of holy men is to make our lives sublime. He was married three times and was father of five children. All the children passed on to eternity before him except one—Mrs. H. C. Butler, of Knoxville, Miss. There are also left behind to mourn his departure, two brothers and a great host of grandchildren and nephews and nieces. He was a very faithful member of the Masonic Lodge at Meadville, Miss. It could be well said of him, "Farewell, brother," and there would be meaning attached to the language. It was the privilege of the scribe to preach the funeral of this good man. He was laid to rest at the Methodist cemetery of Knoxville. To all the loved ones we extend our sympathies, and for them solicit the prayers of all the Advocate family. "To be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord."

His friend and brother,
Rev. DELOS CASSELS.

On the morning of January 25, 1921, the Spirit of D. L. MCCAIN took its flight to that great unknown world. He has paid the debt we will all have to pay. We all have the promise of a home on high and we can be one among the angels if we live the life we should. Dewitt McCain was born September 10, 1884. He was married to Easter Turner in 1908. He joined the Baptist Church in his young manhood and lived a consistent member till his death. "In my father's house are many mansions," and in those mansions he now dwells. His character was pure and his influence was great. It seemed as though he could not do enough to help those that were in need, for he was never too busy to stop. He will be greatly missed. He was a faithful husband and father, a true friend and always had a pleasant smile and a kind word for everybody. He has set an example of true citizenship—and long may it exist! He was shot on January 24 and was rushed to the hospital at Winona, but to no avail, for God had called him and he must bid this wicked world farewell. He closed his eyes in death at 7 o'clock, Tuesday morning. His remains were brought back and interred in Mt. Vernon cemetery. He leaves a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved family who are called to hear such a loss. We know

A chair is empty,
A voice is stilled,
A place in our heart is vacant
Which never can be filled.
But we shall see him again, for what we have lost is Heaven's eternal gain.
NINA MAY HUDSON.
Batesville, Miss.

Mr. JAMES DALLAS HALL was born of noble Southern parentage in Sturges, Miss., July 2, 1845, and carefully reared after the old-time Southern style, in a typical ante-bellum, East Mississippi farm home. At the tender age of sixteen years, he enlisted in the Confederate Army, and valiantly fought till he was forced to surrender to superior forces. He was happily married, in April, 1866, to Miss Mary E. House. To this union, four sons, and four daughters were born. Two sons, and one daughter preceded their father to the better land. Very early in life, Brother Hall joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and faithfully kept the vows which he assumed at her chancel, till he was transferred to the Church Triumphant. He loved his church, and was happiest when he was serving at her tables, or worshipping at her altars. He always stood four square for the right, never even considering a compromise. His son has told me he never heard his father utter an unchaste word. About two months ago a rapid physical decline began. At five o'clock, Thursday morning, February 17, his spirit was translated to the City of God. He died as he had lived—in the triumphs of the Christian's faith, and has bequeathed to his loved ones and friends the hallowing influence of a holy life. May the God he loved, and with whom he has gone to live, comfort the bereaved.

Epworth League.

A GOOD DEVOTIONAL MEETING.

In carrying on our League work we must not overlook the fact that a good devotional meeting is one of the most effective methods which we have of developing the League along the line which all real Leagues wish to be developed—service. Good devotional meetings bring to you the Christ spirit, the spirit which made Christ lay down His life for you and me. So let us consider for a minute some methods of developing our meeting.

The devotional meeting should have originality or it is more than likely to be void of the gripping power which creates in us the desire for earnest Christian action. Originality and meetings that are different. Rearrange your program so that the Leaguers will not know that at a certain time you are going to sing a song, or have sentence prayers, or anything that every meeting must have. Keep them ever alert trying to anticipate your next number. Have your leaders tried any of the special plans outlined in the Epworth Era? Let me tell you one that was very effective, one that was based on the Epworth Era program.

The meeting was the one in which mission study was to be impressed. The leader opened the meeting with the usual song and every one settled down to listen to what might be termed the average meeting. "You know that we are interested in feeding the people, and supplying the needs of the people of the Near East," began the leader. Instantly one of the Leaguers in the back of the room was on his feet, "You say you are interested in the Near East," etc., and the program was from there on similar to the one planned in the Era, but one person breaking in on the leader and another person answering him so promptly without a word from the leader was new. Every one was alert, looking for the next move, and before they knew it they had received a good missionary lesson and had really enjoyed it.

However, I do not intend to convey the idea that your meeting must be sensational in order to be effective. One meeting night the leader announced that this was a chain meeting. He talked for a minute on the chain and how it depended upon each link for its strength. Then he compared each Leaguer to a link, making up the whole Epworth League chain. He followed with the statement that every link should have its verse in the Bible, and then asked one person to read his verse and to call on the next link—and so on until every one had a chance to read and comment on his or her favorite verse.

But let me leave one thought thoroughly impressed on your minds. Under no condition sacrifice your devotional meeting for the sake of originality, for in doing so you lose to some extent, part of the dominant spirit which should prevail in every League. —L. E. Harrell, in Richmond Christian Advocate.

NEW LEAGUE AT FIRST CHURCH, COLUMBUS, MISS.

An Epworth League chapter was organized at First Church, Columbus, Miss., on Sunday, February 13, with a membership of forty-eight. That there is great interest in the organization is indicated by the fact that the attendance was fifty-six on Sunday, February 20. Under the leadership of Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, the young people of First Church are entering heartily into a field of work in which they can accomplish very much good.

MRS. J. M. FRANKLIN.

Martha Ann Gibbs was born at Pleasant Hill, La., in September, 1843, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. F. Jackson, in Dubberly, La., on the last day of 1920, just as the old year was going out, at 10:30 p.m. She was married to Mr. Lee Talley at Sulphur Springs, Texas, on Sept. 26, 1865, and after his death she was married to Rev. J. M. Franklin, of the Louisiana Conference, at Pleasant Hill, La., on Dec. 20, 1869. Of the seven children born to her, Mrs. Hattie Cooper and Mrs. W. F. Jackson, of Dubberly, and Mr. Thomas Franklin, of Bastrop, remain to mourn her going, the other four having preceded her to the life beyond.

As a communicant of our church at Marthaville, I have been associated with Sister Franklin for the last three years, and found her to be an intelligent and loyal Methodist, and a constant support to the pastor, and we drop a flower of love and sacred memories on her new-made grave. Her death followed a hard chill that she had on Christmas day, which chill was followed by very high fever until the end came on Dec. 31, 1920. While suffering unusually on the night before she died, her thoughts seemed to center on the cross of Christ, and his sufferings for her there. And thus, in perfect peace and resignation, she fell asleep without a struggle, and yielded herself to "the last enemy that shall be conquered."

"Thus, star by star declines,

"Till all are passed away."

A REVIVAL AT MATHISTON, MISS.

Rev. W. A. Wilson held a very successful revival for us, beginning Sunday, Feb. 6, and lasting through Wednesday, Feb. 16.

Brother Wilson preached with power. The attendance and attention were good. The house was almost always crowded to overflowing at the night services. We borrowed all the benches and chairs that our church would take care of from the Presbyterian Church and the Masonic Hall; even then, people were turned away at times for want of room.

Sunday, Feb. 13, was a red-letter day in Mathiston in the way of religious exercises—men's service at the Methodist Church, woman's prayer meeting at the Baptist Church, and a Junior Epworth League in session at the parsonage. It seemed that every one in town that could walk was at some kind of religious exercise, as well as a number from out of town.

There were about twenty-five conversions and reclamations, ten joining the Methodist Church at the close of the meeting.

We all feel that we have been brought closer to God by Brother Wilson's having been here, and pray that God will continue to bless his efforts.

LESSON FOR MARCH 6.

Lesson Topic: The Liberality of Love.

Scripture Lesson: Matthew 26:6-13; Colossians 3:12-14.

Golden Text: "She hath done what she could." Mark 14:8.

Home Readings: Monday, Jesus Among His Friends, Matt. 26:1-13; Tuesday, The Friends of Jesus In Trouble, John 11:1-11; Wednesday, Jesus And Martha, John 11:17-27; Thursday, Jesus and Mary, John 11:28-34; Friday, Lazarus Restored To Life, John 11:35-44; Saturday, The Lord a Hearer of Prayer, Psalm 116:1-9; Sunday, A Thanksgiving Prayer, Psalm 116:10-19.

Teaching Points.

1. A love that is not expressed loses much of its quality.
2. The highest expression of love is sometimes in an emotional act. The passionate kiss of a mother upon the cheek of her babe speaks more of the mother heart than would the purchase of some necessary article of clothing.
3. Only the unthinking will criticize harshly those who express in an emotional way their love for God.
4. For the plain, matter-of-fact, unemotional Christians, there are always unromantic acts of kindness to be done; let them be sure that they do them.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

My attention was called to the fact that while there were fifteen hundred Sunday school pupils in attendance at the Methodist Sunday schools in Jackson, I was in error in saying that there were 751 at Galloway Memorial. This 751 counted the 200 in the Orphanage Sunday school. This made the attendance of Galloway Memorial Sunday school 551. I did not intentionally misrepresent this and make this correction to keep the records straight.

Sunday, the 20th, was spent at Fayette. I find this school in a very thriving condition. They have a fine Young People's Class and a fine Young Ladies' Class in their school. They are undertaking to do some very fine work. Their church property has been improved and makes a fine appearance. Everything betokens hope and success.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is said that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

I also had the privilege of being with the good people of Port Gibson. This is one of the prettiest towns I have ever visited and I never go there without wondering if the people who live there all the time appreciate the wondrous beauty of the place.

We had a very interesting meeting of the district officers here. The District Institute will be held at Utica, Miss., May 12, at 2 p.m. We have planned a good program and are hopeful that we will have a large attendance. Mr. W. C. Owen, the Superintendent of Young People-Adult Wesley Bible Classes, will be with us. I had the pleasure of speaking to the girls at Port Gibson Female College Monday and Tuesday night. Tuesday morning I spoke to the boys of Chamberlain-Hunt Academy. At both places I presented the call of the church in the home community.

The Seashore District Institute will be held at Columbia, Miss., April 26, at 2:30 p.m.

The Conference Standard Training School at Jackson, Miss., June 7-14.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless you. Yours in Him,

JNO. C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The date for Standard Training School to be held at Grenada is June 25-30. The Educational Commission took the date we first announced. The faculty of the school will be announced next week. The expense will be only one dollar a day for board; no fees of any kind will be charged. Mark the above date on your calendar.

The teachers at Oxford have won 27 units since last August and expect to win as many more before next August. Since the teachers have been doing this class of work the school has made marked progress.

You remember we are aiming to have 500 teachers do credit work during the year. We are making fine progress toward our goal. We must have not less than twenty teachers to help in the teaching of these classes. Some can teach in their own schools, others can volunteer to teach in schools near by. Brother Stephens is setting the standard by teaching two classes in his school. Take note of this, Brother: if you have bought books and started a class and for some reason have failed to go on with the work, let me know and I can help you with your class.

The Sunday School Board proposes to do a work second to none in extent and importance. This Board has asked the church for barely enough to keep the aims of religious education before our people. This year we have been granted an increase in money and in help. We must prepare to give every teacher in the last school an opportunity to learn something of the principles and methods of teaching. To do this we must have an increased force of trained teachers. We are therefore asking the schools of the Conference to classify themselves as to the amount they hope to contribute when they observe Sunday School Day the last week in April. For instance, we have 10 schools in the Conference that could contribute $100 each; twenty-five schools, $50 each; fifty circuits, $25 each; one hundred, $10 each, and none in the zero class.

This week I have been teaching a class of twenty-four teachers and officers at Greenville, using as a text, "Life in the Making." The class has attended regularly, the interest has grown from the beginning. Mr. Kretschmar is one of the busiest bankers in the city, yet he has been in the class every session. Under the pastoral supervision of Brother Lewis and the leadership of Mr. Kretschmar, Greenville Methodism is making itself felt as never before. The "Big Brother Bible Class" is a power for good, not only in the city, but its gracious influence is reaching far and wide. The immediate problem, in Greenville, as in other places where the church is at work, is the imperative need for more room to care for the people who want to be in the Sunday school. Greenville Methodism is alive to the needs of the hour. We thank God and take courage.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES.

The Wesley Bible Class Federation at Lake Charles, March 15, 16, 17, will be favored with great addresses from the magnificent leaders of the church, Bishop W. F. McMurry, Dr. John A. Rice and the four departmental representatives of the General Sunday School Board, viz., Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, W. C. Owen, E. R. Standford and M. W. Brabham.

Select your delegates from your school and see that they have their expenses paid in part, if not in full. Tell these delegates that your school will expect them to give valuable assistance when they return.

The Federation offers specialization work by noted leaders for each department of the school.

ALONZO EARLY,
Field Secretary.

FROM LOUISE AND HOLLY BLUFF, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: If you can find space enough in the Advocate columns to spare me a few lines, I would be glad to make some report of the work of my charge during last year, and of prospects for this year. Things are moving along very nicely with us on the Louise and Holly Bluff charge. We are making some progress along all lines. Beginning last year with only one Sunday school, we now have three, a Sunday school for every preaching place.

Our charge paid a budget last year amounting to $43.43 per capita, counting all members, old and young. Is there a charge in the Conference with a better record than $43.43 per member? All claims were paid in full, with a little bonus for P. C. Our assessments for this year have been increased considerably. Pastor's salary was raised $40, making it $1550 for this year, other assessments receiving much greater percentage of increase. This is encouraging, in view of the fact that this section, being almost an "all-cotton" farming country, has been hit harder by low priced cotton, business depression, and scarcity of money, than the hill sections of our State, where the farming is more diversified.

Millions of Cabbage, Tomato and Sweet Potato Plants. Cabbage Plants, Wakefield, Flat Dutch, 500 for $1; 1000, $1.75; 5000, $7.50. Tomato and Sweet Potato Plants leading varieties, 500 for $1.25; 1000, $2.25; 5000 or over, $2 per 1000. CLARK PLANT CO., Box 108, Thomasville, Ga.

The spiritual outlook for the year is very encouraging. We are looking forward to a very fruitful season of revivals. We have entered heartily into the spirit of the Christian Education Movement, and have had some very warm spiritual experiences at our regular services. Pray for us and the work.

Your brother,

M. K. MILLER.

Took a Relative's Advice

Sykesville, Md.—"I was in bad health for about ten months—suffered every day with my left side. I then began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and also the Golden Medical Discovery and was greatly benefited. After taking six bottles I was well."

"I took Dr. Pierce's medicines at the advice of a relative who uses the 'Prescription' for herself and gives it to her daughter. I think this medicine is good for all women in a run-down state."—MRS. W. BLIZZARD.

A HAPPY MAN.

Dear Brother Carley: I joined the Louisiana Conference at Shreveport in January, 1888, thirty-three years ago, and if I live thirty days more, I shall be sixty years old; and last Sunday I rode two miles in an automobile, two miles in a wagon, walked four miles, crossed a river once in a canoe and once on a Choctaw log; I visited ten homes, eating in three of them, and conducted worship in four; and, best of all, had the privilege, and preached to three attentive congregations.

On Tuesday following, aided by a negro man and using a crosscut saw, in five hours and fifty minutes without stopping to rest, from stumpage from 8 to 16 inches, we cut one hundred and sixty-seven blocks of stove wood. With this vitality and divine aid, I am very joyous and hopeful.

The Lord bless our Advocate and those who make it.

WARM YOUR BLOOD.

It is plain that they need the warmth there is in pure, rich, red blood, which reaches through artery and vein, from head to foot, all over the body. They could be told by many people, from experience, that to have this good blood they should take Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine has really made it possible for many men and women, boys and girls, to enjoy cold weather and resist the attacks of disease. It gives the right kind of warmth, stimulates and strengthens at the same time, and its benefits are as lasting as those of any tonic possible can be.

If there is biliousness or constipation, which often occurs as a result of the torpidifying effect of cold, Hood's Pills may be taken. They are perfectly compatible with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are gentle and thorough.—Adv.

RHEUMATISM—RELIEF

From Its Dreadful Pains and Aches,
Stiffness—Soreness—

Is properly to be sought in a good blood medicine, because authorities say rheumatism is a blood disease; acid has entered the blood, settling in the muscles and joints. That's what makes the sharp, sudden, shot-like pains, causing you to jump and cringe in agony.

Hood's Sarsaparilla comprises remedies that every physician prescribes for rheumatism, combined with other blood-purifying, tonic and strength-building ingredients in a formula vastly superior in make-up and in curative power. It does give positive relief. Thousands say so. So will you. For a fine laxative take Hood's Pills.

MR. DODSON WARNS USERS OF CALOMEL

Says Drug Acts Like Dynamite on Liver and You Lose a Day's Work.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

ANNUAL MEETING AT BATON ROUGE.

Full to overflowing of good things was the meeting at Baton Rouge on the 22nd, 23rd, and 24th of February. Delegates came in large numbers. Most of the State officers were there; our Council guests, Miss Mabelle Howell, and Mrs. Luke Johnson, arrived in good time and remained through the several days; it is almost needless to say how very much their presence was appreciated by the women present and how much strength and inspiration were brought to the Conference by their messages of world-wide scope and spiritual vision.

Our President, Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, was in the chair, untiring in her eager attention to all phases of the work, allowing no detail to be omitted that would go to make up a completely successful meeting. A royal welcome was given to the visitors by the pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. N. E. Joyner, and by all of the women of the very large Missionary Societies of the Baton Rouge churches.

For some weeks to come we hope to give items of interest on this page of the meeting, which will run as Bible lessons, talks and topics of present-day concern to our women as Christian citizens.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE. A Call For Help.

As perhaps not all of the women of the Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society know, I was given the office of Superintendent of Life Work in the Epworth League last summer at Mansfield. For two years I had chaperoned the young boys and girls who attended the Assembly at that place and became intimately associated with them in making their life decisions and meeting some of their problems. For this reason, I could not find it in my heart to decline, especially as I learned that it would include young people in all other departments of the church, Sunday school, Young People's Missionary Societies, volunteers for the ministry, as well as distinctly Epworth League members.

I am finding a number of splendid young people who are considering the consecration of their lives to definite service for our Lord, but I am meeting a problem that I need help in solving. Several young women who have volunteered for foreign service are not prepared for Scarritt, and their expenses for this preparatory work must be met. On my word that funds would be forthcoming, one gave up a position she had held for some time in one of the largest stores in Shreveport and entered immediately upon her high school work at Centenary College. Another is ready to go to Mansfield College as soon as she completes her work in the Shreveport High School, which will be next week. I have the faith to believe that the money will be given to meet these demands. I shall appreciate it very much, if any one who feels the importance of this call will send to me a contribution for the education of these two fine Christian girls. If, for any reason, they are prevented from going into missionary service, they expect to return the amount expended on their education in order that some one who is going to serve the church in this capacity may have the benefit of it.

I can assure you that there is no greater opportunity for furthering the Master's work than by helping to equip our daughters who are gladly offering their lives to Him.

MRS. R. H. WYNN.

FROM SHAW, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We arrived at Shaw, our new charge, in due time. The people received us very cordially, and they have shown us every consideration. We have received at the parsonage almost everything from the smallest article to a fine milch cow. The people have been so very kind we felt at home from the first.

We have splendid prospects for a good year. Our congregations are far beyond our expectations. There seems to be here a turning to the church. Our Sunday school has grown from an attendance of about thirty in December to seventy-five, and we expect to reach one hundred by the 1st of March. Prayer meeting is well attended.

Brother Felts, our presiding elder, is pushing things in the district, and if he doesn't bring things to pass we

THIS GIRL IS A WONDER.

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $100.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You start by investing less than $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write to-day. Isabelle Inez, 844 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

FROM LEOLA, ARK.

Dear Brother Carley: I promised to write to some of the brethren in the North Mississippi Conference, and I shall take this method of doing so. I was transferred to the Little Rock Conference last November, and appointed to the Leola Circuit, in the Arkadelphia District. The circuit has four appointments. Hunter's Chapel is out from Leola about seven miles. It is a rural church, and while the membership is small, it has the next to the largest assessment. Poyen is a little town of about 200 population. We have the smallest number of members here. Brother F. T. Fowler and myself made a survey of the community some time ago, and we found twenty-one Methodists, and the rest were Baptists. The Baptists had all the children. Brother Fowler is one of the Conference Sunday school men, and we organized a Sunday school here. Poyen is eleven miles north of Leola, on the Rock Island Railroad. The next place is Traskwood. This is about thirty miles from Leola, and is on the M. P. R. R. The population is nearly 200, and it is a very nice little town. The main feature of this church is an Epworth League. They are a fine lot of young people. Now comes Leola. Leola is a town on the Rock Island Railroad, about 55 miles south of Little Rock. The population is about 630. We have a church of 180 members, and I give half-time here. Since we came, the Sunday school has taken on new life, and the congregations have increased. We have a prayer meeting, Sunday school, Woman's Missionary Society, Junior Missionary Society, and we are working to have a League.

Wife and I arrived here on the night of Nov. 30, and were kindly received. I am well pleased with my work. Of course, though, I have not forgotten the good people and preachers in dear old North Mississippi. There is a warm place in my heart for you. I shall write again to the Advocate some of these days.

SIMON W. BRYANT.

THE METHODIST PREACHER.

The Methodist preacher deserves more chicken and gravy than he gets, more honor and respect than is accorded to him, more encouragement and love than comes to him, and more distinction than usually crowns him.

Consider what he gives up when he enters the ministry. First, practically all hope of ever accumulating enough to guarantee him or his family comfort in old age. His profits accumulate in heaven, not on earth. He dedicates himself to a life of self-denial, of rigid economy and of privation. He gives up all thought of a permanent home, of any little spot of earth he can call his own, and there dwell among his chosen friends. He puts his personal liberty in charge of his church, and at its command "moves on" every year, or every few years, as his bishop directs.

For the sake of his faith and his church he submits patiently to more annoyances, more petty distractions, than any business or professional man would think of standing. He becomes gentle and yielding, not because he has not every man's desire to exploit his individuality, but in order fittingly to adorn his sacred calling. His thoughts must always be of the needs and troubles and weaknesses of others. He cannot live for himself, or his family or his friends. His flock must always be his first care—the poor, the sick, the weak, and the unruly. The prospect he always has ahead would be called wretched, impossible, by the majority of men. But he goes bravely on through the years, a target for the malice of the wicked, a convenience for a multitude of the unworthy, but always ready to serve humanity without hope of any adequate reward on earth.

Give the preacher a square deal. He does more for others daily than any of the rest of us would do wrapped up as we are in our own selfish plans and pleasures.—Omaha Bee.

The Quinine That Does Not Affect the Head Because of its tonic and laxative effect, LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE (Tablets) can be taken by anyone without causing nervousness or ringing in the head. E.W. GROVE'S signature on box. 30c.

It makes the mind very free when we give up wishing, and only think of bearing what is laid upon us, and doing what is given us to do.—George Eliot.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

Chamberlain's Tablets

FROM SICILY ISLAND, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I have wanted to write you before this concerning the great and glorious revival that came to us at Ferriday. We began our series of services there on the first Sunday in January. Rev. Jas. V. Bennett reached us the following Tuesday, and he worked with us and for us with all of his earnest, God-given power. We held on for sixteen days and God gave the victory. Numbers of church members renewed their vows and we received thirty-five into our church there, twenty-nine of whom came on profession of faith.

In the midst of the winter season, with a rather poorly heated building, you will not be surprised that some of our good people there thought the time an inopportune one. We are thankful that we did not exercise any better judgment at that time than to "have faith in God." Truly, He proved to us that "NOW is the day of salvation." We now have good hopes of seeing a modern brick church building erected in Ferriday before the year is done. Several generous subscriptions have been made. Brother Bennett named a liberal donation that he would make in behalf of the new building.

Ferriday, however, is not the only place where our people are about the Master's business. Wednesday night following the close of our meeting there, 68 were in attendance at our prayer meeting here. Fifty is about the minimum number for that mid-week service. The Sunday school here is growing at a marvelous pace—the fourth Sunday in January there were 88 present, same was a record attendance; fifth Sunday 94 were counted; first Sunday in February, 102; and yesterday 120 were present, and we have already heard of new members for next Sunday.

Brother Alford, of Mangham, was with us in Ferriday last Thursday night, preached to a good congregation, and administered the Communion for us there. Our congregations here yesterday, morning and night, were as large as our usual revival season attendance heretofore.

"And what shall I more say? for the time will fail me if I tell of" the good work of the W. M. S. and of the Epworth League here, of the increasing attendance on the services at Vidalia, of the faithfulness of the people at Clayton, of the ancient landmarks of the saints, Pine Hill and Tensas Chapel. I will to give more details concerning these at some future date.

When the question comes to material things, the Lord has wonderfully blessed us, in that He has placed us in the midst of so generous and great-hearted people. Last year we received generous kitchen and linen showers from Vidalia and Ferriday, which is quite helpful to our local needs.

Sicily Island pounded, and has re-pounded with groceries, and a day seldom passes but that something extra is on our dining table because of the loving kindness of our friends. All of this may be true in the life of every preacher—we trust so. This is our first charge, and these things are wonderful to us. Why, not long since, while in one of the stores here, when a good woman invited me to go by her home and get some freshly-dug Irish potatoes, I asked if they were cooked! Spoiled! not the potatoes, nor the eyes of the potatoes, but I! Just a week or so since Ferriday, shipped us a sugar barrel heaped up with good things to eat.

In the midst of it all, the prayer of our lives is that we may be kept humble and in touch with God, and that we may be so directed of Him, that we shall prove stepping-stones for these people to higher planes of Christ-like living. Sincerely,

PORTER M. CARAWAY.

FROM ROLLING FORK, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: As many others have taken in hand to write at divers times and on multifarious subjects, it seems good to me also to write, just to give a brief account of the work in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

When, just prior to adjournment of the last session of our Conference at Brookhaven, Bishop McMurry announced that I should be permitted to return to Rolling Fork to labor another year, my heart leaped for joy, and my joy was augmented when I reached home and found a warm welcome for the returning pastor, extended not only by the Methodist church, but also by the entire citizenship of Rolling Fork and Cary; and joy has been added to joy as time has passed, and I have seen evidences of improvements in the different departments of church work. Our congregations at both churches have been gradually growing. The Sunday school attendance is the best it has been since I have been on this field. I attribute this to the earnest prayers and indefatigable labors of the leaders. Our superintendents, Dr. Goodman and Brother Parham, are ever on the alert for plans and pupils that will make a Sunday school larger and better. Dr. A. K. Barrier, our Bible Class teacher at this place, is eminently fitted for the office he holds. He never appears before his class with an unprepared lesson, but by diligent research and careful study, he brings to his class truths new and old in such a manner as arrests and holds their attention and provokes helpful discussions. Mrs. Annie Barrier is a most efficient cradle roll superintendent. So faithful is she to the duties of her office that a new arrival in town cannot pass over a Sabbath without its name being solicited for the cradle roll. I would like to tell of the good qualities of all our teachers through whose labors the Sunday schools have improved, but time and space will not permit this. Suffice it to say, we have a good corps of teachers in both our Sunday schools. While there is not as much interest taken in the Woman's Missionary Society as should be, our Ladies' Aid Society prospers. There are many evidences of intensifying interest in this work,

Our beloved presiding elder was with us last Sunday. He preached two very excellent sermons to large and appreciative congregations. While the financial report to the quarterly conference was not very large, it was enough to keep the wolf away from the door of the parsonage for a while, and to get the presiding elder back home. The same amount was assessed for the pastor that was assessed last year—$2000—and the stewards have adopted the plan of collecting monthly. We have received seven into the church since Conference, and expect to receive several more soon. Withal, I think we have begun the year quite auspiciously.

Brother Carley, do you remember when I visited you, your father, and the rest of the family, in the district parsonage in Enterprise, Miss.? It seems it was but yesterday, and I was a mere youth, and now I am "grand-daddy." My! Tempus fugit! I am beginning to feel somewhat patriarchal. You know, in my day dreams in other days, I have tried to fancy the feeling of a man coddling his first grandbaby, but I find my imagery is but as the shadow that announces the approach of a person. To know the thrill of it, one must have the experience. It cannot be expressed in words. It's a sweet little girl, Miss Mary Ella Crawford, the first-born of our eldest daughter, Mrs. C. D. Crawford. She is a very pretty baby. She resembles her grandfather a good deal. Cum grano salis.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

SCIENCE AND SAWDUST.

We have often heard it suggested that sawdust would possibly become a palatable and highly nutritious kind of breakfast food. We do not know that any such development has yet taken place, but we read recently that a process has been discovered by which sawdust can be converted into a superior kind of stock food. By what is called hydrolization, twenty-five per cent of the dry weight of the wood is turned into sugar, and the rest of the wood fiber is so changed as to make it soluble in character. In the experiments following the discovery of the process, the claim is made that the cows upon which the tests were made kept up their milk production and maintained their weight with a portion of the new food included in their ration even better than on the ration composed exclusively of grains and silage. We do not vouch for the correctness of this report, and we certainly do not advise our readers to begin to feed sawdust to their cattle till they are sure it has undergone a change that really makes it food. But that such a thing is possible, we do not doubt. We have seen the grace of God turn a sinner into a saint—and that is a much more marvelous thing than changing wood into food.

WOODROW WILSON.

When a great man lays down the work which has engaged the best years of his life and which has brought honor to himself and to his country, it is fitting that some mention be made of his achievements and of the place he may be expected to occupy on the pages of history. The estimate so near the event is likely to lack something of the value that the perspective of time alone can give, but it has the advantage of being made while the subject still looms large in the public eye. There can be no doubt, we think, that Woodrow Wilson has, for the time being, lost the popular approval which was so enthusiastically given him in the earlier days of his administration. The stupendous problems he had to face with the coming of the war, and the even greater problems with which he had to deal following its close, made it almost inevitable that he should detach himself from the life around him and give himself wholly to the study of the abstract principles that were involved in the solution of these problems; in a sense, therefore, he lost touch with the every-day interests of those who were not called upon to think in world terms or act with the welfare of humanity in view. In addition, he had to suffer the persistent attacks of political opponents who placed party advantage above every other consideration. It must be admitted, also, that Mr. Wilson assumed certain attitudes and sanctioned certain measures that alienated many people who had been his ardent admirers. But these things, temporary in their nature, will be lost sight of as the occasions that gave rise to them fade into the past, and he will be remembered by the permanent contributions he made to the welfare of the nation and of the world. Without attempting to enumerate these contributions in detail, and speaking as one whose mind could not always go along with Mr. Wilson's in many of its processes, we venture the suggestion that Mr. Wilson will ultimately take rank as one of our greatest presidents because he was the persistent prophet of practical idealism in national and international politics. That his aims have not as yet been reached means nothing so far as his title to greatness is concerned—ideas have a way of working themselves out long after those who advanced them have passed away. For awhile the world may try to manage its affairs on the old basis of selfishness and self-interest; but the time will come when the old order will give way to a new—and the Wilsonian philosophy of fundamental morality in governmental relationships throughout the world will be the ruling influence in shaping international policies. In the meantime, the physically broken ex-president will have the respect, if not the affection, of his fellow-citizens of this great republic.

THE REWARDS OF UNSELFISH SERVICE.

We read this story the other day: "A man in Rochester, returning from his business and hurrying to supper, noticed a group of excited men on the bank of the Genesee River. He stopped long enough to see that they were endeavoring to rescue a boy who had fallen in. The river flows through the city, and accidents occur now and then; and as there seemed to be men enough on the bank to do whatever was needed, this man was thinking of leaving and hurrying on home. But he saw that the efforts to save the boy were not very successful, and he flung off his coat, plunged into the water, and rescued—his own son." The story carries its own moral, but we should like to add a comment to the effect that an act of unselfish service never fails to win bountiful compensation. It may not be so striking or so immediate as in the case just related, but it is sure nevertheless. We challenge any of our readers to put this statement to a test—and let their own hearts render the verdict.

CHANGE THE INHERITANCE.

A distinguished physician has recently declared that the average baby learns to cry before it can laugh. According to his investigations, tears may be shed as early as the twenty-second day, but not until the twenty-sixth day does a baby smile. His explanation is to the effect that for untold generations humans have frowned oftener than they have smiled, and that the infant is merely following the law of heredity in showing unhappiness before it shows happiness. We do not know whether there is anything in this hypothesis or not; if there is, it is time for us to begin to change the inheritance our children will receive from us. Everybody, all together now—smile!

THE NEW ADMINISTRATION.

On March 4 a new administration took charge of our national affairs, Senator Warren Gamaliel Harding being inaugurated as president of the United States. In respect of political affiliations, all patriotic citizens will unite in the prayer that peace and prosperity may be our portion under the present administration, and that great grace may rest upon the President and his advisers as they enter upon the discharge of their difficult duties. It is a good omen that President Harding selected as the passage of Scripture upon which to press his lips in assuming the oath of office, those heart-searching words of the prophet, "What doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?" His inaugural address was commendably brief, being not so much a declaration of policies as a general statement of the attitude of mind with which he undertakes the duties of his high office. To assist him in administering the affairs of the nation, he has chosen the following as members of the Cabinet, the Senate having already confirmed his nominations: Secretary of State, Charles Evans Hughes, of New York; Secretary of Treasury, Andrew W. Mellon, of Pennsylvania; Secretary of War, John W. Weeks, of Massachusetts; Secretary of Navy, Edwin Denby, of Michigan; Secretary of the Interior, Albert B. Fall, of New Mexico; Secretary of Agriculture, Henry C. Wallace, of Iowa; Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover, of California; Attorney General, Harry M. Daugherty, of Ohio; Postmaster General, Will H. Hays, of Indiana; Secretary of Labor, James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania.

HIS WAY BEST.

By Rev. W. A. Hays.

We like the rush and glare of things,
And all that seems success;
And in the struggle they require
We bravely stand the stress.
But these the Master oft denies;
His hand doth interpose;
Then we should learn His way is best,
For He both loves and knows.

We set our hearts on tasks to do,
And hope for years of life;
We see the need and feel the fire
Of zeal through peace or strife;
When lo! a pause—the strong man fails,
From toil must turn aside;
But all things work for good to those Who trust our loving Guide.

He leads adown the shadowed vale
As up the shining slope;
When sun is hid and darkness reigns
Forth shine the stars of hope;
While whispered peace the soul assures
Through gloomy nights and days,
And life's enriched with faith and love
And heart aglow with praise.

Meridian, Miss.

A METHODIST MINISTER'S MUSINGS ON EVANGELISM.

By Rev. Arthur A. Pittman.

It was Sunday morning. The pastor, as was his custom, was welcoming the strangers as they entered the church. He studied the faces of those who entered, with a prayer in his heart that the message might be such as would meet the needs of those who were to compose his congregation that morning. He could not know the needs of all his people, but the Holy Spirit knew, and upon him he depended for direction.

Unto the Least.

An elderly woman in her seventies entered, whom the pastor had met during the previous week. She had been begging bread for her ill-fed family, and an encouraging word made her feel she would be welcome in that church. A seaman's widow of a few months passed him, and in passing whispered, "He was at home a year ago to-day." Nothing more was said; a grip of the hand was the pastor's answer. Tears came to the eyes of both as she passed by to her seat. The mother was there, whose husband was spending his few remaining days in a hospital for incurables. These folks needed the comfort of the evangelistic message.

Then came a whole family that had recently entered into fellowship with the Master. The story of it all flashed across the mind of the man of God as he noted the look of happiness upon the faces of the three as they took his hand. The boy, a few weeks before, had signified his intention to follow Christ. A letter had been sent to the home explaining matters, and asking if the lad might not be allowed to enter the church with a large group who were to enter upon a certain day. At that time neither mother nor father were Christians. The letter brought conviction to the heart of the mother, who in the warm atmosphere of the prayer-meeting of the church, came to the altar and experienced the joy which the world can not give. She went home to set up a family altar. A little later, when the invitation was given one Sunday evening, the father of the home came, prayed through and was gloriously converted. At the prayer-meeting previous to the Sunday about which we are thinking, the father and mother had given glorious testimony to the saving and keeping power of their Lord and Christ. For the first time in their lives, they knelt that morning at the communion-rail, a Christian family, and heard the words now replete with a new meaning: "This is my body which was broken for you;" "This is my blood which was shed for you." These new converts needed the encouragement of the gospel message.

Evangelism Needs Pastor and Members.

As the pastor greeted these new converts, there passed the noble men and women whose prayer, warm-hearted sympathy and genuine religion made possible the atmosphere in which souls might be born and come to maturity. For evangelism is not a matter of pastor alone; it is not alone a matter of psychology and method; it is not a matter of laymen alone—it is all of these working together with God in harmonious relation. Evangelism is a spirit that is born of desperately earnest prayer on the part of thoroughly consecrated men and women; men and women of one spirit, like the group which gathered before Pentecost; folk of the spirit of Jacob at Peniel, when he said, "I will not let thee go except thou bless me." These folk were glad too, because the victories which were coming to the church were their victories. They knew that victory came at the sacrifice of self in the Master's service. But they were glad that morning because the reward was great.

Through the entrance came another for whom pastor and people had prayed and labored diligently, but there seemed to come no response. At the prayer-meeting night previous, she had requested that they pray for her. How elated were the hearts of all for even that response. But as she came this morning, one knew that there was victory in her soul. Her step was buoyant, her face was aglow with a holy happiness. She greeted her pastor with the words, "It's all settled. I've decided to make Christ my Savior." How the pastor's heart leaped for joy. How could he ever again talk about the price of service; the rewards were so magnificent, that the small sacrifice involved became insignificant.

In musing over what had transpired to bring about the result which so warmed the hearts of all, it was discovered that several had made a contribution. So this victory too could be shared. The message from the pulpit had helped, the exhortations of faithful lay preachers had cleared away many doubts, but it was the word of encouragement of a neighbor on the way home from meeting that had given the final touch that was needed to bring the sister to a real consciousness of God. No one had ever suspected this brother of being a personal worker, although all knew that he was possessed of an irreproachable Christian character. But it was his word that had given the final impetus that was needed to cast the balance on the side of victory for a soul.

As the mind of Christ's servant wandered over his fine audience of intelligent folk that Sabbath morning, he saw many for whom he and others were praying, who had not yielded to the Savior of mankind. He saw the indifferent, the flippant, those with heavy hearts and those whose hearts were light, and he poured out his soul to God that his message might be fitted to the needs of the hour. Only an evangelistic message could fit such a congregation, a message that had at its heart the good news that Christ had come to declare.

The pastor spoke with unction that morning in his brief communion message. Then came the communion, and what a communion it was! God was there, and no one doubted his presence. In that service men and women declared themselves for God who had never done so before.

When the Spirit Leads.

The evening of this same Sabbath came, with the sermon, and then the climax of the day, the after-service and the testimony meeting, so refreshing because never conducted twice in the same manner. Those who had taken communion for the first time in the morning were encouraged to testify. Strangers were there, and they too spoke the word which God had put into their hearts. One said that he had been a Christian for many years, but the spirit of that group of folk had given him a new lease of life. Another asked, "Why can not we have this kind of thing in our church?" and the answer came quickly, that it might come anywhere were God's people sufficiently in earnest to get hold of God—in the words of one of our noblest missionaries, "Where there was a willingness to do great things for God, and to expect great things from God."

As the pastor went home that night, he mused as pastors are wont to muse, and he wept as pastors are wont to weep, and he prayed for leadership as pastors are wont to pray, but in the midst of his rejoicing his heart was sad because of the abundance of the harvest and the scarcity of the reapers, and he prayed that God would send more reapers into the harvest field.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

MAKING READY FOR THIS SPRING'S WORK IN THE COUNTRY SUNDAY SCHOOL.

By M. W. Brabham.

Every new day is a new opportunity and every new spring of every new year is a token of God's willingness to give us a new chance. How shall we meet it this year?

The country Sunday school may be divided into at least two classes: Those which are now closed down because of the winter, and those which are still meeting every Sunday despite seemingly insuperable handicaps. The plans for the first of these will have to be radically different from those for the stronger school which has not surrendered. The method of beginning the work for this spring will be different, and these differences of method must be borne in mind in considering the suggestions offered at this time.

What Things Should Be Done?

In the country school, two things should be considered in connection with the work of the coming spring months: What needs to be done, and what can be done. When you have carefully determined upon the things which need to be done, then it will be time enough to consider how to do them.

For the Whole School. Certain needs which apply to the whole school may be considered. These will very likely include such things as the following: ordering an increased number of lesson periodicals for the larger number of pupils expected to attend; taking down of the stove and carefully putting it away for the summer; giving the entire church building a good scrubbing, removing the stains and dirt which have accumulated during the winter months because of smoke and mud; the buying of new or additional song books, so that there will be an ample supply, affording at least one book to every two persons; the freshening up of the walls and pews or chairs with paint or varnish; the mending of broken seats; taking down of old posters, pictures or other out-of-date wall decorations.

For Individual Classes. There will be certain needs which will apply more particularly to the classes and these will suggest themselves in the light of local conditions. A few of the possible needs will be as follows: Re-grouping or classification of some of the pupils who have been put together during the winter because of small attendance, increasing the supply of the special story papers for new boys and girls, such as "Boys and Girls" for those under ten years old, and "The Visitor" for those who are older; cutting down of the supply of the "Home Quarterly" because of the pumber who can now attend the Sunday school sessions and have their names transferred from the Home Department to the active classes of the school.

Planning for Special Occasions. As the country school makes its plans for the coming spring, it will naturally wish to include such special days to which the school may look forward. Among these will always be the monthly Missionary Day, coming on the fourth Sunday of the month, with a program and an offering. Easter Sunday will come the latter part of March and this will afford a good opportunity for the school which has been closed during the winter to shake off its lethargy and come to life. Surely no Sunday school should be found in "winter quarters" on Resurrection Day. The latter part of April is the time for the observance of "Sunday School Day." This may be made a notable occasion and serve as a splendid time for impressing upon the congregation the things for which the school stands and toward which it is working.

As to the Out-of-Doors. Reference has been made to the in-door cleaning up, and this ought also to apply to the surroundings of the church. The spring in the country is the most joyful time of the year. Classes of the school may be enlisted in beautifying the church grounds. Trees may be white-washed with most pleasing results. Grass plots which have been arranged during the past fall may be put in order. Flower beds belonging to individual classes may be selected and tended. Seats under the trees may be arranged so that, as the days continue to warm up the atmosphere, certain groups of the school may be carried out of doors for the class period. If sufficient ground is available, a good tennis court, baseball field or other play grounds may be arranged by the members of the school. A Sunday school baseball club may be organized this spring, and as they meet to play on some week day, a good spirit of interest may be developed in the name of the school.

New Features Introduced. The spring of the year affords an opportune time for beginning new plans. People are more in the frame of mind for beginning fresh things. Life is all about us. Growing vegetation challenges us to grow also. Freshly turned soil and sprouting corn and cotton point us upward to high endeavors. It may be that the superintendent determines to begin the new quarter, April the first, with a well-planned order of service. He has read such a book as "Story Worship Programs for the Church School Year," by Stowell, and realizes that worship must have a more distinctive place in the conduct of the school. Or he has read "The Use of the Story in Religious Education," by Eggleston, and has decided that he will introduce as a feature of his school each Sunday one good short story. It may be that he has read again or for the first time, "How to Run a Little Sunday School," by Ferguson, and has resolved to map his work out carefully at least a month or three months in advance. It may be that the teacher has gotten hold of Miss Slattery's little but inspiring book, "Living Teachers," and has had her own soul stirred with the possibilities of a fired heart and mind. Perhaps she has visited some active organized class during the past winter and now resolves that with the coming of spring she will organize her own class and seek to give them a plan of work for the coming spring and summer.

It may be that in the country Sunday school the organized classes have been having some good social times during the past winter and how they are champing on the bits for the time when the open weather will permit them to get out of doors for more all-around active service. They may have written for and secured "The Program of Service" for Wesley Bible Classes, and have determined to do regular work in the class, in the church, in the home, and in the community.

It may be that the pastor of the circuit Sunday school has learned something of the excellent things being done by many other circuits with their "Four-times-a-year Circuit Institutes," and has resolved to begin such an organization for his charge. Or perhaps he has decided that the "Standard of Efficiency" should be brought to the attention of his workers and he meets them in the regular March session of the Workers' Council and challenges them to a plan of work along the lines set forth in "The Standard."

The secretary of the circuit Sunday school will naturally wish this spring to revise his rolls and see that his records are in proper condition. It may be that he finds the present system of records is inadequate, making only "A" for absent and "P" for present. In consultation with the other officers and teachers he presents a record system which will stimulate the pupils as to promptness, regularity, home study of the lessons, systematic giving, church attendance and other such things which are deemed worth while.

The treasurer has no doubt felt that it was an impossible task to meet all bills promptly because of the scattering offerings received during the winter. He determines that the spring will find him prepared to offer better ways for the development of systematic giving in the school. It may be that it is at this time that he suggests that the congregation be asked to take care of all the running expenses of the school, so that each Sunday may be free in the school for the pupils to contribute to the benevolences of the church, thereby training the school membership into intelligent givers. This spring in the country Sunday school will determine very largely the kind of religious education thousands of boys and girls shall receive. It is at this time that the school has its best chance. It is during these few months that the teachers have more nearly ideal conditions under which to do their work than any other season. How shall we plan for the coming of March, April and May? What shall these three months bring to us as Sunday school pupils and leaders? The plans we now make and prepare to put into operation will very largely be the answer.

A SUPERANNUATE RUMINATES.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

I have never been much given to looking backwards. I am afraid of it. If indulged in excessively, it interferes with one's power to adjust self to the changing experiences and work of life. I have found it safer and better to weigh well the serious and real problems of the present, and to look for visions that will thrill and inspire for the future. However, an occasional backward glance is helpful—it warms and refreshes.

Lately my memory has been busy with my presiding elders. I counted them carefully, and found that I have had twenty. If a presiding elder is a good thing to have, I have been abundantly favored; if an affliction, then my ephastings ought to have made me a mighty good man. This list of twenty presiding elders comprises every conceivable variety of personal, social, pulpit and administrative character. In calling over their names thoughtfully I sometimes paused at some of them and visualized them in a brief analysis, and found real pleasure in doing so.

I loved all of them, notwithstanding we had some lively spats and sharp differences. Occasionally fur was made to fly, but when the flurry was over, and we came to ourselves, our differences were forgotten and we loved like brethren. Isn't it strange that good, sensible and religious men will let their temper make fools of them sometimes? Thank God, His grace heals dissensions and brings hearts together. If it were not for His grace, what would become of us?

My presiding elders were all good men. They feared God, loved the church and loved their brethren. However, they were not all alike good. They differed greatly. They were "good, better, best." The best preachers of them were the most inefficient presiding elders. This was not peculiar to my presiding elders—it is true of them generally. I have said many times that I didn't want my presiding elder to specialize on pulpit work. If so, he would be sure to neglect administrative work. A presiding elder who measures up to all the requirements of his great office must be a good business man, one able to analyze safely personal character, have a good working knowledge of the law of his church, and be a clear and rapid thinker in order to move and counter-move in cabinet work. I have noticed them closely in the cabinet—and have found that almost without fail the best preachers in the body were slow, heavy and doubtful in their movements.

The presiding elder who spends time excessively in his study, elaborately embellishing his sermons with history, science, poetry and philosophy, has not sufficient time to study men and administrative problems. It takes a good combination to make a first-class presiding elder. We have more men who possess the requisite combination than is commonly supposed. I have but little patience with the notion, often expressed, that presiding elder timber is scarce. In my judgment it is not true. I could very easily name seven men in the Mississippi Conference who have never been tried who could and would acquit themselves creditably if given a chance. If I had it in my power, I would try them. Four years' continuous service in the office is long enough for any man. I have tried it—I know.

But to my subject—I meant to write about my presiding elders, but have digressed somewhat by animadverting on the presiding eldership with reference to the qualifications necessary to fit one for it.

I do not mean to give a personal sketch of all my presiding elders. I would be glad to do that but space forbids. Three of the number stand out from all the others so clearly in their individualism that memory visualizes them in the uniqueness of their personality. I shall write briefly of them.

Rev. Archibald B. Nicholson was my first presiding elder. Forty-six years ago he was on the Summit District and I was pastor of the Franklin-ton circuit. He gave me his love and confidence in large measure, and won my heart. In his declining years he was frequently in my home. He never came too often, nor stayed too long. When pastor at Hazlehurst, where he lived, he spent much time with me at my parsonage home. In the afternoon he would come in, make himself comfortable on the bed and say, "Read me something good." In a few minutes he would breathe hard and snore. When I stopped reading, wide-awake in a moment, he would say, "Read on, I was wide-awake and listening."

As a preacher, Brother Nicholson was original and unique. He was distinctively unconventional. He gave no thought or concern to the technique of sermonizing. He preached in an independent and unique style that charmed his hearers when the preaching spirit moved him. It was a rare treat to hear him when he "swung clear." In the symbols and incidents in the worship and history of Israel he greatly delighted. Spiritualizing was his joy. He heard God speaking in everything in the life of His people, however commonplace it might appear. It was all a wonderful theophany to him. He revealed in the rich and glowing imagery of the Old Testament. He was emotionally spiritual, and at times in the pulpit or in the midst of rejoicing saints gave exultant praise to God.

Brother Nicholson was a great conversationalist, excelling in humorous anecdote and reminiscence. In this he surpassed Sam Jones. He was less assertive and aggressive than Jones, but in his quaint insinuativeness he surpassed him.

I never fully forgave Brother Nicholson for failing to come to my second quarterly conference. It was held at Mt. Hermon, La. His absence gave me great distress. I thought presiding elders never failed, so I made myself quite easy. Saturday at 11 o'clock, the presiding elder not having come, I preached the only sermon I had not used there. I scarcely slept any Saturday night, fearing Brother Nicholson would not come. He did not come; and, not having any sermon, I read a passage from the Scriptures, and took no text, but preached from Genesis to Revelation. I took a broad crack at creation. I was so wrought up that my brain seemed to be on fire. The people said it was fine. May be; the people are mighty good to young preachers.

Rev. Clarence A. Powell was my presiding elder for two years, when I was at Moss Point. Our association was positively unpleasant. We dif-ferred sharply, and as both of us were high-strung and combative, our differences grew no better as time passed. Each held his ground courageously and stubbornly—"Greek had met Greek." I look back over the intervening twenty-six years and wonder why we acted that way. The picture of it would be laughable if it were not so sad. Brother Powell's health gave way later and he was superannuated. I opened up Centerville and offered it to him, and he took charge about the first of October, 1902. The past was blotted out, and we loved each other as long as he lived. Brother Powell was a knightly Christian gentleman. He was true to his convictions, and fearless in all things. I never knew a preacher who was more candid and uncompromising where principle was involved. As a preacher he was clear and vigorous, and delivered himself conscientiously without seeming to care for the consequences to himself. He was always in the open. He was transparent in character. He was strikingly individual—I never knew any one like him. I think of him often.

Dr. Edwin H. Mounger was my presiding elder in two districts. He was a studious, scholarly and polished preacher. I not only loved him, but trusted him to the fullest. His judgment was good, and his knowledge of men was almost uncanny. This was his special forte in cabinet work. It was a rare thing for him to make a mistake in choosing men for his district. Dr. Mounger was a wide reader, and a critical student. He never lost interest in the great movements of the world and the church—daily newspapers, the best magazines, and new books were his delight. When he was my presiding elder he brought new books or looked for them in my library on his quarterly visits and together we read and discussed them. He was helpful to me. He was a good church lawyer, and of fine constructive ability. It was a matter of surprise to me that he was never elected to the General Conference. I voted for him faithfully. He would have reflected credit on his Conference.

Dr. Mounger was modest and retiring, but faithful and true. His was a noble spirit that hated everything little and mean and held the highest and purest ideals. He did not have the voice, nor pose nor sweep of an orator, but his sermons were gems of high thinking and full of the rich meat of Gospel truth.

These three former presiding elders live in my memory and heart and life. I am glad of the fellowship I had with them—my life is richer because of it.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

"Pulling the gods from their pedestals"—I must have seen this somewhere or else I coined it. But many are doing this by mingling the material with the ideal so as to bring the latter down from the star heights to the mud pools; so bent and intent on this world's business as to ignore the King's business. All this is wrong. It is worse than wrong—it is a crime against one's country and a sin against God. Human fellowship, with all its interests, is the basic principle of all correlated life and this the life we now live, and the seed of a larger one, even the one spiritual. Better by far to have your head in the stars, than your soul using a muck rake. See a late ad: one starts to write of Washington—not a god by any means, either Christian or heathen, but a Virginia gentleman, a patriot, brave, courteous, with many of the virtues, and some of the vices of his age—and ends his screed by advertising pills and potions. Another calls on the name and fame of this conscript father to help him sell real estate. Why mix things in this anomalous style? It is a shock to one's sense of eternal fitness and seems to me poor patriotism and worse business.

Sunrise! Out of dark horizon, a golden shield of light and beauty gilds anew the awakening world. God paints pictures of inimitable glory on the morning sky at the coming of each clear day. The shimmering clouds are his pigments more splendid than cathedral windows; the vast outlying spaces, homes of other suns and stars, are his background. To the responsive soul such dawns, and they are many, should touch every chord and stir every latent power to praise and wonder. When the Hand that guides the planets in their courses and balances the suns had drawn the sheltering curtain of night over all, the dew-drops kissed the grasses and flowers with crystal chrims to shine like jewels in the light of the new day. No wonder the poet Gray called it "the incense-breathing morn," for all the glad earth becomes an altar, a fit shrine for worship of the God who said, "Let there be light," at creation's dawn.

"Have faith in God," said the Master to the disciple's wondering why the barren fig tree so quickly withered. Faith is not only the crowning glory of our holy religion, but is also a great economic principle. Perhaps never before in modern history since the days when the Roman Empire was broken and ruined, have we been confronted by so much unrest, so much doubt as to the permanency of this present civilization and the institutions connected therewith, as at the present time. Men in all walks of life need the strength of purpose, the assurance of divine guidance, the resolute courage, and the vision of the ultimate triumph of righteousness which only can come from faith in God. The nation's life and its continuance are in his hands. So is yours and mine and the life of all. The waves of this world's unrest can not reach the shores of the infinite ocean of God's boundless care.

THE PERAMBULATOR EMBARKS.

It was a beautiful day when the "Kasauga Maru" left Shanghai and plowed into the open waters of the Eastern Sea, taking our party to Nagasaki, for we were making a stop of some ten days in Japan before taking our Pacific steamer at Yokohama. After our 1500 miles of railway travel in Korea and China, and our "doing" the cities of Mukden, Peking, and Shanghai, we were all ready to enjoy the delights of an ocean voyage. Instead of 60 members in our party, we had now been reduced to 16, for at Shanghai the large party was broken into groups and ours was the only one returning for so lengthy a stay in Japan. Nothing of importance occurred during the 48 hours we were crossing the Eastern Sea, though it was delightful just to rest and loiter about on deck and in cabin as one pleased. One of the joys of ocean travel is that you do not have to get up in the morning unless you want to, for there is nothing to call you forth except your own will, as the ship will just as readily serve breakfast in your room and your cabin-boy will permit your lying in bed until you see fit to arise. There is no danger of starving, as they will bring your food to you four times a day. Hence, to the Perambulator it was one of the greatest bonanzas he has ever struck, and he enjoyed it to the full.

Arriving at Nagasaki early in the morning, we spent until 3 o'clock visiting the shops and looking in upon the unique things of Japan. Here we found great porcelain works and we were prevented from buying only because they would not sell us save in lots of six or more. A trip to the native shops and the purchasing of two kimono and a house robe proved exceedingly interesting features of our stay. The Japanese also are like unto the Chinese when it comes to buying. At this shop the price first asked for the three garments was 78 yen; when we walked out of the ship with them under our arm, we had purchased the three for 43 yen, the price being our own. One of the ladies remarked that if the Perambulator had let her do the buying, she would have bought them even cheaper.

From Nagasaki our ship proceeded to Moji, where another stop was made of a few hours only, so we did not have an opportunity to visit this place. Leaving Moji, we proceeded to Kobe, a magnificent trip of 240 miles through the beautiful Inland Sea of Japan. The regret was that our ship could not tie up at night and make this journey only during the day, so that the eye could take in every beauty that was presented to it. The water was like a mirror, while off in the distance could be seen the shore line on one hand and on the other vessels plowing through the water carrying their cargoes. This sea is at places 40 miles in width and at other times you are in view of both sides of the shore. All in all, it is one of the beauty trips of the world.

Kobe is one of the big cities of Japan, and we had the great pleasure of spending four days here, with a side trip to Kyoto, which some of the party chose to take. The four days in Kobe were spent in visiting the Christian schools and a side trip of one day to the Government State Normal College for boys. Both the Christian and the Japanese institutions were well equipped and schools of high order. Of course, nothing concerning Christianity is presented to the students of the Government schools. One of the joys of Kobe was the walk through Matamochi street, which is the Canal street of the city. Here, again, we experienced the joy of buying articles much less than the shopkeepers asked for them and always leaving the proprietor with a smile on his face and a "thank you" on his lips for our having purchased.

Yokohama is 358 miles distant from Kobe by sea, but as our party seemed to have accustomed itself to the sea, a little journey of this distance was as nothing to us, and especially since the ship did not venture out far from land in making the journey thither. At Yokohama we had the great joy of spending our four days there upon boat while the ship received its freight for America. We knew that this was our last stop in the Orient before sailing for home; consequently the party wanted to see all that could be seen in Yokohama and at the same time run up to Tokyo, 18 miles distant, to spend a day there. Three days made us pretty well acquainted with Yokohama. In fact, I really think that any of our party could have gone to any portion of the city and returned to the ship without a guide. Certain it is that the shopkeepers got to know us as delegates to the Sunday School Convention. All kinds of wares were offered us for sale, and, as usual, those that we purchased were purchased at our own price.

Finally, the day of our departure came. We sailed at 3 o'clock. Before leaving dock the friends of the Japanese bound for America came on board to tell them good-bye and as they left the ship they gave to their loved ones on board the end of a roll of ribbon paper. As the ship went out to sea the paper was unwound and for a hundred yards or more there were paper ribbon lines of green, blue, yellow, red, purple and so forth, stretched from the friend on the shore to the loved one on board. This presented a very pretty spectacle and was an eye-opener to us Americans. As fine as this was, yet one thing finer there was to us Americans. An American woman missionary standing on the dock amid the throng of Japanese was waving good-bye to the Sunday school party. As the ship drew further out into sea, this American woman missionary climbed the stairway leading to the gangplank until at last above the hundreds of Japanese waving their fond farewell to their loved ones stood this American woman missionary waving to her friends. As she was doing this another missionary and his wife, seeing her on the gang platform, rushed up the stairs and stood by her and thus the three were waving as we waved back. One of the ladies in our party remarked, "As always, America forges herself above the rest of humanity."

From Yokohama to Seattle is 4283 miles. The trip was made in 14 days. The route was that known as the northern one. The sea was smooth the entire journey, but the days were heavy and depressing from the standpoint of the weather, as we had only one day of sunshine. There were the 16 Sunday school delegates and one other American first-class passenger, while the rest of the passengers were Chinese, Japanese and Koreans, all bound for America; some as students, some to study conditions for their Government, and some on a sight-seeing tour. All of them expected great things, and the saddest question we had to answer was this, which was put to us at different times, "Are not all the men, women and children in America Christians?" When we would tell them nay, but that thousands of our citizens knew not God, they would reply: "Our Japanese people do not understand this. They think America is a great Christian nation and every person in it is a Christian." Thus does America stand in the hearts of the people of the Orient.

We arrived at Seattle at 8 o'clock at night, where we found Uncle Sam's customs officers awaiting us and willing to examine our baggage and put us through that night. This we were glad to accept, and went to work opening our suitcases and trunks, and at 12 o'clock we were safely housed in an American hotel, glad to be once more on American soil.

THE PERAMBULATOR.

A SUGGESTION AND A CHALLENGE.

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

The time has come when the work of the preacher must be given a new adjustment. He has been the speaking representative of Christianity for a long time and, no doubt, ought to have been when it was first the custom for him to be a spokesman only. But the church has undergone a great change. It is no longer four walls inclosing a number of benches. It is now an institution. Walls inclose a workshop wherein things are done besides singing, preaching and administering sacraments. Sunday school, missionary society, organizations for all ages, community service, money raising and propaganda of all kinds are to be carried on by the institution of which the preacher is a pastor.

The time was when, if he couldn't preach, his time was limited in any pulpit. Now we have men who are as poor at preaching as some corporation lawyers are at pleading, but they are in high-steeped churches. Why? Because they are fine organizers, good business men and masters of details. They preach after a fashion, it is true, but by their preaching ability alone they would no doubt soon be in the truck or chicken business.

It seems to be proper, in view of the changed work of the preacher, that we should look out among us a class of gifted laymen who live godly lives, and develop them as speaking units in the church. The minute men, used in the Centenary campaign at first, have shown us that we have laymen who have talking gifts for the Master. The idea that the preacher must be at the job three times a week could be changed to a great advantage in many instances. I know men who belong to the church who are sent for as speakers on live topics and paid big sums for their oratory, but who go to church services year after year and are never invited to use their talent for the church. Then let us look out among us godly men and use them for the glory of God and for their own development.

With the layman considered as part of the voice of the church, the preacher considered as a part of the business organization of the congregation, and an economic force in the community, he ceases to be the member of a different class wherever he goes. He is the paid representative of his congregation. His ability is thus recognized. When he speaks, he speaks for bankers, lawyers, merchants, machinists, farmers and statesmen. He goes as the combined moral opinion of all his people. His going, then, should be made a part of the consideration of his whole church. We are in an age of big gatherings. The preacher who keeps up with the set-up meetings, get-together meetings, conferences, and the like, has a job on his hands. With a small salary and oftentimes a big family, he is scarcely able to go to these meetings. When he does go, you find him slipping about to hash houses to get the cheapest food he can buy. His shoes, clothes and handbag stamp him as a man of poverty. There he stands. Crimped for funds, threadbare, humiliated, and yet expected to tilt his chin and heave up his breast and talk in thousands for his banker, merchant, lawyer, farmer, and mechanic constituency. If any one of these good members back home were to make this trip to these conferences or gatherings, they would not go one step, if they had to feel the tight that they permit their preacher to feel when he goes as their representative.

Just here let me add that when a preacher goes to a district conference, Annual Conference, or church set-up meeting wherein the interests of his church are involved, his entire expenses should be paid by his congregation. The average preacher is forced to pay out from $25 to $100 a year making trips for his people. The board of stewards would count it an imposition to ask any of their number to make such trips at their own expense. Why make the preacher pay the whole bill? I stand ready to join in a campaign right now to pledge every congregation in the State to pay the expenses of its pastor to Conference next fall. I do not speak selfishly when I suggest this. Personally, I have had my expenses paid by some newspaper to every Conference or big religious gathering I have attended since I have been in the ministry. I am speaking because I have heard preachers complain about the fact that they are not financially able to attend the meetings they are expected to attend. And now that the preacher is, in a sense, a business manager of an institution, let him be treated in a more business-like manner. Bogalusa, La.

A TITHER'S TESTIMONY.

"I have always hesitated to give my personal experience concerning tithing, but break this rule with the hope that my testimony may help others. I have been practicing tithing for twenty-eight years, and numerous astounding experiences have come to me directly in this connection. I shall attempt here to give only a few outstanding impressions resulting from actual experiences.

"A fixed and unalterable purpose of the heart to do that which is most pleasing to God, must be the tither's attitude constantly. Otherwise satisfactory results are uncertain. You surely cannot fool God!

"The prayerful striving after a correct understanding which an earnest tither finds absolutely necessary, brings with it manifold and constant spiritual growth unconsciously. A right purpose maintained in tithing absolutely solves all of the ordinary hard points about giving, for then the question, 'How much shall I give to this, or that purpose?' becomes both pleasant and profitable, for the tither finds that he must not depend on his own judgment alone. Here spiritual growth and experience again come unconsciously, and the habit of looking to Him who knoweth all things grows even beyond the matter of giving.

"One who honestly and earnestly enters upon tithing must trust in God absolutely and hew to the line of his obligation in spite of debts or any other creature. If he does this, he will always get through difficult times (and they will come), and come out with a shout in his heart.

"A tither becomes conscious that he is a distinct part of God's plan in making up his kingdom, as it could hardly be possible for him to feel when giving in a haphazard manner.

"All these statements come from actual experience, and I have only just skimmed a little off the top."—R. S. Rudolph.

THE RICHES OF REVELATION.

By the late Dr. Joseph Parker.

Revelation enriches us with truths which Reason never could have discovered, but which, being given, Reason can accept without loss of dignity or remission of responsibility.

To me the Bible is a divine revelation—a revelation of God. Providence, Sin, Atonement, Faith, Immortality. The Bible is not a book containing a revelation; it is a revelation. We assume an immense responsibility in claiming that any book is a final and authoritative standard in faith and morals. We place the Book itself in an awful position. We separate it from all other books; we make skeptical criticism a profane offense, and devout obedience an essential element of spiritual character. The mind has simply to receive, the will has simply to obey, the heart has simply to trust. The Book is to us verily as God himself.

There is only one book in the world which can prove the inspiration of the Bible, and that is the Bible itself. Let the Bible speak for itself. When inquirers come with their questions, objections, and difficulties, insist, as a condition of conference, that the Book itself be read through and through from end to end, until the inquirer is thoroughly acquainted with its contents. That reading will do its own work.

That reading has made me an unquestioning and grateful believer in the plenary inspiration, the divine authority, and the infinite sufficiency of Holy Scripture; and, therefore, I can the more earnestly and definitely encourage others to impose upon themselves the sacred task. I now know that the Bible is inspired. It addresses itself to every aspect and every necessity of my nature; it is my own biography.—London Christian.

"TURN THINGS UP."

Abraham Lincoln when a youth was employed as a clerk in a general store, and between the duties of the store and the mill his employer owned, his time was much taken up. However, he was an ambitious fellow and all the time he kept before himself a high ideal.

One day the village schoolmaster entered the store and Abraham said to him: "I want to study English grammar." "You've not much time for that, I judge," was the reply. "I can always find time at night when folks are in bed." The schoolmaster told him he could get a grammar six miles away. Lincoln walked the six miles, borrowed the grammar and mastered it in spare moments through the day and at night by the light of a fire of shavings in the village carpenter's shop. Many years have passed since the struggle with a borrowed grammar, but nobody who has read the speeches of Lincoln delivered in national crises can forget the simple yet elegant paragraphs.

At Pittsburgh Landing during the Civil War the Union Army suffered reverses. One night the chief of staff said to General Grant, "Things look bad, General. We have lost half our artillery and a third of the infantry. Our line is broken." Grant was silent a few moments and then said, "We will reform the lines and attack at daybreak. Won't they be surprised?" The armies of the enemy were so surprised that before breakfast they were on the run. General Grant saw immediately the opportunity and weighed up at once the situation. He knew the crisis would break or make him. He dug up out of apparent failure the nugget of success.

Let us always remember that "Weak men wait for opportunities, but strong men make them." In sacred and secular history the outstanding men are those who have turned things up. The founder of the Christian religion was "despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," yet by dint of hard work and devotion to high ideals, chiseled out for himself a name on the monument of time that will never die out.—Selected.

They Came To Their Own But Their Own Did Not Receive Them

Last September nearly 5,000 Methodist boys and girls tried to enter the schools and colleges of their own Church—and were promptly refused admission. There was no room for them.

From their youth up they had been taught by their Church to seek a Christian education and to attend our own colleges. They were told that the Methodist Church was an educational Church—that it sprang from a college and had founded more colleges than any other denomination on earth. They were led to believe that the Church would give them the training which it had led them to covet.

But when they followed our advice they found the doors closed against them.

Randolph-Macon Woman's College turned away 500. Wesleyan sent back 300. Blackstone refused 200. Emory University declined to receive 150. Greensboro had 100 applicants who could not get in, and so did Lander.

Thus it has been in all the colleges.

What Has It Cost Us?

Who could figure what this situation has cost the Church and the nation? We are robbed in leadership—yea, and in self-respect, too—when we doom to ignorance and mediocrity those who have ambitions to be trained leaders. We suffer immeasurably when we send our own young people to secularized institutions, where Christian workers are seldom developed.

The thousands we turned down were potential leaders. Some were possessed of elements of greatness. We may have prevented the rising of another Wesley, Gladstone or Wilson.

There Is But One Way Out

In this, the most critical hour of human history, when the drifting, groping world cries out in frantic agony for Christian leaders to guide it to stability, the Church has an imperative duty to supply those leaders.

We certainly cannot do it by turning our own sons and daughters from the portals of our schools.

The Christian Education Movement offers the only way out. It will give the colleges what they need. It will build new dormitories, provide additional class rooms, secure more teachers, pay old debts, increase the endowments. It is the fundamental, strategic, basic movement of the day.

"JUST DAVID"—A TRUE STORY.

Most of our young readers have read and enjoyed the little book, "Just David." It is a fine story.

But here is one, a true story, about another boy by the name of David, and what he did.

David was just a country boy with a longing in his heart, and while plowing in the meadow land in South Carolina, he was plowing his way to a purpose. Out in the open God was speaking to him, and his soul was answering the divine call. There is nothing that can so strengthen a real boy who wants to accomplish great things as to commune with Nature in God's great out-of-doors.

There was a longing in this boy's heart, drawing him to greater things, and finally he left the hills and the hollows and found his way into a college town. Looking at the buildings of old Wofford College, for the town was Spartanburg, S. C., he said, "I will get an education here and I will be worth while."

One day David set out for a walk in the city, and his stroll took him by the cotton mill. Here he saw the people coming and going and he became interested in them.

He spoke to them about freedom and liberty, but they said, "Even God is against us. There is no freedom for us."

"But it is for you," said he. "You are mistaken. God is not against you. It is He who prepared this thing for you. I will prove it to you."

But what could he do? His heart ached for them, and he talked to God about it, for he knew God would know how to help them.

He borrowed $100 and with that capital he opened the doors of an old tenement house and invited the factory people in. His first pupil was a man of 33. By and by there were 40. But room was scarce. The old shack was full and it was all he had.

Again David went upon his knees and the answer came. This time it was a new building. A beautiful stone building was erected and over the door was the name "Hammond Hall," in honor of the friend who came to the help of David. A hundred acres of land lay about the school, and the first $100 had grown to a value of $100,000. Instead of one pupil there were 100.

The Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, finally adopted the school and other friends came to its aid, and to-day there are splendid buildings on the campus for the school and also for the students to live in while they go to school. There are now 250 students enrolled, as against one nine years ago.

As he surveys the work no doubt David's big heart swells within him, as he asks, "Who has been able to accomplish this?" The gray walls seem to answer him, "Just David, David English Camak, the country boy," for he is the hero of this story taken from the Young Christian Worker.

The school referred to is the Textile Institute, of Spartanburg, S. C., for mill boys and girls, the only school of its kind in America. What a monument to the faith and energy of a country boy!—Florida Christian Advocate.

"PHOEBE."

Little Phoebe Grey had come to spend a week on Uncle Daniel's farm. She had always lived in the city, and to her the farm seemed wonderful.

One morning her Aunt Alice gave her two big cookies, and told her to play outdoors until dinner time. As the little girl walked down through the orchard, she heard a clear voice call: "Phoebe! Phoebe!"

She stood quite still and listened. "I guess some little girl wants to play with me," she thought. So she answered: "Where are you?"

"Phoebe! Phoebe!" called the sweet voice.

"I guess she's playing hide and seek with me. I must try to find her." For a while the little girl looked about happily; but when she found no one, she grew tired, and called: "Come here, and I will give you a cookie!"

No little girl came, but the sweet voice still called: "Phoebe! Phoebe!"

Aunt Alice was writing a letter when Phoebe hurried into her room and said: "O, Aunt Alice, there's a little girl out in the orchard calling me! I can't find her. She just calls and calls, but she won't come to me. I told her I would give her a cookie if she'd stop hiding and come and play with me. Please come out and help me find her."

"There is no little girl who lives near enough to come here all alone. What made you think there is a little girl if you could not see her?"

"Because she called me. She says: 'Phoebe! Phoebe!'"

Aunt Alice laughed, and said: "I think that I know your little friend. I will help you find her. You will have to be quite still and look carefully, for it is not a girl, but a bird. She calls 'Phoebe' so much of the time that I think she has a nest near, for I hear her every day."

"A bird! Why, Aunt Alice, I didn't know birds could talk! She called my name just as plain as could be! It did not sound like a bird, at all."

When they reached the orchard, no little bird could they see. They walked cautiously about and peeped under the leaves and shrubs.

"We shall have to wait until another day," Aunt Alice said.

They started back toward the house. As they came near the barn a bird flew out from the shed, perched in a tree near by, and sang: "Phoebe! Phoebe! Phoebe!"

The little girl laughed. "O, Aunt Alice, we did find her, after all! What do you suppose she wanted in the shed?"

"We will look and see if she has a nest there, but she may have been after flies. This Phoebe would rather have flies than cookies. There is the nest, and she is back in it," Aunt Alice said, pointing to a rafter.

They saw the head of the mother bird looking down over the edge of the nest. She did not appear to be frightened.

"Why, how did you find it?" asked the little girl.

"I thought it might be there. The phoebe bird often builds her nest year after year in the same place. See, on the next rafter are two old nests."

When Phoebe went back to the city, her father said: "Well, little girl, what was the best thing on the farm?"

Phoebe laughed, and said: "I liked best the little bird that knew my name."—Harriet G. Brown, in Exchange.

THE BRIDGES.

There is a story of a couple who started off to ride to a friend's house. The morning was pleasant, and they were enjoying themselves, until they happened to remember a certain bridge which was very old, and probably unsafe.

"I shall never dare go over that bridge," exclaimed the wife; "and we can't get across the river in any other way!"

"O," said the man, "I forgot that bridge. It is a bad place. Suppose it should break through and we should fall into the water and be drowned!"

"Or," continued the wife, capping his complaint, "suppose you should step on a rotten plank and break your leg, what would become of me and the baby?"

"I don't know," continued her husband, "what would become of any of us, for I couldn't work, and we should all starve to death!"

So the lugubrious talk ran on until they reached the spot where the old bridge had stood, and—lo!

—they discovered that since they had last been there it had been replaced by a new one!—Selected.

GETTING READY FOR THE VICTORY.

We had the privilege last week of attending the setting-up meetings of the Christian Education Movement in the North Mississippi, the Mississippi, and the Louisiana Conferences, at Grenada, Jackson, and Shreveport, respectively. The meetings were held on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, and we had to ride on some trains at most inconvenient hours of the night in order to attend them all—but we managed to make the round. We are glad we did, for our faith in the righteousness of the cause was completely confirmed, and our hope of a successful consummation of the Movement was tremendously strengthened. Why?

1. The attendance at all the meetings was remarkably fine. According to the plans of the Education Commission, about fifty persons from each Conference were expected to be present; there were very few absentees, and in every case, so far as we recall, there was a valid excuse for failure to be present. Preachers and laymen both were there, many of the latter being men of affairs who can scarcely call their time their own.

2. These leaders of their Conferences were, without an exception, determined in their purpose and optimistic in their views. There was no disposition to ignore the fact that this territory especially is in the midst of a severe financial depression, or to minimize the difficulties in the way of a great financial undertaking at the present time, but after all allowance for these untoward circumstances had been made, there was still an inspiring optimism in all the meetings.

3. The plans for the financial campaign, May 29-June 5, are being made with such care and in such detail that they cannot fail to bring success when they are put into execution. It was evident that all three of our Conferences were fortunate in the selection of their Conference Secretaries and their Conference Financial Directors. Rev. J. H. Holder and Mr. J. G. Houston, in the North Mississippi Conference; Rev. J. M. Morse and Mr. W. J. Broom, in the Mississippi Conference; and Rev. A. S. Lutz and Mr. R. T. Moore, in the Louisiana Conference, showed by their mastery of the details that they have given themselves unreservedly to the work committed to them, and that they will leave nothing undone that will make for the complete success of the Movement.

4. The reports of Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Director General of the Movement, who was present at all the meetings, showed that already there is a degree of enthusiasm in many sections of the church in connection with this undertaking that can be explained only on the ground that our people are determined to make provision for the pressing needs of our educational institutions regardless of temporary financial embarrassment. As all the facts become known to all the people, this enthusiasm will certainly be developed in all sections of the church.

We wish it were possible for Dr. Reynolds to present to every congregation in the connection the facts he makes clear in his addresses at the setting-up meetings. These facts are given in the literature of the Movement—but too many of our people will not read the literature. We recall this striking statement, for example: the State of Massachusetts, with a territory of about eight thousand square miles, has more money invested in the endowment of its colleges and universities than have all the Southern States put together. Here is another one: Columbia University alone has a larger endowment than all the colleges and universities of our church combined. Here is still another: last year the colleges and universities north of Mason and Dixon's Line received in gifts of $75,000 and upward, nearly $88,000,000, while those south of the Line received in the same kind of gifts $250,000—and even that was given by Northern men!

It has become plainly evident that the culture of a nation determines its civilization—and its culture is determined by the character of its education. Unless the cultural ideals of this nation are fixed by Christian education, it is inevitable that pagan ideals become predominant—and paganism means social and moral disintegration. The church itself cannot survive as a leavening influence unless it raises up for itself a leadership imbued with its own ideals through their training in its own institutions of learning.

So we say the church is getting ready for victory in its fight to strengthen its educational institutions. It must win the victory. This is a time for serious reflection, earnest preparation, and stout-hearted labor on the part of every loyal Southern Methodist man and woman. We cannot afford to do less than take care of our own.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

We trust all our preachers especially, and many of our laymen, read the announcement in a recent issue of the Advocate concerning the 1921 session of the Seashore Divinity School, to be held at the Seashore Camp Ground, June 14-23, and that they have already made up their minds to attend if possible. As we have had occasion to say many times, we do not know of a place or an occasion that can furnish greater physical recreation and mental and spiritual stimulus than are to be found at this gathering on the beautiful Mississippi Sound.

The program for this year is an attractive one. Bishop W. F. McMurry and Bishop James Cannon, Jr., are expected to be in attendance and take part in the proceedings. In addition, Dr. Geo. L. Robinson and Bishop W. A. Quayle, both of whom have been on the program before, are scheduled for addresses. Dr. Robinson is a scholar who has the gift of instructing in a pre-eminent degree, and Bishop Quayle is an intellectual and oratorical genius. All the speakers are worth going a long way to hear.

There will be, also, the usual instruction for undergraduates in the Conference courses of study, with the opportunity of taking the examinations which will be accepted by the examining committees at Conference. This of itself should insure the attendance of many of our young preachers.

All in all, the Seashore Divinity School is a great institution which is rendering a distinct service to the preachers and laymen of its patronizing territory, and it should be largely attended by those who are interested in the best things of life.

A NEW PRESIDENT FOR CENTENARY COLLEGE.

The following, from the Shreveport (La.) Times of March 5, will be of interest to many of our readers:

"Following the resignation of Dr. W. R. Bourne as president of Centenary College, the office has been tendered to Dr. George S. Sexton, pastor of the First Methodist Church, by the College Board of Trustees, who are waiting on Dr. Sexton's acceptance and the consent of the board of the church to release him.

"Dr. Bourne's resignation was tendered at the last meeting of the College trustees, in order that his leave of absence might be extended to permit him to devote his full time and talents to the work of the Methodist $33,000,000 educational campaign, for which he was released from his duties at the College some time ago.

"No action will be taken in the premises until the official board of the First Methodist Church has formally received the College's proposition."

From reports coming to us, we are glad to know that Centenary College is doing especially fine work this year. A splendid faculty is rendering highly efficient service, and the student body is made up of a fine class of young men and women.

The calling of Dr. Bourne to an important position in connection with the work of the Christian Education Movement and his consequent resignation as president of the College that he might devote his full time and energy to his new duties made necessary the election of a successor. If Dr. Sexton can see his way clear to accept this call, we are confident that he can count on the fullest co-operation of all the Methodist forces of the State as he enters upon the work of making a "Greater Centenary."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, has added about $3,000 to its pastors' salaries this year.

A note from the pastor, Rev. Claude P. Jones, informs us that the church work is moving along nicely at Fayette, Miss.

Brother R. H. Furr, a member of the church at Pontotoc, Miss., has been chosen district leader for the Aberdeen District in the Christian Education Movement.

Rev. B. E. Crowson is serving his second year on the Ashland charge, North Mississippi Conference, and he reports that the outlook for the year is fine.

Sunday, February 27, was a great day at Natchitoches, La., there being something like twenty decisions for life service on that day. Rev. Henry T. Young is faithfully pushing the work.

Rev. A. E. Barrett has been placed in charge of the Elizabeth and Fullerton charge, Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, and he is already on the ground. This is an important and also a difficult field.

One of the marks of progress in the Spring Hill Church, Louisiana Conference, is the fact that both the Woman's Missionary Society and the Junior Society were placed on the honor roll at the recent Annual Meeting in Baton Rouge. Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux is the pastor.

Our people at Houlika, Miss., are planning to build a new church this year, with ample equipment for the needs of the Sunday school. The spiritual interest of the church is fine, the attendance at prayer meeting exceeding one hundred in good weather.

Miss Gurtha Ware, daughter of Rev. R. T. Ware, our pastor at Mooringsport, La., was married to Mr. Clifford Smith, in the Mooringsport Methodist Church, on February 23, Dr. R. H. Wynn officiating. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the young couple.

We regret to learn that the health of Dr. J. M. Henry, our pastor at Ruston, La., is not good at the present time. We are sure that earnest prayer is being made throughout the Louisiana Conference that this leader of the church in this State may be restored to health.

There are marked signs of progress in our Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss. The congregations are large every Sunday, the prayer meeting is good, and the attendance at Sunday school is twice what it was at this time last year. Rev. T. B. Cottrell is the pastor.

Dr. Charles Parkhurst, who for thirty-two years was editor of Zion's Herald, died suddenly, Sunday morning, February 27.

We regret that we happened not to be in when Rev. J. Early Gray, of Magnolia, Miss., honored the Advocate office with a call on Tuesday of this week.

Mr. Q. R. Henry, a graduate of Centenary College, who has been connected with the educational work of the Government at Meridian, Miss., has been transferred to Ensley, Ala.

Mrs. H. C. King, of Cincinnati, Ohio, accompanied by her two children, Ruth and Ellis, is visiting her parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. M. Ellis, at Brookhaven, Miss.

Rev. R. L. Ellis, of Caledonia, Miss., gives an encouraging report of the outlook for this, the second, year of his pastorate on the Caledonia charge.

The Men's Bible Class of our Sunday school at Oakdale, La., has grown from twenty to fifty-one members since January. The total enrollment of the Sunday school is 266.

Rev. J. A. McCormack, our pastor at Dubach, La., writes: "My work is progressing nicely, and the indications point to a good year. The people are kind and considerate of their pastor, and it is a real delight to serve them."

We are delighted that Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, who has been ill ever since Conference, is now able to sit up. He hopes soon to be able to meet his appointments.

The quarterly conference of our church at Homer, La., has recently voted to replace their present church building by an entirely new structure. This action was taken in view of the greatly enlarged needs of the congregation on account of the oil field development. Rev. R. W. Tucker is the pastor.

We regret to learn that Rev. W. A. Terry, our faithful pastor at South and East McComb, Mississippi Conference, had his arm severely fractured by the "kick" of an obstreperous Ford recently. While the injury was exceedingly painful, the splintered bones are gradually knitting themselves together.

Dr. A. B. Nelson, a member of the official board of First Church, Shreveport, La., a physician and surgeon of note in North Louisiana, died on Sunday, February 27, at Albuquerque, New Mexico. A notable funeral was conducted on Wednesday, March 2, from First Church, Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, the pastor, officiating.

Sister T. S. Randle spent a week recently at Bossier City, La., where she did some good work for the "Triple C," and for the Advocate. She writes in the highest terms of the work of the faithful pastor, Rev. J. M. Boykin. Sister Randle's many friends will be glad to learn that an operation will not be necessary on the eye which has been giving her trouble for some time.

We thank Rev. Claude M. Simpson, presiding elder of the Greenville District, North Texas Conference, for a copy of his district bulletin. Among the items of interest in it, we noticed one to the effect that the presiding elder was given a Christmas "pounding" by the various charges. We are not sure but that this is something new under the sun.

Rev. Francis D. Van Valkenburgh died of pneumonia at the Seashore Camp Grounds, Biloxi, Miss., on February 24, and was buried in the Biloxi cemetery. Brother Van Valkenburgh was born in the State of New York in 1841. He was a Confederate veteran, and a Methodist preacher for over sixty years. His end was peace. We hope to be able to give a suitable sketch of his life in the near future.

The work is moving along well at Haynesville, La., under the pastorate of Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr. The Sunday school, Epworth League, and the Woman's Missionary Society are all active, the congregations are good, and conversions are taking place. The use of the stereopticon at the Sunday night services increases the attendance and adds to the interest of the meeting.

We hear good reports of the work at our Centenary Church, McComb, Miss. The prayer meeting is especially fine, the attendance never falling below fifty and frequently exceeding one hundred. The prayer meeting has a "superintendent," and the service is conducted largely by the laymen, both men and women, the pastor taking his turn with the others. Rev. Geo. H. Thompson is the pastor.

Good reports were made at the second quarterly conference of the Rochelle and Selma charge, Louisiana Conference. The pastor's salary has been increased $280 this year, making the present assessment $1900, and all claims on this account have been paid in full to date. The Conference collections have been provided for in the budget, and a part of this has already been sent to the Conference treasurer. The Woman's Missionary Society is doing excellent work. Rev. D. B. Boddie is the happy pastor.

The Methodist Sunday school at Pontotoc, Miss., where Rev. H. P. Lewis is pastor, is making substantial headway. The attendance has increased during the year from 90 to 140. On March 1, 1920, a mission special of $300 was assumed, and in eleven months $325 had been collected on the missionary Sundays. The offering on missionary Sunday in February was directed to the China Famine Fund, and amounted to $124. Offerings in this school for the year ending March 1, 1921, totaled $750. The pastor of this Sunday school says: "We are not large enough to compete with the large Sunday schools of the North Mississippi Conference, but we will challenge them on the basis of percentage of attendance to membership and per capita offering."

The banquet of the Men's Bible Class at Rayne, La., on Thursday evening, February 24, was a great occasion, if we may judge by the account of the event in the Daily Signal, of Crowley, on the following day. Sixty-five men were present to partake of a veritable feast of good things to eat, prepared by the ladies, and to listen to a number of interesting and inspiring addresses. Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, the pastor, presided as toastmaster, and talks were made by Mr. Howard Bruner, president of the class, Mr. G. A. Kennedy, the teacher, and several others, all of whom dwelt upon the value of such organizations and such celebrations. Among the visitors were Rev. Alonzo Early, Rev. A. S. Lutz, Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Rev. F. M. Freeman. The editor regrets that at the last minute he found it impracticable for him to be present on this delightful occasion.

ATTENTION, DELEGATES LOUISIANA WESLEY BIBLE CLASS FEDERATION.

A telegram from Rev. W. W. Holmes, received just before going to press, requests us to state that all delegates who expect to attend the Wesley Bible Class Federation, which meets at Lake Charles, La., March 15-17, should notify A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, at once. This is important.

TO THE PREACHERS AND LAYMEN OF COLUMBUS DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We are very glad to be able to announce that we have secured the services of Mr. J. H. Johnson, of Ackerman, as Financial Director of the Christian Education Movement for the Columbus District.

Mr. Johnson is one of the leading laymen of our district, and the district is indeed fortunate in securing his services to lead this great movement. He is perhaps one of the busiest men in our district, being actively engaged in the insurance and real estate business and having recently been elected Grand Master of the Masons of Mississippi. But he is willing to divide his time with our great Educational Movement. Brother preacher, when you receive a letter from Brother Johnson answer it immediately and do not make it necessary for him to write the second time.

Arrange your calendar to be at West Point, April 8, for the District Set-Up Meeting. This will be a very important meeting and we must make our arrangement to be present.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition we hereby make the following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.
2. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.
3. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.
4. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.
5. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate in Every Methodist Home in Louisiana and Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.
2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.
3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will be found.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Died, at the home of her daughter, near Ponchatoula, La., MRS. P. M. GOODWIN, aged 84 years, on Monday, February 21, 1921, after a short illness of la grippe. She is survived by her daughter with whom she was living, Mrs. W. E. Hicks, and three sons, as follows: Mr. Eugene P. Moss, of Galveston, Texas, Mr. Philo M. Goodwin, of New Orleans, La., and Mr. Marvin M. Goodwin, of Ponchatoula, La. The latter never left his dear mother, but made his home with her and was faithful to her to the very end. Mrs. Goodwin has many loving relatives here among her grandchildren and others, and a host of friends to mourn her departure.

J. R. ABELS.

HARRISON MOORE was born February 19, 1841, in Yazoo County, Mississippi, where he spent the whole of his life on the same plantation on which he was born, except four years he spent in the Confederate Army. When the war came on between the North and South he offered his services to the Confederate Army, enlisting in Company F, 18th Mississippi Regiment. He fought in the following battles: Mannassas, Seven Pines, Seven Days, Second Manassas, Sharpsburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wilderness, Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor, Five Forks, Petersburg, Richmond, and Appomattox.

It was he and his brave comrades, while beholding their brave leader, General Lee, rushing into such imminent danger leading his forces in the battle of Spotsylvania, who cried to him, "General Lee to the rear—we will hold the position," and, as was their custom, they kept their promise and held the position, despite the fact, as history records, that Federal guns shot to the ground a tree 18 inches in diameter standing to the rear of the heroes of the Confederacy.

There were other battles and small skirmishes in which this great soldier of the South fought. Dr. C. R. Henderson, a member of the Confederacy and life-long friend of Mr. Moore, noted for greatness of character and godly life, says of Mr. Moore: "He was a true and brave soldier, faithful and honorable as a citizen. We revere his memory." "Mr. John Winstead, another member of the Confederacy noted for his bravery and fidelity to the South and right, said of Mr. Moore: "As a soldier he had no superior; he knew no fear when discharging his duties to any just cause."

He was married to Miss L. A. King, of Rankin County, Mississippi, November 8, 1865. To this happy union were born three children, two girls, Laura and Hattie, who with their mother, preceded him to glory, and J. S. Moore, the only son, who resides on the old plantation, the birthplace of his father, and who is among our strongest Christian characters.

Mr. Moore was converted and joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. T. W. Adams, in 1884. He was a man of God. I was his pastor for two years and always found new inspiration for Christian living every time I went into his presence. I was with him during the dissolution of soul and body when his joy in the Lord was becoming more celestial and immortal. On November 5, 1920, his soul ascended to God, where he joined in the everlasting song with the angels.

"All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown Him Lord of all."

The funeral was held in Ellison church, conducted by Rev. T. W. Adams and the writer, after which the body was laid to rest in the family burying ground near the church.

GEORGE G. YEAGER, P. C.

JESSIE WALLACE KING, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. King, was born September 2, 1916, and died February 11, 1921, making him at the time of his demise four years, five months and nine days old. In the home he was affectionate and was tenderly loved by all who knew him. As young as he was, his highest qualities showed best in his service rendered in running errands for his father. None ever thought of him except as a model little boy. He loved to attend church and was a great lover of music, his favorite songs being sung at his funeral. We know that his spirit has returned to God who gave it, for Christ said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Dear little Jessie Wallace was laid to rest in the cemetery at New Prospect church on Saturday, February 12, in the presence of a large congregation of friends and loved ones, the writer performing the funeral services.

H. J. BOLTZ.

MARY JANE WATKINS was born in East Baton Rouge Parish, October 25, 1828. She was married first to Daniel P. Wilson; she was married the second time to Henry Winans Pipkin. There were no children to either union. Both husbands preceded her several years to the life beyond. She shared the responsibility with her widowed sister-in-law, Mrs. Watkins, in the rearing of her brother's children, Dannie, Maude, and Mary. She was indeed a devout Christian. It was an inspiration to visit her and see how beautifully she bore the burden of old age. Her passing was as the ripening of the fruit in his season; when the time had fully come for the plucking, the body yielded to the touch of the sickle of death, January 16, 1921. Her funeral service was held in her home by the writer and was attended by a goodly number of friends and relatives, as well as a large number of negroes, some of them being old slaves. Interment was made in the family graveyard near the Mississippi line. Her home was in St. Helena Parish, at Lookout, La. She joined the Methodist Church many years ago, and was a consistent member, a devout reader of her Bible, and a reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for 68 years—a reader, too, not merely a subscriber. May the God of all grace comfort the bereaved, and may her God be their God.

L. E. CROOKS, Pastor.

"Righteousness, peace, and joy." The human heart welcomes these three characteristics as marking the society which answers the promise of creation. In these three, that memorable trial, the battle of every perversion and misuse, has found a wide response in the souls of nations, receives its highest fulfillment. In "righteousness, peace, and joy," we can recognize "equality, liberty, fraternity," interpreted, purified, and extended. They tell us that the community and not the individual is the central thought in the life of men. They tell us that the fulfillment of duties and not the assertive of rights is the foundation of the social structure. They tell us that the end of labor is not material well-being, but that larger, deeper, more abiding delight which comes from successfully ministering to the good of others. They tell us that over all that is transitory in the form of the kingdom, over all the conditions which determine its growth, there rests the light, the power, of an eternal presence.—Selected.

Evansville, Ind.—"I am eighteen years old and have been bothered for several months with irregular periods. Every month my back would ache and I always had a cold and felt drowsy and sleepy. I work in a millinery shop and I went to work every day, but felt stupid and would have such cramps. I had seen Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and had heard several women talk of it, so mother got me some. This Vegetable Compound is wonderful and it helped me very much, so that during my periods I am not now sick or drowsy. I have told many girls about your medicine and would be glad to help anyone who is troubled with similar ailments. You may use my testimonial as you like."—STELLA LINX-WILER, 6 Second St., Evansville, Indiana.

FINE REVIVALS AT QUEENSBORO CHURCH.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just held one of the greatest revivals I have ever been in. The revival began on the evening of January 26, and continued through Sunday, February 20. Brother Geo. Anders preached the first three sermons. Brother Anders is a strong preacher. Dr. Dan E. Kelly, Mississippi Conference evangelist, reached Shreveport Thursday night, the 10th, and took charge of the meeting Friday afternoon, and did the preaching at all the services to the close of the meeting. Dr. Kelly's brother, Mr. John Kelly, a consecrated layman, was also with us, and assisted in the singing and did personal work. Any pastor or church will be fortunate in securing Brothers Dan and John Kelly for revival work. Dr. Kelly is one of the most successful evangelists in our church; he is deeply consecrated, and depends not on methods, but on the Holy Spirit for results. The pastor and church had made preparation for the meeting; we had been praying and getting ready for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit; we were expecting a great time, and we were not disappointed.

Brother Carley, it is good to be in a real revival meeting. There is nothing better than that of being engaged in the soul-saving business. Dr. Kelly is a Holy Ghost preacher. His messages were deeply spiritual, and brought real conviction, which resulted in the salvation of many souls. As a result of the meeting, the church and community have been greatly blessed, and the revival has been far-reaching in Shreveport for good. Many have been saved and united with the church. Among those who were saved, many were men and women who had never united with the church. There were several whole families who united with the church, and many of the Sunday school scholars joined the church. We received 106 new members into the church at the close of the meeting, and 67 of these were received on profession of faith. There will be others to come into the church as a result of the meeting. We have received 144 members into the church since our last Annual Conference, and 73 of these were received on profession of faith. There has been an increase of sixty per cent in the church membership since the beginning of the Conference year. Our record Sunday school attendance has reached 300, being nearly 250 per cent increase in the Sunday school attendance. At our second quarterly conference a building committee was appointed for the purpose of raising funds for a Sunday school annex, which we hope to have in the near future. We have outgrown the present church building. Sincerely,

W. A. MANGUM, P. C.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

How many Sunday School Day programs do you want for your school? What amount is your school willing to contribute for itself and for the other schools of the Conference? Do you think it best to pass over the day appointed for the service, or is it best to prepare for the day as it comes? Is it not best to get it out of the way, and go on to something else? "I speak as unto wise men; judge ye what I say."

We hope to have about fifty of our large schools follow up Sunday School Day with the observance of Children's Week. The slogan for Children's Week is, "Give More Thought to Children." Motto: "Of such is the Kingdom." The leaflets giving program material are as follows: Children and Moving Pictures, Children and their Sunday School Lessons, Children and Family Worship, Story and Play Hour, Children's Week Exhibit. these leaflets, say so, and you shall have them.

We hear good news from every quarter. The largest buildings are too small to care for the people who attend our Sunday schools. Greenwood has let the contract for a two-story annex; Greenville feels the need of more room; Tunica is over-crowded; Sardis is full to overflowing; and so it goes. Press the battle; God leads.

The membership contest conducted by Rev. E. S. Lewis has stimulated a healthy rivalry and has done much good. Be on the lookout for a teacher-training contest and later for a contest in the elementary division. The church that trains its teachers will be apt to reach every goal we are aiming at. Whatever else we do we must give the little children more training and better training. The school that carefully follows the standard will accomplish much more than the school that ignores the standard.

MISSISSIPPI SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday, the 27th of February, a Four-Times-A-Year Institute was held at Homewood for the Homewood circuit. We had a very fine meeting. The following officers were elected: W. H. Jones, Norris, president; Marvin Tadlock, Homewood, vice president; W. L. Lane, Lorens, secretary-treasurer.

Following goal was set to be worked for by the next Circuit Institute: (1) To hold a session of the Sunday school every Sunday; (2) To do everything possible to encourage Sabbath observance; (3) To hold at least one session of the Workers' Council; (4) To strive to double the attendance at Sunday school. There was one church on the charge without a Sunday school. They were invited by the vote of the Institute to organize and participate in the next meeting. This was a fine meeting. Each school in the charge was represented.

I believe that the organizing and the holding of the Four-Times-A-Year Circuit Institutes will do more for our circuit work than any other one thing.

Friday night was spent in conference with the Junior workers of the Capitol Street Church. They are maturing plans to reach the first rank Standard of Efficiency in that Department and I believe that they will accomplish it.

A contest between Fifth Street and East End, Meridian, is doing a great deal for both Sunday schools and churches. More contests of this nature will prove helpful.

Hurrah for Jim Lewis! 110 at prayer meeting. If there is anybody that can beat that, let us know. Over 100 in his Sunday school, which is fine news indeed.

The Teacher Training Department of the Port Gibson District has set for its goal, at least one teacher training pupil in every charge. This will mean much to that district.

As soon as possible I will announce the itinerary of the pictures I will have in the interest of the Sunday school work. I appreciate the kindly and ready responses of the brethren in this matter.

We are receiving replies from our request for money with which to purchase a multigraph. We feel encouraged in this matter and believe that the people will help us.

We want a representative from every Sunday school at every District Institute. Please note carefully the date of your Institute and have a representative present.

Don't fail to make preparation to attend the Standard Training School at Jackson, June 7-14. To my mind we have the greatest faculty that has been presented to our Conference, and I bespeak for them hearty co-operation and work.

I would like to call attention of the Sunday schools to the request of Brother Lewis for an Easter offering for the Boy's Building at the Orphanage. They need this money mighty bad and I trust each Sunday school will gladly render the aid they need.

I will appreciate every item of interest that you can send us. These news items help to stimulate interest in other charges.

Yazoo City reports that of all the Methodist school children that attend school, only sixteen are not in Sunday school. Is there another town within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference that equals this?

Capitol Street school had an offering last Sunday of $88. No special occasion. Have we anything that beats this?

Forest reports that they lack only thirty of having as many in the Sunday school as they have church membership. They are determined that they will have more in their Sunday school than they have in the church. Hurrah for Forest!

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless and keep each and every one of you. Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE JOURNAL—A CORRECTION.

On examination of the Conference Journal, which has just come to hand, I find the following mistakes, mostly omissions, in my report from the Bucatunna charge: In table No. 1, I find every column blank except the one giving the present total membership, which is stated as 298, which should be 402. All other columns in this table being blank publishes to the world that there was not a single addition to the church, whereas the truth is, so far as I have been able to ascertain, there were more accessions last year than possibly ever before in the history of this charge. Therefore, as a matter of justice to myself and to other faithful workers on the charge, I ask for space in the Advocate for the following report for table No. 1: Additions on profession of faith, 43; by certificate and otherwise, 70; total, 113; adults baptized, 22; infants baptized, 4; value of church buildings, $5400; number parsonages, 1; value of parsonages, $800; number of Women's Missionary Societies, 1; number of members, 16; money raised by Woman's Missionary Society, $284; insurance carried, $1200; premium paid, $12; churches damaged, 1; loss collected, $50; periodicals taken—General Organ, 1; New Orleans Advocate, 23.

So much for Table No. 1. Now, turning to Table No. 3, I note that my charge is credited with having paid $120 on Conference Work, whereas it should be $123. It is also credited with having paid on General Work $120, which should be $123.

That the figures here given are correct and are identical with the report I made to the Conference is shown by my duplicate reports which lie before me as I write. How such a blunder was ever made in the Conference Journal, I am wholly unable to imagine. I was not present at the Conference session, but my reports, as given above, were mailed to my presiding elder, Rev. G. H. Thompson, who, I have no doubt, handed them in to the Secretary as he received them from me. I have always prided myself on the accuracy of my reports, and now, Millions of Cabbage, Tomato and Sweet Potato Plants, Wakefield, Flat Dutch, 500 for $1; 1000, $1.75; 5000, $7.50. Tomato and Sweet Potato Plants leading varieties, 500 for $1.25; 1000, $2.25; 5000 or over, $2 per 1000. CLARK PLANT CO., Box 108, Thomasville, Ga.

after all these years, to have a mistake of this sort to occur, and that, too, for the first time in all my ministry, is more or less humiliating. I am not placing the responsibility on any one because I do not know to whom it belongs, but am led to ask, is it not possible to have an accurate proof-reader in the publication of our Conference Journal? If such egregious blunders are allowed to creep into it, of what value is it to the pastors and the membership of the church?

Side and Back Hurt

Jordan Mines, Va.—"I am making this statement for the benefit of any one suffering as I did. I had pain in my side and could scarcely eat anything. My back hurt all the time and I was very nervous. A WORD FROM PEARL RIVER, LA.

One-third of the year has passed, and a word or two from Pearl River would not be amiss. Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 2316 Marcellus Avenue, Manassas, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

STOMACH MISERY

Meadow Creek, W. Va.—"I had been sick for about a year and had doctored with several different doctors and none seemed to do me any good. Anything I ate seemed to bloat me and cause great misery, and at night I would take spells with my heart and had to jump up to get my breath. I had just about given up all hope of ever getting well when I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After taking the first bottle I could see a difference in myself so I continued until I took six bottles and now I am sound and well."—BEN BOWLES. All druggists.

and there have been five baptisms. We have organized the women-folk into a Ladies' Aid, and the young folk into an Epworth League. The Aid Society has taken up the improvement of the church building and grounds, planning to fence the church lot in and set out a number of shade trees and shrubbery, one friend offering sufficient five oak trees to shade the lot. The people are loyal and working. What more can be said?

JNO. H. STAFFORD, P. C.

FROM LAMAR, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I have not spoken through the Advocate to the North Mississippi brethren and people because I have had no part in the great work of our church; but because of the work I have kept silent, and now since getting acquainted with the people and the work I want to say that it is a great pleasure for me to be pastor of Lamar circuit.

I meet many noble characters as I go from place to place in the discharge of my duties. The beautiful promises of God as found in his Word and as seen in the lives of men and women should inspire us all to greater service. I trust the example of Him who said, "Not my will but thine be done," and the thousands that have followed after him may inspire millions to do likewise; and may every Christian of America catch the spirit of him who wrote these words: "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your reasonable service." As stars differ in glory, so differ the services of mankind. How glorious is the service of a human life given without reservation to God!

The spirit manifested by the people of the charge is not one that would discourage any pastor, and I trust we may all work together for God, "till we all come in the unity of the Spirit, and of the knowledge of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

Fraternalily,

THIS MONTH'S TASK.

1. To bring all the people Christ's teachings concerning the stewardship of property.
2. To bring each church member to face this question: Do I hold to the heathen idea of absolute human ownership of property, or to the truth taught by Christ, stewardship under God?
3. To bring the church to face this question: If God required the tithe of the Jews four thousand years ago, does He expect less of us to-day?

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

A Correction.

There appeared on the last issue of this page an article under the caption: "A Call for Help." An explanation of this was omitted by mistake. By request of the Conference officers we are to state that this appeal was for contributions from individuals and not an appeal to the auxiliaries for aid.

Excerpt from the Report of Committee on Extension of Work and Finance.

We heartily thank God for the work already accomplished by the auxiliaries, and in the spirit and power of the message of Eph. 3:14-21, we undertake the work of this Conference year.

For us to grow systematically, proportionately and intelligently. It is necessary that we have a definite program for education and enrollment, hence the committee recommends three things:

Let March be Periodical month.

Let April be Enlistment and Organization month.

Let October be Mission Study month.

The first month of spring is already here, March; our Periodical month is speeding along, so we must not lose time in putting on a campaign for better circulation of our Periodicals. It is interesting to know that during the special effort made last year to secure new subscribers to our official missionary organ, "The Missionary Voice," a Louisiana woman, Mrs. Eskridge, of Baton Rouge, was second in the contest, securing one hundred new subscribers at that time. Why cannot we take first place this year? This is an important part of our Educational campaign. As we organize our forces to carry the Missionary Voice into every home, let us give great stress to the circulation of the Young Christian Worker. The children will help with this if they are asked and directed. And now, because we are Louisiana women and have our own good church paper with its pages full of missionary news and its "Page" especially for our woman's work, let us be loyal and do our best to enlarge the subscription list of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

For some weeks to follow, in every issue of this "Page," we hope to run brief articles, matters of interest culled from the recent annual meeting at Baton Rouge.

The following is a story told by one of the Lake Charles women in speaking of things that had happened in that district.

A Verity.

On the last night of her stay among her own people and just before the beginning of the long journey which was to carry her into the deep of Africa, Miss Isles stood before an audience of eager, upturned faces. She was telling them of what was in her heart for the dark continent away across the waters. She told them of her love for those at home and of how she would need the support and comfort of their prayers. She told them of her hope and desire to help to carry the Cross to that benighted land and that in His strength alone could she expect to be faithful.

All who listened felt a deeper sense of love for their Savior and of response for their share of Kingdom work. Mothers were there and children listened and were strangely stirred. After the service was closed and good-nights and "bon voyage" were said, and they passed out to their homes, a little child said to its mother: "Mother, you remember that picture of Jesus in the Sunday school room with a ring of light around the head? Well, to night when Miss Isles was talking to us I saw that same light about her face and head. Matthew 21:16, 'Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings Thou hast perfected praise.'"

Minutes Louisiana Annual Meeting.

On Tuesday morning, February 22, the Eleventh Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, met in the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La. The meeting was opened with the singing of a hymn and the Bible lesson by Mrs. Niebergall, who then read her annual report. Mrs. Holt voiced the appreciation of every member present of the wonderful service rendered by our President, as the burden she carries must be heavy indeed.

The report of our beloved Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Holt, was then received and an acknowledgment of her untiring efforts was expressed by Mrs. Niebergall and heartily endorsed by all.

The Treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Carver, read her report, which was accepted, as also reports from the Superintendents: Young People's work, Mrs. B. F. Key; Children's work, Mrs. Elma Drew; Missionary Study, Mrs. Cunningham.

Mrs. Cunningham gave us something new to think about in the clever posters which she showed and later had put up for our inspection and study.

A very beautiful solo, "If You Cannot Cross the Ocean," was sung by Mrs. Shirley.

Miss Clara Chalmers, who is to go to the foreign field this year, was presented at this time, also Miss Ellison, Deaconess at St. Mark's Hall, and Miss Chatman, who is a volunteer for missionary work.

Mrs. Joyner being introduced gave us all a very hearty welcome to the city of Baton Rouge, the seat of the great State rocking-chair, and to the homes of the members of the M. E. churches of the city.

Communion service was conducted by Rev. N. E. Joyner, of First Church, Baton Rouge, and Rev. Mr. Booth, of Keener Memorial.

The meeting adjourned for lunch and a social time together.

At the opening of the afternoon session, Miss Mary Werlein took charge of the prayer room service, and asked that one or two women would retire for 15 minutes at a time for prayer until the hour of 3.

The hymn "Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult" was sung, the devotional services being in charge of Mrs. Snelling, who chose for the Scripture reading the 15th Chapter of John and brought out the thought that we have been chosen of God to do this great work for Him. Miss Ellison offered prayer.

The following reports were then given: Publicity Superintendent, Mrs. V. G. Hyams; Superintendent of Social Service, Mrs. W. W. Holmes, being absent, report was read by Secretary; Superintendent of Supplies, Mrs. W. L. Baker.

It was voted to send letters of regret to Mrs. Parker, Miss Ella Hooper, and Mrs. W. W. Holmes, who are detained on account of sickness.

Miss Ellison spoke of the great help the boxes of supplies are to St. Mark's Hall. A request also came from the Missionary residents of Mary Werlein Mission for more clothing.

Reports of District Secretaries followed next, Mrs. A. P. Holt in charge: Alexandria, Mrs. Alonzo Early (Mrs. T. E. Brown, having resigned); Lake Charles, Mrs. J. C. McWilliams; New Orleans, Mrs. J. D. Rumph; Monroe-Ruston, Mrs. S. J. Harrell; Shreveport, Mrs. Woolworth having left Louisiana, report read by Mrs. B. F. Key; Houma, Mrs. Sayers having moved, report read by Mrs. Shaw.

A very clever song, an appeal for better reporting, was sung at this time to the tune of "Maryland, My Maryland," words written by Mrs. J. W. Mann, of McGehee, Ark.

Honor Roll badges were awarded the Alexandria Auxiliary, Lake Charles, Rayne, Monroe, Merryville, New Orleans.

The evening session was given over to Deaconess B. Ellison, who brought before us the needs of the peoples to whom and with whom she so untiringly labors; and the fruits of the faithful work that has been done are now being seen.

Miss Clara Chalmers told of the work of the Student Volunteer and of the organization accomplished in Alabama, urging that the same work be done in Louisiana.

Hymn, "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing," was sung and the meeting closed with the benediction by Rev. Mr. Booth.

Wednesday morning's session was opened with hymn "Oh Jesus, I Have Promised." The devotional was conducted by Mrs. Kennedy, our Honorary Life President. She offered prayer and read the 20th chapter of Joshua, which tells of the cities of refuge, which point forward to Christ as our Refuge. Song, "I Am Thine, O Lord," closed this part of the service. Mrs. Brown having to go home on account of illness in the family, Mrs. Early was appointed Secretary pro tem.

Minutes of interim and executive minutes and of Tuesday's meetings were read and after a few corrections were declared approved.

Mrs. Luke Johnson and Miss Mabel Howell, Council guests, were introduced.

Mrs. Gerrard, President of the Legislative Council of the Women of Louisiana, was given a few minutes to speak about the work that is to be done in the State by the women for better legislation. After some discussion a committee composed of Mrs. Gerrard, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Snelling and Mrs. Montgomery was appointed to confer on the question of our affiliation as a conference body through the Social Service Department.

Mrs. Bobbitt told us then of the girls in Mansfield College who have dedicated their lives definitely to Missionary work in home and foreign fields.

The best things happening in different auxiliaries were listened to with interest, and many good things were reported, there being much that could not be heard on account of lack of time. One best thing deserves special mention, it being that of the Young People's of First Church, Shreveport, who have pledged $105.

Brother Lutz, Secretary of the Christian Educational Campaign, in a forceful way brought to our minds the necessity of creating an educational conscience just as missionary conscience was created during the Centenary campaign.

Mrs. Luke Johnson drew attention to the many good books, leaflets periodicals, etc., which are here for our use and which are necessary to the life of each Auxiliary.

Mrs. Goodale was presented and we were all interested to know that it was in her mother's home the Missionary Society of Baton Rouge M. E. Church, South, was organized 41 years ago and she was a charter member.

The following visitors were greeted: Brother Lee, presiding elder, Lake Charles District; Brother Ilines, of Lake Charles; Mrs. White, of Houma Wesley House; Brother Browning, of Mary Werlein Mission.

A very sweet solo, "Why Should I Feel Discouraged—His Eye Is on the Sparrow and I Know He Watches Me," was sung by Mrs. J. W. Langhart. This carried a comforting message to every heart.

Miss Mabel Howell had charge of the quiet hour. Prayer was offered by Brother Joyner.

Miss Howell remarked that there are two thoughts and two questions men are asking to-day. One is expressed in this form: "Is Christendom fit for a world undertaking?" The church is face to face with the call of a world program; have we enough of the Gospel of Jesus Christ in our lives to justify us in going into the far countries and claiming that we are a Christian nation?

The next question is, "Have we power enough, that is, spiritual power enough for the Christian Church to undertake a World task? God intended we should live efficient, complete

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare, and really there is nothing better for coughs. Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

utation and usefulness by making false assertions in defense of moving picture shows.

When Judge Lindsey says that he "has had before him twice as many cases of children who have been attending church and Sunday school just before they committed their offenses as he has from those who attended moving picture shows," he is hard up for argument in favor of the movies. I served as superintendent of a Sunday school for thirty-nine years and have been called on many times for recommendations, and the question would be asked "if he attended Sunday school." I have seen the testimony of judges where they said that it was very seldom, if ever, that they had before them boys that were regular attendants at Sunday school. If Judge Lindsey feels called upon to cast reflection upon the churches, the ministers and Sunday schools, in order to further the cause of the motion picture shows, he will not make many friends for them or himself. If he wants to arrange into two classes those that go to church and Sunday school and movies and saloons, leave it to experienced businessmen to pick their clerks and boys for responsible positions from, I can easily say which class will get the majority of the openings, for in my fifty years of experience as a merchant I have chosen many men and boys for clerks and seen other positions filled almost without exception from Sunday school attendants.

Some minister must have spoken against the shows, and the Judge spoke without weighing his words. The mission of the Sunday school is to win the children to Christ, teach them beneficiary benevolence and develop Christians. Statistics show that 85 per cent of church members come from the Sunday schools, and no per cent from the theaters and picture shows.

Were it not for the churches and Sunday schools, we could not live in this country; as it is, the non-enforcement of the laws makes it hard to do so; many are murdered in their own homes. Many criminals escape conviction and entirely too often the verdict of the court is not carried out when a conviction is secured. If fewer criminals had their sentence of death commuted to life imprisonment and were later pardoned, there would be fewer assassinations, murders and lynchings.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God has called our esteemed friend and brother, John J. Beck, to his eternal reward; and

Whereas, Brother Beck was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the Drew charge, and a notably useful member of the official board of this church; and

Whereas, as his co-laborers in the work of the church, we have witnessed his devotion to God and his fellow-man, have been blessed by the truly great things wrought by him in his service for the Master, and have seen the church which he led and loved and served so faithfully grow in things both material and spiritual, and are unanimous in agreeing that this progress and development are due to him as to no other man among us; therefore, be it resolved:

First—That the quarterly conference of the Drew charge, assembled in regular session at Drew, February 16, 1921, do feel and do hereby express our deep sense of loss in the death of this our friend and brother whose place as an official in the church and as a personal friend can not be filled.

Second—That we extend to his devoted wife, and children, and grandchildren, and all other relatives, our heartfelt sympathy in this their great bereavement.

Third—That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the quarterly conference, that a copy be sent to the bereaved family, and that a copy be presented both to the Drew Leader and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by: W. N. Duncan, Pastor; B. H. Booth, Secretary, for the Quarterly Conference.

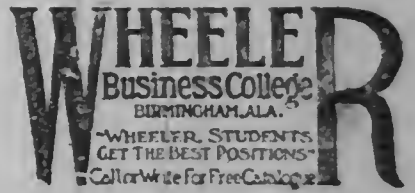

A CORRECTION.

Dear Brother Carley: I wish to call attention to some omissions in the financial table in our last Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference. From South Side Church, Corinth District: First omission—expended on churches and parsonages, blank; my report shows $65 paid. Next, incidentals, blank; we paid $102.82. Next, Centenary, blank; we paid, as shown in my report, $119.50. Our grand total for the year as shown in the Minutes is only $1220, but our grand total is $1411.51 for all purposes. I will appreciate it very much, Brother Carley, if you will give space for this in our much loved and appreciated paper.

Mr. Dodson Warns Against Use of Treacherous, Dangerous Calomel.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

lives, 2 Cor. 9:8; and that we should live fruitful lives. We should live lives of super-human power. After prayer by Miss Howell and the hymn, "I'm a Child of a King" was sung, the meeting closed with prayer by Brother Lee.

The Wednesday afternoon meeting was opened by singing Hymn 263, "Oh, Think of the Home Over There." Memorial service was conducted by Mrs. Allen, of Shreveport, who read the 71st Psalm, prayer being offered by Mrs. Kennedy.

Mrs. Luke Johnson, Chairman of the Inter-racial Relations Commission of the Woman's Missionary Council, in speaking on this subject pointed out the difference between speaking on the negro work and on the inter-racial work and inter-racial relations. This is not only a Southern question but a national and international question; a human problem of the world, and we have the opportunity of demonstrating to the world that the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is sufficient to set right the relations between the whole world to-day.

Mr. Murphy, Superintendent of the State School for the Blind, made an appeal for blind children and asked that names be sent to him of any needing the advantages of the school.

Miss Cecile Mathern, of Point Au Chien, brought a message from the French district. She read Rom. 10:13-16, and told of the work of Miss Ella Hooper, believing that God sent her to them and that she made a Sunday school teacher out of her. The report from that district was read by Mrs. White.

Brother Browning, of New Orleans, representing the Mary Werlein Mission, gave an interesting account of his 45 days' work there. In that time he had come in contact with 42 different families and helped 12 families financially, as well as 6 individuals. He asked an interest in our prayers in this great work before them in that quarter of the city.

As cars were waiting to take delegates to the Country Club to a reception kindly arranged by the Baton Rouge ladies, the meeting adjourned. A very delightful time was enjoyed at the reception.

Wednesday evening meeting was devoted to the Young People. The program was opened by singing, "Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult." Devotional by Miss Chalmers, who selected the Scripture contained in Gal. 2:20, "Not I, but Christ." Every blessing we enjoy comes to us through Christ and we ought to be willing to let Christ give through us these same blessings to others. Prayer by Miss Chalmers.

In the Children's Division the Loving Cup was presented by Mrs. Drew to Keithville, they having made 120 points.

The pin and pennant given to the district secretary reaching the required goal in organization of Young People was won by the Shreveport District Secretary, Mrs. Woolworth.

A number of songs for use in Young Peoples' meeting were sung by Mrs. Stewart. Three Young People's societies were on the Honor Roll: Oakdale, Mansfield, and First Church, Shreveport. The society making the largest number of points was awarded the Loving Cup and was won by the Young People of First Church, Shreveport. This society made 120 points, Mansfield 110 and Oakdale 87.

Miss Howell's description of her visit to the Mission fields of China, Korea and Japan made us see the wonderful things that have been accomplished in those fields in the last few years. The Centenary Movement has had a remarkable effect on the people of the East. The fact that we cared enough to do this for them has made such an impression that great revivals have sprung up. They are expecting great things from us and they must not be disappointed. They take that movement as a testimony that we cared for their souls.

An appeal was made for much needed volunteers in every line of Christian work, but there was no outward response, though we cannot help but believe the desire to serve was born in some young hearts.

After the song "Take My Life and Let It Be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee," and prayer by Mrs. Johnson, the meeting was closed with benediction by Brother Lutz.

FINE WORK AT TUNICA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: It has been our pleasure to have with us for one week Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, our consecrated and worthy Sunday School Field Secretary. Brother Gladney preached us two inspiring sermons on Christian Education. On Monday following, we began a class in teacher-training. All of our teachers but one (and she would have, but was physically unable) enrolled for class work. Some who were not teachers, and a few from the other schools enrolled. Eight took the examination. We are waiting with the old school-days excitement to know if we "passed." If we do not, it will not be Brother Gladney's fault as instructor, for his work was indeed more than satisfactory. The work he is doing is invaluable. His week with us has "got us going." We don't want to stop until our whole teaching force has at least the incomplete diploma.

Our Sunday school is running at high-tide. We have eight classes (would have two more if we had the room), and each one is as busy as a hive of bees in the spring time. Some day soon I shall give you an account of the work of one of our organized Wesley Bible classes. Watch for it. It is worth reading and knowing.

Ten new members have been added to the church enrollment since Annual Conference. Congregations best ever. Still there is room for improvement all along the line. Fraternally,

C. A. PARKS.

A CORRECTION.

Dear Brother Carley: I see in the Conference Journal of the last session of the Mississippi Conference, in the report from Trenton charge, nothing is reported as having been collected on the Centenary Fund, whereas I reported $215 as having been collected for this purpose. In justice to the Trenton charge, I will ask you to publish this statement. Fraternally,

The Alabama Waitress

The lowest wage of any group of workers recorded in the 1910 U. S. census is that of the Alabama Waitress—57 cents per day.

If the membership of the M. E. Church, South, had only the per capita income of the 1910 Alabama Waitress; and tithed it, we would pay into God's treasury each year $46,811,250. This tithe (based on the lowest recorded wage) would provide—

All the money needed for maintenance and current expenses of the church.....	$22,500,000
Total annual payment of Centenary Pledge.....	7,400,000
Total annual payment of Christian Education Pledge.....	6,600,000

EDITORIAL COMMENT

PURE RELIGION.

We suppose religion of any kind is better than none at all, but pure religion is certainly better than that which is adulterated with various kinds of somewhat similar but inferior things. We are sometimes inclined to think that the religion of some people is so mixed up with other interests that it is pretty hard to tell where the one begins and the other leaves off. The tests of pure religion are simple enough—they are internal and external. The internal test has to do with character—the keeping of oneself unspotted from the world; the external test has to do with the activities of life, such as visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction. It is much easier to meet the second test than the first. Our friends can generally tell what we are doing, though they may have a pretty hard time telling what we are. As a matter of fact, what we do grows out of what we are. If we are what we ought to be, we are sure to do what we ought to do.

RICH TOWARDS GOD?—OR JUST RICH?

Some of our readers will recognize the above caption as the concluding question of an advertisement of the Christian Education Movement in last week's issue of the Advocate. We cannot hope to add anything to the significance of the facts there adduced, but we can call attention again to the lesson of Christian stewardship taught by the remarkable figures made use of in that advertisement. If the tithe of the earnings of the most poorly paid group of workers in the United States as recorded in the census of 1910 would provide money enough to pay for the maintenance and current expenses of our church annually, for the annual Centenary pledge, and for the whole of the askings of the Christian Education Movement, and leave a surplus of $10,311,250, what might we not do, as a church, if our entire membership would contribute just one-tenth of its income for purposes of the Kingdom? Many of us, as individuals, are poor; but as a people we are rich almost beyond computation. Yet our institutions of learning are almost poverty-stricken, and many of our enterprises are urgently in need of funds to accomplish the ends for which they were instituted. Even in the midst of the present financial depression, it is estimated that the men of the Southern Methodist Church are spending $80,000,000 a year for tobacco, and the women, $50,000,000 for cosmetics and other toilet accessories. That question is worth asking again: Rich towards God?—or just rich?

ALL HAS NOT FAILED.

These are hard times in the industrial world, and it may be that harder times are coming, though we hear some of our readers exclaim, "Impossible!" Be that as it may, we know that many people here in Louisiana and Mississippi—not in China, or Central Europe, but here at home—are facing financial difficulties that seem to threaten actual ruin. We happen to be in a position to know something of the very real dangers that are lurking just around the corner for some of our best men as they attempt to straighten out their affairs in such way as to enable them to get through the year without disaster. We would not presume to offer them a stone when they are begging for bread; but we do want to say with all the energy of our soul that all has not failed, that the way is not hopeless, and that a happier day is ahead for every man who proves himself a man in these troublous times. "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform;" and God is still moving, and wonders are still happening to those who put their trust in Him. When all else fails, God remains true. His words are as valid to-day as they were a thousand years ago, and His ancient promise, "Trust in the Lord and do good: so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed," was made for His people in times like these. Fervent faith will be fully rewarded—let us not forget that, no matter how grievous our present burdens seem to be.

SINCERITY.

A perfectly sincere person is one of the rare treasures of earth. A suggestive etymology of the word "sincere" is interesting—that it is derived from two Latin words meaning "without wax." In ancient times, furniture dealers were supposed to be a crafty set of merchantmen. By the skillful use of a certain kind of wax, they could make a battered chair, for example, look as if it had just come from Grand Rapids—or wherever furniture was made in those days. The innocent purchaser, relying on his own judgment, would think that he was getting a perfect article. If, however, he wanted the dealer's guarantee that it was as it appeared, that guarantee was given in the words, "It is sincere"—without wax. Appearances are often deceptive—and we too often take advantage of that fact. When we are willing to appear just as we are, when we make no claim to virtues we do not possess, we are sincere. That is why a perfectly sincere person is one of the rare treasures of earth.

THE REWARD.

The mountain top is gained only by long and laborious climbing—but what a vision rewards the faithful struggler upward! What we see from the peaks of spiritual achievements makes us forget the difficulties through which we have come.

THE TEST OF EXPERIENCE.

It is an old saying that "A pound of fact is worth a ton of theory." Without forgetting that theory often eventuates in fact, we may apply this profound truth to the things of religion and say that every vital religious doctrine has been so indubitably established by experience that it has been definitely removed from the realm of the theoretical. Multiplied thousands of people to-day are ready to testify, from personal experience, to the reality of conviction of sin, repentance, forgiveness, adoption, witness of the Spirit, and the other blessed doctrines of our holy faith. If we profess an inability to comprehend these things, perhaps we should leave off arguing awhile and seek for an experience. We do not seek to explain many of the phenomena that we accept as simple facts of every-day life.

STILL TO BE RECKONED WITH.

We had hoped that a sober second thought would come to our social leaders that would enable them to see the vicious tendency of the modern dance, and cause them to outlaw it for mere decency's sake, if not for the moral issues involved. If a second thought had come, it would probably have been sober—in these days of the Volstead law—but, unfortunately, their mental motors seem to be hitting on only one cylinder. So it happens that we still have to face the demoralizing influence of a form of social diversion that not only makes impossible the development of a genuinely religious life, but that also actually puts thousands of young women, at least, beyond the pale of respectability. We have no desire to enter into a discussion of the sordid facts that have been arrayed to prove that the dance hall is the chief recruiting ground of brothels and other dens of infamy, but we do want to warn parents again that those who sow the wind will reap the whirlwind. Our young people must have social diversions; the responsibility rests upon us, therefore, as parents and Christian people, to provide them with those forms which will not damn while they entertain. If we cannot, or will not, do that, we suppose we have no right to say a word, no matter what happens.

I WILL NOT DOUBT.

I will not doubt though all my ships at sea
Come drifting home with broken masts and sails;
I will believe the hand which never fails,
From seeming evil worketh good to me.
And though I weep because those sails are tattered, Still will I cry while my best hopes lie shattered;
"I trust in thee."

I will not doubt, though all my prayers return
Unanswered from the still, white realm above;
I will believe it is an all-wise love
Which has refused these things for which I yearn;
And though at times I cannot keep from grieving,
Yet the pure ardor of my fixed believing
Undimmed shall burn.

I will not doubt, though sorrows fall like rain,
And troubles swarm like bees about a hive;
I will believe the heights for which I strive
Are only reached by anguish and by pain;
And though I groan and writhe beneath my crosses,
I yet shall see through my severest losses
The greater gain.

I will not doubt. Well anchored is this faith.
Like some stanch ship, my soul braves every gale;
So strong its courage that it will not quail
To breast the mighty unknown sea of death.
O may I cry, though body parts with spirit,
"I do not doubt," so listening worlds may hear it,
With my last breath.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

THE PLACE OF THE HOME AS A RELIGIOUS FACTOR.

By Rev. P. L. Cobb.

The place of the home is more central and important than any other factor in Christian cultivation, and it usually receives the least consideration in our planning. The home is even more strategic and important than the church. The father and mother are priest and priestess, prophets, evangelists, teachers, and all else combined that go to make Christian character.

The father and mother are the potters at work on the child, which is the plastic clay in their hands. When they bring the child to the altar for baptism, which the Discipline enjoins on all parents, they must accept as their bounden duty four things which are equally important and binding, whether they are accepted or not; but the pledge emphasizes, analyzes, and systematizes these duties.

Here are the four things pledged; the first is the most potent and far-reaching, without which the others will be of little value: "Do you accept it as your bounden duty to live before him the life that becometh the gospel?" The second is negative but far-reaching: "Teach him to renounce the devil and all his works, the vain pomp and glory of the world, with all carnal desires of the flesh, so that he may not follow or be led by them." The parent who takes this vow should tremble at the responsibility he assumes to fight all the powers of evil on earth and in hell as they swarm forth to do battle for the soul of the child.

The first pledge should insure a high type of Christian life. The second requires faithful warning and guidance. The third pledge constitutes the parent a teacher of the Bible; "Wilt thou teach him to know the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make him wise unto salvation through faith that is in Christ Jesus?" This pledge is absolute. It fixes once and for all with every Methodist parent the primary obligation to teach the Bible to his children.

The duty is fundamental, absolute, and there is no possibility by which it can be delegated. No pastoral instruction of children enjoined on the ministry, no instruction in Sunday school, however thorough, can take the place of the Bible teaching enjoined on the parents in the home. "I know Abraham, that he will command his children after him," was the commendation God gave the man whom he chose to type his followers through all the ages.

The fourth pledge is the consummation of all the others. To teach him "obediently to keep God's holy will and commandments all the days of his life." The whole life and energy of the parent are to be concentrated on the personality of the child through every hour of its life till the time comes when, in the judgment of the parents, it is sufficiently discreet and mature to accept for itself the responsibility which they assume for him in the baptismal covenant.

Could anything be more binding or sacred or more far-reaching in consequences? Is there any better solution of the problem of the child and the church? Is there any better evangelism? The wisdom of the fathers is manifest in giving us this scriptural method of keeping our children in the kingdom and bringing them into the visible church at the proper time and place.

From the foregoing it is apparent that the home is the most important religious factor in the life of the child. The contact is closer, more continued, the opportunity for teaching is greater, and the application for religious truth can be made more persistent than in any other institution.

This, however, is the ideal realized in only a small percentage of homes. The majority of parents by their neglect make it necessary for the church, through its various agencies, to become responsible, not only for the child's religious teaching and training, but for his acceptance of Christ as well.

That was a very serious charge brought by Christ against the Scribes and Pharisees that they "Compassed sea and land to make one proselyte and when he is made, ye make him two-fold more a child of hell than yourselves." The child's character is in the making. What shall it be?

Immediately, if it is not doing so, let us make the home function as a religious institution. The blessing at the table; the setting up of the family altar with its reading and explanation of the Bible, its prayer, informal or from a manual if necessary; sacred song joined in by all; religious conversation, not stiff or formal, but vital and godly. Making the home religious is the best solvent for all our problems.

LEAVES FROM THE LIFE OF DR. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

My second year in the ministry was spent on the Oxford circuit, then in the Memphis Conference. The nearest circuit on the west and southwest was the Coffeetown, to which my friend, John Barcroft, had been appointed. Both of us were junior preachers. We had quite as much work to do as our seniors, but without their responsibilities. At quarterly meetings, unless we were called on to preach, which happened occasionally, we had nothing to do except to listen and learn.

It was a bright, crisp November morning when Barcroft and I turned our faces south and started to Mississippi. He was mounted on a large, fine-blooded, clay-bank horse named Byhe. I rode a small black pony that I called Bob Brister, after one of the old saints on the Holly Springs circuit that I had traveled the year before. The covetous eyes of a horse thief were fixed a short time afterwards on Byhe and no trace of the noble animal was ever discovered. We rode together full two-thirds of the way to Brother Barcroft's destination. We parted in Tallahatchie bottom, about two miles from the river. He kept due south and I turned east. How lonesome the next hour was I can never forget. I did not cheer up much after I reached the home of Brother Turner, the first member of my church I met on the circuit. The two old folks welcomed me as heartily as they could, but they were in no mood to cheer a stranger. Lincoln had just been elected President, and the whole country was excited over the talk of secession—"nullification," Brother and Sister Turner called it. The old lady mournfully said: "We came from South Carolina and settled down here in Mississippi to get rid of nullification, and I believe in my heart they are going to nullify down here," which thing "they" proceeded to do as soon as practicable.

Oxford circuit in 1861 was of considerable extent. It embraced the whole of Lafayette County except the southwest corner, a big part of Pontotoc County, and the northern part of Calhoun County. There were eighteen regular preaching places, and five wayside appointments—places at which we preached in the afternoon or night. Some of our happiest meetings were at these wayside places—at Jim Hyde's blacksmith shop, for instance, where about twenty of Uncle Billie Hyde's children and grandchildren and neighbors would gather on a week day, as eager to hear as if it were Sunday. After the lapse of sixty years I can recall the looks and location of every church and preaching place, with one or two exceptions. And I recall the nicknames of certain places—names by which they were better known than by the names on the quarterly conference record: Mutton Ham, Smut, Stewpan, Chicken Bone, and Grub Toe. One church had two nicknames—Soup Hill, and Hell's Half-acre. It was here that the class leader made what was thought to be a true report of the condition of the church. The preacher in charge was questioning him with a view to ascertaining the spiritual state of the class. His answers were not of a flattering character, and he frankly confessed, saying, "The truth is, Brother Perry, we are in a bad state of fix."

The great majority of the people in Oxford circuit were poor, some of them as poor as any people I ever saw. To this day I can call the names of some of them and truthfully say I enjoyed their hospitality. I can never forget old Brother and Sister Worley. They were old, their children all married and gone. They were a happy old couple. I was very fond of them. In those days all the little streams were well stocked with fish. In the spring I carried hook and line. It was no trouble to get a pole—generally a cane. For bait, I had only to turn over a log or a chunk. I kept a pole in one of the cracks of Brother Worley's log house. Every time I stopped there I went to the creek and caught a mess of fish. I didn't eat fish, but I did eat spring chicken. Sister Worley would cook me a chicken, and she and the old man would eat the fish. When I left the table there was nothing left of the chicken except the scraps. How many such preachers' homes were on the Oxford circuit I couldn't begin to count at this distant day. They were not all poor homes. Some were well-to-do, and a few were elegant.

But if the people generally were poor in this world's goods, they were rich in faith and heirs of the Kingdom. There were some mighty men—two or three the equal of whom I never knew. I never met a man anywhere near the equal of Uncle Tommy Lamar. Wash Jeter was next to him in the estimation of the people. They were both famous as leaders in prayer. Then, there was also a Brother Richardson, whose given name I do not recall, a local preacher, a man who, had he given himself to the ministry and to the study of the Word, would doubtless have become one of our foremost preachers. Considering his opportunities, he was a wonderful man. Uncle Billy Foust was a steward, so was Brother Wood, and Brother Warren, and Brother Lewis T. Winn, and Brother Conway. All of these were good and true men. They laid the foundations of the church strong and deep, and it flourishes in that section to this good day. In many places where there were only log huts, now are elegant buildings. A few, I dare say, in the march of time, and the trend towards the towns, have gone out of existence.

In those days we had "protracted meetings." We didn't call them "revivals," though they almost invariably resulted in revivals and awakenings. Occasionally there was what the brethren called a "water haul"—a failure. Then there was great searching of heart. On one such occasion, it having rained every day, one of the preachers, in the closing prayer, bewailed the failure, but said: "Oh, Lord, thou knowest that we did not have a fair chance!"

Besides revivals at several of the churches, we had two great camp meetings—one near Sarepta, and one at the Hickory Flat Camp Ground, a few miles south of Rocky Ford on Tallabatchie river. Both of these meetings were under the direction of our presiding elder, Rev. John Moss. At Sarepta the most of the preaching was done by Rev. C. D. U. Campbell, the stationed preacher at Oxford. He drew great crowds to the meeting, and held them spellbound every time he preached. He was finely educated, and one of the most elegant and fluent speakers I ever heard. His English was faultless. I wouldn't miss it much were I to say that his sermons were faultless in matter, in form, in doctrine and in delivery. I had met and heard him preach at the old Wesley camp meeting two years previous to this. At this meeting no one present had ever seen or heard of him except Brother Joe Johnson, who accompanied him to the camp ground. Uncle Art Davis, who had charge of the meeting, said to Brother Johnson on Saturday: "Who is this Brother Campbell you have with you? Can he preach? Can I venture to appoint him?" Brother Johnson didn't seem disposed to recommend him, but said, "It would do no harm to try him." And he was appointed to preach on Saturday "at early candlelight." That was the way evening appointments were announced in those days. He preached. His text was Romans v, 7-8. The people on that ground had never heard such preaching unless per chance some had heard Summerfield or P. P. Neely. Uncle Ed Taylor, the patriarch, was present. Next morning he accosted one of the preachers and said, "Honey, who was that preached last night?" "That was a brother by the name of Campbell." "Where did he come from?" "He came from McNairy County—the hills of McNairy." "Well, well," replied the old man, "he talked so pretty I thought he came from town."

At the Hickory Flat Camp Ground Brother Moss did the preaching. On Sunday he gave us one of the most powerful sermons I ever heard. His subject was "The Influence of the Holy Spirit." It was an effective sermon. There was present a young lady whom I knew to be the most intelligent woman in the country, and inclined to be skeptical. She was brought under conviction and converted. How many others were slain of the Lord, I do not know—but many were cut to the heart and saved.

Those were glorious days, the like of which will never be seen again.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

The Board of Trustees of Whitworth College met at the College, Feb. 17, 1921. After the business of the Board was transacted, a resolution was passed authorizing the secretary to draft suitable resolutions of appreciation of the great work that Dr. Cooper has done for the College and the church during his able administration of the affairs of the College. While the task is a very pleasant one, it nevertheless is a difficult one because it is impossible to find words adequate to express proper appreciation for what Dr. Cooper has done for Methodism through Whitworth College during the years of his presidency there.

To those who remember the old Whitworth Hall, the old Brown house and the two brick buildings, all of which were in bad repair, it is hard to believe that it is the same place when you view the whole campus literally covered with splendid brick buildings. With the Mary Jane Lampton Auditorium, the Cooper Hall, the Enochs Hall, the Gymnasium and the Y. Hut, five new brick buildings, with the Margurite Hall and the Institute virtually made new, it presents a beautiful aspect.

Besides all this, a splendid two-story home for the president has been built and the Methodist parsonage and the McGrath home have been acquired, which gives us ample room for years to come.

Eternity alone will reveal the contribution made by Dr. Cooper to the womanhood of the South, and especially to the State of Mississippi and to Methodism, and no one is able to estimate the debt of gratitude we owe to him.

Dr. Cooper is modest enough to disclaim all the credit for the great progress made at the College, but says that the strong laymen of the Conference, such as the Enochs, the Lamptons, the Dantzers, James Hand, W. M. Buie, C. S. Butterfield and Geo. Weems, have made possible all that has been done. In fact, Dr. Cooper says that Brother P. H. Enochs has been the very soul of the movement, furnishing the inspiration and encouragement that have enabled him to go forward.

This year terminates the leasing system at Whitworth College, and the Mississippi Conference, through the Board of Trustees, will have echarge and run the College as really and truly a Conference college. Dr. Cooper's last and most magnificent material contribution to the College is in the form of equipment, consisting of 18 pianos, furniture throughout the entire College, heating plants, bath and lavatories, etc., worth many thousands of dollars.

Dr. Cooper has agreed to stay with the College on a salary for the next five years anyway, and our prayer is that he may be spared many years yet to bless humanity and the church, to which he has so nobly devoted his life.

The Board rejoices in the great compliment to Dr. Cooper by our College of Bishops in his selection as delegate to the great Ecumenical Conference to be held in London this summer. May journeying blessings go with him.

✓ REV. F. D. VAN VALKENBURGH.

Rev. Francis Dwight Van Valkenburgh, the subject of this sketch, a long-time member of the Louisiana Annual Conference, and for six years resident in New Orleans as the colporteur of the Conference, passed quietly to his heavenly reward on Wednesday evening, Feb. 23, and was buried from the Methodist Church in Biloxi on Friday, the 25th of February, at 1:30 p.m., the Rev. M. B. Sharbrough preaching the funeral sermon.

Brother Van Valkenburgh served charges in the bounds of both the States of Arkansas and Louisiana, and had been an Itinerant Methodist preacher for fifty years. He was three times married: to Miss Nettie Bazemore, by whom he leaves one son, the Rev. William B. Van Valkenburgh, of the New England Conference; to Mrs. Ida Banford, by whom he leaves six children: Frank G. Van Valkenburgh, of Dallas, Texas; Payton Kavanaugh Van Valkenburgh, of Orlando, Fla.; Mrs. Ida Evans, of Springfield, Mass.; Mrs. Cbas. M. Taylor, of Shreveport, La.; Mrs. Peyton Fuller, of Huntsville, Ala., and Mrs. (Dr.) Alexander R. Crebbin, of New Orleans, La. Besides, he leaves one sister, Mrs. Emily Holmes, of Oakland Park, Chicago, and his widow, who, previous to her marriage, was Miss Ellen W. Thomson, of New Orleans, La. He was married to Miss Thomson on the Seashore Camp Grounds in the summer of 1888. For thirty-three years he and his present wife journeyed life's pathway together, and nobly did she face the task of rearing and caring for his orphaned household. His eventful earthly career was fittingly closed on the Camp Grounds which he loved so well, and his earthly remains lie buried under the spreading branches of a giant magnolia, there to await the resurrection of the just. He was a good preacher and sometimes excelled himself and entranced and electrified his audiences. Many of his charges were mediocre ones. He loved the work and always delighted to preach the Word.

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION.

Dear Brother Carley: An interesting fact, either directly or indirectly connected with the Education Movement, is that a number of our young ministers are taking brief courses in theological schools to fit themselves for more efficient work. This is as it should be. The circumstances that deny to them the privilege of completing the full theological course need not hinder them from taking advantage of brief courses that are just as valuable in proportion to the time spent as the full course.

I am just a little surprised, however, to note that it seems to have occurred to none of them to take such courses at the regularly established theological schools of our church, either at Dallas or Atlanta, where I presume conditions are much the same, though I know little of the former institution except through its catalogue. Other institutions, no matter how well-equipped or efficient, can hardly train a Southern Methodist to do the work in the South so well as the leading men of his own church, every one of whom has served in the pastorate in our own Southern territory and knows its own peculiar problems. All of them are men of broad and catholic sympathies, and yet their teaching will be in accord with the fundamental principles of our church.

It may be that the church generally does not know that these two schools offer brief courses. As a matter of fact, none of their courses are longer than three months and perhaps half of them are only six weeks, in the summer five weeks, so that a student may enter at almost any interval of six weeks and do work that may be credited on the regular course.

The question of loyalty to our own schools does not enter into this discussion. On the part of the institutions, they are making no appeal for patronage, more applicants always seeking admission than can be cared for. Last year in August more than sixty men had asked for rooms for the October term for whom no places were available. On the part of the student, if he cannot receive as good or better training there than elsewhere, it is not only his privilege but his duty to go elsewhere.

I suspect that the popularity of some of the institutions of the North, one in particular, is its well-known spiritual atmosphere. Let me quote you a sentence or two from a personal letter from an Emory student relative to a recent revival: "Prayer meeting last night and night before last lasting till 1 and 3 o'clock. * * * Men would get right and go and get their roommates out at midnight and they would come."

Yours for Christian Education and Evangelism,
J. B. CAIN.

CENTENARY REPORT FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

On January 1, the total collections of our entire church showed $9,826,383 paid on five-year pledge of $36,973,848, or 26.6 per cent.

On March 2, the Louisiana Conference had paid $220,068 on a five-year pledge of $751,000, or 29.3 per cent. As the Louisiana Conference was very much above the average in over-subscribing her quota, she has shown herself to be above the average in her payments.

As the treasurer's office, Nashville, issues on the first of each month a report showing the amounts pledged and paid, and the per cent the payment is on the pledge, and arranging the Conferences in the order these per cents stand, we wish to call attention of our readers to a few comparisons having reference to the three Conferences taking the New Orleans Advocate, which will be sufficient to demonstrate the thought.

In the report of February 1, Mississippi stood 5th; Louisiana 20th; North Mississippi 27th; which report was determined as stated above.

Mississippi was considered by the church to be almost $250,000 stronger than Louisiana, yet she pledged $113,000 less; and her ability was considered to be more than $71,000 stronger than North Mississippi, yet she subscribed $147,000 less.

Viewing the same fact in another way, Mississippi subscribed 73 per cent, North Mississippi 95.8 per cent and Louisiana 115 per cent of their quotas. In proportion to her ability, Louisiana subscribed 57 per cent more and North Mississippi 31 per cent more than Mississippi.

So the true relation should be obtained, we think, by multiplying the per cent of her payment on her pledge by the per cent of her pledge on her quota. If this were done, it would show that Louisiana would have 30.5 per cent, North Mississippi 25 per cent and Mississippi 23.6 per cent standing.

Notwithstanding the very severe strain in financial matters, the people from all quarters of the Louisiana Conference have reported splendid results of the week's drive made in January, but which were not reported until the February returns. That month more than $17,000 was paid in.

We take this opportunity to thank most heartily all the presiding elders, pastors, treasurers and collectors for their united, consecrated efforts in behalf of the Centenary. An unusually good spirit is prevailing everywhere in regard to these payments. The future holds great things for us. Let us, therefore, continue our unified efforts for the Master's cause.

A REVIVAL AT EMORY.

Friday night, February 18, saw the close of one of the greatest revivals of religion Emory has ever seen. Pentecostal fires have been burning of the campus of Emory for the past two weeks. As a result of this meeting we join with our brothers of Southern Methodist University in declaring that God is still able to make bare His mighty arm. As a writer in the Emory Wheel put it, "The Emory campus has been swept clean for God." Hundreds were swept into the kingdom. The editor of the Wheel believes that as a result of the meeting 90 per cent of the men on the campus have committed their lives to Christ. While the exact statistics have not yet been compiled, many men have volunteered for the ministry and for the foreign field.

Careful preparation was made by those responsible for the revival. For two months before the meeting a group of men had been meeting and making earnest intercession for an outpouring of the Spirit on Emory campus. Those in charge were deeply convinced that if any abiding good was to come of the meeting, it would come through the power of the Spirit.

Our own Dr. Durham of the Candler School of Theology did the preaching. While he emphasized the fact that a true revival could come only through the influence of the Spirit and that we were working solely as instruments of the Spirit, yet he appealed to the highest and the best in men. He did not use the usual appeal to a mere fear of punishment or a hope of reward. Christ was the standard that he ever kept before us and he steadfastly refused to call for anything short of the Christ-man. In his opening sermon he said, "An institution which can give birth to a Young J. Allen can still be pregnant with celestial fire."

The meeting was originally planned to last but one week. But as the first week drew to a close it was evident that it would be nothing short of criminal to stop the meeting. The real Pentecostal hour of the meeting came at midnight on the second Sunday of the meeting. After the writer had retired, some one came to the door asking him to come to a room in another wing of the dormitory. This room was packed with men. Men under conviction of sin were kneeling all over the room. Brother was pleading with brother, helping him to find the light. The finest all-around men on the campus were fighting on their knees the battle for salvation and peace and joy. Some men were on their knees for two hours before they could make themselves break with sin and give themselves without reservation to God. But what joy we saw on their faces when they would rise and say that they had made the full surrender and found the unutterable peace! And we knew that they were converted men because the first thing that they wanted to do was to go out and help some brother find this peace. All this on a staid university campus—think of it! It carried us back to the days of John Wesley. This prayer meeting lasted until after five a.m.

It was in prayer meetings like this and which received their impetus from this prayer meeting that scores and scores were born into the Kingdom. Dr. Durham laid the foundation by his masterly presentations of the Christian life as the highest and only life and of each man's individual responsibility to relate himself rightly to the Christ. Into the groves which surround the campus brother would go with brother to help him make peace with God. To quote again from the Emory Wheel, the university weekly, "While the white moon climbed the eastern sky men were being searched out and literally dragged from their beds and through the insistent earnestness of their friends were brought to these various meetings." The revival was the chief topic of conversation. It seemed to be the most natural thing in the world to talk to a brother about his soul. How could the revival fail to touch the entire campus when every man who was converted did not rest until he had helped some one else to find God?

Before the revival had closed plans were matured for its conservation. Bible study groups have been formed all over the campus for prayer and for the brotherly discussion of mutual problems in the Christian life. Dr. Hounshell has been to Emory to interview the men who feel called to the foreign field. The students of Emory believe that they have received a blessing which they ought to carry to the city of Atlanta. The matter was laid before the ministerial association of the city. And now groups of men who have just been converted are going into the churches of the city to tell the people what God has done for them. Our aim is to do all that we can to help the people of Atlanta get the blessing which we have received.

It is perhaps too early to estimate the true significance of what has happened on the Emory campus. It is without doubt historical and has had no equal in many years. It has meant for many of us a renewal of our sometimes faltering faith in the power of the Christian religion in the hearts of men. The message which Emory would send to the church is, that the gospel of regeneration is not out of date, that intercessory prayer is still potent, and that the church can again have a Pentecost if it will pay the price.

CENTENARY COLLEGE NOTES.

We have just closed our spring revival. Dr. S. S. McKenney, pastor of First Methodist Church, Galveston, Texas, did the preaching. He did it well. Dr. McKenney is a close reasoner, a clear, convincing speaker and withal a safe leader for young people.

While there were many difficulties and interruptions, such as counter attractions, the meeting was of great benefit to the College. Among the visible results were seventy-seven tithers, fifteen decisions for Christ, and nine gave their names for church membership. We now have fourteen preparing for the ministry and other special lines of Christian service.

The students had the clear gospel presented and were daily given an opportunity to accept Christ as their personal Savior. This within itself is a rare privilege, which only the Christian college gives. We regret that we cannot report every one of our students as Christians. But we are laboring to that end.

Another great treat recently enjoyed by Centenary was Dr. E. J. Banks, Ph.D., the noted archaeologist. He gave us a series of illustrated lectures on the Holy Land. Also, he told of his twelve years' work among the ruins of ancient Nineveh and the ruined cities of antiquity. Dr. Banks was in charge of the archaeological expedition sent out by the University of Chicago, and is an easy master of all the most important languages of the East. He told most interestingly of many new "finds" and how they confirm the Bible. Thus the spade is an ally of the Book.

Quite a number of our Louisiana pastors have visited us recently. We are glad to have you come, brethren. Don't fail to call us up when passing through Shreveport. Better come on out to the College. The door is always open to our preachers. Spend the night with us when possible. Your presence will be a blessing to us.

OBJECTIONS TO TITHING.

By Rev. J. J. Stowe, D. D.

With the increased interest in the subject of tithing, and the new emphasis that is being given to this matter, there have naturally arisen some objections. The objections are not valid and can all be answered, but we make a mistake if we do not take account of these objections and try, in a frank and friendly way, to answer them.

Objections are, of course, expressions, honest or otherwise, of objectors. Most objectors fall into the class who oppose tithing, because it would call for larger payments from them to the Kingdom. These persons are actuated consciously, or more often unconsciously, by avarice, and constitute a difficult class with which to deal.

The Pharisees, who "were lovers of money," scoffed at our Lord when He proclaimed the principles of stewardship in regard to property. There are still in the church lovers of money, who will scoff when this message of Christ is re-delivered. However, we must not confuse stewardship and tithing, for the Pharisees were scrupulous tithers—of a sort—but utterly rejected Christian stewardship.

There are others—sometimes intelligent and devout people—who object to tithing for reasons which seem to be good, but who are ready to accept the principles of Christian stewardship. The argument used against tithing by this latter class may, for the most part, be expressed by the statement, "Tithing was an Old Testament law, which Christ set aside." On this point, there is and will continue to be a difference of opinion, but God required the tithe of the Jews four thousand years ago; I cannot think that He expects less of us today. Christ did not re-proclaim the law of the tithe, He did not abrogate it; the emphasis of His message was upon Christian stewardship, a very much larger and more important thing than tithing. But no sane man can claim that Christ would expect us to pay less in proportion to our income than was required of the Jews long ago.

Other honest objectors claim that to tithe is to encourage legalism. If we tithe as did the Pharisees, as a substitute for Christian stewardship instead of an acknowledgment of Christian stewardship, this is true, but to pay at least the tithe as an acknowledgment of the ownership of God of all men and things, does not tend to legalism any more than to observe the Lord's day tends to legalism.

Others say that the tithe in the case of the poor man is more than he can afford to pay. The Lord did not seem to think so, when He required it of the poor man four thousand years ago. One might with equal cogency claim that a poor man cannot stop work one day in seven. Others claim that the tithe is not equitable, since the rich man under that system would pay only a part of a surplus while the poor man would be paying a part of his very living. The answer to this objection is, that while God required at least a tithe of the poor man, he required of old, and surely does to-day, much more than the tithe of the rich man. Tithing for the well-to-do is not the stopping place, but the starting point; is not the end, but the beginning of Christian liberality.

It is an interesting fact that most men of means who begin to tithe soon gladly go beyond this starting point, while the average man of means who refuses to tithe never reaches this starting point.

Some captious critics object to tithing on the ground that if the people tithe, the church will have too much money. This objection is foolish for two reasons:

(1) If it is my duty and privilege to tithe, I am not released by the fact that the church might have too much money if I did tithe.

(2) The need is so great and the opportunities so many, that the church could and would use for the helping of humanity, and the extensions of the Kingdom, the money given if all the people should tithe.

FROM THE SECRETARY OF EDUCATION, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother: I am sending you a short account of the work in the Mississippi Conference. Since I wrote you last I have been with Brother W. E. Dickens, of Pachuta, and his good wife made this secretary feel very much at home. Seven gave their hands pledging themselves for life service, at McGowan's Chapel. I held three services in his work. The Lord blessed us and his people are interested in Education.

I was with J. H. Jolly at Heidelberg, who showed me every consideration. We had a good crowd there Monday night. I met old friends who told me that Jolly was in high favor and was doing a splendid work. His good wife was sick, and while he insisted that I go to the parsonage, I decided to return to Meridian that night, where for one day I enjoyed the associations of those elect women who compose the Woman's Missionary Society. We had Dr. Bennett and Dr. Cooper. Both did well in a special before the conference. The secretary made some scattering remarks and the ladies pledged their co-operation. Mrs. B. F. Lewis, who was presiding, called me the second time before the conference to make a speech, and asked me to tell the ladies just what I wanted them to do.

The preachers in Meridian were all very kind and all have given me the right of way to their churches when I can be with them.

I spent Sunday night with Rev. S. F. Harkey and his people at Terry, Miss., who gave me a fine hearing and promised their support. He goes to Africa in June as a missionary.

The preachers and the people are believing in this Movement and are saying we must succeed. Soon our District Set-Up Meetings will be held and this will bring our organization nearer to the people.

The Methodist Church has never failed to do the task laid before it. Brother Burton, our presiding elder of the Jackson district, says that the Jackson District can not afford to fail, and he is throwing himself into the Movement with all the energy of his soul. No district has an elder who is trying to do more and help the secretary more than Rev. M. L. Burton of the Jackson District. In fact, all the elders are behind the Movement. We are asking for many things of the Lord and believe that He is going to give them. Cordially,

J. M. MORSE.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT.

The District Set-Up Meeting of the Educational Campaign for the Hattiesburg District will be held in Hattiesburg on Thursday, April 7, beginning at 10 a.m. All the pastors and charge directors are expected to attend.

The District Conference will be held at Collins, May 24, 27. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. J. T. Leggett, pastor Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Pastors will please see that all churches elect their delegates early and send their names to Rev. J. M. Lewis, Collins, Miss., and to me at Hattiesburg, 845 Main Street.

W. W. GRAVES, P. E.

ALLAN BENNETT,

An Inmate of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, just Graduated from the Louisiana Industrial Institute, of Ruston, La.

We present to the readers of the Advocate in the photograph herewith, the likeness of one of our boys who is this month graduating from the Louisiana Industrial Institute, of Ruston. Allan was left in the city of New Orleans without a home and proper care. He, with his younger brother, was placed in the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage by Rev. W. W. Holmes, while pastor of the Felicity Street Church. Allan is sorely afflicted, having lost one eye and being badly crippled before coming to the Orphanage. Yet he has a bright mind, and by diligent application has taken advantage of the splendid opportunities afforded him by the Orphanage. He has always made a fine record in his school work, and graduates with honor. He is the first boy from the Orphanage to graduate, and all who are interested in him are proud of his achievement. We only wish it were possible to tell the readers of the Advocate the full history of this sad, but fortunate case, so that the friends of the Orphanage might know just how great the work done for this boy by the Orphanage is. We confidently believe that no work for needy humanity has accomplished more for any individual case than has been done in this instance.

There are now 132 children in the home, and four others being provided for, and it is sincerely hoped that in every case we may be able to send out men or women, fully equipped and prepared for life. Here is educational work of real value, missionary work of high order, rescue work of the worthiest kind—a real Christian work that merits the hearty and loyal support of all friends of helpless children.

Easter Sunday is set apart by the Annual Conference as "Orphanage Day," and it is expected that collections will be taken in all Methodist churches and Sunday schools in the State for the Orphanage. It is very important that sufficient help should be received from these collections to carry on this work, and it is hoped that no church or Sunday school will fail to do its utmost for the cause.

The Orphanage has no other way of securing means with which to carry on its work except collections taken in churches and Sunday schools on Easter Sunday in the spring, and "Work Day" in the fall. There is no assessment for the Orphanage, and its claims appear in none of the church budgets. No paid collectors or professional solicitors are sent out. So it is all the more important that none of our churches or Sunday schools should fail in doing their full part by this worthy institution.

METHODIST HOSPITAL:

In the Journal of The Mississippi Annual Conference, 117th session, the statistical table gives a total of cash raised during 1920 for the Hospital at Hattiesburg of $3,915, whereas there had been raised in cash outside of Hattiesburg $9,473, not counting a few amounts that were paid during the Conference session. Ten days before the Conference there was sent to each pastor a statement of the amount collected from his charge; but the Journal indicates that some of the pastors did not include this at all in their reports, and that others included it under the item, "Objects Not Otherwise Reported." Of the 498 congregations of the Conference, only 107 had contributed in any way to this cause; and of these 107, only 23 appear in the Journal as having paid anything. For instance, Wiggins, New Augusta, and Columbia were among the places that subscribed well and had paid up well; and yet nothing appears for them under the Hospital item in the Journal.

As manager of the Campaign during the last five months of the Conference year I have considered it wise to publish this correction, if it be such. Most of the larger places did not open to the Hospital cause. I went chiefly to the villages and smaller towns; and, omitting a few points visited where it was deemed wise not to take the collection at all, each Sunday we secured on the average about $400, which evinces the interest and response of the people to this appeal when it reaches them.

NOTICE, PRESIDING ELDERS.

I can recommend very highly a young married preacher who wishes to transfer to one of the Southern Conferences; he is open for a place at once. If interested write to Rev. Chas. D. McGehee, Fredericktown, Mo., or to his presiding elder, Rev. S. M. Roberson, Cape Girardeau, Mo., for particulars.

CHAS. D. McGEHEE.

The trend of destruction has turned from bodies to souls. Warfare of guns has been translated into a warfare of ideals. The world war has been followed by a titanic struggle for spiritual supremacy between Paganism and Christianity, between Allah or force and Christ or love. In half the world Islam flaunts her bloody crescent, while in so-called Christian lands materialism and pagan ethics seek to conquer the souls of men.

pagan. It is the offspring of Prussianism; it is godless, materialistic, unspiritual. It will eventually paganize any people.

Will Germany be allowed to win the war at last? If her educational ideals—her type of culture (Kultur) by peaceful penetration—come to dominate in western Europe and America, she has won an infinitely greater triumph than if she had conquered France and dictated a German peace.

If the Church goes out of education and allows the present secularizing tendencies, already strong, unrestrained freedom to develop, soon there will be no God but Allah.

Education Must Be Christian

Education types civilization. The American ideal is Christian education. Thus were our greatest colleges founded. Until fifty years ago America did not swerve.

It is the purpose of the Christian Education Movement of the M. E. Church, South, to call the country back to its early ideal. Through the finest and most thoroughly Christian system of schools and colleges in the nation, we propose to counteract these unholy influences, to fill the world with trained religious workers, and to produce a generation of leaders who will steer us safely, govern us wisely, and stabilize us socially and industrially.

Who will lend his energies to this high crusade, that Christian education shall not perish from the earth.

A GOOD MOTTO.

Let's leave out all the "ifs" of life
And set up "when" and "will,"
Then boost our work with brand-new vim,
And gain a great big thrill;
Let's jolly up the folks about,
And kill the worries and gloom;
Let's hear the bluebird sing a bit,
And give the sunshine room.

PAYING THE PRICE.

The lesson was at an end, and the doctor looked over his class and wondered how much impression he had made. The boys were just verging on manhood; some of them were in the senior class of high school, some were already out in the world of business. The lesson had been about the miracles that the Apostles had performed.

When the doctor had finished explaining the passage one boy looked up inquiringly.

"Dr. Jamison," he asked, "do you think any one could perform miracles now?"

"Unquestionably," replied the doctor.

"Then why don't they do it?" a dozen voices asked.

"You all know something about physics," said Dr. Jamison slowly. "You know that you convey a powerful electric current hundreds of miles from its source and set it at work without loss."

The boys nodded.

"Now, there are two things to bear in mind: the power that the dynamo generates and the cable that transmits the power. Let us assume that the dynamo has produced the necessary energy; what is required of the cable?"

"Why, it must be connected with the dynamo," said one of the boys.

"Yes; but there is something else."

One of the boys said, "The cable must be insulated."

"Exactly! And the more nearly perfect the insulation the greater will be the energy that is transmitted. Now, spiritual power comes from God and is to be applied in the same way—to healing the sick or to lifting the sinner fallen by the wayside. We are the cables. The first thing is to make the connection; the next thing is to insulate the cables. That is what the Apostles did. Most of us lose spiritual power all along the line; we keep company with people who are worldly and unbelieving; we have sordid ambitions and frivolous pleasures. Thus when it comes to applying God's power conveyed through us—his faulty fed wires—there is no power to apply."

"Do you mean, sir, that we must have no pleasures?"

"Not at all. Christ made social visits. He traveled. He worked at his trade as a carpenter. But through it all He had one central purpose—to bring more abundant life to men. The Apostles followed the example of their Master; none of them ever lost sight of the one aim they had in life. If you want to be a spiritual power, you must pay the price: you must learn what the vital things in life are and concentrate on them. Are we willing to pay the price? The Apostles were willing, and we know what they accomplished."—Youth's Companion.

THE GLORY HOLE.

As we came into the furnace room the stoker was turning away from the glory hole, through which he had been looking into the great furnace. The glory hole is a little peephole to which the stoker can put his eye and examine the fire without opening the big doors and thus losing some of the heat.

Seeing us with our guide, he said, "Would you like to look at the hottest place in the world? Do not look too long, for it might blind you for a time."

One after another we put an eye to the hole and for a moment looked into a brightness like that of the sun. When we turned away, everything for a moment was black.

One after another as we filed out of the room, we remarked, "Why, I am still looking through the glory hole! I can see into the furnace just as plainly as I could when I had my eye to the hole. It makes a spot of light everywhere I look. I did not suppose anything could be so bright as that."

And as I listened to their talk, I remembered the words, "And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." If the brightness of the furnace and of the sun are too much for our eyes, what must it be to behold the glory of God, who gives light to the heavenly city! God does not now let us look into that glorious place; but sometimes He holds his hand over us, as He held it over Moses in the cleft of the rock and gives us a glimpse of the glory. And how wonderful it is—the glory of God! There is nothing with which we can compare it. It is brightness that would hide the light of the sun as the risen sun hides the stars.

Can it be that God intends his children to be glory holes through which others can catch a glimpse of his grandeur and the glory of his heavenly abode? If we are true children of God, surely something of the brightness of purity and love and holiness will shine through us, so that others may at least "take knowledge of us that we have been with Jesus."—Exchange.

THE QUEEN AND THE CASKET.

It is said that Queen Victoria once presented herself before the keeper of the treasure chamber in Windsor Castle with a request for the richer of the two small caskets in his custody, each made of solid crystal, exquisite in workmanship and very costly. Selecting the richer and finer of the two, she drew from her pocket a copy of the Bible and locked it in the casket, which was then returned to its place, richer than ever for the new treasure it contained.

The Bible stored in that shrine was General Gordon's. It had been his daily support and solace, and was with him at Khartum. It was worn and marked with the thousand notes of daily use and daily study, which indicated the relation of its hero owner to it and what it had been to him.

We give the story as we have heard it. Treat it as we will, as parable or as history, it is a striking illustration of what gives supreme value to the Bible and of its true relation to men. It was not a new copy of Scripture, fresh, unsold, and unused, that was thus royally set; it was not selected for the beauty of the binding, the richness of the material, or the excellence of the workmanship. It was chosen because it had once borne the relation it did to a heroic life. It had helped to create that life, to raise it high, to make it pure and strong, to fill it with faith and light and hope. The queen's act was a commemoration of a great victory and a service—the greatest service that can be rendered to a man in helping him to develop his character, to be what he is made to be, and to do what he is made to do. This is the place that the Bible holds in the history of the nations which have loved it and lived by it. This is the place it is destined to hold in the life of the race redeemed. Redeemed and sanctified humanity is to be the crystal shrine of the well-used Bible, which will have guided, supported, and inspired it through the long years of its warfare.—Independent.

PRAYER.

What use to we make of the heavenly privilege of prayer? How many there are who take only five minutes for prayer! They say that they have no time, and that the heart's desire for prayer is lacking; they do not know how to spend half an hour with God! It is not that they absolutely do not pray; they pray every day, but they have no joy in prayer as a token of communion with God which shows that God is everything to them. If a friend comes to visit them, they have time; they make time, even at the cost of sacrifice, for the sake of enjoying converse with him. Yes, they have time for everything that really interests them, but no time to practice fellowship with God, and delight themselves in him.—Andrew Murray.

CENTENARY PAYMENTS FOR 1920, AND AMOUNTS RETURNED TO CONFERENCES.

During the twelve months' period ending January 1, 1921, payments on Centenary pledges by our church amounted to $4,556,788. This total represents only the amounts paid on individual pledges. If to this, payments by Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues are added, the total is approximately $4,930,000. While the amount named does not represent twenty per cent of the total pledged, it is a good showing for the year—good, at least, when we take into consideration the fact that the last half of the year was a period of financial depression. It is not so good when we take into account the fact that the tithe of the income of Southern Methodism even for a year such as 1920 would have taken care of the entire pledge of the Centenary in addition to our regular church obligations. Pay-Up Campaigns have been under way in many of the Conferences and it is hoped that by early March the church will be able to report at least the full forty per cent of individual pledges paid. This should be pushed with all vigor in every Conference and in every congregation. The church must lead the way in the restoration of public confidence, and the church could give no better service to the business interests of America, to the prosperity of the nation, than to make a clean record in the matter of its financial obligations. But more important than this is that the church prove itself worthy to have leadership in the great task of rebuilding a world—that the church fail not in its best day of opportunity.

Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, Director General of the Centenary, states that there is now being sent back to the Annual Conferences ten per cent of the total amount paid on individual pledges during 1920. This amounts to $455,679, and all goes to pastors in mission fields or in charges not paying a living salary. This return from the Centenary for the men at home will make it possible for many a faithful preacher to provide for himself and his family the necessities of life. It will ease many a burdened man and make more efficient his ministry. The Centenary, therefore, is strengthening the work at home while it ministers to the people of other lands. And this amount paid to home pastors is only a small part of the amount appropriated out of Centenary funds for work in our own land.

The five Conferences paying the largest amounts on individual pledges during 1920 are: Virginia, $419,062; South Georgia, $258,745; North Georgia, $234,614; North Carolina, $225,303; Tennessee, $204,400. The five Conferences leading in amounts paid by Sunday schools are: Virginia, $41,610; South Georgia, $18,914; North Alabama, $17,207; Western North Carolina, $15,561; North Georgia, $12,463.

The Louisiana Conference paid during 1920 on individual pledges, $115,257; the Mississippi Conference, $119,764; the North Mississippi Conference, $92,923. Of these amounts, ten per cent has been returned to the Conferences to supplement the salaries of pastors who are not now receiving a "living wage." Thus, in making their contributions to the General Centenary Fund the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi are helping to strengthen the work of the church in their own territory.

THE ADVOCATE QUOTA—A PLAIN STATEMENT.

When the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met in annual session on October 7, 1920, it faced a serious situation resulting from the high cost of producing the paper, and it gave itself diligently to the work of devising some means by which the situation could be met. Among other measures adopted with this end in view, the following action was unanimously taken:

"On motion of J. M. Henry, it was resolved: (1) That we set as our goal, 'The Advocate in every home'; (2) That as an immediate objective we fix a quota of one subscriber for every ten members in the three Conferences; (3) That the presiding elders of the several districts be requested at the Annual Conferences to accept the quotas for their several districts, and that reports in full on all charges be conditioned on the accomplishment of this end; (4) That this action be presented to the Conferences through the Board of Christian Literature of each Conference, and that they be requested to present the matter to their respective Conferences for action."

Pursuant to this action of the Publishing Committee, the matter was laid before the Boards of Christian Literature of the three patronizing Annual Conferences, and by them brought to the attention of the Conferences themselves in reports which were adopted. We quote the pertinent sections of these reports.

Louisiana Conference: "In observing the request of the Publishing Committee and concurring with their views, we recommend that the Louisiana Annual Conference fix as its immediate goal a minimum of one subscriber for every ten members in every pastoral charge, and that, further, each presiding elder be instructed to distribute the aforesaid quota in the respective charges of his district at the District Stewards' meeting, and call attention to same at the first round of quarterly conferences."

North Mississippi Conference: "We recommend that our goal be fixed at one copy in every Methodist home in the Conference, and that we make immediate effort to secure a subscription for every ten members in each charge."

Mississippi Conference: "We also recommend that our Conference accept as the minimum of its goal in the campaign for subscribers for the coming year, one New Orleans Christian Advocate to every ten members of the church, looking ultimately to putting the paper into every Methodist home."

It seems to us that this action was, in each case, specific and clear-cut, constituting a definite agreement by the members of the Conferences to carry out the purpose expressed by the adoption of the reports. We are not accustomed to think that the mere adoption of a report specifying further action ends the whole matter; if this were so, it would be a simple thing to deal with all the problems that confront us.

According to the Minutes of the recent sessions of our three Conferences, the membership of our church in Louisiana and Mississippi is 166,648, distributed as follows: Louisiana Conference, 43,622; Mississippi Conference, 60,479; North Mississippi Conference, 62,547. On the basis of one subscriber to every ten members of the church, it is apparent that the Advocate should be going regularly into 16,664 homes. If we had that number of subscriptions, we should feel that we were, in a measure, reaching a fair proportion of our membership, though, assuming that five members of the church read each copy of the paper, there would still be 83,323 members who would not read it—just fifty per cent of our total membership! As a matter of fact, by a liberal estimate, not more than 37,500 of our people are now reading their official church organ, leaving 129,148 who never see it. In this connection we recall the words of the report of the Board of Christian Literature of the Mississippi Conference: "Let us remember that only as we have a reading church shall we have an intelligent church."

According to the statistics of last year's Conferences, there were 485 pastoral charges in the three Conferences, with a corresponding number of pastors. We have just been looking over the records of the subscription department to see how many of these pastors have been successful in getting their people to take the Advocate; we may have made an error in the count, though we went through the records carefully, but the result of our investigation was startling—almost disheartening. From December 1, 1920, up to and including March 10, 1921, just 129 pastors have sent one or more subscriptions to the Advocate office. When we subtract this number from the total number of pastors in charge last year, we find 356 who have not sent even one subscription. If we make a liberal allowance for an error in the count, we are safe in saying that 300 of the 485 preachers of our three Conferences have done nothing toward circulating the official organ of the church.

There may be some other way of circulating the church paper than that of depending upon the co-operation of the preachers—but we do not know what it is. From the very beginning of Methodism, the circulation of Christian literature was looked upon as both the privilege and the duty of the preachers. The work of the church has become very complex since those early days, and the burdens of the preachers have been correspondingly increased, so that it may have become impossible for them to do all that is expected of them; the fact that about 70 per cent of the pastors in Louisiana and Mississippi have not found time to secure even one subscription for the Advocate would seem to indicate that such is the case. If it is, we shall have to find some other way of circulating our literature or go out of business.

We have never pleaded for the enlargement of our circulation on the ground that it was necessary for the paper to maintain its existence; our emphasis has always been upon the development of an intelligent church membership that would make more efficient all our agencies for the propagation of the Kingdom of God on earth, and we will stick to that as the only ground upon which we may justify the attempt to publish a paper at all. But we cannot be blind to the fact that it takes money to do even the most necessary things, and the church paper is no exception. Surely, with a clientele of more than 165,000, the official organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Louisiana and Mississippi ought to be self-supporting.

So desperate was the situation when the Publishing Committee met last fall that the three Conferences were asked to assume as an assessment an amount equal to the editor's salary, and all of them did assume it. Since, however, a deficit of practically that amount was brought over from last year, it will not relieve the pressure from current expenses; and its availability as a resource will be delayed until the collections are in next fall, except the comparatively small amount that will come in during the year. Thus far $45.60 has been received on that account.

We are thus calling attention to the present financial condition of the Advocate with the hope that a realization of its urgent needs will result in an immediate and concerted effort on the part of its friends to do something in its behalf. If every pastoral charge would undertake at once to secure the quota of one subscriber for every ten members, its financial needs would be met, and something of value each week to all classes of its membership. That the securing of this quota is possible, we do not doubt for a moment. We have never yet known our preachers to set their hands to a task that they did not successfully complete. It is simply a question of undertaking it with the determination to succeed. Within a month a canvass could be completed in practically every charge, and in most of them the quota could be secured, and in many of them exceeded, if the work were undertaken in a definite and systematic way. IF IT IS NOT DONE, THE FUTURE IS TOO UNCERTAIN FOR US TO READ.

REMEMBER THE ORPHANAGES AT EASTER.

We earnestly hope that none of our people will forget that Easter is an especially appropriate time for making contributions for the support of our two orphanages, one at Ruston, La., and the other at Jackson, Miss. By a long-established custom, Easter Sunday is the day upon which these institutions have come to rely for offerings that will go a long way toward carrying them through the difficult days of summer; and it is especially important that all our people be given the opportunity to make an offering this year. If pastors and Sunday school superintendents will call attention to this most appealing cause in advance, and make definite arrangements to have the offering collected in the schools and at preaching services, we are sure the response will be hearty and generous. Our orphanages are worthy of our most liberal support.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"Prospects for a good year are bright," writes Rev. W. B. Baker, of Verona, Miss.

We greatly enjoyed a call from Rev. L. E. Crooks, our pastor at Greensburgh, La., on Wednesday of last week.

Dr. Edwin R. Graham, senior Publishing Agent of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at his home, in Richwood, Ohio, on February 18.

The Midland Methodist, official organ of the Holston, the Tennessee, and the Memphis Conferences, announces that it now has more than 13,000 subscribers.

We are delighted to learn that Mrs. T. J. Holladay, wife of our pastor at Plain Dealing, La., who had to undergo a severe operation not long ago, is steadily improving in health.

The weekly calendar of the Eleventh Avenue Methodist Church, Birmingham, Ala., of which Dr. W. G. Henry is pastor, is an interesting presentation of the work of this great church.

Rev. W. J. Wood, of Duck Hill, Miss., under date of March 11, writes: "We had Brother Jacob with us last Sunday. He gave us a great sermon, which was highly appreciated by all who heard him."

Rev. R. I. Collins is greatly encouraged by the outlook on the Shannon and Nettleton charge, North Mississippi Conference. The Sunday schools are doing fine work, the one at Shannon being especially efficient.

By special invitation Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of First Methodist Church, this city, delivered an address to the Kiwanis Club, of Alexandria, La., at their regular luncheon on Wednesday of last week, at the Hotel Bentley.

Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, of Seminary, Miss., writes: "I am happy to say that the work is moving along auspiciously. The interest is growing daily, and we are hopeful and are expecting a revival at each church here on this splendid charge."

Mrs. L. E. Alford, wife of our pastor at Yazoo City, Miss., came to New Orleans last Monday to consult a specialist, on the advice of her local physician. While in the city, she will be the guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. D. M. Hays. Mr. Hays is one of the officials of the First Methodist Church.

A revival meeting is in progress this week at Parker Memorial Church, this city. The pastor, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, is being assisted by Rev. A. G. Shankle, who is doing the preaching, and by Rev. J. B. Grambling, who has charge of the music. The meeting will continue through next week.

We thank Rev. W. W. Graves, the presiding elder, for a very cordial invitation to attend the Hattiesburg District Conference at Collins, May 24-27. Brother Graves reports that everything seems to be moving along nicely on the district, the preachers all being happy and hard at work.

A good report comes to us of the work at New Iberia, La., where Rev. S. D. Roberts is pastor. The attendance at the services of the church has greatly increased, and twenty-three members have been received on profession of faith since Conference. The pastor's salary has been fixed at $2000.

Our church at Durant, Miss., Rev. R. P. Neblett, pastor, issued a neatly printed invitation to the church conference, held on Wednesday evening, March 9. In connection with the conference, a social gathering was held under the auspices of the Epworth League, and stereopticon pictures were shown.

A note from Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., is the announcement that Bishop Wm. F. M. D.D. will preach the Commencement sermon at Whitworth College, May 22, 1921. Dr. W. G. Henry will deliver the Commencement address, May 23, 1921, at 8 p.m.

We learn from a note from Brother W. H. Adams, of Chester, Miss., that Rev. J. C. McElroy, whose health failed while he was serving the Chester charge last year, is still confined to his room and bed most of the time. We are sure the prayers and sympathy of the brethren are with him in his affliction.

We have seen a statement to the effect that the Spiritual Resources Department of the Christian Education Movement has announced that twenty-nine thousand persons have signed the card pledging themselves to daily Bible reading and prayer, and that twelve thousand people have promised to establish family allars.

Rev. J. A. Alford, the pastor, is conducting a two weeks' meeting at Second Methodist Church, this city. He is being assisted by local pastors, Rev. J. E. Selfe, Rev. C. C. Wler and Rev. H. N. Harrison. The Editor of the Advocate will preach Sunday. Next week, Rev. J. M. Alford, of Mangham, La., will do the preaching.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, requests us to say that the financial setting-up meeting of the Christian Education Movement for the Alexandria District will be held at Alexandria on April 14. Further particulars of the meeting will be given later. He requests us to say, also, that his district conference will be held at Oakdale, May 10-12.

The Advocate has recently received $15 from Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., Rev. T. B. Cottrell, pastor, and $10 from the Sunday school at Peck, La., Frank Carson, treasurer, for the famine-stricken regions of China. These amounts were promptly forwarded to Mr. J. D. Hamilton, treasurer of the Board of Missions, Nashville, Tenn., through whom they will be applied as directed.

Dr. Henry Beach Carre, of the Department of Biblical Theology and English Exegesis, Vanderbilt University, preached at 11 a.m. last Sunday, in First Methodist Church, this city, to a large and appreciative congregation. Dr. Carre was in Baton Rouge, La., the early part of this week, delivering a course of lectures at Louisiana State University. He is to-day beginning a series of lectures at Tulane University, this city.

Rev. F. R. Power, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference but now pastor at Wilmar, Ark., has received 26 persons into the church there since he has been in charge. At a recent prayer meeting there were seventy-three present, and three persons were received into the church. The finances of the charge are in good condition. Mrs. Power has had an eight weeks' illness, but is now recovering, being able to sit up a few hours each day.

Rev. W. A. Mangum, our pastor at Queensborough Church, Shreveport, La., writes, under date of March 6: "Brother Stephen S. Thomas, Conference Centenary Secretary-Treasurer, was with us to-night and delivered a very interesting and inspiring message on the Centenary work. Brother Thomas is a great layman who is doing a great work." We learn from Brother Mangum that plans are being laid for a new brick church at Queensborough.

IMPORTANT TO PASTORS.

Allow me to suggest:

1. It is never too late to send in cards for Family Worship. To circuit pastors, often handicapped by winter weather and bad roads, we would say "take your time but be sure to make the enrollment at every church."

2. The time is here to single shot on Family Worship. Leave off Bible Reading and Prayer cards except for young people. The cards coming in show that the people are ready to establish Family Altars, if they can get suitable helps. "Keep the Home Fires Burning" meets this need.

3. In spite of the great care exercised in eliminating duplicate cards, some have gotten into our files. Where duplicate copies of "Keep the Home Fires Burning" have been received, let the pastors use them in supplying new signers, indicating on the cards that this has been done.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition, we hereby make the following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.
2. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.
3. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.
4. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.
5. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate in Every Methodist Home in Louisiana and Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.

2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.

3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will be found.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

MISS GERTRUDE MARY CALHOUN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Calhoun, of this place, was born February 25, 1894. It was with sad hearts that the people of Mt. Olive received the message on October 3, 1920, that she had died at Clarksdale, Miss., where she held a position with Armour & Co. She was a noble-hearted girl and developed a character of gentleness and loveliness. On Tuesday afternoon, October 5, 1920, many loved ones and friends gathered at the Methodist church to pay a last tribute to her. The services were conducted by Rev. T. B. Cottrell, assisted by Rev. H. F. Tolle, of Jackson. The many beautiful floral offerings, sent by loving friends, were a symbol of her life, which bloomed for those she loved. The body was interred in the Mt. Olive cemetery. Her cheerful smile, her happy disposition, and her unselfish life have been an inspiration to us and have lifted us to higher ideals, purer thoughts and nobler deeds. We pay this tribute of love to her whose life made us happy and whose death has left us lonely and we resolve to follow her even unto the presence of God.

Brother ERNEST Q. LYONS was born September 17, 1893, and departed this life, January 19, 1921. His entire life was spent in the Mt. Pleasant community, near Vancleave, Miss., with his mother. For many months he was a sufferer and spent much time the last year of his life in the far West in search of health but it was of no benefit, and he has gone to reap the reward of his faith. He joined the Methodist Church when a small boy, and lived a good life ever afterwards. He was devoted to his church, loyal to his friends and faithful and true to his mother and sister to the end. He has left a good testimony, and met death without a fear. I have not seen a young person take such a logical view of life and death. To him death was the gateway through which he would enter the larger life. May it be so with us. His pastor,

J. H. GRICE.

MRS. ANNA HOLCOMBE AUSTIN.

In the historic old town of Jackson, La., there recently passed away one of those choice spirits whose presence makes one feel that all's right with the world, not only because God is in his heaven, but also because he is here in the lives of saintly men and women. In the present instance, it was Anna Baker Holcombe, wife of Robert S. Austin, who made the college town of Jackson a Bethel for many a young man away from home in attendance on old Centenary College of Louisiana.

She was the daughter of Professor A. R. Holcombe, honor man of the first class that was graduated from Emory College, Oxford, Ga. Her mother was Emma Spencer, only sister of Mrs. John C. Keener, wife of Bishop Keener. Her parents on both sides were Methodists, as were also their parents. On her mother's side there were three generations of godly women.

She was born at Summerfield, Ala., April 12, 1848, and was educated principally at home and at the schools and colleges where her father taught. It is not known just when she joined the church, but she was always a child of the church, the daughter of a local preacher.

It was while her father was a professor at Centenary College, Jackson, La., that she met and married, July 6, 1876, Robert S. Austin, a son of a planter, living near the college town. Except for a short interval, she spent the remainder of her life in Jackson.

Brother and Sister Austin had no children of their own, but they adopted six children, nephews and nieces, one or both of whose parents had died. They are A. R. Holcombe, on the editorial staff of the New York Tribune, and W. P. Holcombe, also of New York, sons of her brother, Richard S. Holcombe, a Methodist preacher; Emmette and Robert Holcombe, sons of her brother, Dr. Holcombe, a physician of Jackson, and of her husband's sister, Mary J. Austin; Mrs. Sallie Austin Joyner, wife of Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor of the First Methodist Church, of Baton Rouge, La.; and Dr. H. M. Austin, of Laredo, Texas, both children of her sister and her husband's brother. These six adopted children, together with her husband, survive her.

Sister Austin had a bright mind. She was a constant reader, and kept abreast of the thought of her times, both in her church and in the great world outside the church. A daughter of the Old South, she buckled on the harness of full citizenship when the suffrage was extended to women, and cast her first vote, a few months before her death.

But it was the Methodist Church of Jackson that claimed and obtained from her the consecrated service of a lifetime. She was the president of its Missionary Society, and a leader in every good movement which the church undertook.

As we contemplate her life of sacrificial service and reckon up her rewards, we can do no better for ourselves than pray that a double portion of her spirit may come upon us.

SOME REASONS FOR OUR FAILURE IN THE RURAL SECTIONS.

We read with interest the article containing the announcement of The School for Rural Pastors and Church Leaders, by Dr. Russell, Secretary of Department of Home Missions, in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of February 3, 1921. I want it understood that I am not opposed to or critical of the plan that is being proposed by any one that will help us solve our rural church problems; the one now proposed seems to be a good start, as far as that will go, toward getting the real thing done.

The thing I want to say, as indicated by the heading of this article, is just this—but before saying it, I want to say that I have been serving the rural work all of my ministry of 14 years, which has by no means been fruitless, though not as fruitful as I would like for it to have been.

Now the thing I want to say, with reference to our failure and as to the reason for our failure, is this:

First, the time needed to be given to each church to preach and work with our people and especially our young people in some way that will develop them into leaders and Christian service. Most of us rural preachers have from four to eight appointments, scattered over a large section of the country that is hard to get over; therefore we spend about half of our time going from one appointment to another, with no time to prepare ourselves for better service and to work with our people.

As for the preaching our people are getting, there is no special lack of quality. It is not so much better preaching they want, but more of it. We pastors usually get results from our message; the trouble is, we can't stay and observe them; besides our own ministry, we have our presiding elder visit the work four times a year and preach and sometimes hold meetings for us, and most of them, if not all, are good preachers.

Another reason, it seems to me, is lack of adequate support. If our people would get a vision of their responsibility in this thing and make the support of their pastor adequate to his needs, so that he could go along unhampered by embarrassment because of financial needs, they would do a great deal toward solving this problem of the rural church. If some one will see to it that we rural pastors get a common laborer's wage and get it regularly, you will see that we can do a great deal more toward solving the problem of the rural church.

Another reason, it seems to me, for our failure in this thing is mainly that our people fail to seek a better religious experience. I tell you, in many portions of our rural work, among the people there is no fear of God before their eyes; the call to repentance seems to go unheeded. Hence the solution to this condition is evangelistic effort with a baptism of Pentecostal power upon the preachers and our godly laymen, to get so many, many of our people to come up to that standard of right living that becometh the gospel of our Lord and Master.

In closing, I want to say I wish I could go to one or the other of the schools for better equipment; but who is going to see to it that it is made possible? As with me, so I fear it will be with many more of our poor rural pastors who live five hundred or more miles from either place. If it is left to our officials to make it possible for us, we will not go. So it strikes me that if the project is worth while, where we are unable ourselves to bear this expense or to get our people interested enough to send us, it would not be money misspent for the Mission Boards of each Conference to make an outlay of a few hundred dollars for this purpose. May the Lord lead us in all of our efforts in the furtherance of His Kingdom.

Profits in Cotton?

The answer is found in less cost per bale, which means growing twice as much cotton per acre. This cuts out nearly one-half the man and team labor.

The right kind and amount of fertilizer has often more than doubled the yield.

The Potash in the fertilizer counts.

It balances the food of the crop so that the well-fed plants resist the attacks of blight and other diseases, produce more bolls per plant, and hence more pounds per acre. Such plants do not shed their fruit badly. In this way

Do you not think that after the Potash famine your cotton fertilizers should contain at least 5% Potash?

There is plenty of Potash in the country. Insist on getting as much as you need.

GET BUSY, LOUISIANA LEAGUERS!

Fellow-Leaguers:

Listen! Did it ever occur to you that we now lack but one essential characteristic—originality?

We justly boast of one of the best Assemblies in the United States—yet we sing songs, and give yells composed by Leaguers from other States. Why? We had never thought of composing them for ourselves!

Let us set the pace for others, and compose yells and songs "all our own" for the 1921 Assembly.

Send them to the address below as soon as composed. We shall adopt the best for our State yells and songs when we get to the Assembly. See if your League can't have the honor of composing it. Yours truly,

TO THE PASTORS AND YOUNG PEOPLE OF THE NEWTON DISTRICT.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you please state that the Newton District Epworth League Institute will meet at Bay Springs, March 28 and 29? All the pastors and at least two of the best young people from each charge are urged to be present. Brother O. E. Harbin, from the Central Office, and Brother W. D. Hawkins, our Conference president, will be there, which will within itself insure a good program. Let each pastor select and appoint his delegates and send their names to Rev. E. H. Cooley, Bay Springs, and entertainment will be provided for them.

L. F. ALFORD,
Acting Dist. Secretary.

ITEMS FROM COVINGTON, LA.

In as much as this has, for years been considered a very difficult field, where young preachers have been "tried out," and where the Conference might send preachers possibly suspected of possessing some elements of the giraffe (Selah), I think it well to clarify some impressions some folks have had. True, some conditions exist here that are not found in some other charges, but taken on the whole, this charge has a very excellent future.

Much credit for the improved condition is due my predecessor, Rev. A. F. Vaughan, who made excellent and lasting impressions, and did fine work in many ways to pave the way for his successor. We are expecting to let the contract for the new church building in a few days.

We have had fourteen additions to the church since Conference, two infant baptisms, four weddings, and no funerals! We are finding many nominal Methodists, some of whom say they were never visited by a minister before. (Selah.) "A housegoing preacher makes a church-going people." Yet it seems very difficult to keep the crowds coming, during this changeable weather.

Many times we have preached to crowded audiences, during revivals in northern Missouri, while the thermometer registered from 20 to 25 below zero! Hence it's hard to understand just why loyal Methodists hibernate during little cool spells in this extra fine climate. Fact is, humanity is much the same, north, east, south and west; and not weather, but spiritual conditions determine church attendance, etc. There are many loyal Methodists and friends of our church in this community.

The presiding elder states that more has been contributed to the support of the church since Conference than ever before in so short a time. We have some faithful souls at Madisonville, where we preach each second and fourth Wednesdays.

Fine interest is shown at Mandeville, where there is a move on to remodel the old "union" church. We have a live Sunday school and a good Missionary Society at Covington. The latter has taken time by the forelock and is raising funds to help furnish the new church.

The class at Poltevent's Mill is the best organized on the charge and has some extra fine people. The mill company recently gave the writer a good Ford car.

In closing, without intending to eulogize, but appreciating Romans 13: 7, I think it well to say that after seventeen years in the active ministry, and having associated with many of the best presiding elders Methodism has ever produced, I have never met a more level-headed, consecrated, safe and sane presiding elder than the one who is honored with that office in this district.

Since this is my first article for your good paper, Brother Carley, permit me to add the following: My humble opinion is that right now the church has the greatest opportunity of soul-saving she ever had. Our greatest need is not more churches, more preachers, etc., etc., but more real, "old-time," New Testament prayer and faith. And I believe this will be the greatest result of our Christian Education Movement. Then, when we as a church re-possess such spiritual life and revival fire as existed in Wesley's day, more and better preachers, colleges, etc., etc., will follow.

Over a half-century ago, Dr. Albert Barnes, commenting on 1 Cor. 8:1, said, "The man who is influenced by love, ever pure and glowing (of course we all know faith and prayer lead to that); is not in much danger of going astray, or of doing injury to the cause of God. The man who relies on his knowledge is heady, high-minded, obstinate, contentious, vexatious, perverse, opinionated; and most church difficulties arise from such men."

May God help us to lead our young people to heed His call and appreciate the value (indispensable to Christian character) of our excellent colleges. And may God continue to keep our colleges free from destructive criticism and all else that hinders His work.

Yours in His service,

LEE R. SPARKS.

DARLING BABY BRIGHTENS HOME

Children's Laughter a Pleasing Sound

Altoona, Pa.—"I am writing to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. We had six children die almost at birth. From one hour to nineteen days is all they have lived. Before my next one was born I took a dozen bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and I can say that it is the greatest medicine on earth, for this baby is now four months old, and a healthier baby you would not want. I am sending you a picture of her. Everybody says 'That is a very healthy looking baby.' You have my consent to show these few lines to anybody."—Mrs. C. W. BENZ, 131 3rd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

Mrs. Janssen's experience of interest to childless wives.

Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are fond of children, and for a considerable time after we were married I feared I would not have any. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it strengthened me so I now have a nice, strong, healthy baby girl. I suffered very little at childbirth, and I give all the credit to your medicine, and shall always recommend it highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wis.

Mrs. Held of Marinette, Wis., adds her testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She says:

Marinette, Wis.—"I was in a nervous condition and very irregular. My doctor advised an operation. My husband brought me one of your booklets and asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It overcame my weakness so that I now have a healthy baby girl after having been married nine years. I am glad to recommend your medicine, and you may use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. H. B. HELD, 330 Jefferson St., Marinette, Wis.

There are many, many such homes that were once childless, and are now blessed with healthy, happy children because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored the mother to a strong and healthy condition, as it acts as a natural restorative for ailments as indicated by backache, irregularities, displacements, weakness and nervousness.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative. It can be taken with perfect safety and often prevents serious troubles.

Therefore if you know of any woman who is suffering and has been unable to secure relief and is regretfully looking forward to a childless old age, ask her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has brought health and happiness into so many homes once darkened by illness and despair.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

LESSON FOR MARCH 20.

Lesson Topic: The Cross And Its Meaning To-day.

Scripture Lesson: Matthew 28:35-50; 1 Corinthians 1:21-25.

Golden Text: "God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Romans 5:8.

Home Readings: Monday, They Crucified Him, Matt. 27:33-44; Tuesday, The Story of The Cross, Matt. 27:45-46; Wednesday, Jesus Foretells His Death, Matt. 16:21-27; Thursday, Jesus Condemned, Luke 23:13-25; Friday, Jesus Crucified, Luke 23:53-49; Saturday, The Burial of Jesus, Luke 23:50-56; Sunday, The Agony of the Cross, Psalm 22:1-5.

Teaching Points.

1. The accusation nailed over the head of Jesus was truer than his enemies knew—he was, and is, King.
2. We may not understand the theories of the atonement, but we can understand the fact that Jesus died for us.
3. The death of Jesus was not forced upon him by his enemies—it was a voluntary renunciation of life by himself.
4. The Cross teaches us the supreme lesson of self-sacrifice.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Two Sunday School Day programs have been issued, one for schools well graded and another program not so elaborate. The programs will be furnished in any reasonable quantity by the Sunday School Board, provided request is made for same through the field secretary. The programs are 50 cents a dozen and $3 a hundred. State which one of the programs you prefer when you order.

Rev. W. D. Bennett has a class of eighteen at Courtland getting ready to be taught. The class proposes to study Life in the Making a month before calling for a teacher.

The fine class at Greenville is going ahead with the second division of Life in the Making. Last week Mrs. Taylor gave a splendid outline of the intermediate work and charmed the class with her instruction. This class is self-perpetuating, as all vigorous classes should be.

Rev. N. D. Guerry is doing some high-class work on the Shuford circuit. He has had all his church yards cleaned up, the stumps grubbed, brush burned, grass put out to make a lawn. Next he is going to have screens put in his churches to have his classes to themselves. The best piece of work was done when he got all of his schools to hold a circuit training class. Thirty of his teachers met Friday night, all day Saturday, and all day Sunday for study. The class is to study the book for a month and I shall return and give them three days more of drilling. Guerry is putting his circuit to the place that all circuits ought to occupy.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday, the 6th, I spent with Rev. P. T. Hollingsworth at Anding. I had the pleasure of being with him in his quarterly conference and meeting with his people. His work starts well and bids fair to be a good year.

Sunday afternoon was spent at Benton and Sunday night at Flora making a fairly full day.

Monday morning we had the privilege of speaking to the High School folks at Flora. Brother Foreman starts the year well and the people are rallying to him.

Wednesday was spent in Vicksburg, where arrangements were made for putting on "Children's Week." I believe the observance of Children's Week is going to be one of the most happy features of this year's work. I trust that many who have not made definite arrangements for Children's Week will do so. I found the presiding elder, the pastors and the workers at Vicksburg unusually open and acceptable to the idea. I am praying that God will wonderfully bless them in carrying out their plans to completion.

Wednesday night I had the privilege of attending prayer meeting at Vicksburg and it was indeed a privilege. They have a very fine prayer meeting. These services were enjoyed to the fullest. Those brethren who are speaking of prayer meeting as a dead issue would certainly find out something if they would visit such prayer services as the one at Crawford Street, Vicksburg, and Capitol Street, Jackson and others like them.

Monday, the final plans for the Conference Training School were worked out. Rev. J. Q. Schisler, representative of the Department of Teacher Training, was with us giving us valuable information and inspiration. Rev. B. F. Lewis entertained us at the Orphanage for supper. This was a most delightful and enjoyable occasion.

Monday night we attended the Set-up Meeting for a new building at Rankin Street. I feel that no hindering causes coming Rankin Street will be enabled to project a new building at an early date. Let us pray that God will use them to this end.

Sunday School Day Programs have been ordered sent to each pastor. If you do not receive them please let me know so that I can get behind the proper parties and get them to you without too much delay.

The Vatican at Rome Recommends Nuxated Iron

If you lack BODILY or MENTAL VIGOR; If you are WEAK; NERVOUS or IRRITABLE, TRY NUXATED IRON TODAY.

Nuxated Iron CONTAINS ORGANIC IRON LIKE THE IRON IN YOUR BLOOD and LIKE THE IRON IN SPINACH, LENTILS AND APPLES.

NUXATED IRON also contains a remarkable product, brought to the attention of the French Academy of Medicine by the celebrated Dr. Robin, which represents the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force FOR FEEDING THE NERVES, so that NUXATED IRON might be said to be both a BLOOD and a NERVE FOOD.

THERE ARE 30,000,000,000,000 RED BLOOD CORPUSCLES in your blood and each one must have iron.

Today about one person out of every three is said to suffer more or less from the great devitalizing weakness brought on by malnutrition or lack of sufficient nourishment; which is caused NOT BY LACK OF FOOD but often by LACK OF SUFFICIENT ORGANIC IRON in the blood to enable us to GET THE STRENGTH OUT of our food.

IRON IS THE MASTER PRINCIPLE OF THE BLOOD AND BLOOD IS LIFE. Our forefathers ate the husks of grains and the skins and peels of vegetables and fruits, rich in strength-giving organic iron, but modern methods of cookery throw all these things away—hence the alarming increase, in recent years, in Anaemia—iron starvation of the blood with all its attendant ills.

When, as a result of iron starvation, you get up feeling tired in the morning, when you find yourself nervous, irritable and easily upset; when you can no longer do your day's work without being all fagged out at night; when your digestion all goes wrong, or you have pains across the back, shortness of breath, heart palpitation or your face looks pale and drawn, do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration, or until in your weakened condition you contract some serious disease, but consult your family physician and have him take a specimen of your blood and make a "blood-count" of your red blood corpuscles or test the iron-power of your blood yourself by adding plenty of spinach, carrots, or other iron-containing fruits and vegetables to your daily food and take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—with them for a while and see how much your condition improves. Thousands of people have surprisingly increased their strength, energy and endurance in two weeks time by this simple experiment. But be sure the iron you take is organic Nuxated Iron and not metallic iron which people usually take and which is made merely by the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron—an entirely different iron from Nuxated Iron. The fact that you may have taken metallic iron without receiving any benefit does not prove that Nuxated Iron will not help you. Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such a highly concentrated form that one dose is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating

SUNDAY SCHOOL PROGRESS AT CRAWFORD, MISS.

Enthusiasm in the work of the Sunday school of the Methodist Church in Crawford, Miss., reached "high tide" on March 6. For four weeks a contest has been running in the Sunday school, one side designated as "REDS," the other as "BLUES." The spirit has been fine from the beginning. Mrs. H. P. Hartman, is captain of the "REDS," and Miss Maggie Lou Ledbetter is captain of the "BLUES."

The membership of the Sunday school has been augmented very much, having been increased from an enrollment of about thirty-five to one hundred and ten.

The superintendent of this school, Mr. J. D. Ledbetter, has been doing faithful and unselfish service in this capacity for more than twenty years, and he has the utmost confidence of every one.

Our teachers, Mesdames G. P. Waller, L. S. Ledbetter, H. P. Hartman, L. P. Gibson, and Misses Kate Ervin and Hattie Smith Carr are doing very efficient work.

A very fine work has been done by the men in the organization of the "Men's Union Bible Class," organized four weeks ago, with 19 charter members, but now with an enrollment of 27, with 25 present on March 6. The secretary-treasurer of this class is N. B. Scales; Mr. Fred Majors is the president, and Mrs. Thomas H. Mills is the teacher.

I want to say now that I find the people of this charge a most excellent people and very responsive.

THOMAS H. MILLS, P. C.

MARRIED.

On March 2, at 11:30 a.m., at Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., Mr. RAYMOND S. PECK and Miss LUCY BELL HUTCHINS, of Vicksburg, Rev. T. B. Cottrell officiating.

At Mt. Pleasant Church, near Vancleave, Miss., Sunday, February 27, 1921, Mr. W. MORRISON ROBERTS and Miss RUTH R. LYONS, Rev. J. H. Grice officiating.

FROM CARLISLE, ARK.

Our church at Carlisle has been in a state of revival ever since Brother A. B. Barry and wife came to us in November. They came right into our hearts and with zeal entered into every department of the work. The official board was at once organized and began work. Notwithstanding an increase of 25 per cent in pastor's salary, the payments are being made promptly each month.

The monthly meetings of the board are held at the parsonage, after which a social hour is spent, with refreshments prepared by Sister Barry. The Arkansas Methodist is being sent into every Methodist home in the community. Our Sunday school has nearly doubled its attendance in the past three months. The largest increase has been in the adult classes. Men and women who never attended before are now active workers.

Our crying need is for a new building. Several of the classes are meeting at homes near the church.

There have been sixty-six accessions to the church since Conference and the entire membership is enjoying a spiritual refreshing. Every service is a soul-winning effort. The mid-week prayer meeting is growing in interest and attendance. A good Epworth League and Juvenile Missionary Society are taking care of the young people. The parsonage is open to them for all of their social gatherings. The Woman's Missionary Society is keeping up its record of many years of service, and just recently the Society has had united with it a strong local department, which has been working independently to secure funds for a new church building. The local department includes almost all the women of the church and has more than $1600 on hand. The union was perfected in order to bring all branches of the work under proper church organization.

We hope to have one of the best years in the history of our church, and with Brother Barry's leadership the entire church will have to work to keep up with him. He is truly a servant seven days in the week, having a part in five services each Sunday. We thank God for their coming, and, with their help and leadership, want to do more each week to bring Carlisle to Christ.

THE CRACK O' DOOM FOR NASTY CALOMEL

Folks Abandoning Old Drug for "Dodson's Liver Tone," Here in South.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you lose a day.

Calomel is mercury! When it comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, breaking it up. Then is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish, if liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous, go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it can not sate or make you sick.

Minutes Louisiana Annual Meeting.

Thursday morning's session was opened by singing "Where He leads me I will follow." Devotional conducted by Mrs. Hyams, who read Josh. 18:2, 3, "And there remained among the Children of Israel seven tribes which had not yet divided their inheritance." And as those tribes would not accept and use what God had given them, in the same way we are not using our inheritance. God is here for each one of us. Miss Mabel Howell offered prayer.

O'LEARY PRODUCTS CO.,
San Antonio, Texas, Dept. E.

The President, Mrs. Niebergall, being called home, Mrs. Holt occupied the chair.

Minutes of previous session were read and approved.

Two district reports were read, viz., Monroe and Baton Rouge. Also a report from Mrs. Snelling, Editor of the Woman's Page in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

It was resolved that a message of love be sent Miss Helen Johnson, returned missionary from Petropolis, Brazil.

Mrs. Johnson, in speaking on Mission Study methods said there were four types of Mission Study—1st—The lecture method, class taking notes.

2nd—Class with book, taking notes, followed by discussion.

3rd—Reading circles where books are passed around, which is better than nothing.

4th—The best plan, where groups of from 10 to 15 meet for real study. It is better to have 100 people divided into five classes than to go into one class.

An ideal class is organized and consists of four things—A Promoter, a Teacher, a Secretary, and a Class. Also the Teacher must know the book as a whole.

Mrs. Johnson then told of the great interdenominational meeting of Mission Boards recently held in New York where 65 Boards were in conference. She also spoke of the Interdenominational School of Missions held last fall in New Orleans and in this connection the following resolution was passed:

Whereas, we have heard with deep interest of the organization of an Interdenominational School of Missions in New Orleans, which is a ten-day assembly of women having the following aims: To provide spiritual, educational and physical opportunities; to furnish Normal training for leaders in woman's work in the church; to gain inspiration for larger service; to furnish Christian fellowship; to provide a vacation for body and mind through spiritual, educational and physical life, and

Whereas, we recognize this as a coveted opportunity of learning to be more efficient workers in His Kingdom,

Therefore be it resolved, That we endorse the New Orleans Interdenominational School of Missions and request every auxiliary in the Conference to take advantage of its privileges by sending one or more representatives to the next session, the date of which will be announced later.

Mrs. W. T. CUNNINGHAM,
Supt. Mission Study.

Mrs. V. G. HYAMS,
Supt. Publicity.

After prayer by Mrs. Johnson, pledges for the districts were taken, the directed and undirected bringing a total of $15,102, an increase over last year of $3,376.

The T. & P. Ry. Co., having put on a Pullman for the comfort of the delegates leaving on the night train, it was moved that the Secretary be instructed to send them a vote of thanks. Carried.

Mrs. Eskridge then came forward with two beautiful bouquets of roses which she presented to Mrs. Johnson and Miss Howell, from the auxiliary of First Church, Baton Rouge.

Mrs. Smith, of Shreveport, sang a solo which had the old familiar chorus, "Tell Me the Old Story" all uniting in the final chorus, and many were the expressions of appreciation.

Miss Howell had charge of the quiet half-hour, and after hearing Mrs. Smith's song remarked that all our Christian song come from Christ, and that one of the most touching things of the East is that the only music they have is Christian music, their native music being only noise. They use our hymns on every occasion which is sometimes rather incongruous.

She took for her subject the great dynamic forces which are at our disposal. These are a God-filled personality and the dynamic of prayer. These forces are in the hands of the Christian church to-day and if men and women are to be won for Christ, it must be because we have learned to use the power of prayer in their behalf. Lives are not transformed except by the power of prayer. Jesus Christ throws but the challenge to us when he says, "Greater works than these shall ye do."

We sometimes think when we drop our pledge money into the box that we have done all, but the greatest work the Spirit of God does in our hearts and lives is to teach us to pray. We are doing everything else and talking about it instead of doing it. Miss Howell offered prayer and the meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Montgomery. Meeting adjourned for lunch.

The Thursday afternoon meeting opened by singing hymn "Take Thou my life," devotional services being led by Mrs. White of Houma. After the Scripture reading prayer was offered by Miss Howell.

Minutes read and approved.

The following committee reports were heard and adopted: Committee on Supplies, by Mrs. Allen; Committee on Home Base, by Mrs. Smith; Committee on Social Service, by Mrs. Davis; Committee on Young People, by Mrs. Key; Committee on Children, by Mrs. Bradshaw; Committee on Mission Study, by Mrs. Cunningham; Committee on Bible Study, by Mrs. Cunningham; Committee on Periodicals, by Mrs. Snelling.

Miss Clara Chalmers at this time came forward to say good-bye and as she stood before the Conference all promised to take her as a prayer special. Brother Johns led in a word of prayer and hymn "God will take care of you" was sung.

A motion was made that a Committee be appointed in the local society known as the Inter-racial Committee. This committee is to be a part of the social service department and to be chosen in regard to their special fitness for this work. Carried.

Mrs. Johnson then occupied the chair for the election of officers.

Tellers were appointed: Mrs. I. B. Niebergall, Mrs. Bradshaw, Mrs. Darby and Mrs. Snelling.

Mrs. Holt, on account of ill health told us she could not serve as Corresponding Secretary again and Mr. Joyner asked all to stand saying by this act that we would be with her in prayer and remembrance. The election resulted as follows: President, Mrs. C. F. Niebergall; Vice President, Mrs. R. H. Harper, Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Montgomery; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Brown; Treasurer, Mrs. Carver; Superintendent Young People, Mrs. Key; Superintendent Children, Mrs. Drew; Superintendent Social Service, Mrs. W. W. Holmes; Superintendent Supplies, Mrs. J. L. Baker.

The Executive Committee recommended that an assistant Distributor of Literature be appointed. It was moved and carried that this recommendation be adopted. Mrs. Steel, of Mansfield, was appointed to this office.

Nominations were received for the election of alternates to the Council meeting. Four were nominated, viz.: Mrs. Harper, Mrs. Carver, Mrs. Cunningham and Mrs. Cunningham was elected as first alternate and Mrs. Key as second.

District Secretaries were appointed as follows: Alexandria, Mrs. H. G. Owen, Le Compté; Baton Rouge, Mrs. R. E. Stearns, Baton Rouge; Houma, Mrs. E. J. Shaw, Houma; Lake Charles, Mrs. J. C. McWilliams; Monroe-Ruston, Mrs. J. W. Darby, Mer Rouge; New Orleans, Mrs. J. D. Rumph, 1429 Nashville Avenue; Shreveport, Mrs. F. H. Bradshaw. These were unanimously elected.

Invitations for next place of meeting were received from Monroe, Alexandria and DeRidder. DeRidder receiving the largest number of votes was chosen for 1922.

Miss Howell having to leave expressed her pleasure at having been with the Louisiana Conference and reminded us that not any of the work on the mission field could be done if it were not for the individual Conferences and asked that we think of it and pray for the Secretaries in their strenuous labors. She paid a tribute to Miss Randle in Korea and said that Louisiana Conference might esteem it a great honor to be represented by Miss Randle in Korea.

The Committee in charge of the Literature reported having sold $124.17 worth without subscriptions to the Missionary Voice and Young Christian Worker.

Mrs. McVoy then reviewed the book "The Church and Community" by Dr. Ralph Diefendorfer. This author wants to show that the church should direct the affairs of the community and apply the Christian ideals to community life.

Thursday evening the meeting was opened by singing "I love to tell the story" and prayer by Brother Lee.

A very fine anthem was sung by the choir.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Miss Ellison who said we were going home to undertake the task that is ours with new courage, more easily and with more enthusiasm. The lesson was taken from John, chapter 9:4 which says, "I must work the works of Him that sent me."

Mrs. Bobbitt read the report of the Committee on Resolutions which were heartily endorsed.

A very sweet solo "Lord be merciful to me a sinner" was sung by Mrs. W. S. Holmes, of Baton Rouge.

Mrs. Luke Johnson was listened to with keenest interest as she talked of

A WORD OF APPRECIATION.

We regretted so much to hear not long ago of the illness of Brother T. B. Cottrell. He was our pastor for four years before going to Vicksburg. We are fond of our present pastor and his family, but we were sorry to give up the Cottrells. Brother Cottrell was a friend to every one—a true, sympathetic pastor, and a forceful Gospel preacher. In times of sickness and distress, Brother Cottrell's kindness and attention knew no bounds. I want to assure the good people of Gibson Memorial that they have all that could be desired in a preacher and pastor; and all the members of his family are with him in every good work. May God's richest blessings abound unto them and the good people they are serving. A FRIEND.

You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You start by investing less than $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

District, placed me in charge in November. We have made some progress since reaching here. Congregations have increased at each place, and interest in church work is better.

I have opened preaching services at the Log Camp and organized a Sunday school there. In order to give them services, I have to preach there in the afternoon of the same day I preach in Campti. Then, too, it is rather a rush, as after the 11 a.m. service here I have to hurry through dinner and ride sixteen miles on a motor car to the camp, then back home and get ready for night services.

I organized an Epworth League of about 15 members at Davis Springs church last Saturday night, under the supervision of Mrs. J. B. Fulton, widow of Rev. J. B. Fulton. I believe they will develop into a good League. She is also doing fine work in the Sunday school at that place.

Altogether, the outlook for the year is hopeful.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

Biliousness

WHEN you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. There is nothing better.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

"The call of this great land of ours."

She said that Miss Howell had said so many times "We have not yet said one word for Home Missions, it is all foreign" and so had chosen this subject. She selected as a basis for her talk the Scripture telling of Christ's agony in the garden and as He walked those streets with His group of eleven disciples and on into the gates of the garden, He said "Tarry ye here," and with the three who were nearest to Him, the three upon whom He thought He could lean, He went on farther and said, "Watch ye here while I go yonder and pray," and when He returned He found them sleeping and said, "What, could ye not watch with me one hour?" He had counted on them and they had failed in this hour of His supremest need. What if He had left them there? What if that had been the end? Just failure. But Jesus looked up and saw an armed force coming to take Him and He said to the sleeping disciples, "Rise up," "Here is another chance."

For a time I was connected with the Home Missionary work and spoke only on Home Missions and one night after I had spoken and told of the fearful condition of many things in our own home land, and was talking with a few people at the close, I saw coming down the aisle a man with such an expression of horror on his face that it frightened me: he said as he took my hand, "Are these things true that you've been telling us to-night—are they true?" I said, "O yes, only too true." "Then," he said, "from this day every dollar I have to give goes to Home Missions—every dollar I can spare." I said, "Oh, no; don't say that; the foreign field is needy too." "No," he said, "after what I have heard I cannot think of any other part of the world." I could not sleep that night. I thought "what have I done?" But Jesus has said, "Rise up, you have another chance," and now we do not think of Home Missions and Foreign Missions. Our international relations are so close that we cannot speak of America without thinking of every nation of the earth both great and small. We do not think of Home and Foreign but of the ends of the earth for Christ.

When this great world war came upon us the question was everywhere asked, "Has Christianity failed?" "Has the church of Christ failed?" We are a nation that has the great Gospel, the one nation with the young life to give and we can hear His voice saying "Rise up, you can have another chance." God is depending on us in this hour as Jesus depended on His disciples in the garden. They failed him and we have failed Him but we can have another chance.

Mrs. Johnson offered prayer and meeting closed with the benediction by Brother Lee.

LEAGUE INSTITUTES IN MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Presiding Elders, Pastors, and Epworth Leaguers, Mississippi Conference.

Dear Co-workers: I am sure you will rejoice to know that I have arranged for a District Epworth League Institute to be held in each presiding elder's district, and will have at each Institute Mr. O. E. Harbin, from the Central Office, Nashville, Tenn. Mr. Harbin has charge of the Recreation and Culture Department of the Central Office, and is the author of "Phunology."

You have received by this time a copy of the program from your district secretary, and it is very important that every presiding elder and pastor attend the Institute, and that every Epworth League (and church where there is no Epworth League) have two or more of their young people attend the Institute, so that the Leaguers may "line up" to do their work in a more efficient way, and the young people where there are no Leagues may be inspired to organize them.

The pastors are earnestly requested to see that their Leagues and churches are represented.

The following schedule has been arranged for the Institutes:

Hattiesburg District—Friday evening, 7:30. March 18, and all day March 19, Purvis, Miss.

Seashore District—9 a.m., March 22, closing with evening service, Wiggins, Miss.

Jackson District—7:30, March 23, closing with evening service, March 24.

Vicksburg District—9 a.m., March 25, closing with evening service same day.

Brookhaven District—9 a.m., March 26, continuing through March 26 and 27. Brookhaven, Methodist church.

Newton District—7:30, March 28, closing with evening service, March 29, Bay Springs, Miss.

Meridian District—7:30 p.m., March 30, closing with evening service, March 31, Fifth Street church, Meridian, Miss.

A NEW CHURCH AT CAMDEN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: By invitation from the pastor, Rev. C. H. Ellis, it was my pleasure to spend the Sabbath of February 27 at Camden, preaching three times to large congregations. This was a great day, as it was the opening service in the new Methodist church, which was recently completed at a cost of $5000. About twelve years ago the church at this place was burned. Seemingly all efforts to rebuild proved a failure and of course, having no church, we have lost greatly at this important point. One year ago, through the untiring efforts of the present pastor, they began to raise funds to erect a church. The preacher and congregation are now happy over having a beautiful church in which to worship their Master. Their enthusiasm is great in making this a great year in their work for the Master. May God greatly bless them in their work!

Discouraged by Losses?

"Once there was a Quaker. A man asked the Quaker for a donation and the Quaker gave the man a check for $100.00. At that moment the Quaker received a telegram. The telegram announced that a ship worth $1,000,000, which the Quaker owned, had been lost at sea. Then the Quaker asked for the return of the check. The man gave it back to him and the Quaker said, 'I will give you another,' whereupon he told his bookkeeper to give the man $1,000.00. He said, 'I am reminded by the loss of my ship that everything I hold, I hold in trust.'"

Christian Stewardship does not end when great financial prosperity ends. In fact, for many of us, a real sense of stewardship does not begin until "easy money" ceases.

Be not discouraged when losses come. God is true and he expects us to be true; honest and faithful stewards through thick and thin.

METHODIST SCHOOLS IN LOUISIANA AND MISSISSIPPI.

In view of the meaning of the Christian Education Movement, it is well for the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi to have clearly in mind the number and needs of their own institutions in these two States, in order that they may realize not only how urgent is the call made at this time for the proper equipment of these institutions, but also that they may appreciate the wonderful opportunity they have of making a noteworthy contribution to the educational and religious welfare of this and succeeding generations. These institutions, classified as to Conference ownership and grade, are as follows:

Louisiana Conference—(1) Centenary College of Louisiana, Shreveport, La. This is the only Methodist college for men in the State; and the only other Protestant school of its class is 150 miles away. Its possibilities for usefulness are measured only by its ability to meet the demands made upon it. It has at present an endowment of $45,000, a campus of 40 acres, valued at $150,000, buildings valued at $167,000, and an equipment valued at $1000. Its urgent needs are funds for the payment of a debt of $110,000, an Administration Building, to cost $200,000; a dormitory, to cost $125,000; equipment and furniture, to cost $25,000, and additional endowment of at least $210,000.

(2) Mansfield Female College, a Junior college for girls, Mansfield, La. This is the only Methodist school for girls in the State. It has at present a campus of eight acres, valued at $15,000, buildings valued at $151,000, and equipment valued at $2500. It has no endowment. Its present urgent needs are funds for the payment of a debt of $25,000, an addition to the campus, to cost $5000; a Dormitory Annex, to cost $75,000; additional equipment, to cost $5000, and an endowment of at least $100,000.

Mississippi Conference—(1) Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss. (joint ownership with the North Mississippi Conference). This great school has an endowment of $445,333, a campus of 100 acres, valued at $102,000, buildings valued at $232,500, and equipment valued at $27,225. Its present urgent needs are an additional dormitory, to cost $125,000; a Y. M. C. A. Hall and Gymnasium, to cost $50,000; an additional building for the Preparatory School, to cost $105,000; funds for repairing and enlarging other buildings to the amount of $50,000, and additional endowment of at least $475,000.

(2) Whitworth College, for girls, Brookhaven, Miss. This well-known school has a campus of eight acres, valued at $35,000, buildings valued at $150,000, and equipment valued at $5000. Its present urgent needs are an additional dormitory, to cost $125,000, additional equipment and furniture, to cost $25,000, and endowment of at least $200,000.

least $90,000, with which to strengthen the splendid work it is doing.

(1) Mississippi Conference Training School, an academy, Montrose, Miss. With present assets of $21,050, this institution urgently needs additional buildings and equipment, to cost $105,000.

(5) Seashore Camp Ground School, an academy, Biloxi, Miss. (joint ownership with the Louisiana and the Alabama Conferences). With present assets of $135,750, this institution urgently needs at least $100,000, for the payment of a debt of $25,000, and for additional buildings and equipment.

North Mississippi Conference—(1) Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss. (See above.)

(2) Grenada College, for girls, Grenada, Miss. This historic institution has a campus of eight and one-half acres, valued at $30,000, buildings valued at $210,000, and equipment valued at $25,700. Its urgent needs are $100,000 for the payment of a debt, $50,000 for additional buildings, and at least $200,000 for endowment.

The above is merely an enumeration of our institutions in these two States; it does not, in any sense, bring before us the educational situation as it actually exists. It may help us to realize our duty in the Christian Education Movement to say that not a single one of these institutions, in spite of the wonderful record all of them have made, is adequately supplied with buildings, endowment, or equipment. Our own children and our children's children are largely dependent upon these schools for preparation for their life work; let us see to it, even if we have to make what seem to be great sacrifices, that our children have at least a fair start in life by making it possible for all of them to have the full benefit of a Christian education.

We may well ponder these words of one of our leaders in this great cause: "The hope of Methodism, and the hope of the country which Methodism serves, is in the Christian Education Movement. It will equip our colleges, enlist the Christian volunteers we need, and provide the means of educating them. Herein lies the opportunity of greatest service for all the people. Here is presented the cause which is fundamental, basic, and necessary to all other causes. It offers to each individual man and woman an opportunity of making an immortal investment." The Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi thus have set before them a wonderful opportunity of serving themselves as well as the church at large.

(3) Port Gibson Female College, a Junior college for girls, Port Gibson, Miss. This school has a campus of three acres, valued at $5000, buildings valued at $55,000, and equipment valued at $1000. Its urgent needs are a dormitory, with kitchen and laundry, to cost $115,000, additional equipment, to cost $5000, and an endowment of at ESTABLISHING CHAIRS OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IN THE COLLEGES.

By Rev. John W. Shackford, D. D., Superintendent of Teacher-training, M. E. Church, South.

The second objective of the Christian Education Movement is as follows:

"To promote the cause of Religious Education by bringing about a closer and more effective co-operation between our institutions of learning and the Sunday school, and by establishing strong departments of Religious Education in our colleges and universities."

The interpretation of its religious ideals to its young is of all the work of the church the most vitally essential to the continuance of its existence and the furtherance of its aims in the earth. Before all others the church is responsible for the religious education of the people, and the church alone in this country is free to make the necessary provisions in its institutions of learning for the training of a leadership which shall be equipped to grapple successfully with the task of providing religious education for all the people.

Steps Already Taken.

It is a most encouraging fact, and one that is full of promise for the future, that the educational leaders of our own church see the true situation and feel that the church college must serve the church in the training of religious teachers and leaders for the work of the church. For where, if not to her own institutions of learning, is the church to look for a leadership positively and intelligently Christian and trained to supervise the development of religious instruction and training for the whole body of the people?

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, through its General Conference in 1918, authorized the Board of Education and the Sunday School Board each to appoint representatives on a joint committee for the standardization and promotion of courses of religious education in the colleges and universities of the church. This commission formulated the outlines of a credit course in religious education equivalent to a regular college major. The general outline prepared by the commission has now been approved by the Board of Education and the Sunday School Board, respectively, and likewise has received the unanimous approval of the Education Association of the church, in which all our educational institutions are represented.

Under this plan several full-time professors in religious education have recently been appointed in the colleges, and the Christian Education Movement has announced as one of the direct objectives of the Movement the establishment of chairs or departments of religious education in our colleges and universities.

The Church College and the Christianization of the World.

It is a sound position that the reason to be of the church college must be regarded as at one with the true aim of the church of Christ. The church college must be held as one of the most necessary and effective agencies for realizing this aim. And just in proportion as it is clearly understood that the gospel is to be brought into life by teaching, and that the task of the church is in reality a vast educational undertaking to provide for the religious education of all the people in accordance with Christian ideals of life, will it appear that the Christian college is called upon to become the training camp of that leadership which is to carry forward the enterprises of the Kingdom and which is to labor for the Christianization of the world.

The church which began with founding educational institutions to train her ministry will strangely miss the lines of her present-day opportunity if, in this time when laymen are more and more becoming teachers and leaders in religion, she shall fail with all seriousness to do for the lay leader and lay teacher a like service to that which she has all along insisted upon for the ministry.

The New Day of Large Responsibility.

The startling recent indications of the extent to which the responsibility for the Christianization of the world rests upon America, the nationwide awakening to the basic need of a more adequate provision for religious education in America to preserve our own civilization and even the church itself in America, the coming of the laity into greater prominence, especially in the teaching of our Christian religion to the young—these and other facts of the present situation present an opportunity of almost limitless service to the Christian college to train the leadership for a new day and a new world.

The Nation is spending now for education $1,000,000,000 a year—this total representing expenditures for all classes of educational institutions. And it is no large total when we place it alongside the expenditures of our Government.

But when we place alongside this total the expenditures for education by all of the Churches of America—$25,000,000—we must realize that there is need of an awakening on the part of the Church people of our country. And the per capita contribution of Southern Methodism is far below the low average of all the Churches of the country. Is it not time for an advance by Southern Methodism?

The Reason for Chairs of Religious Education.

It is very important that in the establishment of these new chairs the mind of the church and of our church colleges shall be focussed upon the word religious. No greater mistake could be made than to turn this Movement in behalf of religious education into a mere reinforcement of an earlier movement, namely, that of establishing departments of Education in the church colleges, more or less paralleling the courses in Education offered in State institutions and for the same purpose. While it is true that Education, ideally speaking, gives religion its proper place, and that religion is not something separate from life, no more fatal mistake can be made by the Christian church at this time than to assume that the regular courses in Education of to-day give religion the place of emphasis and of essential importance which the church must insist that it have if religion is to be a controlling force in human society.

The divorce of the State from responsibility for religious education, and of the church from a sense of educational responsibility for the people at large, has inevitably had its effect both upon education under State control, and upon religious promotion at the hands of the church. In the State, this has resulted in an educational theory and practice which not merely omits the religious emphasis, but which naturally tends to complete itself as a system apart from religion. I venture the opinion that what was an arbitrary, even though necessary, restriction upon State education, has resulted in a warping of the theory and practice of education as regards the emphasis upon religious values and the recognition of religion in its proper place as a moral and social dynamic, the organizing, motivating force in education.

On the other hand, in the church, the result has been an increasing reliance upon non-educational processes in her efforts to promote the Christian religion. These have developed a theory of the process by which Christian character is attained that is as inadequate as a total theory of life development, and as lacking in an understanding of the educational processes as are some current theories of education deficient in a proper appreciation of the place of religion in education. The result is often in our colleges as Professor Coe has so pointedly said: "As to denominational academies and colleges it is not unfair to say that, though they are interested in both education and religion, they have rarely conceived of education in religion as the central function and the reason for their existence. There has been lack of a definite conception of religious education as a specialized undertaking based upon laws of growth and therefore requiring both continuity and technical care. Administrators who sincerely desire to promote Christian character have believed in technical proficiency and continuity anywhere but here; and they have rarely been ready to pay the costs of it. Instead, they have added inexpensive non-educational religion to expensive non-religious education."

If the church in her institutions of learning had provided courses in education developed directly in accordance with our own Christian view of life, the case for religious education to-day would be very much better than it is. That is, if the church had been creative and original rather than imitative of the State in the development of her departments and chairs of education in her own colleges and universities, then these institutions of the church would in a large measure have preserved the balance of religious emphasis in courses in education, and very probably, as an indirect result, religion would occupy a much more central and controlling place in courses in general education.

I believe, however, that the statement is warranted that the educational courses introduced into church institutions in recent years have, in the main, been created to meet the State demands, and have been set up in accordance with the State standards, and that no very serious attempt has been made to analyze the limitations of such courses on the religious side and to counterbalance these limitations with an emphasis that accords with the aims of the church.

Now, it has sometimes been mistakenly assumed that these courses only need to be taught by Christian men in order to supply all that is lacking. I presume the idea is that the Christian philosophy of life and the Christian theory of religious education will be "caught" and hence need not be taught; or is it that it does not matter what they are taught, provided the atmosphere is satisfactory?—though how it is to be hoped that there will develop the proper appreciation of the essential relation of religion and education, unless this is made a part of the body of instruction, it is hard to say. Here we have one of the results of the long prevalent acceptance on the part of the church of what Dr. Coe has called a "non-educational religion," and of our easy satisfaction with the "atmosphere" argument.

The atmosphere and the Christian teacher, essentials which can not be insisted upon too much, will not alone give a fundamental interpretation to the value and function of religion in life and in the educational process. Students being trained for religious leadership must be given a true understanding of the place of religion and in the development of the individual and the social life. If needed, we might assume that the instructor in the department of education will reorganize the entire course in the light of the Christian view of life and with a full appreciation of religious values; then we should be providing courses in education that are not lacking in the proper religious perspective. But when the text-books on education used are conspicuous for the small amount of religious appreciation evinced, when the courses in education in the church colleges have been primarily modeled according to the State standards, and even when the instructors themselves in their chairs have often had their training in education under conditions where no particular emphasis is placed upon religious values, I think it will be found very exceptional—indeed, is not to be expected, without any reflection upon the instructors themselves—that the courses in education give that place to religion in education, and that attention to education for religious ends that would be the case if the courses had been inspired primarily by the desire to make education serve the supreme end and aim of the church—the Christianization of the world.

For the sake, then, of an education that is religious, and for the sake of a religion that is educational, the church college, the exponent both of education and of religion, has at the present time a most important service to perform—a service to education and to religion alike. The church college will fail in its duty to education and to society if it does not take the lead in putting religion in its proper place in educational thought and practice. And it will fail in its duty to the cause of religion and the church if it does not lend its support to demonstrating the fact that the way of triumph for the Christian religion is through the educational process.

The purpose of the Christian Education Movement in seeking to establish chairs of Religious Education is to put religion into the central dynamic place which the Christian people believe it must have in any adequate or complete system of education. We cannot, therefore, afford to soft-pedal the word "religious" or treat religion as an incidental element in education. If, indeed, the church has set out to Christianize the world, she will place the religious dynamic and the religion of Jesus Christ at the heart of her teaching system.

THE RELATION OF COLLEGE AND ALUMNI.

By Professor M. C. White, Millsaps College.

The relation of a college or university to one of its alumni, has, since time immemorial, been represented by the figure of mother and son. This figure of speech is of more than ordinary meaning, and gives voice to a deep-lying truth, the significance of which is generally, though not always, understood and appreciated. And as a son may forget the allegiance and the gratitude which he owes his blood mother, so it sometimes happens that an alumnus fails to remember his relation and his duty to that mother who has nourished him in spiritual ways. And yet, to her is his obligation, and through her is his opportunity.

The college is a spiritual mother, and the students are her children. The terms expressing this relation probably originated in the dim and far-off days of mediaeval universities; and because of their significance, they have come down through unbroken generations to our modern speech. A student entering college matriculates; that is, by enrolling his name on the college register, he applies for membership in the spiritual household of the "little mother"—"matricula" being the diminutive of the late Latin word "matrix," a mother that has produced or nourished anything. So again he speaks of his college as his "Alma Mater," literally "nourishing mother," a term used by the Romans as an appellation for Cybele, Ceres, and so forth. It is, also, not without significance that the word "alma" in the Italian, carried the meaning of spirit or soul, and is thus used in English by Spenser. So the student's "Alma Mater" may well be regarded as his "soul mother" or "spirit mother." Again, the idea of a college graduate as a foster son of his institution is expressed by the term "alumnus" applied to him. "Alumnus" is derived from the Latin word "alere" meaning "to nourish." So an alumnus is one who has been fostered, nourished, mothered, by his institution.

The figure of speech is expressive of a real and vital relationship. As from our mothers we have imbibed the food which supports physical life and growth, so from our Alma Maters we have received that nourishment which enters into the making of the mind and spirit and the growth of the soul. It is a recognized fact, not only that college training and instruction are largely responsible for the content of a man's mind, but also that college influence and environment go far toward the mould-

In fifty representative denominational colleges the student enrollment is 13,357, while one State University reports an enrollment of 5,087. The combined incomes of the fifty church schools fall below the figures of the one great University. And yet there are those who are asking why increase the endowments of the church schools.

To bring this closer home to our own people, we would call the attention of Southern Methodists to this fact: The combined incomes of all of the schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for 1919-20 total $2,932,600, or $142,809 less than the income of one secular institution. Can Southern Methodism face this fact and ask whether the program of the Christian Education Movement ought to be carried through at this time? IT MUST BE DONE.

ing of his character. So the offspring fostered by different institutions are as diverse as the children of different mothers. In one, knowledge, good or bad, is stressed as the essential thing, and the resultant is likely to be intellect, recognizing no difference between good and bad; an unmoral force, potential of great evil. In another, institution, the instruction and the environment are productive of personalities, not merely unmoral, but immoral. Still another institution, not failing to impart those facts and that training by which the mind grows, yet lays for knowledge a sure and firm foundation on the basis of moral and religious truth.

That the deep significance of this relationship between a college and its alumni is generally appreciated may be seen in the history of our noblest and best institutions. From the founding of Oxford and Cambridge to the present day, certain ancient and honorable families of England have given both their patronage and their unswerving loyalty to one or the other of these great institutions. They feel that their Alma Mater's honor and prosperity are closely linked with their own. No misfortune comes to one without sorrow to the other; no honor to one, but glory, though reflected, shines upon the other. So it is with the great American universities. In 1914, a Harvard and a Matther attended Harvard University. Loyalty is traditional; generation succeeds generation at the breast of that spiritual mother, whose youth is renewed like the eagle's. At every festival day of the great schools there is a homecoming of the children. And, when these children prosper, their first desire is to honor themselves by honoring their Alma Mater. And as they come to die, both what they have acquired and what they have accomplished, they bequeath to their children of the blood and their mother of the spirit. They take a double bond of Time and purchase immortality.

WHY SHOULD THE DENOMINATIONAL COLLEGE LIVE.

1. It is the standard of American education, and has maintained it.
2. It is the mother of college presidents and America's most prominent educators.
3. It is the college which has furnished the church with its ministry, been tested in two wars and not found wanting.
4. Its form of government is truly American, and free from politics.
5. It is thoroughly Christian, yet free from bigotry.
6. Its scientific departments are manned by scholarly Christian men.
7. It is free from that irreligious sectarianism which denies a place to the Bible in the curriculum of study.
8. It believes in a philosophy which holds to a personal God, a divine Christ, an immortal soul, and an imperative duty.
9. It is free from agnosticism and pantheism, the greatest foes of Christian truth.
10. Fundamental in its curriculum is love for truth. It does not prejudice the student against the truth of revelation by refusing it a place in the curriculum.
11. It believes that the formative element in history is Christianity, and that any curriculum is defective which fails to teach it.
12. It believes that the words of Jesus and Paul should be studied, as well as those of Socrates and Plato.
13. It believes that teachers of youth should know the truth.
14. It is an institution born of sound doctrine, and fostered by those who have a vital faith.
15. Its educational work has been done for less money than that of any other agency. It is the greatest tax-saving institution in the State.
16. It gives the greatest return to the country of any philanthropic investment known to Christian people.
17. It is the safest investment of Christian money known to the church.
18. Its trustees are consecrated Christian men.
19. Its students, coming from the best Christian homes, help to create a clean, strong, collegiate life.
20. Its students are taught to live economically, to think rightly, and to act nobly.
21. Its product is the well trained, accomplished Christian citizen.—Herald and Presbyterian.

NEWS ITEMS.

Bishop U. V. W. Darlington was in the Nashville office recently, reporting excellent progress in the Christian Education Movement in his territory, North and South Carolina. Bishop Darlington is doing great work for the Christian Education Movement. He is scheduled until June 5 almost without an open date in the interest of the Movement.

Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Director General of the Christian Education Movement, has recently returned from a two weeks' trip during which he spoke at the Financial Set-up Meetings of the Alabama, North Alabama, Mississippi, North Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences. Dr. Reynolds reports that all were most successful meetings. They were well attended and the situation is quite hopeful.

The Spaniard Searched For Gold- The Pilgrim For God.

"Why is South America, with its wonderful resources and climate, so backward as compared with the United States?" asked the President of the Argentine Republic.

When Mr. Babson hesitated the President answered his own question: "Because the Spaniards came in quest of Gold, while the Pilgrim Fathers came in quest of God."

Because the Spaniards were traders, gold hunters, grasping wealth grabbers, they left behind them a mongrel people and a group of unstable, revolutionary, turbulent, superstition-ridden little states which depend upon America for protection.

Because the Pilgrims came for conscience and not for conquest---for God and not for Gold---they shaped the greatest Republic on earth and made it the moral leader of the world.

Christianity is True Americanism

The first day after landing the Pilgrims kept the Christian Sabbath. The Mayflower Compact declared the settlement of America was "for the glory of God and the advancement of the Christian faith." The charters of all the thirteen original states affirmed the religious purposes of the founders.

Christian Education was wrought into the fabric of American institutions. All the early colleges were Christian, and each early educational pronouncement affirmed its Christian character.

Shall Gold Now Dethrone God?

The Christian note has departed from our secularized educational institutions. Around the world we are called a commercialized people.

Shall Gold dethrone God in America? Have we decided that, after all, the Spaniards were right and the Pilgrims were wrong? Are we ready to reject the policy which made us great---to adopt the policy which made our neighbors puny?

The Christian Education Movement decrees otherwise. We must transmute our Gold into Character through the medium of the Christian college. We must continue in American life the quest for God.

WHY THE FINANCIAL APPEAL AT THIS TIME?

By Rev. J. S. Chadwick.

When the General Conference spoke in 1918, it was a real venture of faith. The nation was at war, and in such a world struggle as appeared then would end only in world bankruptcy. In May, 1918, we did not see victory except by faith. We believed that America would come out of the struggle with such a burden of debt as would delay for years the return of prosperity to the nation. And even with that financial burden upon us for a generation and more, we saw America giving herself in service to a world's needs. In a day such as this, can the church surrender ideals that moved us in 1918 to pledge the faith of the nation and of Methodism to sacrificial service?

We must compare ourselves with ourselves in 1918 and not with ourselves in 1920. Our financial situation is not a favorable one, but, with two years of unparalleled prosperity, are we not in better condition than three years ago?

Our schools have stood aside during the years of prosperity. How they have lived and have served so well the thousands who have come to them only the men and women who have carried the heavy burdens for a rich church will ever know. Can we afford to send them into another scholastic year with no definite pledge of the church's help?

An extension of the time for the financial appeal means an additional expense such as our schools can ill afford to bear.

This is no day for the church to join forces with those who cry calamity; no time for the church to be a prophet of evil. Prosperity and stable business conditions will come through the people who, in the day of adversity, see the better day ahead, the people who hearten humanity by deeds as well as words. The church must not fail the nation in its time of need.

The considerations named, and others, were factors in determining a policy for the church. But one that in the thought of our leaders has had first place is—the future life and service of our Methodism is in the issues of the Christian Education Movement. It is a matter so vital that there can be but one thought and purpose in the mind and soul of Southern Methodism—it must be carried through. For an issue such as this, our help is in God. He was with us when we declared our purpose to attempt and to carry through this enterprise; He will not fail us now. Whether or not we have willed that it be thus, we have come to a day when we must prove our loyalty to the ideals of the Master. We can better prove it in a time such as this.

The financial objectives of the Christian Education Movement have been in the minds of our people for many months. We now know the time appointed for the response by Southern Methodists to this call. Until now we have considered the financial objectives in the light of business conditions throughout the nation. It is our duty from now to face that question in the light of our obligations to the Kingdom and to one who rules in that Kingdom. And it is our privilege to be of that company of Methodists who shall have a share in the carrying through of the greatest enterprise our church has undertaken.

AS THE EDITOR OF A DAILY PAPER SEES IT.

If the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, fails to use to the limit of its ability the opportunity that the Christian Education Movement brings, it will have failed of its obligation to the public as well as to its own schools. The South has not given of its wealth to educational work as have other sections of the country. Southern people must face that fact, and the churches of the South have no small share of the responsibility involved. This movement of our Methodism will help much in bringing the South to see the value of investments in education. Then, while we help our own schools we will render a public service worth while.

The editor of the Greensboro (N. C.) Record, in a strong editorial deliverance, calls attention to some other things Southern Methodists and Southern people generally need to hear. The editor of this paper, referring to the financial goal of the Christian Education Movement, says further:

"That looks like a very large amount of money, but it isn't, considering the fact that it is to be distributed among many educational institutions. It isn't, considering what the public, including the members of churches, spend for other things, less important things. It isn't, considering the fact that every dollar of it, invested as it will be in making men and women of character, who will make the church what it will be and who will have a very large part in making the South and the whole United States what it will be, will be well spent. It isn't, considering the fact that this money will be paying dividends from the time it is invested until the end of time. It isn't, considering the fact that the $33,000,000 will mean a vastly greater sum, in dollars and cents, a few years from now, to say nothing of the moral and cultural benefits. It isn't, considering the wealth and the earning power of the members of the great churches.

"It is time for the South to invest some real money in her schools, State and denominational. Bishop James Atkins has given some figures that show how niggardly we have been with our children. Out of $87,250,000 given to educational institutions throughout the country last year, only $250,000 was given to schools or colleges below the Mason and Dixon line. Of course, the other part of the United States is much richer, much more populous, and contains many more educational institutions, but it is not 349 times as rich, or populous, or anything as the South is. The South is wealthy now. Its resources have reached the point in development where it can quit crying poverty. It is true that it has passed through a wave of depression, like all the rest of the country, but it has not been more severe in the South than elsewhere. The farmers of the West have suffered like those of the South. The industries of the North have suffered worse than those of the South.

"The disposition to remove the handicaps under which the colleges now labor, lack of equipment, lack of room, lack of sufficient instructors, a poverty the shame of which is being recognized, is heartening. Lust for money and for personal pleasure does not control man. As long as men and women recognize the rights of youth to the extent that they will go down into their pockets, there is no need to worry much about ills which look to be organic, but which are really superficial."

Where there are two group meetings, go to the one that is most convenient to you. Those expected to attend are as follows: the preacher-in-charge, the church director, the minute man, the district officer of each church board, the district lay leader, and alumni director. The presiding elder and the district financial director will have charge of the meeting. The Conference Financial Director and Conference Educational Secretary will be present.

The pastor of each charge should select the most effective man or woman for charge director after consultation with the district financial director and the presiding elder. This is an important undertaking, and no doubt quite a number of willing workers will be found who are ready to advance God's Kingdom.

THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT SETTING-UP MEETING.

The Financial Setting-up Meeting for the Baton Rouge District will be held at Hammond, La., April 6, in the Methodist Church at 10 o'clock a.m. This meeting shall be composed of all the pastors in the district, the charge director of each charge, the chairman of minute-men of each church, the district officer of each church board, the district alumni directors, the district lay leader, the Conference Financial Director and the Conference Educational Secretary.

A full attendance of all members is insisted upon as this meeting will put the matter squarely before us and upon our hearts, so that we will go from this meeting filled with enthusiasm and determined by the grace of God to put it over.

Let no pastor permit anything else to come between him and the meeting: make no dates for meetings to conflict with this, and cancel any that do conflict. There is nothing so important before the church at this time as the Educational Movement.

Let the pastors also get in touch with the minute-men chairmen and the church financial directors and prevail on each to attend.

The expenses of all delegates to this meeting will be defrayed by the Christian Education Movement.

J. W. LEE, P. E.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Dear Brethren: Look! Listen! Take notice! The "setting-up meetings" of this district for the Educational Campaign will be as follows: At Gulfport, Tuesday, April 5, at 9:30 a.m. Those on the L. & N. R. R. and most accessible to Gulfport, come. Then at Lumberton, 9:30 a.m., Wednesday, April 6, for those nearer Lumberton than Gulfport.

All the pastors, the district campaign directors, with all the charge directors, are urged to attend. All these will be appointed and notified personally. Brethren, let us remember two facts: first, this move will be a success; second, only the pastor and local church that fail to put forth proper efforts to make it a success will be the sufferers in the end. If you need literature, let me know and you shall have it. Pray much for the work. Keep the objectives in mind. Yours cordially,

W. M. SULLIVAN, P. E.

In the Name of God, Amen

"Having undertaken for the glory of God, and the advancement of the Christian Faith, a voyage to plant the first Colony in the northern part of Virginia—"

Thus reads the Mayflower Compact, signed by the Pilgrims on landing in America three hundred years ago. Our country was founded "for the glory of God and advancement of the Christian faith." When our first Congress met it declared: "Religion, morality, and knowledge being necessary to good government, schools and the means of education shall be forever encouraged." Our forefathers founded the first college in America because they "dreaded to leave an illiterate ministry to the churches when our present ministers shall lie in dust."

All elementary schools were distinctively Christian. The school house was built by the meeting house. The minister was inspector of schools and chairman of the school committee. The text books in all the colonies were the New Testament, the Psalms, the Proverbs, the Sermon on the Mount, and the New England Primer, which was largely a catechism.

And Now What?

Religion, God, and the Christian Faith have been excluded by law or custom from every state school in America—and in some quarters the science of war has been put in. The schools may—and do—teach Hindu philosophy and pagan mythology, but the law forbids the Bible. Children memorize "The Boy Stood on the Burning Deck." But they dare not recite the Shepherd Psalm.

Under the materialistic influence of the past fifty years we have drifted far from Americanism. We have inclined to the path which led Prussia to ruin.

The Pilgrims Were Right

America should stand "for the glory of God and the advancement of the Christian Faith." There is no other course of safety in this turbulent century.

This is the program of the Christian Education Movement with its policy of making education thoroughly Christian and maintaining the finest system of Christian colleges in America under the control of the M. E. Church, South. The college inculcates the ideas that should rule in human affairs. The Christian Education Movement harks back to true Americanism—the Christian Religion, Christian Education, constitutional government, and civil liberty.

The Home Circle

A BUSY DAY.

The bluff March wind set out from home,
Before the peep of day;
But nobody seemed to be glad he had come,
And nobody asked him to stay.

Yet he dried up the snow banks far and near
And made the snow clouds roll,
Huddled up in a heap, like driven sheep,
'Way off to the cold North Pole.

He broke the ice on the river's back
And floated it down the tide;
And the wild ducks came with a loud "Quack, quack,"
To play in the waters wide.

He snatched the hat off Johnny's head
And rolled it on and on.
And, oh, what a merry chase it led Little laughing and scampering John!

He swung the tree where the squirrel lay
Too late in its winter bed;
And he seemed to say, in his jolly way,
"Wake up, little sleepyhead."

He dried the yard so that Rob and Ted
Could play at marbles there,
And he painted their cheeks a carmine red
With the greatest skill and care.

He shook all the clothes lines one by one.
What a busy time he had!
But nobody thanked him for all he had done;
Now, wasn't that just too bad?

THE CARDINAL GETS A RED COAT.

The blithest bird in the forest was Crested Cardinal. No matter what the weather, he was always tilted on the tip of a branch, singing, "Cheer! Cheer! Cheer!" There were no dark days in his calendar, and his gaiety kept the other birds in good humor. They could not very well mope and be gloomy, you know, within hearing of such a song. Why, it made them feel cheery in spite of themselves!

As you may already have guessed from his name. Crested Cardinal wore the feathers on his head pompadour. Still, he was not a bit conceited; and for all that his song was so bright, he dressed quietly in a suit that was brown to match the trunks and green to match the leaves, without any red.

Now, Crested Cardinal was always doing things for other people. It kept him remarkably busy, as you may suppose. The summer was not long enough to hold all the gay little surprises for his friends that he tucked into it like presents in a birthday cake; and when autumn came, it found him busier than ever.

One morning very early Crested Cardinal was awakened by a faint tinkling in his ears. It was not exactly like raindrops, and it was not exactly like bells. He peeped this way and that, and at last he saw a merry little man in a green suit fringed with icicles. The little man was standing tiptoe on a branch, painting the leaves with red and gold paint from his palette. As he moved, the icicles jingled with the tinkling sound that Crested Cardinal had heard—a sound not exactly like raindrops, and not exactly like bells. Crested Cardinal had never seen him before, but he knew at once that it was Jack Frost.

"Hello, Crested Cardinal!" cried Jack Frost, with a glance over his shoulder. "You're the very one I want to see. Not busy, I hope? No plans on wing?"

"Not unless you make them," Crested Cardinal replied cheerily.

"Good!" said Jack Frost, skipping as he talked from one branch to the next. "What with that cold snap last night and all the trees in need of new dresses at once, I'm a bit rushed, I confess."

"Only tell me what I can do," said Crested Cardinal; and his tone was so gay that you would never have guessed that he was longing for his breakfast.

"My gold paint is gone," said Jack Frost. "It takes so much for these birches and hickories! You'll find the pail by that stump."

Crested Cardinal brought the paint and spread a fresh supply on Jack Frost's palette. It was wonderful to see the green leaves turning to gold.

"How skillful you are!" he exclaimed.

"I've had practice enough!" Jack Frost cried merrily. "Now for the oaks! Will you bring me some more russet?"

Back and forth went Crested Cardinal, carrying paints for Jack Frost. It kept him hurrying. But fast as he flew, the artist's brush flew faster still. You have to hurry, you know, to paint a whole forest by sunrise.

"Don't you stop at all?" Crested Cardinal asked breathlessly.

"Not until I've finished," Jack Frost answered. "Don't tell me you're tired."

"I won't," said Crested Cardinal, "if you'll let me say that I'm hungry."

"We sha'n't be long now," said Jack Frost, painting away for dear life. "Some red, please, for these maples. I have to be through before the sun gets up. It annoys him to find me about."

"Annoys him?" cried Crested Cardinal. "I should think he'd be glad to see everything so beautiful."

"He's jealous, perhaps," said Jack Frost, with a wink. "I borrow my tints from his sunset."

"I like the red best," said Crested Cardinal. "It's my favorite color."

"Mine, too," Jack Frost agreed. "A little more, please. Quick! There comes that sun now!"

Crested Cardinal stooped for the pail. Perhaps he hurried too much, or perhaps the first rays of the sun blinded him. However it happened, the pail overturned, and from crest to tail he was covered with bright red paint.

"I've spilled it all!" he exclaimed in dismay.

"Well, never mind that!" cried Jack Frost. "Fly up where I can reach you."

So Crested Cardinal perched close to the brush, while Jack Frost used him for a palette. The maples never knew the difference. When the last one was clothed in its rosy gown, the workers slipped out of sight below a hill, and the sun stared in surprise at a world all gay with crimson and gold.

"So that's finished!" and Jack Frost drew a deep breath. "Now let's have a look at you. Clouds and sunsets, but you're glorious!"

"It won't come off," and Crested Cardinal rubbed anxiously at his glowing feathers.

"Of course not," Jack Frost assured him. "When I do a thing, I do it thoroughly. And because of the help you've been to me, you shall wear my colors always."

With his nimble brush he added a touch here and there.

"If you want to see the handsomest bird in the forest," he said with satisfaction, "look in that pool."

Crested Cardinal bent over the crystal water. From its depth a rosy, crested bird, with touches of black on its face and throat, stared up at him.

"Oh, you wonderful stranger! Where did you come from?" Crested Cardinal cried in delight. You see, he did not realize that he was looking at himself.

"Out of my paint pot," laughed Jack Frost.

And that is why the cardinal, the blithest bird in the forest, wears a red coat.—Abigail Burton, in The Youth's Companion.

EASTER DAWNING.

By Willie C. Page.

Last night, in my dreams, methought I entered an old-world cathedral which was dimly lighted by two small candles. These stood on the altar, above which hung the picture of Christ.

As I knelt to pray, it seemed as if He looked down in tender compassion, as in the days of old when He was the honored guest in the little home at Bethany, when He talked with the sisters before he bade their brother arise from the dead and restored him to their gentle ministry, or when He blessed the little children who gathered about Him, loving and unafraid.

As I arose from my knees, the picture seemed to change—it was total darkness over all the earth. Christ was nailed to the cross and drops of blood dripped from His side, also His hands and feet, from wounds made by His cruel persecutors.

He lifted His eyes in mute appeal to heaven; the sweat of agony was on His brow as he hung there dying to save mankind. My heart almost ceased to beat, my breath came in gasps. The candles flickered and went out and all was dark.

When I opened my eyes, the candles were burning brightly; the picture had changed again. Over the Judean hills came the first flush of dawn—then the sunbeams fell softly through the budding branches of the olive trees into an open and empty sepulcher. Standing among the white lilies of this old Oriental garden, stood the risen Christ, speaking words of comfort and cheer to the surrounding women who had followed to the tomb. The vast choir in the loft of the cathedral began to chant: "Halleluia! the Christ is risen! Halleluia. He is risen from the dead; Alleluia! Alleluia!"

Bishop W. N. Almsworth is leading the forces of his district in a splendid manner. His work for the Christian Education Movement is proving markedly effective. With Bishop Almsworth as leader in his great district in Texas there is no fear for the Movement there.

Bishop Warren A. Candler made an address of unusual strength at the Educational Set-up meeting of the Florida Conference at Jacksonville, Florida. Bishop Candler's work in the interest of the Christian Education Movement is of special worth.

THE EASTER MESSAGE.

The Easter message is essentially a message that confirms faith and hope. "He is risen," is a proclamation that banishes fear and dispels doubt. When the disciples fully realized what it meant, their grief was turned into joy, and their hopelessness into enthusiastic activity. They saw the light of the shining sun after a dark and stormy night.

The world to-day is passing through a period of gloom, and it needs a heartening message of cheer; there is no other message that can mean so much to it as the message that God reigns and Christ lives. Let us preach that message from our pulpits, let us shout it in our songs, let us proclaim it by our works, and, above all, let us live it in our lives.

SOME OMISSIONS THIS WEEK.

Due to the fact that this week's issue of the Advocate is devoted largely to the interests of the Christian Education Movement—the most important enterprise of the church before us at this time—we have found it necessary to omit a good deal of material that otherwise would have found a place in our columns in this number. We are sure our contributors will understand the situation and will not hold us too strictly to account for the delayed appearance of their interesting and appreciated articles. The editor's contributions have been held back along with the rest.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT MASS MEETING IN NEW ORLEANS.

A mass meeting was held at the First Methodist Church, this city, last Sunday afternoon, in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. Bishop W. F. McMurtry, Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Director General of the Movement, Mr. R. T. Moore, State Financial Director, and Rev. A. S. Lutz, Conference Secretary of Education, were present and addressed the meeting. All the pastors of the city were in attendance, with a fairly good representation of the laity.

The remarks of Mr. Moore, who presided over the meeting, and who is one of the "big" business men of the State, were of such kind as to arouse the business community to a realization of the importance and urgency of the Movement. Dr. Reynolds' address was a profound exposition of the significance of the Movement as a means of averting the dangers that threaten civilization from so many quarters; Bishop McMurtry's words were a ringing call to the Methodists of New Orleans, Louisiana, and the church at large to show themselves equal to the emergency which has arisen, and to throw themselves heartily into the Movement and carry it through to a successful culmination.

It is evident that the Movement is gaining momentum every day. If the church can be fully aroused to the crying need for strengthening our educational institutions, we have faith to believe that the financial objective of the Movement will be attained, and the church will enter upon a new era in fulfilling its mission in the world. If we do not at this time deliver our full strength in this great cause, our work will be seriously hampered for many years to come. Blessed are the people who see and seize their opportunity at the time of its appearing!

THE PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE.

It seems to be necessary to call attention repeatedly to the fact that the subscription price of the Advocate is $2 a year, that price having been effective since May, 1920. The only exception is in the case of superannuate preachers and the widows of superannuates, when the price is $1 a year. When only $1.50 is sent, the subscription is credited for nine months.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"Everything goes well on the Brooklyn and Bond charge—good congregations at every point," writes Rev. E. M. Allen, of Brooklyn, Miss.

Our First Church, Baton Rouge, La., has recently purchased a fine new parsonage, into which the pastor, Rev. N. E. Joyner, with his family, has just moved.

The lumber has been ordered for a building to house the Men's Bible Class, at Rayne, La. This class is one of the largest and most active in the Louisiana Conference.

The editor of the Advocate had the privilege of preaching to attentive congregations last Sunday, at Second Church in the morning, and at Carrollton Avenue in the evening.

We learn that the work at Courtland, Miss., where Rev. W. D. Bennett is pastor, is moving along splendidly. A teacher-training class of fifteen or twenty members will be at work soon.

We regret to learn that Rev. H. B. Watkins, our pastor at Central Church, Meridian, Miss., is still confined to his bed by serious illness. Prayer should be made throughout our bounds for his recovery.

Mrs. Henry S. Burgin, mother of Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, died at her home in Independence, Mo., on March 8. The sympathy of the whole church will go out to Dr. Burgin in his sorrow.

The annual banquet edition of the "Big Brother," the official organ of the Big Brothers' Class at Greenville, Miss., was a most interesting and attractive number. There was a feast of good things at the banquet, both material and spiritual.

Sunrise prayer meetings are being held at Carrollton Avenue Church, this city, every morning this week, under the auspices of the Epworth League. These meetings are an annual custom at this church, and the attendance is remarkably good.

It is a source of sorrow throughout the church that Dr. Graham H. Lambeth, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, has been compelled by ill health to give up his work temporarily. He is undergoing treatment by a specialist at a hospital in Richmond.

Rev. L. H. Floyd gives a good report of the work at Horn Lake, Miss. Fine Sunday schools are in operation at each of the churches, and there is a good prayer meeting at Horn Lake. The first quarterly conference increased the pastor's salary $100 over last year.

We learn from the South-Reporter, of Holly Springs, Miss., that the recent revival meeting at the Methodist church was a great blessing to the community. The preaching was done by Rev. W. L. Wilson, Conference evangelist. There were forty-five additions to the church.

"I am talking church paper on this round," says Rev. H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, in sending us the announcements for his second round of quarterly conferences. We greatly appreciate his active interest in this good cause.

A delightful occasion was a social gathering of the Adult Bible Class of our Carrollton Avenue Sunday school, on Thursday evening of last week. Under the presidency of Mr. E. H. Singreen, with the co-operation of the faithful corps of officers and committees, this class is growing rapidly.

The Men's Bible Class of our Sunday school at Yazoo City, Miss., is one of the aggressive forces in that community for righteousness. The attendance is unusually fine, running close to a hundred, and its offerings are liberal. Rev. L. E. Alford, the pastor, has had much to do with the making of this fine class.

The editor of the Advocate had the privilege of preaching to our congregation at Bunkie, La., on Sunday, March 13. The special occasion was the inauguration of a program of community service that has in it, we believe, great possibilities. We hope to be able to give some account of this special work in the next issue of the Advocate.

We have received a card announcing the birth of a son, Artemus Ward, to Mr. and Mrs. Homer E. Turner, of Shreveport, La., on March 15. Mr. Turner is a son of Rev. A. W. Turner, a member of the Louisiana Conference, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League. We pray Heaven's richest blessings upon the little one.

The meeting of the Louisiana Wesley Bible Class Federation at Lake Charles, La., last week, was a great gathering. The Lake Charles American-Press gave prominent space to the account of its sessions. The following officers were elected: A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, president; Judge W. G. Banks, Shreveport, vice president; C. O. Beauchamp, Shreveport, secretary-treasurer.

A series of meetings at our McDonoghville church was begun with a sunrise prayer meeting on Monday morning of this week, a similar meeting to be held every morning during the week. Next week, the meeting will be continued with preaching services each evening. Rev. R. H. Harper, the pastor of First Church, assisting his father, Rev. J. D. Harper, our pastor at McDonoghville.

A note from Rev. Ben P. Jaco, under date of March 15, brings the distressing news that Mrs. D. H. Hall, of New Albany, wife of one of the most prominent and active laymen of the North Mississippi Conference, passed away on March 14. The Advocate joins with the many friends of Brother Hall in extending him sympathy in his bereavement, and in assuring him that he will be remembered at a throne of grace in this time of sorrow.

"Last week we printed 27,000 copies of the Advocate, and our mailing clerk informs us that we lacked 19 copies of having enough. Since that time we have received a large number of new subscriptions. We are now on our way to 28,000. Since Jan. 1 we have received 3292 new subscriptions and 6984 renewals; total, 10,276. Again, we thank every friend of the Advocate who has helped in this wonderful achievement."—Alabama Christian Advocate, March 17.

A union revival campaign is under way in Baton Rouge, La., seven churches co-operating. At the evening hour, each church has its own service, but at 10 a.m., in two of the churches, at noon, in a theater, and at 6:30 p.m., on the street, union services are held. Dr. W. E. Thompson, of Little Rock, Ark., is assisting Rev. N. E. Joyner, at First Church, and Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, of Amite, La., is assisting Rev. J. W. Booth, at Keener Memorial.

The forty-fourth annual convention of the Mississippi Sunday school workers will be held at Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., April 5-7. The good people of Jackson will give entertainment on the Harvard plan—bed and breakfast. In addition to a large array of State leaders on the program, Dr. W. A. Brown, Director of Evangelism, and Prof. A. M. Locker, Field Superintendent of the National Association, two outstanding Sunday school leaders of America, will be present.

We regret that the reports from Corinth and from Senatobia reached us too late to be included in the North Mississippi Sunday school contest last week. At Corinth, the Young Men's Bible Class had an attendance of 72, the Galloway Memorial, 41, and the Helen Weaver Memorial, 30. The total attendance of the Sunday school was 421. At Senatobia, the Good Fellowship Class had an attendance of 48, with an offering of $5.40. The total Sunday school attendance was 198, with a total offering of $14.80.

EASTER HYMN.

By Mrs. Lee Lipscomb.

Another glad Easter has come again;
Ring, happy bells, in joyous strain;
Bloom, fair lilies, your fragrance lend,
To all the world this message send:

That Christ has risen, is living now;
The crown of thorns upon his brow
Is changed to one of glowing light,
That drives away death's gloomy night.

Sing, weary hearts, instead of weeping;
Your loved ones in the grave are sleeping,
But they shall rise as Christ has done,
Who victory over death has won.

Let all the world be glad to-day
And smiles and sunshine have full sway;
Let flowers bloom and sweet birds sing
Praises to our risen King.

IS IT GOD'S CALL?

By J. J. Stowe.

The church, speaking through the Christian Education Commission, has sounded a summons to pulpit and pew to make March the month during which the principles of Christian stewardship shall be set forth as never before.

Almost every Methodist preacher is in the ministry because of a definite, clear-out call from Almighty God. Almost without exception, these leaders of the militant hosts called Methodists are eager to hear what the Lord would say unto them, and willing at any cost of material things to follow where He leads. The majority of the men and women who read the church papers are anxious to do the will of God. A large per cent of those who constitute our congregations on Sunday are making an effort to be loyal to Him who is Lord over all.

Being intelligent, we refuse to accept the old Latin adage which says, "The voice of the people is the voice of God." Being Protestant, we do not claim that even the voice of the church is always and necessarily the voice of God. Being loyal Methodists, we are usually ready to respond to any summons the church may send out; but is the church only speaking, or have we reason to believe that God is calling to-day through the church, for renewed study of the principles of Christian stewardship and an added emphasis upon the matter of the relation of money to Christian character? A study of the synoptic gospels will undoubtedly answer this question.

From the records left us, Christ gave more time and attention to the question of money than to any other one subject. He must have considered it of primary importance to give it such prominence and emphasis. Can we preach His gospel and ignore or treat incidentally what He treated with such frequency and forcefulness?

Avarice is the most universal and insidious of sins. Money is not a sin. The possession of money, even in large amounts if come by equitably and held as a trust from God, is not a crime. John Wesley said, "Make all you can, save all you can, give all you can."

It is evidently providential that a new and country-wide interest in the question of Christian stewardship has come at this time. Our day sorely needs to hear repeated and explained Christ's message concerning property. Entirely too many of our people measure success by the standard of the market place. "What is John Smith worth?" is answered almost every time by a statement of the cash he controls, not the character he possesses. Unfortunately, there are some who would even measure a minister by his income, and label Christ's messenger with a dollar mark. One is shocked to hear at times, that "Jones is a thousand dollar preacher; Brown is a two-thousand dollar preacher; Smith is a three-thousand dollar preacher." In most cases it is only an easy, but vicious, way to indicate the place a man has, or is capable of filling. Such standards are necessary when we deal with mules in the market place, but utterly bad when we deal with God's ministers and the work of His Kingdom. Our people, for the most part, speak and act in the terms of individual ownership of property which they possess. This idea is pagan, pure and simple, for Christ proclaimed with all possible emphasis the truth of God's ownership and man's stewardship of the property coming into his possession.

He who accepts the doctrine Christ proclaimed regarding property will also accept the same principle as applied to time, life, and all entrusted to him in the providence of God. This is not a matter of increasing the church's income, important and necessary as that may be; it is a subject dealing with the eternal spiritual verities. The Master said, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say?"

Congregations in ever increasing numbers are finding that the acceptance of this basic truth of Christian stewardship revolutionizes the spiritual life and solves all financial problems. What has tithing to do with this matter? Christ, who had so much to say about stewardship, had very little to say about tithing. He did not specifically reaffirm the age-old law of the tithe; He did not specifically abrogate this law; He was dealing with great principles rather than formulating specific rules or regulations; but no honest, intelligent man would claim that Christ expects less in proportion to our income from us to-day than God definitely commanded the Jews to pay thousands of years ago. God required the tithe of the Jew as an acknowledgment of his stewardship. Who can think He set us a lower standard of liberality?

GIFT OF $100,000 to EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

A telegram from Nashville Tennessee from Rev. J. S. Chadwick, dated March 21, says: "Mr. William H. Stockman, of Birmingham, Ala., has made a gift of $100,000 to the Christian Education Movement. He is president of the Stockman Manufacturing Company, a prominent Methodist layman, and active in all good enterprises. He is a member of the Advisory Committee of the Movement in the North Alabama Conference."

A FINE WORK FOR ADULT CLASSES.

At the recent session of the Mississippi Conference the Board of Church Extension promised $1250 to help build a good church in Columbus for the Methodist girls attending that institution. That enterprise being outside the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, we thought it best to raise that as a special if possible. We believe that the Adult Bible classes of the Conference will be glad to raise that amount for us if the matter is presented to them. Thus far, two classes only have reported definitely to me. The Adult class of the Ellisville church, Rev. L. Carley, teacher, sent me a check this week for $11. The Men's Bible Class of Yazoo City Church takes $50, and also takes $50 on the Washington City Church. Who will be next? Let us hear from you.

L. E. ALFORD,

Secretary, Church Extension Board.

MRS. J. H. EVANS PASSES AWAY.

A note from Rev. Jas. M. Lewis, dated March 21, says: "Mrs. J. H. Evans, wife of the Rev. J. H. Evans, late of the Mississippi Conference, died at her home in Collins, Miss., this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, March 21, 1921. A suitable memoir will be furnished later."

PRACTICAL CO-OPERATION WITH MEXICO.

The Legislature of the State of Chihuahua has called a State-wide Prohibition election to be held on March 27. The early date is an effort on the part of the anti-prohibitionists to have the election before the prohibitionists can reach the people with speakers and literature. Letters and telegrams from our prohibition workers declare that the short time given simply emphasizes the need for prompt, aggressive work.

As our church has been given the responsibility for social, educational, evangelistic missionary work in the State of Chihuahua, our responsibility to assist at this critical period is evident. Our Commission on Temperance and Social Service has no funds from assessments and collections. All of its funds must come from voluntary individual contributions sent directly to the Commission.

The appeal was so urgent and the responsibility so clear that, after consultation with other members of the Commission, the Chairman of the Commission has become responsible for and has forwarded $1,000, depending upon the friends of temperance, both in the United States and in Mexico, to help in driving the saloon out of the great State of Chihuahua, which borders our own country for 400 miles, and which, unless prohibition is adopted, will be a standing menace to the successful enforcement of our own prohibition laws, for already the city of Juarez has become a plague-spot just across the river from El Paso. Will not our friends send as large contributions as possible as promptly as possible to the undersigned, either at 30 Bliss Building, Washington, D. C., at 1016 S. Street, Birmingham, Alabama?

Chairman, Commission on Temperance and Social Service.

SOME PRAYER MEETING

Who said the prayer meeting was a thing of the past? I have nearly always held prayer meetings on my charges; sometimes it was a very dry affair, with the exception of the singing—it is never DRY when my voice is in good trim. Most of the time only a few, a VERY few, will attend. I have always found everywhere I have ever lived a few faithful Christians who will attend prayer meeting.

We are having just now one of the liveliest prayer meetings here in the Collins Methodist Church I have ever attended. A few weeks ago I appointed a special committee to get up the programs, and then I divided the people present into the BLUES and REDS and challenged them to see which side could get the largest number out to prayer meeting before our revival.

The programs gotten up by the committee are inspiring—something different each Wednesday night—and some young man leads at each prayer service. Old people, middle-aged people, young people, children, and babies all come—Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and non-church members come. We had, on Feb. 23, 110 present; on March 2, there were 126 present—and you should have heard the singing! The revival spirit is on, thank God, and we are going to have a great victory for our Lord and Savior.

We have recently organized a lively Epworth League in the Collins church, with a membership of about 30 of the finest bunch of young people in the Mississippi Conference. Mr. Bura Hilbun, a strong, efficient, Christian young man, is president. With his wise leadership I am sure the League will do well.

Our revival begins on April 1; I ask the prayers of all the readers of the Advocate that this revival may be a blessing not only to the church but to the town and country; that many souls may be brought into the glorious light and liberty of the Lord Jesus Christ.

JAS M. LEWIS, P. C.

Collins, Miss.

FROM ACONA, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: I noticed your request for reports from charges. I think it is justice to my people that I tell the Advocate readers something of their good work.

For nearly thirty years I have heard of the fine community of Acona. So, when I was read out for Acona station, I was not disappointed; for I felt that I had a good, loyal church to serve. When we reached the parsonage we found things up to reputation; a good large, comfortable home, amply furnished.

We were received by the good people in a way that made us feel at home. There were good fires burning, a table spread with a nice supper, with a supply of fruit, vegetables, groceries, etc., to last quite a while, and the tokens of remembrance and appreciation have not ceased to come in.

This church has the distinction of being the only rural station in the North Mississippi Conference, and, so far as I know, the only one in the State. We have a membership of about one hundred and forty—every family on the farm except Rev. A. S. Briscoe, who is our school teacher and occupies the teacher's home. He is a member of our Conference and receives his appointment here at the hands of that body. He is doing a good work and is in favor with the people.

We have organized a Senior League since coming here, with thirty-two members. It is doing good work, and this gives us about all the organizations that belong to our church.

We have a fine Missionary Society; about ninety-five per cent of the members attend the regular meetings.

Besides the work they do at home, they make liberal contributions to the general work.

Brother Pope, our hustling elder, was with us Feb. 26. He preached us a good sermon on witnessing for Jesus. Our first Q. C. was held at this time and every member was present. The assessment was made same as last year, carrying a budget of twenty-two hundred dollars. That is some business for one small country church, showing what consecration will do.

Brother Pope says we are the only church that has a woman lay leader; the distinguished lady is Miss Mary Steele.

Our Sunday school and prayer meeting are both growing.

We have material on the ground to enlarge our choir platform and the ladies are preparing to paint and beautify the parsonage. We will soon have a charge here second to none in the Conference, in many respects.

How Coca-Cola
Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be fairly described as "a carbonated, flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffeine contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful.....	1.54 gr.
(hot) (5 fl. oz.)
Green tea—1 glassful.....	2.02 gr.
(cold) (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz.....	.61 gr.
(prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

Profits in Cotton?

The answer is found in less cost per bale, which means growing twice as much cotton per acre. This cuts out nearly one-half the man and team labor.

The right kind and amount of fertilizer has often more than doubled the yield.

The Potash in the fertilizer counts.

It balances the food of the crop so that the well-fed plants resist the attacks of blight and other diseases, produce more bolls per plant, and hence more pounds per acre. Such plants do not shed their fruit badly. In this way

POTASH PAYS

Do you not think that after the Potash famine your cotton fertilizers should contain at least 5% Potash?

There is plenty of Potash in the country. Insist on getting as much as you need.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2.
Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astounding.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly re-

LESSON FOR MARCH 27.

Lesson Topic: The Living Christ.

Scripture Lesson: Matthew 28:1-10.

Golden Text: "I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," Matt. 28:20.

Home Readings: Monday, The Risen Christ and the Women, Matt. 28:1-10; Tuesday, The Walk to Emmaus, Luke 24:13-27; Wednesday, Jesus Revealing Himself, Luke 24:18-35; Thursday, Jesus Appears to His Disciples, John 20:19-29; Friday, Jesus Appears in Galilee, John 21:1-14; Saturday, The Good News of the Resurrection, I Corinthians 15:1-11; Sunday, Rejoice in the Lord, Psalm 118:14-24.

Teaching Points.

1. The resurrection is the central fact in the Christian religion—"If Christ hath not been raised, then is our preaching vain, your faith also is vain." (I Cor. 15:14.)
2. If there should still be some who doubt the historical fact of the resurrection, basing their doubt upon the slight discrepancies in the various accounts, let them remember that it is at least as easy to make these accounts agree as it is to make them disagree.
3. But the chief credential of the resurrection is our consciousness of Christ's presence with us to-day—his spiritual presence.
4. It is significant that the great command of Jesus after his resurrection is a missionary command—"Go!" Surely, Christian people to-day cannot be content until his gospel has been preached to the uttermost parts of the earth.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is so mild that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Stomach and Liver Trouble

Lily, Ky.—"I suffered from stomach and liver trouble. Had 'gassy' stomach and heartburn and had headache most of the time. After each meal I was sick, could scarcely keep anything on my stomach, not even water. I didn't think there was a medicine made that would cure me; but after using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I can eat anything I want and it does not hurt me. I will always praise this medicine."—MRS. LIZZIE FREDERICK.

contribute less than an incidental offering; they do not give as much for the extension of religious education as they give for literature on that day. Simply tell the people what the Sunday School Board wants with the money and give them an opportunity to do something worthy of the cause.

Literature has been sent to sixty schools for the observance of Children's Week. Read it carefully and you will see that it offers an opportunity big with possibilities. This is a part of the Christian Educational Campaign. If any preacher that has not received the literature cares to observe the week and will write to me, the literature will be furnished. Simply to have the teachers visit all the children in the elementary division will count for much. To have the leaflets on the Moving Picture, Family Worship, and Sunday School Lessons read before the congregation ought to wake the dead.

Rev. W. D. Bennett, of Courtland, has a class getting ready for a teacher; Rev. A. L. Davenport, of Lambert, has a class at Marks; Brother Guerry's class of thirty, on the Shuford circuit, is at work, getting ready for the examination; Brother Weed, at Crowder, is forming a class. Organize your class, order Life in the Making, and have the class study a month or six weeks, write me for a teacher and three days of review and drilling ought to enable any ordinary class to stand a creditable examination. This is the thing to do; try it.

Observe Sunday School Day, the 21st of April; follow that up with Children's Week; call for penitents; call for family altars; call for part-time and full-time service, and the Lord will give us a thousand volunteers in the North Mississippi Conference. If we are faithful, God is able to take care of the financial proposition. The victory will come when we take the mind from money and center the heart upon God.

Now is the time to reach out after the last man, woman, and child. Our people are cast down; they are disheartened; they are heart-hungry; they are ready to receive sympathy and help. Let us not fail to give them the all-sufficient Christ in this hour of their need. Boldness and tenderness that come from a vital faith in God will count for much. God is waiting, patiently waiting to pour his Spirit out upon us when we come boldly to a throne of grace.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Children's Week, April 24-May 1.

"I am learning more and more in the extension and establishment of the Kingdom of God to lay emphasis upon work among children." Bishop Walter R. Lambuth.

Nine co-operating denominations have set aside the above date for a special study of the social, educational, and spiritual environment of the children of their constituency.

The Louisiana Annual Conference, in session at De Ridder, pledged its support to "Children's Week" activity, and the Conference Sunday School Board is counting on a hearty response from pastors and Sunday school superintendents in putting on this program.

The plan of "Children's Week" activity has been carefully outlined, and every church in Louisiana is being urged to take up the campaign. The pastor is asked to call a meeting of the Sunday school superintendent and all workers with children under the age of twelve years, together with a small number of interested parents. This group, with the help of literature which will be furnished to all, is to make plans for your local campaign.

The two most important features of the week's campaign are the mass meeting, and the visit by Sunday school workers in the home of every child enrolled in the Sunday school, at which time the adult members of the family will be urged to attend this mass meeting.

At the mass meeting a program, helps for which will be furnished upon request, setting forth present needs and conditions of childhood is to be presented.

HE surely expects no less of us today.....

GOD required the Tithe of the Jews Four Thousand Years Ago.....

No Methodist church awake to the needs and opportunity of work with its children can afford carelessly to pass by "Children's Week."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

This week has been a week at home on account of sickness. We have received some unusual reports. Last Sunday, the 13th, East End, Meridian, had 460 present at Sunday school, which is only 36 of reaching their entire church membership as reported at Conference. They had 78 men in their Men's Bible Class and 64 women in their Woman's Bible Class. This is unusually fine. Good reports are coming in from over the field.

If you have not received your Sunday School Day Programs, please notify me. I think the Programs attractive and as good if not better than in any previous years.

Children's Week is the week following Sunday School Day. If any community is interested in this matter, I shall be glad to send them leaflets. Please let me hear from you.

Pray for the work and the workers.

The Conference Standard Training School will be held in Jackson, Miss., June 7-14. Make your plans accordingly, and whatever else you do or do not do, plan to come to the Training School. We have secured one of the strongest faculties possible, and we feel sure that every one who takes advantage of this occasion will be profited both in body and soul.

It takes $250 to buy a multigraph. Of this amount we have received $52. If by some chance you have not had an opportunity to help us in this matter, and feel disposed to do so, please do it.

Pray for the work and workers. God bless and keep you.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM BOURG, LA.

Dear Readers and Co-workers: Many of your prayers and sacrifices for the French field in South Louisiana our dear Lord has not overlooked, and yet the task is not done. In my charge I have four places to preach at, and three of them are far from my home. Labadie is forty miles by road; I preach there on Wednesday night once a month. Point au Chien is fifteen miles by road from home; I teach a Sunday school class there almost every Sunday. Griffins is fifteen miles from home by water and road. I say "water," because I have no car to go around, so I have to paddle a dug-out eight miles both ways across Lake Long, to preach only two sermons once a month. At Bourg, which is at home, I teach the Bible class on Sunday morning, and preach twice a week.

Readers, pray that the Lord may be with me, that I may have the strength and equipment to keep up my work.

Yours in Christ,
K. F. MARTIN.

FROM THE SCOTLAND CHARGE.

I had known for two months that I had been sent to serve a splendid people. But when my wife and son came to join me, I was sure that I was serving the best people in our Conference.

I met Mrs. Carter and son in Jackson, and on arriving at the parsonage, fifteen miles from Brookhaven, we found the house alight and a committee of gracious women to welcome us.

A delicious supper was waiting. After this we were shown the kitchen, where tables, cupboards and pantry were filled with a bountiful supply of groceries.

We deeply appreciate the kindness and love our people have shown us. We look forward eagerly and prayerfully to our year's work with them.

Respectfully,
J. L. CARTER.

AN AMAZING RAINCOAT OFFER

Goodyear Mfg. Co., 953-R Goodyear Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., are offering to send a Goodyear Combination Top and Raincoat to one person in each community who will wear and recommend it to friends. If you want one, write to-day.

A REMARKABLE MEETING AT VIVIAN, LA.

At the regular business meeting of our Bible Class on the first Monday night in February, one of our laymen (who is also teacher of the Men's Bible Class) suggested having a ten days' prayer meeting, beginning the 14th of February. This was strictly a laymen's meeting, in that all the services were conducted by the laymen of the different churches. This was a special prayer meeting for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and we feel sure that many Christians were revived and lasting good was accomplished. The pastor and his people from the Baptist Church co-operated most beautifully, as did others from the other churches. The attendance was so good and the Spirit so in evidence, that the prayer services lasted two weeks, instead of ten days. This has been pronounced one of the best meetings Vivian has ever had. Just think of the Methodist Church's being full of people at prayer service! We feel that we are determined to press the battle with greater zeal and greater courage than ever before. So, with our noble pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. I. T. Reames, and our faithful Sunday school superintendent, Dr. C. K. Ray, and such splendid music under the direction of Mr. C. P. McLendon, we are expecting and praying for great things in our church this year.

May God help us to apply these blessings in our every-day lives.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE JOURNAL: A CORRECTION.

Dear Brother: In looking over the minutes of the North Mississippi Conference, I find that our financial report for the Oxford circuit is not in full. We have credit for only $85.42, which just about covers the amount we raised on Conference claims. We paid last year for other claims: Centenary, $135; Supernuminate Endowment Fund, $8.00; Hospital Memphis, $1.75. We also sent a box from Midway church to the Orphans' Home at Jackson, Miss.

I hope you will give this item space in our paper, that those who are subscribers to the same may be better informed concerning these specified amounts that have been paid in by the Oxford circuit. Very Sincerely,

G. W. ROBERTSON, P. C.

A CORRECTION.

Dear Brother Carley: I see in the minutes of the last session of the North Mississippi Conference, in the report from Ashland Charge, nothing is reported as having been collected on the Centenary fund. My report shows that $151 was collected. In justice to the Ashland Charge I will ask you to publish this statement.

Fraternally,

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE JOURNAL: A CORRECTION.

Dear Brother Carley: In justice to the good people of Cedar Grove Charge, I would like to direct attention to the fact that the amounts indicated by the Conference Journal as assessed for the presiding elder and pastor are incorrect. The Journal shows these amounts to be $78 and $600, respectively, while the amounts assessed were $69 and $531, which were paid as is shown.

The work paid out in full and pledged an increase of approximately 50 per cent for this year, and since this report represents his first venture as a station, I feel that it should be accurate.

Fraternally,

CHAS. E. McLEAN.

Foley's Honey and Tar is a family cough remedy that mothers can depend upon. It will not upset a delicate stomach and children like it. Mrs. Agnes Barnes, 208 E. 4th St., Altoona, Pa., writes: "I gave Foley's Honey and Tar to my baby for croup and it helped her immediately."—Adv.

We are planning to do a great work this year.

B. J. CRISLER,
District President, Sunday School and Epworth League Convention.

FROM VARDAMAN CIRCUIT.

Dear Advocate: We have just closed the last one of two great meetings on the Vardaman charge. The first one was held at Derma, the other at Vardaman.

Derma has the Calhoun County Agricultural High School. In the senior class a great work was accomplished. The morning we left there, out of a class of 21 of Calhoun's very best boys and girls, the class was 96 per cent Christian. But nothing less than that could be expected when you know that consecrated, Christian faculty there.

We had 15 accessions to our church and about the same number committed

The Hod Carrier's Wage.

The average wage of the hod carrier is $3.27 per day, or $981 for 300 working days in the year. According to present-day standards of living and present day prices it is not a "living wage."

But do you know that—

If one out of four members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had an income equal to the average wage of the hod carrier—and tithed that income—we could pay the regular church budget for 1920. . . . $23,900,000

Have we reached the limit of our ability in giving?

themselves for membership in the Baptist Church.

Brother Shepard, the local pastor of the Baptist church, was with us in every service and was a great help in the meeting.

We spent ten days at Derma, and left there for Vardaman, the first sermon being preached at Vardaman on February 27. We stayed here twelve days. We had the greatest meeting the people say the town has ever had, resulting in 51 accessions to our church, 21 to the Baptist, 1 to the Christian, and 1 for the Cumberland Presbyterian.

The preaching was done by Brother W. M. McIntosh, of Iuka, Miss., and the song service was conducted by Mr. Robert L. Cooper, Aberdeen, Miss. One great asset to the meeting here was the afternoon services for women and girls, conducted by Sister McIntosh.

To those who know this trio of Christian workers, it goes without saying the work was done well. It seemed that they were all at their very best and we had preaching, singing, and shouting in the old-time way.

One of the greatest features of both meetings was the work of Brother McIntosh in the latter part of each meeting in establishing the people for something definite, or in a constructive way for permanent service. The three Christian workers are on our hearts, and these people will never forget the nearly four weeks of consecrated service they gave us. May the Lord's richest blessings follow them everywhere they go.

Any pastor who needs a revival, also some sure enough constructive work done on his charge, will make no mistake in securing these workers. We look for them to come this way again some time. Our people said, "The only regret was, we could not keep them."

Another great asset to both meetings was due to the fact that in both congregations there were several people who were converted in revivals held by Brother McIntosh at Old Pittsboro, Houston, and other places 25 years ago. Pray for us.

Advice for Young Girls

Roanoke, Va.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an excellent medicine to give young girls who suffer. One of my daughters has been very delicate for some time, suffered with functional disturbances, and every winter would be sick and I would have to have the doctor for her. She would be weak and nervous. Last winter a friend advised her taking 'Favorite Prescription' and it has done her a world of good. She is in better health than ever before. I would advise mothers not to let their girls suffer, give them the Prescription."—MRS. SARAH E. HAYNES, 1514 Loudon Ave., N. W. All druggists.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Excerpt from report of committee on Home Base and Finance, Annual Meeting, Baton Rouge, February 22, 23, 24:

"4th—That since the Educational Institutions of the Woman's Missionary Council are listed for nearly half a million dollars of the askings of the Christian Education Movement now being conducted in the church, we impress upon our women the privilege and responsibility of rendering active service in this campaign and of making personal contributions through the church. Contributions cannot be made through the auxiliaries. The special stewardship cultivation of the year should be coincident with the Christian Education Movement and the literature used by the Movement should be given careful use in the regular Missionary meetings."

SPRING DEBILITY

Loss of Appetite, That Tired Feeling and Sometimes Eruptions.

Thousands take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring medicine for that tired feeling, nervous weakness, impure blood and say it makes them feel better, eat and sleep better, and "makes food taste good."

Spring debility is a condition in which it is especially hard to combat disease germs, which invade the system here, there and everywhere. The white blood corpuscles, sometimes called "the little soldiers in the blood," because it is their duty to fight disease germs, are too weak to do good service.

Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens the "little soldiers" and enables them to repel germs of grip, influenza, fevers and other ailments; relieves catarrh and rheumatism. It has given satisfaction to three generations. Get it today, and for a laxative take Hood's Pills.

THIS YOUNG MOTHER

Tells Childless Women What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are very fond of children and for a considerable time after we married I feared I would not have any owing to my weak condition. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I have a nice strong healthy baby girl. I can honestly say that I did not suffer much more when my baby was born than I used to suffer with my periods before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound years ago. I give all the credit to your medicine and shall always recommend it very highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wisconsin.

How can women who are weak and sickly expect or hope to become mothers of healthy children? Their first duty is to themselves. They should overcome the derangement or debility that is dragging them down, and strengthen the entire system, as did Mrs. Janssen, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and then they will be in a position to give their children the blessing of a good constitution.

for both the home and foreign fields.

Please call attention to this in both the adult and young people's auxiliaries, urging each member to fix a certain time for special prayer that our young people may hear the call and give themselves for definite Christian service.

Where it is possible, we ask that the adults and young people arrange for an early morning prayer service on Good Friday. There is power in united prayer, and we need workers as never before.

FROM THE FRENCH MISSION.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you please give me a little space in the Advocate, which I am glad to have in my home every week?

I want to say that I am glad to be in the Lord's work here at Lydia. I find a very large work to be done for the church of God. There are many French people here who need and who want to hear the story of the Holy Book. Lydia is an old church, but had been left without a preacher eleven years, I am told; but, thank God, we re-organized the Sunday school with forty members, and last Sunday I preached to fifty people. We are planning now to repair the church.

Yesterday afternoon, wife and I visited a sister eighty-two years old, who is a member of the Methodist Church. She was so glad to see a preacher in her home that she said she couldn't work, but she would come to church. God will bless such an old Christian as that. Some money was given from that home to be spent on the church.

The young people in the Sunday school are learning a chapter in the Bible by heart. I thank the Lord for such a people as these. They are good to me, keeping me supplied with wood, milk, chickens, and eggs.

This field needs to be looked after more than it has been for the last few years. Brother Martin Hebert started this work, I am told, and he has kept it up till now. But one man can't keep up all the French work by himself, and we must thank God that he kept it up till some one could come to his help.

Asking your prayers, I am
Your brother in Christ,
Rev. A. D. MARTIN.

Per Capita Contributions for Christian Education by Southern Methodists

In 1900 the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, paid 8 cents per member for Christian Education—this on regular assessments for Connectional schools. By 1905 the per capita contribution was nearly 9 cents, and by 1910 we had reached the 10 cents per member standard.

For 1915 the average per member was 15 cents, and by 1920 we had reached the 18 cents per member standard.

And What of Our Permanent Investments in Christian Education? During the past fifteen years we have added to the value of our holdings—buildings, lands, equipment, endowment—nearly $16,000,000. This, if all came from Methodist people, represents a contribution of about 65 cents per member a year.

Do We Really Believe in Christian Education? Is not the Christian Education Movement a necessity if we make good our claim that we hold to the faith of the fathers; if we vindicate our right to have some share in the building of the Kingdom of Christ?

our Epworth League hosts. It means, also, that we are putting into this work our prayers, as well as our money and our lives.

The history of our mission in Africa reads like a romance. For years the earnest desire that our church should open a mission in Africa lay on the heart of Bishop Walter R. Lambuth, who was then General Missionary Secretary. The Southern Presbyterians had repeatedly entreated our church to occupy the field alongside of them, but it seemed that we could never have the faith and courage to make the venture. Finally Dr. Lambuth presented the matter to the Board of Missions, and, although the members of the Board were cordially sympathetic, they saw no way to provide the finances. At this point Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League, arose and pledged the Epworth Leagues of Southern Methodism to raise the necessary funds with which to open the mission in Africa. The proposition was accepted, and the Board authorized Dr. Lambuth to proceed to Africa and locate a mission station.

The story of the first visit of Dr. Lambuth to Africa, when he was accompanied by Prof. John W. Gilbert of Paine College, Augusta, Ga., our school for colored people, their many thrilling experiences, the dangers encountered and the difficulties overcome cannot be written here. No doubt this story is familiar to all our Leaguers. Suffice it to say, that they were providentially led to establish a mission station at the town of Wembo, Niam, bearing the name of the great chief of a large tribe in the very heart of the Belgian Congo. About two years after this first visit Bishop Lambuth returned to Africa accompanied by our pioneer missionaries—Dr. and Mrs. D. L. Mumpower, Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Bush, and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Stockwell. Since that time other have gone to join them, and the work has grown under the leadership and power of God's Spirit. Churches, schools and residences have been built; an alphabet and written language have been created; a good portion of the Bible has been translated and printed. A number of native preachers are already engaged in preaching the Gospel, and hundreds of people are being ministered to in their bodies through the hospital. Surely the Lord is smiling in approval upon the efforts being put forth.

The Louisiana Conference Epworth Leaguers have pledged themselves to raise about $2100 on the "Africa Special" for this year, June 1, 1920, to June 1, 1921. Of this amount, $25 will go to the building fund of the Lacey Chapel, Colored, Methodist Church, New Orleans.

Up to the present month, about $600 has been paid in to Miss Grace Cook our State Treasurer, at Monroe.

We feel sure that there is a large amount of Africa Special money in the hands of the various local chapter treasurers throughout the State, so we urgently request every reader of these lines to mention this article to his local president or treasurer and tell him to send it in to Miss Grace Cook, 614 N. Fourth St., Monroe, La., at once.

If you have not started the collection of your local Africa Special, do so at once, for June 1 will soon be here, and it will be hard to collect it you wait until the last minute.

We fully expect to raise every dollar of our pledge this year, and also have an increase. To this end we will work and give and pray.

THEY ARE STILL STARVING.

IN SPITE OF ALL THAT HAS BEEN DONE CHINESE MILLIONS STILL DIE OF HUNGER. ALL STATEMENTS TO THE CONTRARY ARE CONTRADICTED BY THE FACTS FROM THE FIELD. IT WILL REQUIRE A MULTIPLICATION OF GIFTS THAT HAVE ALREADY BEEN SO GENEROUSLY MADE TO MEET THE SITUATION. WHAT HAS BEEN DONE IS ONLY A FAIR BEGINNING.

Hunger knows no race lines. It is a human instinct that makes the whole world kin. Generosity and gratitude are Christian bonds that transform neighborhoods into brotherhoods. Feeding the hungry capitalizes confidence. We Americans are making a great investment in the Kingdom in this effort to save our yellow neighbors. We are feeding the flames of international good-will, and so building a highway for the Kingdom.

We have received $175,000 in about 5,000 contributions from churches, Sunday schools and individuals. The following letter speaks for itself:

"Tientsin, January 28, 1921.

Dr. W. W. Pinson,
Board of Missions,
Nashville, Tennessee.

Dear Sir:

I am directed by my Board to express to you our deep gratitude for your gift of $20,000 Mex. At times we are almost in despair. One feels for a moment elated to think that in our half of this Chihli Province we have sustained for three months 311,000 people, but our hearts sink when we realize that we must support most of these for a further two months to the wheat harvest in June, and we are in despair, knowing that in this half of Chihli there are still over three million destitute for whom we can as yet make no provision.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) FRANK B. TURNER, Chairman,
Distribution Board, North China International Society for Famine Relief."

This refers to a part of our first $25,000. Note that nine-tenths in the area are unprovided for.

Americans in China are doing their share. Students in Huchow Middle School raised $260, in part by denying themselves meat and fish for a month. The girls of Virginia School contributed $220. These Chinese people are awake to the needs and are contributing largely but are poorly organized and equipped for so great a crisis.

According to the estimates, we have kept alive 50,000 people in these three months, yet there still are three months until harvest, and the need increases with each passing day. We should swell our contributions in a short time to a quarter of a million dollars. We ought not to stop at that. It would mean a little more than ten cents each for our Methodist constituency.

The Sunday schools are now called into line and we look for a great response from them in the next few days. The children of Methodism will help feed the starving children of the Chinese, if given a chance. Every church and every school should share in the blessedness of giving to relieve this great human agony.

We started on the front line and are holding our ground. We must keep an unwavering front until harvest. Act promptly and send the money to Mr. J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tennessee. We remit as received and will keep the Church posted as to the amount given by our people.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

HE GAVE HIS LIFE.

We give, without comment, this simple but beautiful story, which the editor of one of our exchanges heard a preacher tell in a sermon: "A wealthy planter drove his team to the country store, hitched it to the post, and went into the store to get a few items. A paper blowing in the road frightened the horses; they plunged, tore themselves free, and ran away. The planter leaped from the store, ran in front of the team, caught one by the bridle, and fell. He was trampled and mangled, but he stopped the team. When his neighbors bent over him and tried to bring him back to life, dashing water in his face, one said to him: 'Why did you do it? You could buy other horses. Why did you give your life to stop that team?' He said, and they were his last words, 'Go look in the wagon.' They did so. There, nestling on the bit of hay, lay his little son, his only son, asleep. 'Aye,' exclaimed the preacher, Christ so loved us that when we were asleep, when we had no knowledge of how great was his love, Christ died for us.'"

THE DEATH OF CARDINAL GIBBONS.

We do not doubt that the death of Cardinal Gibbons, at his home in Baltimore last week, removed a good man, a public-spirited citizen, and a distinguished servant of the Roman Catholic Church. We are not well enough acquainted with the details of his life and character to form any opinion of our own concerning his permanent place in the religious life of the nation. We are sure of one thing, though: If we are to estimate the value of his services by the amount of space given by the secular press to his death, we shall be driven to the conclusion that America has never produced such another religious leader. Of course we do not fix our estimate by any such standard. We do not know to what extent the Roman Catholic Church undertakes to influence our news distributing agencies, or what control it exercises over the pages of secular journals throughout the country; we do know, however, that apparently unlimited space is at the disposal of the propagandists of the Roman Catholic faith, and that the news agencies seem to be willing to feature any happening of the Roman Church, regardless of its intrinsic news value. In keeping with its well-known policy of using every available means for the accomplishment of its purposes, the Roman Catholic Church has turned to the public press with a persistency and a degree of success that ought at least to teach a lesson to the Protestant world. To put the case concretely: we believe that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should have a publicity bureau, in charge of experienced and competent men familiar with the procedure of secular newspapers, that would command the respect of secular editors throughout the country. That this could be brought about, we have not the least doubt. The doings of an ecclesiastical organization that has millions of members and adherents cannot be without interest to the world at large.

THE ADVOCATE.

The pastor that circulates his church paper renders the highest sort of service to his people, and, incidentally, very necessary service to the paper.

We, of the Louisiana, North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences, are on record as to what we propose to do with reference to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Our action was quoted in the issue of March 17. It is now time for us to redeem our promise. The paper is worthy—none more so. The need is urgent, both from the standpoint of the publishers and the Methodist people of the two States. Our people perish for lack of information—information concerning the Centenary, the Christian Education Movement, the revival campaign and else. This is the time to move and move strongly in redeeming our pledge to the Conference organ. Preach on the subject. Talk to the people in their homes. Secure subscriptions and send them in. Do it now. There is no time like the present.

SHALL THE UNITED STATES HAVE A DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVE AT THE VATICAN?

The statement has recently appeared in the public press that President Harding is considering the advisability of opening diplomatic relations with the Vatican, the claim being made that he is to send an Irish-American to Rome to consult the pope about the advisability of appointing an ambassador from this country. If the President has an open mind about the matter and if he is waiting to know if public opinion favors this move, we undertake to say that the appointment of a diplomatic representative from this country, where church and State have from the beginning been kept separate, to an ecclesiastical organization that has consistently attempted through all its history to dominate the governments of the world, will meet with the unqualified, determined and vigorous opposition of millions of American citizens, many of whom are not identified with any Protestant denomination. There are 15,000,000 members of the Methodist and the Baptist denominations alone in the United States, with millions of adherents, to say nothing of other millions of Protestant communicants, who will never look with favor upon the proposal to give the pope a voice in determining the policies of this country. If President Harding will give heed to public sentiment, he will dismiss forever from his mind any thought of appointing a diplomatic representative to the Vatican—and he will rebuke sternly any attempt from any source whatever to give the Roman hierarchy any official recognition in the administration of the government.

"STRIKE-BREAKERS WANTED."

According to the Literary Digest, one of the country's trade journals says that the outstanding need of the country to-day is, "One hundred million strike-breakers to break the buyers' strike." Doubtless business prosperity would return at once if one hundred million people would rush to the places of trade and spend a millions dollars or so apiece. But when we remember that the "buyers' strike" was brought about by the inability of the average citizen to pay the price demanded for goods in the market, we wonder who is to supply the necessary amount of cash to "break the strike." We were told just the other day that the price of a pair of duck trousers of this season's manufacture—made of pure cotton—is fifty cents higher than the price for the same article last year. If the buyers are on a strike, the sellers must be retaliating by establishing a lock-out.

STRANGE MATHEMATICS.

An enterprising business firm of New Orleans has recently announced in display advertisements that it has reduced prices all the way "from fifty to one hundred and fifty per cent." We have been considering the advisability of dropping in and requesting the proprietor to give us an article that has been reduced one hundred and fifty per cent, to see if he would make us a present of the article itself and the fifty per cent additional in cash. Being of rather a timid disposition, however, we have not yet tried the experiment, fearing we might meet with a more or less vigorous rebuff. We should like to know, though, how to run a business on such a basis.

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE AND THE CHRISTIANIZATION OF THE POLITICAL, INDUSTRIAL, AND SOCIAL LIFE.

By President C. J. Greene, Hendrix College.

The political, industrial and social life of a person or of a group is the ordinary life expressed in three different forms or fields of activity. What gives point and significance to the expression of life in any one or all these forms, is their peculiar power of bringing to view and making active and contagious the ultimate interests, aims and motives of people. Political life has to do with the abstract principles, the rules, and the processes of administration that concern men as a body politic; industrial life has to do with the production, distribution and sharing of property; and social life has to do with the institutions, or customs, that men have evolved through their efforts to live together on a basis of equity and mutual advantage.

And so it comes about that the political, the industrial and the social life is at once the last stronghold of selfishness and the fountain head of the highest Christian virtues. If we could see motives as God sees, we should doubtless recognize every one in his political activities as a patriot or a pirate; in his industrial life as a public servant or a vampire; in his social life as a ministering angel or a moral leper—that is, every one is a constructive or a destructive force.

The Christianization of these fields of activity is the ultimate goal and will be the final triumph of all work for the kingdom of God. The difference between conditions as they are and as we hope for them to be can not be covered by a cataclysm of religious experience. The thoroughgoing Christianization of the individual requires a lifetime. It is a process. The same is true of society. Conversion is matriculation in the school of Christ. No school turns out as many graduates as it receives matriculates. In politics, industry, social life, old habits reassert themselves, selfish example puzzles and pulls powerfully everywhere.

To reform these strongholds of conservatism, where, as Professor William James says, habit has ten times the power of nature, there must be strong, courageous, influential and patient leadership. Any real reformation waits on leadership. The masses of people are conservative. If they change at all, they follow the lead of one or a few. To have leadership, that is to say, for the world to make any appreciable sort of progress, there must be higher education. It has been pretty clearly worked out that without any education at all one person in a hundred and fifty thousand becomes a leader; with high school training, one person in sixteen hundred becomes a leader; and with college training one in a hundred and seventy-five becomes a leader or reaches what is recognized as distinction. President Wilson says college trained people walk upon the ridges and occupy the positions of outlook. To be a leader one must have breadth of view, poise, freedom, daring and power of intellectual concentration and endurance. All these, true education fosters and develops.

Just as it is true that reformation or progress of any sort depends upon education, so it is true that Christian reformation and progress depend upon Christian education. Mexico and Brazil have had Christianity with a very elementary and antiquated type of education, and the ethical life of the people has been as little affected by their religion in a hundred years as the ethical life of China has been affected by Buddhism. Germany's system of State education received the admiration and patronage of the world; but it was not Christian, and the world was startled and appalled to learn within the last five years that the spirit of the political, industrial and social life of Germany had little improved since the Vandals and the Huns overran the Roman empire. Turning to our own country where State and church schools work side by side and share each other's spirit, aims, and ideals, we get instruction. One State university with four thousand students who were members of evangelical churches, and eight thousand alumni, has within the last fifty years furnished these evangelical churches with fewer than twenty ministers. Ninety per cent of all college-trained ministers and missionaries are trained in Christian colleges and more than one-fifth of these decide upon their life work after they enter college. For obvious reasons no statistics are available showing the moral and religious effect of training in Christian colleges on the men and the women who do not give their entire time to religious work; but there is no doubt that this effect upon them is as disproportionate as compared with the same influence in State institutions as it is upon those known distinctively as religious leaders. These men and women carry the Christian influence directly into the centers of political, industrial and social life.

Here then are two facts which all who are interested in the progress of Christianity must face. Without Christian colleges we should be practically without trained ministers and missionaries; without ministers and missionaries as highly trained as doctors, lawyers, chemists and engineers, the church will lose its place of leadership in the progress of the world. Fostering our Christian colleges is not a question as to whether we think the church or the State ought to cover the field of higher education; it is a question of the progress or decay of Christianity.

Coming back to the subject, the next forward movement of Christianity must be the Christianization of political, industrial, and social life. The world will give little heed to the heart glow of one newly "converted." It cares little for the hundreds and thousands that are "saved" in evangelistic campaigns. It cares very much how people act in political campaigns and what sort of spirit actuates them in their industrial and social obligations and opportunities. If church schools will maintain their Christian integrity, and men with money will furnish them with buildings and libraries and laboratories and faculties equal to the best, it will not be many student generations before Christianity will tell powerfully on these strongholds of corporate life—politics, industry and society. Here is the most immediate, vital and far-reaching opportunity for Christian service that the world can now offer.

SHE'LL BE SAFE IN THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE.

By Mrs. Robert Kemp.

As I opened my Advocate of February 17, and saw in the Supplement the attractive looking college girl and read the words, "She'll be safe in the Christian college," she seemed to be saying to me, "Why do you not tell of that other girl, dear to you, whose life was made safe by the Christian college?"

I have longed to do it ever since the Educational Movement began, but did not do so fearing ill health would prevent my expressing it in a forcible way. However, she is such a striking illustration, of what Christian education in college will do I will tell you the bare facts.

In a little town in Central Mississippi, there was a home known long ago, when parsonages were few, as a preacher's home, where the itinerant always found a warm welcome. The father and mother were loyal Methodists; the children were reared in an atmosphere of reverence and loved their church from their childhood.

God took two of these children in early childhood, leaving the eldest and two youngest, all girls. The father went to his reward, just after the eldest had graduated from the academy. In a few years the mother followed him, leaving her girls without a near male relative. The oldest keenly felt the responsibility of the other two.

The youngest had a bright, happy nature, and had gone laughingly through life, always intent on having a good time, saying it would be time enough for religion, or indeed any serious thought, when she became old. When she was ready for college the oldest sister consulted with their pastor about its selection; he had been not only pastor, but had taken a fatherly interest in them.

So, after considering the girl and the college together, he selected the Tennessee Female College, of which Dr. Hargrove (afterwards Bishop) was president. She was as anxious to be educated as to have a good time, but did not give a thought to its being a church school, or she might not have agreed to the selection.

The pupils were of the kind usually found in Christian colleges, girls from homes where high ideals are cherished, and the development of Christian character is desired for them, as well as intellectual culture. Mrs. Hargrove was like a mother to them, and made a home feeling in the college which developed the best in them.

In this refined, cultured atmosphere, she insensibly began to enjoy her surroundings, as well as her studies. There was fun a plenty, but not the kind that she had hitherto enjoyed. Being of an earnest nature, she soon found herself interested in the church; and what a happy day it was to the two at home when the letter came written in her enthusiastic way telling of her conversion!

The remainder of her life was devoted to the service of her Master; and possibly no young girl in her community became a stronger force for righteousness. Many years were given wholly to his service.

Can you safeguard your daughter better than to put the same influence around her that changed this girl's life, in the Christian college?

Gulfport, Miss.

SOME GOOD THINGS.

By Rev. Ben P. Jaco.

Considering that David had God's Word as a lamp to his feet, and had hidden that Word in his heart, it is not strange that when there were many who could not find any good that he found more joy and gladness than others had in the midst of harvest. Yes, sir! There are many good things. I find them, too. The other day Walter Jones asked me to come over to Guntown and talk Centenary. He not only asked me, but arranged to let me preach four times in one day. I did it, too. Then that other warm-hearted, accommodating, alert pastor, Bob Neblett, asked me, too. I went before breakfast and remained until afternoon of next day. And what a good time I had there as well as at Guntown! I spoke four times.

But the biggest thing of all was that Centenary Cabinet meeting in the afternoon. The pastor announced the names at the morning service, and they were all there. I have never had in all my Centenary work a better attendance, more interesting meeting, perfect arranging for the work or other good feature than this meeting—as nearly a perfect meeting as I could conceive. They adopted a Special, which created new and feeling interest in missions. Then that fine body of Leaguers was enough to move any man's heart. No wonder I spoke to them. The thunder (from the skies) and rain did not scare the people away at the evening hour, but we had another good ser-rice. Of course Jones and Neblett are men who have large influence with their people and lead them into the very best activities.

Yet, I am disposed to believe that there are other pastors and people who can and do perform their church work in a royal way of proficiency. Several others are also writing and hurrying me to come on and talk missions to the churches. When I get there they will, every one, try to excel Jones and Neblett, I am afraid, and either collect all Centenary pledges before I make my speeches or plan all the collecting teams ahead. That is all good and well. I am going to find good things anyhow. When the calls come too thick for Sundays, I am going to as many places as I can on other days. I will have two new illustrated speeches soon and will let my audiences look at pictures (not me) while I talk. Maybe they could hear five speeches a day that way. A Delco Light man has promised to carry an electric light plant around to show my pictures. He is one of Jones' men, and there are more like him in other parts of the State. That is a good thing.

One of the best things I have had lately is the fact that one of our finest young men is going to be a medical missionary, and I have been assured by two parties that his tuition in the medical college would be provided. I will not wait many days before others will offer to supply board and clothes.

Another good thing would be for you to pay your Centenary pledge to-day.

METHODIST FRATERNITY IN FLORIDA.

Fraternity is much desired among all Christians, especially the people called "Methodist," who are one in origin and doctrine, using the same hymnal, order of worship, and have so many things in common. Frequently I have heard eloquent addresses before our General Conference by fraternal delegates of the M. E. Church (North), and have sometimes felt that the speakers were altogether sincere, but a lingering fear that they did not represent the leaders of their great church has prevented the hearty applause that some of our brethren are able to give.

I must confess, however, that with all my fears I was not prepared for the unfraternal action of the M. E. Church (North) in ignoring the declaration of their General Conference to such an extent as to project work in Orlando, Tampa, West Palm Beach and Ft. Myers.

When I called Bishop Candler's attention to the announcement that Bishop E. G. Richardson was to preach at the Phillips Theater, January 23, and organize an M. E. Church in Orlando, he requested Dr. Cooper and me to call on him and present a formal protest. On January 22, we delivered the following communication:

Bishop E. G. Richardson,
Orlando, Florida.

My Dear Bishop Richardson:

We herewith hand you letter from Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, Ga., who is in charge of the Florida Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

We beg to add our protest to his, as it has been stated to us by Rev. J. J. Treadwell, district superintendent of Jacksonville District, St. John's River Conference, that an appropriation of $1000 has been made to conduct preliminary service in Orlando.

We are also informed that $40,000 has been appropriated from the Centenary Fund to secure property, and to build a church in this city.

We also note that Rev. Mr. Fuller was appointed by you as pastor of the church in Orlando.

When these statements were made to us we could hardly believe that representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church could adopt such a course of erecting altar against altar, in this city, where the work of Methodism was so well represented and efficiently done.

We respectfully call your attention to the declarations of fraternity which have been repeatedly stated by the representatives of your church, and also to the act of the General Conference of 1901, where it was specifically stated that "Where either church is doing the work expected of Methodism, the other church cannot organize a society or erect a church building, until the bishop having jurisdiction in the case has been consulted, and his approval obtained."

The First Methodist Church, of Orlando, has a membership of nine hundred and the Sunday school has a membership of eight hundred seventy-six. This is positive evidence of the efficient service which our church has rendered in this city of seven thousand white people.

We have also a mission church in the north-eastern section of this city, and an assistant pastor has been engaged to carry on this work, and we further believe that the coming of the Methodist Episcopal Church can only raise sectional questions, which have never been raised in this city, and which we believe ought to die.

We therefore respectfully protest against the violation of these fraternal utterances of General Conference of the two churches, building altar against altar in Orlando.

With great respect, we are,

Yours very sincerely,

Bishop Richardson admitted the action of the General Conference as stated, but said that in organizing a society or erecting a church in any place, he regarded the M. E. Church, South, as he would the Presbyterian Church or any other church; and then I said, "All the declarations of fraternity and the action of your General Conference then are to be treated as a 'scrap of paper?'"

On leaving the Bishop I said I had never expected to have a Methodist bishop tell me that he regarded my church just as he would a Presbyterian church, etc. He said, "I honor you." I replied, "Maybe so, the Presbyterians are a great and good people, but not Methodists in doctrine and discipline, and your General Conference has not taken such action to regulate you in your relation to them."

We are glad to say to the credit of the brethren and sisters of the North who have united with us and done so much to help establish Methodism in Orlando and elsewhere, that they almost, without exception, are against such unfraternal action, and stand loyally by us. Among these I refer to Brother C. E. Howard, who for more than twenty years has been the faithful and efficient Sunday school superintendent and steward in our Orlando Church. He stated to the District Superintendent of the M. E. Church: "I was a loyal member of the M. E. Church when I came South. I am now a member of the M. E. Church, South, and knowing Methodism North and South, want to tell you that the South has the strongest, purest and best type of Methodism, and the Northern Church has no business here."

Limited space will not permit me to publish many other things that the bishop said, but the above will indicate his spirit and plan. He reminded us that more than three years ago Orlando had been placed in the askings for $40,000 of Centenary funds. This was the work of his predecessor, who, while acting as it appears on the committee for unification, was planning to spend $40,000 in Orlando, erecting altar against altar. We would have you remember that Bishop Richardson does not speak as an obscure member of the M. E. Church (North), but as the bishop in charge of the work in Florida.

Yours very sincerely,

J. P. HILBURN, P. E.

TORCH BEARERS.

By Rev. Elmer C. Gunn.

For most of us there is inspiration in the thought that we are runners in the race of life, bearing, as we run, the torch of truth which we have received from the generation preceding and are to hand into the fingers of the generation following us. This torch of truth is "the faith of our fathers, living still, in spite of dungeon, fire and sword." To some of us, it seems that the weight of the torch and the flicker of the flame it bears make for our generation an exceedingly difficult task. This is, in fact, a stretch of the road which it is tremendously important to negotiate successfully. Even the most casual observer realizes that the war has brought us into a changed world. While some of the changes are for the better, others are for the worse, but all will be vitally influenced by victorious bearers of the torch of truth. We are in the midst of a world of changing values, but the changes can never affect the changeless power of saving faith in God.

Our leaders are calling to us to light the world to a stronger educational system, to make it possible for the generation receiving the torch from us to bear it more effectively than any other generation ever did, because many of the obstructions we are encountering will be removed from the path, and many of the hindrances we have been dealing with will be struck as shackles from their feet by our successful effort.

For the country pastors, of whom the writer is one, the problem of the year is the Educational Campaign. All the disadvantages the leaders are naming in their far-flung literature are first-hand facts with us. They are trying to eliminate the very enemies we are fighting: poor equipment, untrained leadership, an unsuccessful point of view from the world's viewpoint at least, a future not altogether rosy with promise; from the midst of these hindrances we are called to make the Educational Campaign "go," that leaders of other generations may have that which to-day we lack. It is a call that appeals to the best that is in us; a call that stirs the memory to draw a picture of what might have been; a call that awakes the sacrificial which has ever been humanity's deepest note of service.

It is a great dream the leaders have, a dream of the church throbbing with effectiveness from the heart of the city to the farthest limits of the backwoods; a church alive with men and women consecrated to the tremendous tasks of the many-sided work of saving the world, and educated to the highest point of efficiency by a system that has the equipment of the world and the power of God; in short, a church that functions as a powerful influence in every community because it is a character-moulding institution and the best of its blood and talent is devoted to making it effective. It is for us to make the dream come true. It would not be the part of strong sons of the fathers who flung us the torch from their failing hands to falter in the face of the great task we have been assigned. It is tremendously worth while to see to it that as the old-time country community has become a thing of the past, the old-time country preacher, of whom you and I and some few others are the remaining representatives, be replaced by effective ministers of the Word in the stretch of the race belonging to the generations that are to come.

While the obstacles in the path are enough to appall us and almost shake the foundations of our faith, the end to be achieved is worth much more than the cost of success will be. The shining path of prayer is still open to us all. The world's adversities may shadow the walks of business, world conditions may shut the gate to commercial progress, business men may shake their heads and say, "It can't be done," but the path of prayer holds ever its love-lit way from our dust-covered, pilgrim feet to the foot of the Throne of God. "Victory through Faith" will ever perch upon the banners of the hosts of the church of God. High over all the tumult and shouting of the world's discordant negatives, there rings in the soul of the true believer the notes of the clarion call of the Great Leader—"All things are possible to him that believeth." Listening, we may hear in the rustle of the breezes that are wafted to us from the shores of those who cry no more the words of the fighter on Flanders Field: "To you, from falling hands, we throw the torch. Be yours to lift it high! If ye break faith with us who die, we shall not sleep, though poppies blow in Flanders Fields" Let's go!

SOME PHARISEES

were filthier, but from the wrong motive, and by the wrong method. They paid one-tenth to God, but considered as their own in an absolute sense, the nine-tenths left.

Tithing should always be an acknowledgment of Christian stewardship; never a substitute for Christian stewardship.

ASK ANY PASTOR WHO HAS TRIED IT.

If you doubt the spiritual results, and the financial revolution which follow a stewardship and tithing revival in a church, ask any pastor who has put on and over such a campaign.

BISHOP McMURRY ON THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT

My Dear Brethren: The Christian Education Movement, which is now in full swing throughout the church, was planned and projected by our General Conference, and, therefore, is not a movement of a few educational leaders but of the church itself.

The deliberate judgment of our great church on this subject, as expressed by the General Conference, was announced and published at the close of the General Conference, and has since that date been kept continually before our people.

The responsibility for the success of the movement is not upon the Director General alone, or those immediately associated with him, but upon the ministry and laity of the church, for whom the General Conference, composed of an equal number of preachers and laymen, had a right to speak, and did speak.

The difficulties in the way of the movement at the present time, owing to an unusual financial situation, have been recognized by all our leaders, but this financial condition that makes it seem difficult for us to do this work, intensifies the need for doing it.

May it not be possible that an honest, persistent effort on your part and mine will open up resources that we have not hitherto thought of?

The church is of God, and God is not unmindful of the church. If we fail not in this time of the church's need, shall we not claim the blessings of our Heavenly Father upon our labors in an unusual degree?

I appeal to you, therefore, to lead in this movement in the sphere of your responsibility, courageously, tactfully and sympathetically. Such leadership, I confidently believe, will bring results entirely satisfactory, and even beyond what we have been expecting.

Yours sincerely,

W. F. McMURRY.

MEETING OF LOUISIANA WESLEY BIBLE CLASS FEDERATION.

The Wesley Bible Class Federation at Lake Charles would have been everything its friends had hoped for, if Bishop McMurray could have honored us with his presence.

While the Federation did not open till Tuesday afternoon, delegates began to arrive on Monday and they kept coming until the last session of the last day. They came from the most distant places in the State. At no meeting of the Federation did delegates travel as many miles to attend.

The Federation is a school of principles and methods in Religious Education. It was most interesting to see delegates from fifteen to sixty years of age hard at work in the departmental conferences. The addresses of the Federation were superfine.

The address of Rev. A. S. Lutz, Educational Secretary, on Christian Education was praised by all who heard it. It is very difficult to fill a place made by the absence of any distinguished speaker, and especially is that true in the case of our much loved Bishop. Brother Lutz made a great speech.

The president and the secretary of the Federation, Judge W. G. Banks and O. H. Cline, were absent on account of sickness. Our efficient and worthy vice president, C. O. Beauchamp, presided in his most familiar way.

The Elementary Conference, led by one of the best qualified leaders in America, Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, was greeted at every session by a room filled with earnest learners and teachers of early adolescence.

The Intermediate-Senior conferences were most helpful and E. R. Stanford was a popular teacher, dealing with this difficult age of the teens.

The Young People and Adult conferences grew in interest from the first session. This class was crowded from day to day, and W. C. Owen proved a master in the classroom. This department more than any other has promoted the Federation, and we were delighted with the pleasant co-operation of Brother Owen and the others.

If I should fail to mention the Superintendent of Rural Work for our denomination, M. W. Brabham, it would not be safe for me to visit schools that sent delegates to Lake Charles. Brother "Brab," as we call him at times, filled his place on the program in a way that distinguished him as a leader. Come again, Brother Brabham, and bring all those who served us so well.

The second night of the Federation was a treat to all who came. The house was packed to hear our brilliant and progressive educator, Dr. John A. Rice, who spoke on "My Brother and I." This address was a challenge to Christian manhood and world civilization to meet the present-day crises.

The Jennings Male Chorus sang their songs with great harmony and fervent spirit. The members of the chorus were not all present; those being in attendance were Guy P. Randolph, W. F. Humphrey, W. P. Arnett, Robert Pratt, D. B. Clayton, Ben Freeman and Dr. Morgan Smith. The chorus furnished all the music for the night service. The Lake Charles American-Press put it thus: "The Jennings Male Chorus delighted the crowded auditorium at the evening session."

Miss Minnie E. Kennedy is a forceful speaker and in her address on the "Moving Picture" brought a careful resume gathered from a critical survey in which she participated. You will see a synopsis of this address elsewhere.

A few minutes were used on Wednesday night to ask those present to make a special pledge to our Methodist Sunday school work and it was done as quickly and easily as you take an offering in a regular church service. It amounted to $600. We are sure that it will be $1000 and over, when other schools, classes and individuals have been given an opportunity to contribute.

We are greatly in debt to our Publishing Agents, Smith & Lamar, for the book exhibit. Many of the books were sold.

The Federation was a great success and gives every assurance that the Methodists of Louisiana will spare no effort or money to give the Kingdom of God a chance to do its work of love and service in Louisiana.

Synopsis of Address By Miss Kennedy.

Miss Minnie E. Kennedy of Nashville, Tenn., outlined evidence of lowered ideals on the part of growing boys and girls, and spoke of certain indications that show that children are becoming sophisticated and are evidently being subjected to hurtful influences. She cited some instances.

"One young girl said to another, 'I am tired of working. I think I will get married.' The other girl answered, 'You may not better things by that.' The first one said: 'I can try marriage, and if I do not like it I can always get out of it.'"

"This and similar instances indicate low standards with reference to marriage and divorce. The present style of dress was discussed and it was argued from this method of dressing that ideals of personal modesty had been seriously affected.

"Several instances of young children committing suicide were cited to show the abnormal state of mind which appears in many children.

"In searching for causes for these lower ideals and for the sophistication of childhood, the moving picture came under consideration. Miss Kennedy said that it was not her intent to denounce moving pictures in wholesale fashion; that they are the strongest and most effective educational agency in existence in the world to-day; that this educational influence is for good or evil according to the subjects presented by the pictures. She said that moving picture authorities state that twelve million of people visit moving pictures every day in the year.

"In order that the possible effect of moving pictures upon children and youth may be ascertained, a survey of moving pictures with special relation to children and youth has just been completed. This survey covered the South and some parts of the North and West. Experienced persons were selected as surveyors. A questionnaire of ten points was given to each of these. They were asked not to select the films to be surveyed, but to take them in the order in which they were presented by the theatres. They were also asked to observe the children that were present in the theaters and to note the effect that certain parts of the film had upon them. The points to be observed, with the findings, are as follows:

Points.	Number of films Containing points.
1. Married, intrigue or unfaithfulness.....	107
2. Divorce	36
3. Immodest dress	163
4. Social or individual drinking	133
5. Indecent cabaret dancing	89
6. Interior of houses of ill fame, gambling hells or the like	119
7. Freedom of contact between sexes	184
8. Smoking by girls and women	78
9. Realistic struggle of girl or woman to defend honor	109
10. Nerve racking situations	218

"Observations were reported on 388 films. Of these only 35 were free from objectionable points. Some of these 35 were clean, wholesome comedies, some had interesting plots that entertained without undue nerve strain. Part of them had no value whatever.

"It was also found that many moving pictures reflected upon the church by representing ministers who were sissies and who played ludicrous parts in the films presented. Also many films portrayed crime in minute details.

"It was stated that all of the group of elements that relate to sex life that are enumerated in the questionnaire are particularly hurtful to growing boys and girls who are fixing their standards and life ideals. It was stated that the wave of crime now sweeping over the country, in which the majority of criminals are under 20 years of age, may be traced directly to the presentation of all kinds of crime by the moving pictures. Attention was called to the fact that persons witnessing terrible or horrible scenes tend to become careless and are brutalized. The law recognizes this fact when it decrees that executions must be in private.

"Miss Kennedy stated that the problem is largely one of the home, that fathers and mothers make up the community and may determine just what shall occur in that community. It was suggested that adequate censorship must be provided and that a standard for use by censors must also be provided. It was stated that censorship alone was not enough, but that places must be secured where only the right kind of films as tested by a standard may be presented.

"Emphasis was laid upon the fact that the home needs to provide wholesome recreation for the children; that the church and the community must also provide safe and wholesome recreation in order that attendance upon the movie may only be incidental in the child's recreational life.

"The statement was made that unless steps are taken to protect child life and youth from the impressions being made by the present type of moving pictures that another generation brought up under such influence, will inevitably overthrow the standards of the nation as well as the teachings of the church of God."

ANNA B. AUSTIN.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

Occasionally a pastor calls at the Methodist parsonage in Jackson, La., on his way to take a look at the ruins of old Centenary College. I like to accompany him, but it is often a sad visit. Many a time I have seen tears in his eyes. Tears are often like telescopes—they give a clearer vision, and one sees things more real than in laughter or joy. I love to hear their reminiscences of those happy, prosperous days. "On that platform," says Rev. N. E. Joyner, "I won a medal for my society." "There," says another, "is where I boarded; there I lived, slept and studied." "There in the old church—just there—at the altar," says Rev. W. W. Drake, "I claimed the pardon offered and purchased by Jesus Christ, and found peace." "There," says my presiding elder, Rev. J. W. Lee, "I knelt and was ordained a deacon." Then the homes of the godly women in this former "Athens of the South! I am told that in those days the women were of the best, refined, gentle, cultured, creating an atmosphere of Christian education and refinement, with a unique charm peculiar to our Southland. One of these women has just passed away from us. "One of those who," says Dr. H. B. Carré in a letter just received, "are indeed the salt of the earth." Rev. H. T. Carley writes of her, "She stood for all that is best in life."

Anna B. Austin was born in Summerville, Ala., April 12, 1848. She was united in marriage to R. S. Austin, July 6, 1876. She died January 25, 1921. For over fifty years she was a member of the M. E. Church, South. She was president of the Woman's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid, and as well as her frail body would allow, was "zealous in all good works." She was thoughtful and considerate always of the occupants of the parsonage, and all that pertained to the welfare of the church. Mrs. Austin had no children, yet in more ways than one she was truly "a mother in Israel," for she mothered and reared several children, taking them often at a very early age. One is a doctor in Texas; another is a prominent attorney at the Capital; another holds a prominent position in Bogalusa; another has risen to a responsible and high position on the editorial staff of the New York Tribune; another is the beloved and useful wife of our pastor in Baton Rouge First Church. And there are others. Her life partner, Judge R. S. Austin, is spared to us for a little longer term of usefulness. He is superintendent of the Sunday school, a steward of the church, a useful citizen as notary public, and a needful asset to our community.

Sister Austin has been "promoted," as the Salvation Army say of their dead. We call people dead when the soul has left the body; God calls people dead when the life has left the soul. We draw up our obituaries on a totally different principle from that on which they are drawn up in Heaven. We say, "a man is dead;" angels say, "a soul is born." We record the death of a man or woman; God records the death of an ideal. Old Centenary is in ruins, Sister Austin has left us, but there is continuity. "One generation shall praise Thy name to another," exults the Psalmist. And the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews grasps a wider application, when he describes the intimate relationship of past heroes and heroines to Christian posterity:

"And they all * * * received not the promise, God having provided some better thing concerning us, that apart from us they should not be made perfect." No true worker is isolated, and no real service a disjointed endeavor. That all service, faith, and effort, sooner or later flower into something beautiful, is no fancy, but a fundamental truth established by Jesus Christ.

THE EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENT IN THE MONROE-RUSTON DISTRICT.

Dear Brother Carley: I wish to say a word about the Educational Movement in the Monroe-Ruston District. The preachers and people seem determined to put forth their best efforts in this movement, as well as in all others, for the best interest of the church and for the best results.

I think we are very fortunate in securing Prof. H. E. Townsend as district director. He is a graduate of a church college, loves his church and seems enthusiastic over this great movement.

A word to the preachers of the district: Prof. Townsend will assist you in organizing your churches with church directors and committees. The co-operation of all will mean much to our church.

Fraternally yours,

K. W. DODSON, P. E.

BANISH THE BOLSHEVIK

The one sure antidote for the destructive Bolshevik spirit which now blasts at the foundations of all orderly government is Christian Education.

Apostles of anarchy are all enemies of religion and foes of the Church. None of them have a grasp on fundamentals. Their faith is in force, not in God.

Did you ever hear the graduate of a Christian college advocating violence? Or indulging in radical agitation? Or preaching sabotage?

Stability of civilization will come only through the spread of Christian culture. It will be insured only by the production of Christian leaders.

Accordingly, the most imperative and strategic enterprise of this generation is the Christian Education Movement. It deserves your support.

DROP A PEBBLE IN THE WATER.

Drop a pebble in the water. Just a splash, and it is gone;

But there are half a hundred ripples curling on and on and on;

Spreading, spreading, spreading from the center, flowing on out to the sea;

But there's not a way of telling where the end is going to be.

Drop an unkind word or careless, in a minute it is gone;

But there are half a hundred ripples circling on and on and on.

They are spreading, spreading, spreading from the center as they go,

And there's not a way to stop them once you've started them to flow.

Drop an unkind word or careless, in a minute you forget;

But there are little waves a-flowing, and there are ripples circling yet,

And perhaps in some sad heart a mighty wave of tears you've stirred,

And disturbed a life that's happy when you dropped that unkind word.

Drop a word of cheer and kindness. Just a flash, and it is gone;

But there are half a hundred ripples circling on and on and on,

Bearing hope and joy and comfort on each splashing, dashing wave,

Till you'd not believe the volume of the one kind word you gave.

Drop a word of cheer and kindness, in a minute you forget

But there's gladness still a-swelling and there's joy a-circling yet.

And you've rolled a wave of comfort whose sweet music can be heard

Over miles and miles of water, just by dropping a kind word.

THE TRAVELER.

Donald was cross. There was no denying it—very cross indeed. It wasn't this morning only, but every morning lately it had been just the same. It could not have been anything about his home, for that had everything in it which should have made a little boy happy and glad on such a beautiful morning. It could not have had anything to do with the wrong side of his bed, for that was pushed up against the wall, so that he always had to get out the same side. Yet here he was, sulky and cross as two stiks.

At breakfast there wasn't enough sugar on his oatmeal. His egg was too soft. His toast was too hard. And he was so rude to Mary that father was obliged to speak sternly. When breakfast was nearly over, father looked questioningly across at mother, as if to say, "What's to be done with such an unreasonable little boy?" Mother sent a bright little nod back in reply, that seemed to say, "Leave him to me, Daddy, dear. I'll see what can be done."

Presently she rose from the table. "Father," she said, "I'm going to send this little boy on a journey this morning before school time. His train leaves," she glanced at the clock in the corner, "in just eight minutes. He is going to sit there until train time and think, all alone by himself; and before Donald had time to ask a single question, the door closed behind father and mother.

Way down deep, Donald knew that mother meant him to think over how he had been troubling them all; but he was so busy, wondering and wondering what mother could have meant about a "journey," that he had no time for that. He couldn't help being just a little bit excited, for he did love to play train, and mother could invent just the dandiest games.

Just as the clock was slowly and solemnly ticking off the eighth minute, the door opened, and mother came back. In her hand she held a long slip of green paper which she handed to Donald without a word. It was printed in big clear letters, just the kind that Donald was very proud of being able to read. And this is what it said:

"GOOD FOR ONE FARE"

Between the following points:
GRUMPYTOWN and SMILEYVILLE.

Stops at

1. MERRYMEAD
(Front Library Window)
2. SUNNYSPOUT
(Up in the Bathroom)
3. FUNNYFIELD
(Kitchen Side Window)
4. SMILEYVILLE
(Out in the Barn)

"Huh!" growled Donald when he had finished reading. "I don't care much 'bout that! I know just what those old places are."

Mother only smiled.

"Better hurry," was all she said. "Train's leaving straight off."

"Where's Grumpytown?" demanded Donald.

"Right here in the dining-room, where you are," answered mother, rather soberly.

It was a very short run to the first stop, "MERRYMEAD," the ticket called it.

"Don't see any reason for that name," sulked Donald.

But it was the merriest kind of a place, if he had only let himself see it. Jolly Mr. Sun poured down on the broad plant shelf where pink, white, and lavender hyacinths smiled, and yellow "daffys" nodded gayly at one another. The window ledge outside was alive with little birds, hopping busily about in the sunshine, picking up the crumbs that some kind hand had provided; while above in his cage, Puffball, with head cocked on one side, poured out a song which said, "See! Did you ever see such a day!"

Donald looked a minute. Then, "Huh! Don't care much 'bout that old place!" said he.

"Is this 'SUNNYSPOUT'?" he demanded a moment later, sticking his head in at the bathroom door.

"What's that ye're sayin', Masther Donald? Sure, I'm thinkin' it's right ye are entirely. For sure th' blissid baby is a bit av a piece uv sunshine herself, she is that. Ye can look fer yerself," and Nurse Maggie pulled him gently through, into the big bright room. There in her little tub, sat Donald's baby sister, chuckling with glee as she splashed the water about and watched it drip from her tiny fat fingers. She greeted Donald with a crow of delight, and an extra big splash. He really couldn't help a glimmer of a smile, for he did love "his baby" very much; and after he had bent down to wriggle his fingers through the water at her in the way that always made her laugh, "fit to burst," as Maggie said, why, he really couldn't feel quite so cross as before.

Once more outside, he even managed to crack a little joke.

"Guess this train'll be 'xpress to the next stop," he said to himself as he shot down the banisters into the hall below.

"FUNNYFIELD" puzzled him a bit. He couldn't seem to find it, though he stood looking and looking all around the kitchen. Then as he turned to the window, he suddenly spied something that made him giggle right out!

Out on the lawn stood the big, tall snow-man soldier that Donald had made a day or two before. But how changed! You see, it had turned warm in the night, and the sun rays of the first spring day had helped to turn him into the queerest looking soldier-man Donald had ever seen. Instead of standing erect and tall, as a soldier should, he was slumped over on one side, while the stick which he had carried for a gun stuck out behind him in a lop-sided fashion. His soldier cap had slipped over one ear. One eye was gone entirely, which gave him the appearance of winking merrily at the passersby, while the melting snow trickling from his nose, made him look as if he were weeping bitterly while he winked. Altogether, he was a sight to make even a sulky little boy burst right out laughing, which is exactly what Donald did. He couldn't have helped it, to save him.

So, you see, Donald had really reached "SMILEYVILLE" even before he came to the barn, his last stop.

This time there was a real 'sure and 'sprise' waiting for him. There in the middle of the big barn floor sat a little dog! It was the cuttiest, brownest, curly-tail, best little dog that Donald had ever seen. It was the kind he had wanted and wanted for the longest time! Around his neck was a little collar, and to it was tied a printed placard which Donald had hard work to read, the little dog tricked so about him. Finally, he made it out.

"My Name is Happy-go-Lucky. Happy for Short. I am Looking for a Home. On Account of My Name, I can only Live Where Every one is Happy all the Time. I would Like to Stay Here if it is that Kind of a Place."

The little boy fairly flew in to mother. He didn't look in the least like the same child who had sat at the breakfast table.

"Mother!" he panted, "Mother! There's a little Happy-go-Lucky doggie out in the barn, 'nd he can only stay where everythin's nice and pleasant. 'Nd if any one's cross, he'd have to go right straight pop off. 'Nd, mother, could you 'n' daddy 'n' Mary 'n' Maggie be pleasant 'nd smiley all th' time, d'you think, mother, so's he c'n stay?"

Mother smiled down into the anxious, excited little face!

"We'd all try hard little son," she said. "And how about this little boy?"

"Why, 'course I would, mother. 'Course I would. I couldn't be cross if it would make my little doggie go 'way. Just cuz I didn't have any little dog, that's all I've been cross for, ever, mother. Didn't you know that?"

And I am glad to be able to tell you that Donald and Happy-go-Lucky lived together for many, many years. Frances Clark, in The Congregationalist and Advance.

"TIME OUT."

What A Shock!

"Waiter, has this steak been cooked?" "Yes, sir, by electricity." "Well, take it back and give it another shock."—Judge.

Quite Right.

"How do the Joneses seem to like their little two-room kitchenette apartment?"

"Oh, they have no room for complaint!"—Judge.

Not Permanent.

"Mr. Smith, that ham you sold me am sure bad." "Why, 'Rastus, that ham was only cured last week."

"Dat might be, Mr. Smith, but it sho' must 'a' had a relapse."—Outlook.

Didn't Want A Daughter.

"No, sir," cried the frate parent, "my daughter can never be yours."

"I don't want her to be my daughter," interrupted the young man, "I want her to be my wife."—Edinburgh Scotman.

But It Wasn't.

"What are you doing there?" asked a policeman of a woman who had stopped her automobile near a street corner and was preparing to alight. "Parking my car," she replied. "I thought this would be a good place. The sign there reads, 'Safety Zone.'"—Life.

Editorial

TO THE PREACHERS AND OTHERS INTERESTED IN THE WELFARE OF THIS ADVOCATE.

Dear Brethren: At the meeting of the Publishing Committee last fall, resolutions were framed and adopted appealing to the patronizing Conferences for adequate support for the Conference organ.

The three Conferences passed resolutions fixing as a quota for each church in Louisiana and Mississippi one subscriber for every ten members.

As manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, I am this day appealing to the preachers and church authorities to press the claims of the Conference organ. The situation is critical and the need is urgent.

OUR WORK AT BUNKIE, LA.

As stated in a personal item last week, we had the privilege of preaching to our congregation at Bunkie, La., on Sunday morning, March 13. The occasion of our visit to that delightful little town was an invitation from the pastor, Rev. George Fox, to be present at the inauguration of a new feature of the local church work—an extension of the facilities of the church to the surrounding country by means of automobile trucks to bring the children and grown people to Sunday school, as well as to the regular services of the church.

Bunkie is a prosperous town situated in the midst of one of the most fertile sections of the State. Radiating in all directions is a system of good roads, which makes easily accessible the conveniences of the town to the people throughout a large radius of territory, by means of automobiles. One of the most progressive high schools of the State is located there, its attendance kept up to a high standard by means of trucks which bring the children for miles around to school in the morning, and take them home in the afternoon. Since this plan had proved so satisfactory in connection with school work, and in other ways, it was thought that it would be equally practicable in connection with the church. With the co-operation of the Conference Board of Missions and of the General Board, funds were made available for the undertaking, and it was put into operation on the date mentioned.

Unfortunately for the initial effort, the weather was very inclement—so much so that a service could not be held at the evening hour—but the attendance at Sunday school and at the morning service was such as greatly to encourage the pastor and those who are laboring with him in this movement with the hope that it would mark a new era in the social and religious life of the community. Our own opinion is that this is a noteworthy attempt to deal in a practical way with what has hitherto been one of the serious problems in connection with making the church a vital part of the life of the people in our smaller towns and rural sections.

While we are in complete sympathy with the idea that the church should be made accessible to all the people, no matter where they may live, we do not believe that the end is to be accomplished by establishing preaching places and undertaking to build churches where, from the very nature of the case, the membership will always be small and the support too meager to command the time of an efficient preacher. We do not mean, of course, that distinctively missionary territory should not be occupied; we have in mind merely the multiplying of appointments where no real need exists. Our system of consolidated schools has proved beyond any question that a better school can be maintained at a central point by bringing the children to the school than could possibly be had under the old system of trying to maintain a school for every little neighborhood group; if this is true with reference to the school, why not with reference to the church?

The idea in the mind of those who are back of this movement is to have at Bunkie a thoroughly equipped building, a complete organization, and a well developed program for community service that will enable the church to minister in the fullest possible way to the needs of the community and then to put all these things in reach of all the people by a system of automobile transportation that will reach every family in the adjacent territory. While the work at Bunkie is in the nature of an experiment, we have every hope that it will prove eminently successful, and we shall watch its development with a great deal of interest. Brother Fox, the pastor, has his heart in the work, and he is rendering splendid service to the church at large in demonstrating the practicability of a plan of this kind. Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Centenary secretary-treasurer for Louisiana, is also greatly interested in this new work, and was present on the opening Sunday.

Our visit to Bunkie was made doubly pleasant by delightful courtesies in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Mantiply, and Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Randol, in addition to the gracious hospitality of Brother Fox.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

Mr. William H. Stockham, of Birmingham, Alabama, has made a gift of $100,000 to the Christian Education Movement of our church. This liberal layman was one of the large givers to the Centenary, and was Centenary Conference Director of the North Alabama Conference. He has given to many worthy causes, and gives not recklessly but always after careful study of the institution or cause that asks his help.

Mr. Stockham is president of the Stockham Manufacturing Company, of Birmingham, and has long been identified with the business affairs of that growing city. An honored citizen, public spirited and progressive, he is held in highest esteem by the people of Birmingham. His personal service and his money have been felt in carrying forward the enterprises of the church and all good causes. And better still, he is an active Christian layman—a man who is interested in all that makes for the spiritual progress of the church.

His statements concerning the appeal of the Christian Education Movement are worthy of consideration by our laymen. He said: "After coming out of the Centenary Campaign, I saw the need of an enlarged and better equipped ministry to further the advance of the church in all departments made possible by the success of the Centenary. This, I realized, must come about through the upbuilding of the Christian educational institutions, and that the cause of the Christian college must be the next great undertaking of the church.

"I am contributing to the Christian Education Movement in a larger way than I did to the Centenary, because I believe that education is a cause that business men and men of wealth should contribute to in a large way from their accumulated savings. Missionary work should be supported through tithing from current earnings and income. But the enlargement and endowment of our colleges is a permanent investment that should draw heavily from the accumulated resources of men of wealth, as well as from the tithe."

The example of Mr. Stockham should be followed by many of our wealthy men and women of the South. He is not one of the "big rich" men of our section. He has prospered in his business and has accumulated a fair share of wealth, but there are many men of our church more able to give than is this liberal layman of Birmingham. His gift and the gift of a like amount by former Governor H. C. Stuart, of Virginia, a Holston Conference layman, should bring many of our people of wealth to see their opportunity and their high obligation in this hour.

It is worthy of note in this connection that Mr. R. T. Moore, the financial director for Louisiana in the Christian Education Movement, announced at the mass meeting in New Orleans on March 20 that a gentleman of Shreveport, whose name he did not feel at liberty to give, had promised to give $100,000 to the cause of Christian education in this State. If other men of means would show a like liberality, Louisiana and Mississippi would both easily reach their quotas and the urgent needs of our educational institutions would be met at once. We can make more money with the money we have—but how much better to make men with it!

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY AND CHILDREN'S WEEK.

By the law of the Discipline, the last Sunday in April, or as near thereto as practicable, is set apart as Sunday School Day, on which an offering shall be taken for the support of Sunday school work, and the observance of this day is made a part of the duty of the preacher in charge. For some unaccountable reason, some of our schools have failed in the past to take any notice of this plain requirement of the law of the church; we are hoping that every Sunday school in our three Conferences will observe the day this year, and we are calling attention to it at this time in order that every superintendent and pastor may be reminded that the time for its observance will soon be at hand.

The offering taken on this day is used solely for the support of our Sunday school work, fifty per cent of it going to the General Sunday School Board and fifty per cent to the Conference Board, except that in those Conferences employing a Sunday school field secretary, seventy-five per cent of the offering goes to the Conference Board. Each of our three Conferences has an efficient field secretary, so a liberal offering at this time will go a long way toward strengthening this most important work in our own territory. Programs have been prepared, which may be had for the asking, and we earnestly urge all our schools to begin preparation at once for a successful Sunday School Day this year.

In the same connection, we wish to call attention to Children's Week, a period embracing April 24-May 1, to be used to arouse in the minds of the adults in the home, the church, and the community, an increased desire to give the child adequate moral and spiritual development. It is impossible to over-estimate the importance of providing for the proper religious education of our children, and it is equally impossible to devote too much time to this important subject. Suggestions and a suitable program have been prepared by the General Sunday School Board for the observance of Children's Week, and we urge all our pastors, superintendents, and teachers to secure them and give to the matter the attention its importance deserves.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"We are moving on very nicely over in this corner of the State," writes Rev. H. E. Carter, of Iuka, Miss.

Rev. W. E. Dickens, of Pachuta, Miss., writes that his work is moving along nicely, and that he is planning for a great year.

Dr. Frank W. Gumsaulus, one of the most widely known ministers in America, died suddenly on March 17, at the age of sixty-five.

Our church at Macon, Miss., is in the midst of a great revival, in which the pastor, Rev. Olin Ray, is being assisted by Rev. W. A. Wilson.

Mrs. A. B. Franklin, of Stage, Miss., in a business note to the Advocate, takes occasion to speak very appreciatively of the work of the pastor of the Trenton charge, to which she belongs.

Rev. W. H. Lane, our pastor at Lauderdale, Miss., is expecting a good work on his charge this year. The Sunday schools are taking on new life, and all departments of the church are active.

"I have been taking the Advocate for a long time, and I do not see how a loyal member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, can do without it," writes Brother Jno. A. White, of Clinton, La.

Dr. Theodoro Copeland has recently been engaged in holding a very successful meeting in Corpus Christi, Texas. At the time we saw an account of the meeting, eighty members had been added to the church.

The outlook on the Walnut Grove charge, Mississippi Conference, is very bright, writes the pastor, Rev. J. W. Price. Brother Price expresses the determination to put the Advocate into as many homes of his people as possible.

A revival meeting was begun at Rayne, La., on Thursday evening, March 24, the pastor, Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, being assisted by Rev. C. A. Battle, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District. The outlook for the meeting is encouraging.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation to attend the second series of lectures on the Fonden Foundation at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, April 5-9. The lectures this year will be delivered by Bishop John M. Moore.

In spite of a downpour of rain just preceding the event, the banquet of the Big Brothers' Class, at Greenville, Miss., held recently, was attended by at least 150 people. This class is one of the great achievements of North Mississippi Methodism.

The Kossuth charge, North Mississippi Conference, consisting of three churches, is well organized and is making splendid progress under the pastorate of Rev. C. E. Downer. The first quarterly conference, held at Pleasant Hill church, was an inspiring occasion.

The new church at Powhatan, on the Bossier City and Lake End charge, Louisiana Conference, will be dedicated on Sunday, April 3, by Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District. Rev. J. M. Boykin is the faithful pastor under whose leadership the church has been built.

Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Amory, Miss., has recently been in Sanford, Fla., in a meeting with P. M. Boyd and Mr. Twilley, at the church of which Dr. Shade Walker is pastor. The meeting was a great one, the congregations exceeding the capacity of the house, and scores of members being added to the church.

A revival meeting will begin at Houston, Miss., on April 17, the pastor, Rev. E. M. Shaw, being assisted by Rev. W. A. Wilson, Conference evangelist. The work at Houston is in good shape, the Sunday school being active, the Woman's Missionary Society well organized, and the congregations encouraging in size and interest.

The editor of the Advocate was absent from the office several days last week, visiting his mother in Ellsville, Miss., who was seriously ill. Her condition is considerably improved at the present time. During his absence appreciated calls were made at the office by Rev. J. M. Alford, of Mangham, La., and Brother J. S. Felder, of McComb, Miss.

The Advocate has received a check for $16.75, sent by our South McComb Church, McComb, Miss., through the pastor, Rev. W. A. Terry, for the Chinese Famine Fund. This amount has been promptly forwarded to Mr. J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer of the Board of Missions, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., by whom it will be applied to the purpose specified.

The members of the Young Ladies' Senior Bible Class, at Crawford, Miss., were entertained by their teacher, Mrs. G. P. Waller, on Thursday afternoon, March 17. Of the seventeen members on the roll of the class, fifteen were present. The time was delightfully spent in devotional exercises and social recreation, after which refreshments were served. This class is wide-awake to the opportunities for service in the community.

A good report comes to us of the services at First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., on Easter Sunday. The pastor, Rev. E. S. Lewis, received thirty-nine members into the church, twenty-five of them on profession of faith. Sixty members have been added to this church since Conference, just half of them on profession of faith. A revival meeting will be begun next Sunday by the pastor, and Dr. Geo. W. Read, of Athens, Ala., will arrive to do the preaching by April 8.

Rev. J. L. Neill, Superintendent of the Department of Missionary Education, General Sunday School Board, spent last Friday and Saturday in New Orleans, being en route to Cuba, where he will spend a month in holding a series of institutes for the training of Sunday school workers in that important field. We greatly enjoyed the privilege of spending some hours with Brother Neill and hearing good reports of the progress of the Sunday school work throughout the church.

It was a great shock to the people of Houston, Miss., and the surrounding territory when it became known that Mr. R. B. Wright, of that place, had met death suddenly by coming into contact with a live wire in his garage. Mr. Wright was well known throughout the State, and was related to some of the prominent families of Tennessee. He was a member of the Methodist Church, and was a highly esteemed citizen. The Advocate joins in extending sympathy to all those who have been bereaved by his passing.

Dr. H. A. Boaz, president of Southern Methodist University, and Dr. Ed F. Cook, president of Scarritt Bible School, were named as associate directors of the Christian Education Movement at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Educational Commission on March 26. For the next two months, they will give all their time to this work. Dr. H. M. Whaling taking over much of the work of Dr. Boaz at S. M. U., and Dr. W. B. Nance relieving Dr. Cook at Scarritt. Dr. Boaz will give attention especially to the Movement in the five Texas Conferences, while Dr. Cook will work largely in Missouri.

According to reports coming to us, the Easter services in our New Orleans churches were unusually well attended. A special feature at the Carrollton Avenue Church, which the editor attended, was the inauguration of a movement looking to the erection of an adequate Sunday school building. After a simple statement concerning the desire to provide the necessary equipment for the great work being done at this church and the plan to provide this additional building, the congregation was given the opportunity to make subscriptions for the purpose. More than $2000—the amount asked for—was the result of the appeal. Rev. Ellis Smith is the energetic pastor of this church.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

Dear Brethren: As many of the subscriptions of preachers have not been renewed for this year, I am asking that you look at the little address label on the Advocate this week, and if you are in arrears, please send in your renewal at once. The situation is critical and the need is urgent.

A GREAT SUMMER SCHOOL FOR TOWN AND CITY WORKERS.

At Conway, Arkansas, June 7 to the 17th, there will be held a school for city workers, both men and women. This will be held simultaneously with the School for Rural Workers. The full program for the City School will be announced later.

Already we have secured such teachers as Dr. J. S. Seneker, Dr. Worth M. Tippey, Dr. A. C. Zumbrennen, Dr. Forney Hutchinson, Dr. C. C. Selcman, Dr. Belle Bennett, and others. All who are interested in studying the serious problem of how the church may deliver itself upon our rapidly growing cities, should plan to attend this school.

Look for detailed program and other items later. But put it on your schedule now to attend this school at Conway, Arkansas, June 7 to the 17th.

O. E. GODDARD.

A CORRECTION.

By an inadvertence, we failed to add some dates for quarterly conferences for the Monroe-Ruston District as given in the regular announcements on another page. The additions are as follows: Elmore, at New Prospect, April 30-May 1; Oak Grove, at Forest, May 8; Midway and Epps, at Epps, May 8-9; Eros, at Indian Village, May 14-15. The district conference will be held at Lake Providence, May 3-5. The pastors of the district are requested to send the names of delegates to the presiding elder, Rev. K. W. Dodson, at their earliest convenience.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Lake Charles District Conference will meet at Rayne, La., April 26-28. Because of the increased size of the district and its entirely changed boundaries, it is of great importance that the pastor and his committee have the names of all delegates at the earliest possible date. You will confer a great favor upon us if you will elect your delegates immediately and send the names of those you are reasonably certain will attend, to Rev. E. C. Gunn, Rayne, La.

The pastor regrets that he finds it necessary to state that only the delegates and official visitors can be provided entertainment.

Thank you!

ELMER C. GUNN, Pastor.

A GOOD QUARTERLY CONFERENCE REPORT.

To The Second Quarterly Conference, Bunkie, La.

Brethren: I beg to submit the following report of the work of the Bunkie charge, following the order as laid down in the Discipline:

Epworth Leagues: An Epworth League was organized last July, but I have made no report of its work heretofore, for the reason that I did not think its work was of sufficiently permanent character to warrant making a report of it. I am now satisfied that our League has reached the point where its permanency seems assured, and where it is beginning to function and has become a real part of our church organization. Its membership is growing, and its meetings are adding new interest all the time. We have reason to expect that in the near future our Epworth League will become one of the real live parts of the church.

Sunday Schools: Our Sunday school is very much alive, and doing splendid work. During the present quarter we have completely organized a primary department and separated it from the rest of the school. Mrs. E. G. Sewell is the Primary Superintendent, and under her direction that branch of the school is doing excellent work.

The other branches of the school are also doing good work, and while there remains much to be desired in the way of improvement, we realize that our Sunday school is one to be proud of, and we are working constantly to make such improvements as are desirable, and that can be made at this time.

The Sunday school has been particularly active in raising funds for such worthy causes as are brought to its attention, and within the past month has contributed $100 to the relief of the starving people of China; and $60 for a missionary special, which it has carried for some years. The school has also contributed to the fund that is being raised to meet the payments on our new piano, and in other ways having a large part in the success of the general church work.

Missions: The church is ever mindful of its missionary responsibility, and is now perfecting plans to reach with its good offices all the people living in the surrounding territory, of which more will be said under the next topic.

The Woman's Missionary Society is an active body, and looks well at all times to the material needs of the church. It has raised money to paint and make repairs on the parsonage, and that work is now being done. Besides this, the Society is studying the needs of the mission fields both at home and abroad, and is constantly making contributions to the missionary and benevolent enterprises of the church. I wish I had a more specific account of its various activities, but rest assured that no cause is allowed to suffer which is placed in the hands of our W. M. S.

Plans for future work: Our plans are now about matured for the launching of a campaign which has for its purpose the extending of the scope of our work. It is proposed to reach out into the adjacent territory and seek to induce the people living within a radius of at least ten miles to connect themselves with our church. To this end we have engaged the services of two public school transfers, which are to be operated every Sunday over the improved highways to bring the people, and especially the children, into our Sunday school and church services. One of these trucks will make its initial trip on Sunday, March 13, and continue to make regular trips for the remainder of the calendar year. The second truck will start about March 27, and continue till the end of the year.

The church has also purchased a Ford car for the use of the pastor, to be used by him to reach and visit these people in the surrounding country, which is part of the plan for our enterprise.

Not being financially able to carry out this enterprise, we applied to the Board of Missions, and received assistance in the sum of $500 from the General Board, and $250, from the Conference Board. With these sums of money in hand, we are assured of sufficient funds to carry on the work for the entire year; and feel absolutely sure that with the co-operation of the official board and members of the church, our enterprise must succeed.

We, therefore, beg the co-operation and prayers of the entire church, that God may so direct this work that his name may be glorified as the result of these efforts.

We are happy in the degree of success that has already been attained in this little corner of the Master's vineyard; let us pray together, and labor together, that still greater things may be achieved in his name.

Respectfully submitted,
GEO. FOX, P. C.

RARE AND PATHETIC.

Dear Brother Carley: While doing pastoral work last Saturday, a few miles east of Batesville, Mississippi, we visited a home in which the people were Methodist inclined, but none of them were members of the church.

The family consisted of the old gentleman and his wife—both of whom are in their seventy-eighth year—and one single son and two single daughters. They also have a married son living near by, who was also not a church member. The old people are very decrepit, especially the old man, whose body is badly distorted by age and rheumatism.

When we appealed to the old people to accept Christ and confess Him by uniting with the church, they replied that they would like to do so, but were not able to go out to the church. We told them that we could take them into the church at home as well as at the church, and would do so the following afternoon if they were will-ling. To this they gladly gave their assent. In the meantime, we did some personal work with the younger members of the family, quoting the text: "Behold, now is the accepted time. Behold, now is the day of salvation." And each one seemed genuinely to accept Christ. And instead of receiving only the father and mother into the church, we received the whole family, including the married son, baptizing all of them except the old lady, who had been baptized in infancy.

The father did not know that all of his children—the youngest of whom will soon be forty years of age—were going to join the church with him until we were about to begin the service, when he began to shout, and shout, and shout. And we began to fear that he might go on to glory before taking the vows or being baptized.

We are sure that we have never held a more impressive service or witnessed a more pathetic scene. There were a number of visitors present, and we had a real hallelulah time.

These people are not of the riff-raff kind, but are good citizens, of average intelligence, are good providers, own their own home with five or six hundred acres of land, and are esteemed by all who know them for their sturdy moral character. And there is general rejoicing throughout the surrounding country. Let all who read this rejoice with us and give God the praise.

T. H. PORTER.

Senatobia, Miss.

LESSON FOR APRIL 3

Lesson Topic: The Christian Standard of Character.

Scripture Lesson: Romans 12:1-2, 9-21.

Golden Text: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." Luke 6:31.

Home Readings: Monday, Living with Others, Romans 12:1-8; Tuesday, Ministering to Others, Romans 12:9-21; Wednesday, Sharing with Others, Philippians 4:10-20; Thursday, Forgiving Others, Matt. 6:5-14; Friday, Doing for Others, Acts 11:19-30; Saturday, Humble among Others, Luke 22:24-26; Sunday, The Godly Life, Psalm 101:1-7.

Teaching Points.

1. Character is what a man really is—not what people think he is.
2. Character is supremely important in that it determines destiny.
3. Character cannot be formed apart from association with our fellow-men. It has inevitable social relations.
4. The Golden Rule gives a perfect rule for Christian character in action.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

It is not prudent for a man to tell all he sees "behind the curtain." I can't help but wonder why it is a brother worker will not answer a card when he is furnished with the reply card already addressed. An impudent answer is better than none at all.

Literature has been ordered for most of the churches in the Conference for the observance of Sunday School Day. If you have not received a supply, let me know the amount you need. We all know the observance of this day is not a matter of choice; it is the law of the church. It is the only day in the year when the children are given an opportunity to express themselves in public. Had this day not been observed in the past, we would not have made the progress in religious education of the masses we have made.

Have you read the April number of the Sunday School Magazine? It is full of good things for the circuit Sunday school. Have you read the last issue of the Home Quarterly Magazine? It can be made a great help in establishing family altars. Some fastidious people think there is better literature published by other churches. It is all a matter of judgment.

The faculty for our Training School to be held at Grenada College, June 20-25, is nearly complete. First-class teachers of religious education are scarce. This is a great field open to a hundred young men and women in Mississippi. Choose some branch of it and get ready for a useful calling or profession.

One piece of work our organized classes might do is to go into the country churches and help organize classes where they are so badly needed. We are getting ready for the federation of these classes in June just before our training school. Let everybody get busy and organize every class from the intermediate up to the adults. Organize for a purpose and work at the job until it is done. No need to ask for something to do. There is plenty for us all to keep us occupied for a long time to come.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

This week has been taken up almost entirely with personal work. We have exhibited the pictures four times, with varying success, though the general comments are fine and we believe that they are going to do us much good.

I take great pleasure in reporting a Standard Rank 1 Department of intermediates for the first time in my life. This is at Capitol Street, Jackson, with Dr. Hardie R. Hays as superintendent. I feel that this department, if it keeps on as it has started, will be of tremendous service and power in the church. I trust that other Intermediate Departments will follow suit and measure up to the Standard.

Rev. Otto Porter reports the reorganization of the Sunday school at Fannin. We are glad to get this cheering news.

Brother Langford, from East End, Meridian, reports 35 more people in actual attendance in Sunday school than they reported members of the church at the last Annual Conference. They are planning for one thousand to be present Easter. I trust that they will not be disappointed.

Gulfport's Cradle Roll still leads anything I have heard from. The report from Miss Rabbis, the Superintendent, shows that she is doing a vast amount of work and I am sure that God is blessing her and her workers. There are 132 on Roll, 40 in actual attendance.

Mrs. Gully, the Superintendent of the Home Department, reports the best Home Department that we have on record. Gulfport is a good school and has many things to be proud of.

Jim Lewis, at Collins, reports continued success with his prayer meetings and Sunday school attendance.

Sunday School Day is the 4th Sunday in April. The Oak Ridge Sunday school has already observed the day and sent in their offering. Hurrah for Brother Cain! Who will be next? Give us a good day this year. We feel that we are deserving your hearty cooperation.

The Standard Training School meets at Jackson, June 7-11. Plan to be with us. See that your Sunday school is represented here. Talk the School and help us to get it in the hearts and minds of the people.

Money still comes in for the multi-graph, but not nearly enough to purchase one. We will appreciate your help in this important matter.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless you.

Your brother in Him.

JNO. C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Lake Charles Methodist Church was a great host for Methodist Federation. Thank you, Pastor W. W. Holmes!

The plan for the departmental meeting was successfully carried out and it was a great school in Religious Education—a new type and full of information.

See notes on Children's Week in Advocate. Read the articles in Adult Student and Magazine. Will you, Pastor and superintendent, be one of 100 to observe this week and notify us at Alexandria? We will keep record of your acceptance. Read the letter mailed you March 21—re-read it.

The Mansfield Standard Training School, Louisiana Conference, M. E. Church, South, will be held at Mansfield College, June 15-22. It will begin the day after the Epworth League Assembly closes. Five courses will be offered and the faculty will be thoroughly competent.

Thanks to all presiding elders, pastors and Sunday school superintendents, Federation officers, district Sunday school officers and all workers for helping to make the Federation so conspicuous a success.

A GREAT REVIVAL IN THE LAFAYETTE COUNTY AGRICULTURAL HIGH SCHOOL NEAR OXFORD, MISS.

By Mrs. J. S. Calloway.

In response to a pressing invitation from our noble superintendent, Prof. M. P. Bush, on March 7, Rev. J. E. Stephens, of New Albany, Miss., came to conduct a series of services in our school. Coming as he did in the sweet, humble, Christ-like spirit, he at once entwined himself about the hearts and lives of our boys and girls, and faculty as well, so closely from the beginning that he had very little time alone. His sermons were practical, logical, and filled with the gospel of Jesus Christ, so plain, simple and clear that a child could grasp the truths, and yet filled with rich, deep thought for the more mature, highly cultivated minds. All hung on his every word and there was little thought even in these extremely busy weeks and hours of school work other than that of how to come to Christ and show others the way. Every one was so much concerned that even between services the guest room, where the friend of sinners and true servant of Jesus Christ was entertained, was filled from early till the late hour at night with those seeking his help, advice and prayers. As a result many found their Savior in that room. Brother Stephens didn't think even of himself, the need of rest, food or anything but saving souls. It was indeed a beautiful picture to see these boys and girls as they were saved go bring others; and while Brother Stephens showed them as they'd never been shown the way of salvation, prayer was being made in other rooms in their behalf. In this work of faith and love God honored us by sending the Holy Spirit and filling each heart and life with joy and a new vision. In the language of the entire school, "This is a new place"—not one left unsaved. One of our faculty called Brother Stephens the "miracle man," because all who came under his influence were changed. Why? Because his life is given wholly into the hands of God.

One conference after another was held with the young men and women in regard to their life work, and a great number signed a pledge to seek to know the will of God and be used in any way He should lead them. Four signed for special work, one of that number being our history teacher, a

MRS. HAYDOCK SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Followed Advice of Her Druggist's Wife and Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved Mrs. Haydock from an operation we cannot claim that all operations may be avoided by it,—but many women have escaped operations by the timely use of this old fashioned root and herb medicine.

splendid young man. His prayer of submission on the night of his full surrender will live always in the hearts of those who heard it.

A class of ten fine young people were received into the Methodist Church by Brother Stephens and there are fifteen to join the Baptist Church, which will be attended to by Rev. Rowland Leavell, pastor of that church in Oxford. Sunday, two will join the Presbyterian Church, while there will be one who will be received into the Episcopal Church.

The last service, that of consecration at the evening hour Sunday, was most sublime. After presenting in the plainest way possible the great need of laborers whose lives were dedicated to the Master, so that no one could be mistaken in regard to the work or cost of it, Brother Stephens was almost overcome when nearly the entire student body and part of the faculty moved forward in response to his proposition or call for volunteers.

A flower service, which was very impressive, was the closing feature, and about all that could find room pinned them on the preacher as a token of blessings he'd brought to their lives. It has been the privilege of the writer to know him from the beginning of his ministry, and to love him as a member of the family. He, his wife and children, and his coming to us in this way, were a joy inexpressible.

FROM MER ROUGE, LA.

Perhaps a word from Mer Rouge, La., will be of interest to some of the brethren. We began a meeting at Mer Rouge, March 6, and closed out, March 20. We had 33 additions to the church on profession of faith, and baptized 24 adults.

Rev. H. W. Cudd, of Tallulah, La., did the preaching except the first day—this was done by the pastor. Cudd is a plain, practical, gospel preacher. I think he is religious. My people fell very much in love with him. He likes Mer Rouge, I think. You know what that means, but I hope he will be content with Tallulah until my four years are out. We hope by that time to have a $50,000 church with a brown stone front.

USED IN ONE FAMILY FOR YEARS

Bellepoint, W. Va.—"It affords me great pleasure to have the privilege to make public this statement in behalf of Dr. Pierce's medicines I cannot recommend them too highly to the public. We have used them in our family for years and have reaped good results. We have always found the 'Golden Medical Discovery' superior to any other tonic, as it is a wonderful system builder. I can cheerfully recommend it to all like sufferers."—E. J. CARPER.

Send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N.Y., for trial package.

This is our second year at Mer Rouge and Oak Ridge. Our attendance at the church services and Sunday school has increased every Sunday for the last six months; our prayer meeting will average about thirty; we have had up to this date, this year, 38 additions to the church; this year we are hopeful of a great spiritual uplift for the church.

We have a fine class of people to serve. We want your prayers that God will lead us, that we may lead them to a greater spiritual life.

J. R. ROY, P. C.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT NOTES.

Brother Fontaine reports encouraging progress throughout the Bienville charge. A live Epworth League with 41 members has recently been organized in the Bienville church.

The Sunday school in Arcadia has grown to such an extent that the need of a new church is being keenly felt.

On the Belcher and Gilliam charge, the Sunday school attendance is greater at both points than the church membership. At Gilliam, an unusually fine Junior Epworth League has been organized under the supervision of Mrs. R. T. Douglas.

Out of eighteen members of the official board in the Mansfield church, all except two are regular members of the Sunday school and a good percentage of them are teachers.

The Mooringsport church is being extensively remodeled to meet the needs of the growing Sunday school. Revival services will begin there April 1, under the evangelistic leadership of Rev. Dan Kelly.

A Clear Brain and healthy body are essential for success. Business men, teachers, students, housewives, and other workers say Hood's Sarsaparill gives them appetite and strength, and makes their work seem easy. It overcomes that tired feeling.—Adv.

There is notable progress in Oil City. A careful religious survey is being made of the scattered population of this oil-field center. After some difficulty, a satisfactory site has been secured and the new church building will be erected in the near future.

The work in Vivian church is very prosperous. The ten-days' laymen's prayer meeting, of which an account has been given by Brother Reames, was a remarkable manifestation of spiritual life.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Young People's Department.
Mrs. T. W. Baker.

You will be interested in the following quotation from Mrs. Perry's fourth quarter's report in 1920: "The Conference making the largest gain in new auxiliaries are: North Georgia, 10; North Mississippi, 10; Texas, 8. In membership, the largest gain was: Virginia, 421; North Mississippi, 374, and North Georgia, 280."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

One of the most enjoyable hours spent at the recent Annual Meeting at Baton Rouge, was a brief time during a morning session when we heard about, "The Best Thing in My Auxiliary in 1920."

Mrs. Cunningham told of a wonderful "Rainbow Luncheon" given by their auxiliary, beautiful in every appointment, clever in every detail; she did not say, but we all wondered if the proverbial bag of gold was not discovered on this occasion.

Mrs. Joyner said there were three such "best things" to tell of their auxiliary at Baton Rouge—she could not say just which was best. Early in the year they had united three organizations into one, becoming a missionary auxiliary with 140 members, and had since gained 40, making a large membership now of 180; the attendance is sometimes 75 at the meetings. Second, co-operation of all the missionary societies in the city in community social service work. They are doing through this agency some definite welfare work for the Negro. Then, again, that Tuesday is respected as missionary day by all religious bodies of the town.

Mrs. Stealle, of Mansfield, spoke of how their auxiliary is divided into circles, of how one of the circles gave a social, with the attendant good time and refreshment, on which occasion there were 52 present; but shortly afterward the circle was called together at a purely business meeting and the attendance exceeded by 4 the previous social affair.

Mrs. W. S. Kenton, of Winnsboro, is interested in extension of work. Their auxiliary of 40 members got up a good program, together with some social feature, and invited the women from two nearby villages, Crowville and Boeuf Prairie. As a result of this meeting, they were expecting, by some "follow-up" work, to succeed in organizing an auxiliary at both places.

On one occasion, Mrs. Cunningham offered a banner for the best circle attendance; all of the members were out except two—one was house-cleaning, the other was seeing to hog-killing. We have to excuse those two ladies, for people must have clean houses and food, though most of us nowadays would rather go to meeting.

Mrs. Giles, of Springhill, gave an interesting report of what their auxiliary has done. They organized three years ago and now have 30 members; their church membership is 75—and each family is represented in the auxiliary. Their growth has been steady in spirituality, and they do systematic mission and Bible study. Through their work, sentiment has been created which has called for Springhill's becoming a preaching station. A church and parsonage have been built and furnished.

Mrs. Key, of Shreveport, gave us a glimpse of their Young Peoples' work. This auxiliary is made up of a large number of young women, a good many of whom work. Once a month, on Thursday night, a luncheon is served at the church at the small cost to the girls of 25 cents a cover—every thing is donated. While the young women are leisurely enjoying this evening meal, they discuss missionary business and missions in general. Sometimes an interesting story from one of the study books is told. Another thing that the Young People are doing is to have prayer service for the old ladies and for shut-ins.

Mrs. C. K. Sheppard, of Mansfield, said that their Young People had pledged $50 last year and paid $100. She thought the "best thing," however, was that they were preparing girls eventually to carry on the Adult auxiliaries and to become even Conference officers.

Mississippi Holds Honor of First College for Women.

When the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution meets in Washington next month, a feature of the convention will be a pageant in which will be represented the most outstanding woman character in the pioneer history of each State. At the recent State conference of the Mississippi D. A. R., the State's representative was chosen without a dissenting voice, although to many the name of Elizabeth Roach was unfamiliar.

In 1818 Mrs. Elizabeth R. Roach donated to the Mississippi Methodist Conference a lot and buildings for a school for young women in the little town of Washington, the territorial capital, and the center of political and social influence. In her honor, Elizabeth Female College was named, and in 1819 it was chartered by the legislature to bestow degrees, the first institution in the world to grant that distinction to a woman.

Wesleyan Female College at Macon, Ga., established eighteen years later, in 1836, claims the distinction of being the oldest in the point of continuous existence. This is the case, since the Elizabeth Female College was burned, and when the disaster was followed by the removal of the capital of Mississippi to Jackson, and a shifting of population with an epidemic of fever, the academy never was reorganized.

For many years the Elizabeth Female College was the first institution of high grade in all the South for the education of young women. Its boarding pupils averaged from 26 to 63, and among its Louisiana graduates were Misses Ellen V. Keavy, Pinckneyville; Martha D. Washington, Ouachita; Mary and Charlotte Scott, Alexandria; Mary E. Gordon, Alexandria, and Mary A. B. Chandler, Pinckneyville.

By-Laws of Early College.

The Mississippi Historical Society owns a copy of the first by-laws of the college, which would make interesting reading for the modern college girl who manages her own student government system.

"On Appropriation of Time" is the heading of one section. "All pupils boarding in common shall convene in the large schoolroom at sunrise in the morning and at eight o'clock in the evening for prayers.

"The hours of teaching shall be from 9 o'clock in the morning until noon, and from 2 o'clock in the afternoon, until 5; but in May, June and July they shall begin one hour sooner in the morning and continue until noon and from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 6; Friday evening excepted, when the school shall be dismissed at 5."

Under "Discipline and Dress" come the following restrictions which might well stagger a modern college student:

"No pupil shall be permitted to receive ceremonious visits. All boarders in common shall wear a plain dress and uniform bonnets. No pupil shall be permitted to wear beads, jewelry, artificial flowers, curls, feathers or any superfluous decoration. No pupil shall be allowed to attend balls, dancing parties, theatrical performances or festive entertainments."

Reward of Students.

And this was the reward: "Students who have completed the full course above, shall be entitled to the honors of the institution, with a diploma on parchment, for the degree of Domina Scientiarum. Those who have pursued with honor the whole course of studies shall be entitled to remain one academic year, free of charge for tuition, and to be associated in an honorary class, to be engaged in the pursuit of science and polite literature, and ornamental studies, after which they shall be entitled to an honorary diploma.—Times-Picayune.

MESSAGE OF GRATITUDE.

There are feelings too deep to be portrayed, even did we command the most gifted vocabulary. Words utterly fail us in an attempt to give expression from our grateful hearts for the kind services rendered us during our recent misfortune.

From the moment that the "S. O. S." call was sent, "helping-hands" were at our service, and despite a cold and very disagreeable downpour of rain, the most heroic battle we have ever witnessed was waged against the angry flames that reduced to ashes our dear little home.

For the willing offers, the tireless service rendered in our behalf; and for the expressions which followed from liberal and loyal hearts in desire to supply our immediate needs, we hold inexpressible gratitude, and to each one we wish to say that while:

Never, no never, by word or deed, could it ours ever fall—
The expressions of your royal hearts full to repay,
But in the harvest field of life, be it yours to reap, should you call—
In golden grain, by God's own good and mysterious way.

Most gratefully, signed: W. F. Johnson, Mrs. Lula Johnson, Miss Katie Spraggins.

REVIVAL MEETING AT HOLLY SPRINGS, MISS.

Rev. W. A. Wilson, Conference Evangelist of the North Mississippi Conference, began a meeting with us in Holly Springs, Feb. 27, and continued for two weeks. We have just closed, so I want to give you a notice of what was done.

To-day (Monday) Holly Springs is in a spiritual atmosphere the like of which has not been experienced for years. Without a doubt we had a sweeping revival of experimental religion. I have never seen the power of the Holy Spirit so forcibly demonstrated as was manifested from service to service. Brother Wilson came depending on the power of God; before many days we saw the whole church and town being grasped by something which brought people to church in crowds. The capacity of the church was taxed often. Forty-five united with the Methodist Church, forty of that number by profession of faith. Some joined other churches. Old members of the church tell me that they have not seen such a revival here in many years. We rejoice that God has blessed us so mercifully.

Brother Wilson is a preacher of no mean ability; in fact, he is an extra strong proclaimer of the Gospel. He preaches with a strange winsomeness, which comes from love, truth, and confidence. The Wesleyan type of evangelist is in order. We need men who are wise enough to trust God and tactful enough to know when to use human instruments.

Pray for us that we as a church may nourish our newly-born children.

A GREAT REVIVAL AT FRANKLINTON, LA.

My Dear Brother Carley: We closed a 17 days' meeting here last night March 15. It was a big revival. Great crowds attended from the first to the closing service, often overflowing the large auditorium. Many were converted, and 45 joined our church. About 100 men and women pledged to lead in public prayers and conduct prayer meetings. The whole town felt the weight of the meeting, and hundreds resolved to live a more consecrated and active life. The Rev. Dan Kelly and his brother, John, were here 15 days. Brother Dan was thoroughly at himself and preached with mighty unction and power. He is one of our very best all-around evangelists. Brother John, cornetist, is a fine Christian gentleman, pleases and edifies the people, "blowing his own horn." He rendered valuable assistance. We have received 58 into the church this year, our Sunday school has grown in attendance from about 100 to 184, and Methodism is now leading all other denominations here.

Sincerely,
L. W. CAIN.

HOW TO PRESENT THE PRINCIPLES OF STEWARDSHIP.

By J. J. Stowe.

A very large number of the pastors of our church are aroused on the importance of getting to the church to-day. Christ's teachings concerning the stewardship of property. Some are enquiring how it can be done in an effective way.

First of all, the pastor himself must be gripped by the importance of this doctrine. He must give to it earnest, prayerful, continuous study until it shall burn in his very soul, creating a passionate desire to bring his people to the right position. The man who sees the appalling need, the grim necessity for the proclamation of this message, will be so earnest about it that the fire in his own soul will catch among his members.

Did Christ consider the truth of God's ownership and our stewardship of property a really important matter, or was it a mere accident that he had so much to say on this subject? Of course, He gave the peculiar emphasis because of its peculiar importance. The pastor's profound desire to bring his people face to face with the message of the Master may not concern the question of why it should be presented.

While motive is of supreme importance, method is not to be despised. First the pastor should speak on the subject, to the individual and group in his pastoral work, in the prayer meeting, and from the pulpit. He should utilize others to assist in this work, organizing such committees as the situation calls for. He should see that the leaflet literature dealing with the subject is systematically distributed. He should call upon others to join him in prayer, that the Spirit may lead and empower the workers, and convict and convert those who are holding the heathen idea of absolute ownership of property. He should patiently, and tactfully, and earnestly and prayerfully bring his people to make the right decision.

A pledge to tithe as an acknowledgment of Christian stewardship, and as a beginning of Christian liberality will be of immense value in producing conviction, encouraging decision, and stabilizing impressions.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM.

By Rev. E. N. Evans.

Let the nervous reader take notice that I am not here and now, elsewhere or at any other time arguing the rights or wrongs of men in matters of "eating meats," chewing herbs or smoking weeds either on Sunday or some other day.

Whether it be right or wrong for this man or that man so to eat, chew or smoke, is not a matter for conscience to determine. If he have a conscience in the matter, I advise that he keep it clean by abstaining therefrom, and I have no disposition to force upon him a plug of the nauseous weed, in order to give a more liberal conscience.

The things against which I do here and now protest, and shall forever, etc., are his pugnacious disposition to argue with the other fellow, and the spirit of intolerance which animates him in his persistent efforts to make his conscience the rule of action for other people. It is the limit of scriptural requirement that I receive such an one, but refuse to argue with him. "Doubtful disputations" lead not to "godly edifying." If the Ten Commandments contained a positive order against the "eating of meats," the "chewing of herbs" or the "smoking of weeds," there could be no liberty of conscience in the matter; but the reverse is true, and the "new commandment" deals with a spirit of cordiality in our social relations.

I am persuaded that we might be happier and mayhap better in society if we judged not one another in matters which one's conscience alloweth. Such judgment is not always infallible, and may lead to the appearance of a spirit of intolerance hurtful to some saints. Such a spirit is not found in disciplinary methods of Holy Writ, and is rarely helpful to the higher cause of religious freedom.

Since the Kingdom does not consist of meats, herbs and weeds, but rather of these higher principles of the spirit—brotherly love, religious tolerance, and some freedom of conscience, with a deep sense of the fact that "One is our judge, even God." St. Paul gave some wise and wholesome counsel in these matters.

It is the higher principle of religious freedom for which I plead, not the matters of eating meats, chewing herbs or smoking of weeds. These are matters of indifference as compared with the spirit of intolerance of some self-constituted judges of God's children. Let us live in peace and charity.

The conceited man is a man on stilts, trying to hide his wooden legs with long pantaloons. He is a little man on a big pedestal; a fire hopper on the top of a telegraph pole. He is like a cheap restaurant, with everything in the front window and no meat on the table. He tries to swell up and look as big as a house, but touch him with the finger of wisdom, and down he goes like a bubble that has burst. Selected

DODSON WOULD STOP SALE OF CALOMEL

Says Calomel is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

The Childhood of America Learns Nothing About God

Religious Illiteracy a National Menace

There are 27,000,000 Protestant children and young people in America who receive no religious training of any kind.

In 1916 there were 21,888,521 children in the Sunday Schools of the nation, but in 1920 the number had shrunk to 15,617,000.

Three out of every five Protestant children receive no religious instruction whatever. The Jews are taught one hour each day, the Catholics four hours a week, the Protestants but half an hour a week.

In the 16 states served in a large way by the M. E. Church, South, there are 14,251,813 children growing up without the slightest religious educational influences.

The childhood of the nation is learning nothing about God, about religion, about Christian ideals. This is a great national question.

Moral Bankruptcy Threatened

This means spiritual, religious, moral bankruptcy eventually. How long can a nation call itself Christian when it permits such a situation to prevail? Yea, how long can the nation itself stand?

It is an impossible undertaking to make Christian ideals dominate the world while we neglect to train our own children in these ideals. We could as quickly dip the ocean dry with a spoon.

In our attitude of indifference to the religious instruction of the young, we are sowing the seeds of national decay. It will mean a profligate nation. It will mean a "hardshell" Church.

The Day of Correction Is Here

The Christian Education Movement offers the only solution of this problem. One difficulty is that our Sunday Schools are not real schools because of a lack of a sufficient number of trained leaders.

The Christian Education Movement will remedy this by putting a strong department of Bible and Religious Education in all of our colleges, so that these institutions may send back to the local churches a constantly growing stream of young men and women trained in the principles and the methods of Religious Education, and of Applied Christianity. From the college therefore will come large numbers of Sunday School superintendents, teachers, Epworth League presidents and other practical Church workers.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

GOOD FOR THE GOVERNOR!

Governor John M. Parker of Louisiana has declared his determination to call a special session of the General Assembly, upon the adjournment of the present Constitutional Convention, to "address out of office" such officials as have proved themselves unwilling or unable to enforce the laws that have been enacted for the protection of the people against the evils of gambling and other vices. The specific occasion of his declaration is the situation reputed to exist in Jefferson Parish, where the gamblers have apparently enjoyed immunity from the law for many years. We most heartily commend the Governor for the stand he has taken, and we earnestly urge every member of the General Assembly to co-operate unreservedly with him in the effort to remedy a condition that has become a scandal throughout the State. When the blame for these intolerable conditions has been properly placed, as we believe can easily be done, there ought not to be a moment's hesitation in getting rid of the guilty officials. The law-abiding citizenship of the State will applaud the Governor for his prompt and vigorous action, and stand by him in his determination to see that right prevails.

THE CONVICTION OF A DISTINGUISHED EDUCATOR.

Columbia University is recognized as one of the great educational institutions of this country, and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, its president, ranks among the foremost educators of the nation. Any statement from him, therefore, concerning the present educational crisis is worthy of the most serious consideration. In his annual report to the trustees of Columbia University, submitted on November 7, 1920, he used the following significant words: "There can be no cure for the world's ills and no abatement of the world's discontents until faith and the rule of everlasting principle are again restored and made supreme in the life of men and of nations. * * * Here we come upon the whole great problem of national education, its successes and its disappointments, its achievements and its problems yet unsolved. Education is not merely instruction—far from it. It is the leading of the youth out into a comprehension of his environment, that, comprehending, he may so act and so conduct himself as to leave the world better and happier for his having lived in it. This environment is not by any means a material thing alone. It is material of course, but, in addition, it is intellectual, it is spiritual. The youth who is led to an understanding of nature and of economics and left blind and deaf to the appeals of literature, or art, of morals and of religion, has been shown but a part of that great environment which is his inheritance as a human being. The school and the college do much, but the school and the college cannot do all. Since Protestantism broke up the solidarity of the ecclesiastical organization in the western world, and since democracy made intermingling of State and church impossible, it has been necessary, if religion is to be saved for men, that the family and the church do their vital co-operative part in a national organization of educational effort. The school, the family, and the church are three co-operating educational agencies, each of which has its weight of responsibility to bear. If the family be weakened in respect of its moral and spiritual basis, or if the church be neglectful of its obligation to offer systematic, continuous and convincing religious instruction to the young who are within its sphere of influence, there can be no hope for a Christian education or for the powerful perpetuation of the Christian faith in the minds and lives of the next generation and those immediately to follow. We are trustees of a great inheritance. If we abuse or neglect that trust, we are responsible before Almighty God for the infinite damage that will be done in the life of individuals and of nations." These words read as if they were written especially for the purpose of the Christian Education Movement—but they were not. They are the matured conviction of an eminent thinker whose position compels him to face the problems of the educational world in this age. We do well to give them heed.

THE ROOT OF THE DIVORCE EVIL.

We cannot be blind to the peril that threatens our social institutions growing out of the increasing number of divorces that are granted annually in this country. It almost seems, in some sections, that marriage is nothing more than a contract of convenience, to be dissolved upon the flimsiest pretexts; a distinguished jurist recently said, in effect, that our present laxity in allowing the marriage relation to be severed means little less than that social immorality is protected by our legal system. As we see it, however, the root of this evil is not simply in the fact that divorces have become so common, but in the fact that so many marriages are contracted the inevitable outcome of which must be dissatisfaction and unhappiness, resulting logically in a petition for separation. The evil will be corrected more quickly by making hasty marriages difficult, than by making divorce more difficult though we believe in stringent laws governing divorce. We need some old-fashioned preaching and teaching concerning love as the only true basis of a happy union between men and women in the matrimonial relation. A marriage without love is worse than no marriage at all. If we could bring our young people to realize that matrimony "is not by any to be enterprised, or taken in hand unadvisedly, but reverently, discreetly, advisedly, and in the fear of God," we should have fewer marriages, perhaps, but we certainly should have fewer divorces—which would be an inestimable blessing.

GOOD FOR BUSINESS.

We happened to fall into conversation a few days ago with a gentleman on a train who has large business interests in Louisiana and Mississippi. During the course of the conversation, he remarked that he had recently been able to complete a good business transaction with a man whom he incidentally met at the preaching service in the Methodist church on Sunday morning, it being his custom to attend the church in whatever city he happens to be on Sunday. His inference was that the business deal grew out of the point of contact established by a common interest in religious affairs, and he cited the case as an illustration of the fact that, looked at from even from a selfish standpoint, religion is a good investment. We do not mean to suggest that this gentleman was lacking in sincerity in his religious profession—he is active in his home church—but his statement was an interesting sidelight upon the present-day attitude toward religion and religious activities. As a matter of fact, the day has passed when profanity, vulgarity, drinking and gambling commend a man to his associates in the business world. We have a very poor opinion of a man who will profess religion for the sake of some material advantage—but we have never known a genuinely religious man to be held at a discount because he was good. In more ways than one it is true that "godliness is profitable unto all things."

THE YOUNG MEN, TOO.

In answer to a questionnaire sent out recently by the pastor of a Baptist church in Chicago, forty young men of that city enumerated eight big faults with which they charge the young women of that city. Two or three of them are peculiarly feminine, but most of them would apply to a good many young men, too. It is a mighty easy thing to find fault with other people.

WHY AN AID FUND FOR THE EDUCATION OF MINISTERS AND OTHER CHRISTIAN WORKERS?

Because lack of means is the reason given by three-fourths of the men who do not get an education. And while one boy in a hundred after a forty-mile walk over the mountains can appear before a college door with a calf tied with a rope as his sole possession and work his way through college, ninety-nine others do not have the financial nimbleness or heroism or what not to go through college without funds.

Because without aid thousands of our choice young people will walk the twilight vale of illiteracy instead of treading the shining heights of knowledge, and a little needed help will put into their hands a golden key to fabulous treasure houses of delight and service.

Because the cost of education is high and ever growing higher, while the time spent in study is a financially unproductive period in a student's life.

Because the world war has slaughtered thousands of Europe's choicest young leaders and the world is depending on America to help fill their places.

Because in the flame of war and rocking conflict old governments, old social orders, old false faiths, old heathen creeds are dissolving into their original elements and can be recombined into new and beautiful forms and combination if we supply the hand to press the plastic mass into new and fairer shapes.

Because with the Centenary offering filling our coffers for a great world-wide forward movement that calls for thousands of new workers, we are like a nation with a full treasury and a sadly insufficient army. Where are we to get the preachers, teachers, nurses, specialists, clerical and mechanical helpers for this great advance?

Because a broken-hearted world is everywhere looking to Christian education as its only hope to lead it out of darkness and despair up to truth and hope.

Because civilization crumbles without Christianity and the church wanders into swamps of failure and death without educated leaders.

Because the church, all churches, are woefully short of preachers, and such a fund will stop some of us from making further "assaults upon the audience with attempt to preach." We know not how many of our hearers, as they patiently listen to us in the pulpit, are vowing in their hearts a mighty vow to contribute liberally to such a fund in order to hear better preaching in the future.

Because it will give us better church workers of every kind, better stewards with wider vision.

Because it will give us better teachers in our schools. Where shall we get our Christian teachers except from our church colleges and universities? We must have, if not Christian language, history and science, at least these dogmas taught from a Christian outlook and by a Christian heart and brain.

Because other churches have shown us the way and revealed the priceless value of such help in thousands of lives ennobled for high service for their fellow-men. The Presbyterian churches have hundreds of thousands of dollars in their Loan Funds transformed each year into brain power, spiritual energy and moral fibre, the money returning regularly into the treasury to fare forth again and again through the years on its mission of light and liberation, weaving golden threads into the life of the nation and the destinies of the race. The greatest educational church in America is the Methodist. The Methodist Episcopal Church has made loans to 23,352 of her students, amounting to more than $2,500,453. To date more than $600,000 has been returned, and these returns are coming back at the rate of $50,000 per year. And this amount of $50,000 is being sent out again each year on its gracious errand of untold blessing. This precious good seed of the Kingdom has been sown in lands all over the earth. What a host in "that day" will rise up and call that fund blessed!

Because the seminaries and universities of other churches are outbidding us for our own boys and giving them scholarships.

Because the church can afford to do no less than the nation does when young men and women turn their backs on wealth and, obeying the call for higher service, lay their lives upon the altar. Shall we not at least furnish them the opportunity to develop that life for such higher service?

These, and many others, furnish compelling reasons why our church should provide an aid fund for worthy young men and women who would give themselves to Christian life service. The Christian Education Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has in its budget $1,000,000 as an aid fund for the education of our future ministers, missionaries, and other workers. This will be invested in lives that shall bless the world. What an opportunity it offers to our Methodist people of the present generation to project life and influence into generations yet to come!

There are fathers and mothers who have lost for awhile sons and daughters in whom they had great hopes for the future. What better memorial could they provide for these loved ones than an investment in other young lives? The Aid Fund offers such a chance.

Men and women rich in earthly possessions, whether their riches be measured by hundreds or millions, can multiply themselves many times by using some of their money in helping sons and daughters of others parents to better serve the world.

How many scholarships of $250 each will you give to help build the temple of God's truth in human lives?

THE NEGLECTED MAN OF METHODISM.

By Rev. R. A. Meek, D. D.

The superannuated preacher of Methodism has been designated "the forgotten man," and such he has certainly been in the administration of the affairs of our church. The extent to which he has been overlooked and unprovided for has long been to us a deep reproach, and it is most gratifying that Southern Methodism is beginning to take account of her obligation to this noble band of men who have spent their strength in her service. I have seen in years nothing that has more delighted my heart than the figures in the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference for 1920 which show that a number of the veterans on our Honor Roll were paid last year as much as $500. This sum, though far below what it should be, is so much in excess of the allowances that we have hitherto been making that I could not but rejoice over the accomplishment. And doubtless it betokens the speedy coming of a better day when the sacred claims of these retired itinerants shall be yet more adequately recognized.

But if the superannuated preacher is "the forgotten man of Methodism," may we not with equal aptness speak of the pastor serving the weak circuit as her "neglected man?" The missionary who is sent to the foreign field, though he has many privations, knows that his necessary expenses will be promptly met; but the preachers assigned to many of our rural charges have no such guarantee. Scores of them are forced to subsist upon salaries which are painfully insufficient to meet their actual necessities, and in many cases the larger portion of the pittance that they receive is paid toward the close of the Conference year. Is it not a reflection upon any church thus to neglect its accepted and accredited workers? That "the laborer is worthy of his hire" is a Biblical teaching, and no Christian denomination should in practice permit itself to fall below this divinely established standard.

One of the most pleasing aspects of our church work during the two prosperous years that we have had has been the more satisfactory support that has been given the ministers in charge of our poorer circuits; but with the coming of the stringent times that are now upon us, things seem to be falling back into the old way, and not a few of these brethren are being sorely perplexed to provide for themselves and those dependent upon them. It does not need to be said that, in the face of such a situation, they cannot render to the Master the best service of which they are capable. Some way of coming to the relief of this class of ministers with the least possible delay should be found. They were appreciably helped by the Centenary fund last year, but unhappily in some of the Conferences (due no doubt to the prevailing financial depression) the pledges to this cause have not been as largely paid as they were when the first installment was being collected. In my own district, I have sought by earnest private appeals to secure the means to help such pastors, but my efforts in this direction have met with a very meager response.

How to come to the assistance of these needy toilers, is certainly a question that deserves consideration. A system of ministerial support which provides bountifully for some of our itinerants, while others must stint and suffer, cannot possibly be justified. If the church accepts a minister and sends him out to serve a pastorate, it is undoubtedly incumbent upon her to see that he is comfortably maintained in his field of labor. Satan must be depended upon to furnish him enough problems to grapple with without having added to the list the problem of how to get on and keep out of debt when the amount paid him is not half enough to support him. It has long been my avowed conviction that our stronger charges should be made to carry domestic missionary assessments sufficiently large to enable us to take care decently of our weaker rural works. Our stations owe much to the circuits, in that they get from them many of their most valuable members, and it is but just that they should do something in return to compensate for this.

To be sure, our Conference Missionary Boards are helping, to some extent, our weaker charges; but in most cases the assistance which is being given them is lamentably insufficient in this time of extreme exigency. If funds for this purpose can be had in no other way, would it not be well for the stronger congregations in a district to take an offering and send it to the presiding elder, with the request that it be applied where it is most needed? Here also is an opportunity for some of our growing "Brotherhood Classes" to render a noble service. Benevolence is not less commendable when manifested toward the needy in the homeland than it is when it flows forth to sufferers across the seas. It has ever been the boast of Methodism that it is connectional, and no pastoral charge among us should be unconcerned about the work at other places. Our brethren in trying fields should be made feel that the eye of the church is sympathetically upon them and that their fellow-Christians are truly interested in them. If the Methodist ministry is such a brotherhood as we are given to proclaiming it to be, how can we let faithful fellow-workers remain unprovided for about our very doors?

If any one should read this article and desire to help pastors in the Sardis District who need assistance, I should be glad to correspond with him concerning the matter.

I am aware that in what I have written I have only been discussing a phase of the much debated country church problem. That problem is acutely with us, and there can be no solution of it which does not provide for the adequate support of all the ministers that we send to interior appointments. A workable plan, capable of general application, must be wrought out before we can reasonably hope for a satisfactory development of our rural work. And we have no task before us that calls to us more appealingly than this.

CONCERNING THE SPECIAL COLLECTIONS FOR THE WASHINGTON CITY CHURCH AND THE COLUMBUS CHURCH.

Since the previous statement was given to the Advocate, I have received $17.00 from the Baraca Class of Gulfport, and $20.00 from the Men's Bible Class of Columbia church. I have also received a letter from W. D. Davis, our Conference Treasurer, saying several of the pastors had sent a contribution direct to him for these special objects. Now I will make this request of all the classes or individuals who are planning to make donations to these churches: make your checks payable to W. D. Davis, Conf. Treas., and either send to me or direct to him. I would like to keep in touch with the progress we are making in this special work, so I can report same to the Advocate from time to time.

CENTENARY COLLEGE AND THE FUTURE.

By W. R. Bourne.

To any one who thinks at all must come the urgent call of a new day in the educational life of our country. To any Methodist of Louisiana who thinks at all of the future in his State and Conference, must come the urgent call of a new life for Centenary College. The years to come are insistent in their demand, and Louisiana Methodists must give an account of the answer-to-be.

NOW is the time with Centenary College! No namby-pamby policy can be entertained—no plan of temporary expediency adopted. It will be fatal to introduce personalities and prejudicial animosities at this time, and to forget the statesmanlike policies that undergird the Methodist Church in its hope to guarantee strong leadership. The church calls for a business plan and offers its influence at this time on the same basis only—and nothing less should be given.

What plan has been operating within the Methodist Church of Louisiana to insure the development of a college for men commensurate with the great need and crying demand? I would not attempt a rehearsal of the history of the past ten or twenty years and check the results obtained. Many great men have done noble work and have furnished leadership worthy of emulation. Their power was weakened and efficiency cut short because of a lack of interest and plan that should have been furnished by the constituency served.

Let me recount briefly the two years of 1919 to 1921. This is a transition period and should be so chronicled.

In the spring of 1919 the Board of Trustees decided that Centenary College should live and not die. A forward policy was, therefore, formulated. When I was elected to the presidency in May, 1919, I was presented with the following two-year program, and, with these stipulations, accepted the position:

1. The securing of a deed to the property in Shreveport.
2. The selection of a new faculty for the administrative organization.
3. The reorganization of the Board of Trustees to include a number of strong business men throughout the State.
4. The erection of two new buildings within the biennium and the renewal and equipping of the old buildings.
5. The erection of at least two cottages for teachers' homes.
6. The necessary provisions made to reorganize the college and academy work on a standard basis.
7. The elementary work of platting and beautifying the campus.
8. The extension of the sewer system to the college buildings.
9. The guarantee of all expense budgets by the Board of Trustees.

Within the space of nineteen months this program was completed. The Trustees have not failed in one single instance to carry out the plan—truly, a colossal task for a time of such economic stringency. It is no exaggeration to state here that no college of the M. E. Church, South, has a superior Board of Trustees, if indeed there is an equal.

Centenary is now ready to begin to live. At the close of the school year of 1918-19, there were only three regular college students. Since that time more than sixty have been registered. It must have four or five hundred young men—right away—if Louisiana Methodism is to survive and grow as it ought. But that means large dormitories, more buildings, greater equipment, extended faculties—and these all mean money.

The Louisiana Conference is now on trial! Will they do it? It is now or never with Centenary! If the Christian Education Movement fails in Louisiana, it is most likely that Centenary College is doomed to mediocrity if not to ruin, and the leadership of the church reduced to the minimum. May God forbid!

Let Centenary College continue her glorious history and make it more glorious. May the splendid vision of victory come right now, as the Board of Trustees, the consecrated college faculty, the officials and laity of Louisiana Methodism are constituted an enthusiastic army and dedicated to the accomplishment of the ideals of the Christian Education Movement.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION IN THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: I herewith send you an account of the work in the Conference for the past ten days.

On March 17, I was with Brother J. L. Greenway, at Mt. Olive. We had a very interesting meeting and I found Brother Greenway and his wife in fine favor with the people. He treated me like a brother.

On the 18th, at Hattiesburg, Miss., the Advisory Committee met, Mr. W. F. S. Tatum, chairman. We went over the work assigned to this committee and at the close of the meeting Dr. Reynolds made a splendid address. Nearly all of the members were present and all expressed themselves as being pleased with the progress of the work.

Sunday, I spent in Laurel, preaching for Brother Lewis at the eleven o'clock hour and for Rev. A. Joe Beasley at 7:30. The people gave me a good hearing and the brethren treated me with every kindness. Brother Lewis and his wife have already won their way into the hearts of the people and the work moves forward. I spent the time with Rev. A. Joe Beasley and his wife who treated me as if I were their own brother. Brother Beasley and his wife are doing a great work. He is one of our coming young men.

At Montrose, I spoke to quite a large crowd. Alford is doing well. Brother Hopper is getting a grip on things and is planning a progressive campaign. He is hopeful. Not any of the brethren sound a discordant note, and all have promised to stand by the Movement and there are no more loyal men than a body of Methodist preachers.

On March 23, we had our first District Set-Up Meeting for the Jackson District. Every preacher and a number of laymen were present. We had about fifty in attendance. Dr. Watkins made a strong speech, I think about the best I have ever heard him make. Prof. J. W. Broome, the Financial Secretary, and Dr. Bufkin, the District Director, were both at their best.

In the afternoon, inspiring talks were made by Brother Burton, W. H. Bradley and others. Laymen and preachers pledged themselves to put every effort into the Movement. The Jackson District does not expect to be behind in the Educational Campaign.

Our next District Set-Up Meeting will be held in April. April 5, Gulfport, Miss.; April 6, Lumbertown, Miss.; April 7, Hattiesburg, Miss.; April 8, Meridian, Miss.; April 12, Newton, Miss.; April 13, McComb City, Miss.; and April 15, Vicksburg, Miss.

I expect to have Dr. J. H. Reynolds with us at Gulfport and Lumbertown, and Bishop W. F. McMurtry will be with us at the other places.

Very cordially,
J. M. MORSE.

MRS. CHRISMAN WRITES OF HISTORIC COLLEGE.

Entered Port Gibson Female College in 1855.

Mrs. Chrisman, who is the mother of Miss Anna Clara Chrisman, who started to Brazil as a missionary and lost her life in the Johnstown flood, writes from Lufkin, Texas, as follows:

"In December, 1855, I, a timid girl of 12 years, was entered as a pupil in Port Gibson Collegiate Academy, where I remained four years except the vacation days spent on my happy plantation home in Copiah County. My parents were Mr. and Mrs. John Harvey Thompson, and my only brother was Judge Robert H. Thompson, of Jackson, Miss.

"Dr. Thomas Capers, a nephew of Bishop Capers, was the president of the school, which had previously been presided over by Mr. Harvey and Mr. Egerton. Dr. Capers was young in spirit, and knew how to cheer homesick girls, as well as how to teach them.

"The faculty in 1855-56 consisted of Prof. Hicks, Miss Mary Ross, a niece of Mrs. John G. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference; Mrs. Emily Miller, a niece of General Earl Van Dorn, of Claiborne County; Mrs. Brasher, and Mrs. Charlotte Davis, of Port Gibson.

"At the close of that term, Dr. Capers was succeeded by Rev. Benjamin J. Jones. His wife was a daughter of Dr. Nathan Bangs, a distinguished minister of Brooklyn, New York. She was a brilliant and highly cultured woman. Among her assistants was her sister, Miss Sarah J. Bangs, and their cousin, Mrs. Mary M. Barlow.

"My class graduated in 1859. They were Laura Bridgers, Eulora Collins, Eva Garrison, Kate Jeffries, Mary Morris, and Julia Thompson. Laura and Kate long since passed over the river. Kate died of yellow fever in 1878, near Port Gibson, and Laura died at Terrell, Texas, some years later.

"Dear Alma Mater, how I have always loved you! One bright scene which lingers is of the May party in 1857, when beautiful Emma Lipscomb was the queen. One "chilly" incident was when the buildings caught fire and all rushed out on the sleet-covered ground, thinly clad and barefoot. We were greeted by the fire company, who soon extinguished the flames. One girl carried her small trunk downstairs in her arms. We never decided whether she had more presence of mind than the rest of us, or appreciated more her wardrobe.

"And Port Gibson as I knew it—a beautiful town of wealth and culture!

"Alma Mater, I will never forget you. Your history would fill volumes of charming reading. You still stand as a link between the old South and the new. May your usefulness increase with the years. Would that I could aid you in a substantial way. I inclose an accurate list of students for 1855-56, copied from my autograph album. I make out from memory and other sources a list of names for other years. Mrs. Mattilda Holloman and Mrs. Charles Galloway were later pupils, and can furnish you other names and history.

"I am the widow of Captain Thos. J. Chrisman, who gave his life for 'the Cause that was Lost,' and I am the mother of Anna Clara Chrisman, our missionary to Brazil, who lost her life en route in the Johnstown flood of May, 1889. I have been an itinerant in Texas the last fifteen years, living with my daughter, Mrs. C. F. Smith, who is a member of the Texas Conference."

I am sure there will be many interested in this charming letter of the joyous saint, Mrs. Chrisman, who is now eighty-eight years old and still bearing fruit.

THE CAUSE OF DECREASE IN MINISTERIAL SUPPLY.

By Rev. W. D. Bass.

We have closed the supply current by establishing relations too intimate with material things at the expense of neglecting spiritual things. The church needs better connection with the All-supply Source. We are lacking in faith in Him who promised to "send forth laborers into His harvest." There could not be any lack of supply in "Him in whom all fulness dwells." Again, as Paul says, "My God shall supply all your need." He is certainly able and willing to supply preachers in unlimited numbers if we have proper connection. The cause of God's not calling men to preach now as in apostolic times, and as in the days of Wesley, and of our fathers and mothers, is for the lack of the Holy Ghost upon the church, as in those days.

Also the failure on the part of the ministry and the church to magnify the greatness and importance of a call from God to preach has had much to do in bringing about the present state of things. We shall not be able to recruit our ministerial ranks soon by often crying in our Sunday sermons and protracted meetings, within hearing of the rising generation, that a preacher has a hard job, and that it's not a paying occupation. The church should support her ministers beyond cause for complaint; but too much publicity from the pulpit of deficiencies in this regard does not always amend matters. We don't often hear the saying now as in other days: "I had rather be a preacher of the gospel than to be the President." Too many had rather be the President, now. An educated ministry, and an educated laity, is all right, as far as it goes—the more the better of the right kind of education—but it can never go far enough to be substituted for faith in Christ, and the continuous in-flowing of the Holy Spirit. The calling of men into the ministry is conditioned upon our obedience to that very plain injunction, "Quench not the Spirit." Modern time "devotions" are drifting us into the tendency of giving too large a place to material interests, and thereby repressing the divine current. God's method of calling men to preach is as it has always been, by the Spirit in operation through the Christ. This call must be obeyed willingly and with a glad heart, attended with the same conception of the importance of it that Paul had: "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel!"

The removal of the cause is the only remedy that will ever cure the malady. And that can only be done by re-establishing connection with the infinite supply source. It would have been very improper to have charged the apostles with pessimistic views when, in obedience to the appointment of Jesus Christ, they tarried in prayer for the endowment with the Holy Ghost. That is our need, as ministers and church people. Then, men would put themselves on the altar of God for the ministry, and consecrate their money for the cause of Christian education, support of the gospel, missions, and every other holy cause.

The church is not using those whom God has already called as much as could be done. Men whose ministry has been honored of God in the salvation of thousands of precious souls ought to be kept in meetings during the winter as well as summer. It is not a matter of high cost; I don't know of any preachers, pastors, or evangelists getting rich financially. The writer has never received $1500 for any one year's work. But he would not have taken two or three times that much for the great spiritual joy he has had in leading the lost to the light of God. From the first I never entered the ministry for the hope of gain financially, or as an occupation by which to make a living. I can make a living on my farm, or at any other honorable job. But the salvation of souls, and a great revival of pure and undefiled religion in the church, is my highest ambition, and greatest joy. "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world"—or the recognition of our oneness with Christ as his ministers. This is what I regard as a call from God. I was bred and born a Methodist. Of course, there are other Christian denominations. I shall order a gospel tent before long and go to the poor, neglected places. That is the field where preachers are born and called of God.

"O Lord, revive thy work," and give us better connection with the power-house of God. Corinth, Miss.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

"Thou shalt not kill." This was written on a table of stone by the finger of God, the omnipotent, the author, creator of life. Your scientist, with all his "sciencing" and evolving, cannot originate life. He has tried and failed. The power that made life in the beginning still preserves and sustains it. Throughout the vast ranges of life, human life, this present living and being is sacred, a marvelous holy thing, in God's estimate of values. Good men follow God's estimate in placing supreme value on this. Murder is not only a crime against God and man, but the murderer is a thief, a robber. His sin is beyond restitution; he can not restore what he has taken away. There is need now—in the carnival of crime, the hideous aftermath of war—to emphasize again and yet again the sanctity of life and its divine valuation. Our land is blackened, our rich heritage is being despoiled, our faces ashamed, and our hearts saddened by the murderous spirit of the time. Women kill for jealousy of their mates, or slay another woman in passion; men kill for loot—robbing banks, stores, offices or, bringing their victims to secluded spots, cruelly, relentlessly, with an abandon that is heart-sickening, shed their blood. How many sermons have you heard on the text at the caption of this article? I know of two. Many need to be preached, for there is a veritable orgy of killing in our country. Infanticide, suicide, homicide—life quenched at its fountain head, or taken by one's own hand, or violence done to another man—all these, beside the unnatural crimes against kith and kin, are part of the dark record. Oh, ye prophets of the people, rise up and tell them in no uncertain tone that life is God's gift, is holy and precious in his sight, is a sacred shrine whereon burns holy fire, a golden lamp lighted by the breath divine, and "Thou shalt not quench it, else vengeance is mine—I will repay." No wonder the divine life, the regenerate, eternal life, is so lightly esteemed, when the life which now is, is counted a bauble. Great may be many movements in the church to-day, but all these and their promising results will be wasted unless life with its privileges and opportunities is conserved. The trail of blood is a trail of fire, fire that will waste and devour our nation.

Not a very cheerful subject, the preceding, one need not be told. But the deep things do not lie on the shining surface. Truth and duty are earnest, weighty, profound in their significance and results. Only the truth, after all, can save men. It is God's beacon light along a darkened highway, and its gleam is fadeless and sure. His prophets must live it, sing its fair songs, preach its warnings, and in no uncertain tones thus deliver their souls and that of the people from crime and ruin. The birthright of every child born with the privileges of this great commonwealth of ours must be maintained; the sacredness of law, human and divine, must be preserved; society must be protected; the right to live peaceably and honestly as a citizen held inviolate; and it is the duty of citizenship to see to it—if we expect to continue as a nation under our present form and institutions. Nations are now staggering under the weight and waste of resources spent in useless war. The world is trying to adjust itself to problems of government and social relation. But the most criminal, the most defenseless waste was the waste of life. The whole round world leans upon the life of its strong men, and these were slain by millions. Following this saturnalia of slaughter, comes the broken characters, the distorted vision, the despair, and disregard of law, truth, and honor. Yes, the grim reaper has gone before and we are gathering the aftermath. The unholy ambition and inhuman greed which prompted those in authority to declare war is still at work with deadly purpose, bringing sorrow and untold sadness to the homes and hearts of many. Only the saving power of Christ's message of life can save life.

* * *

"Put up that sword, Peter." Christ's work on earth was to save life, not to take it. Very patiently he tried to teach his men, his disciples, this, and to leave a record for the coming years. Had Peter slain Caiaphas' slave, possibly none of the Twelve could have escaped the cross, or stoning. The fury and hate which bore Jesus to the cross would have engulfed them all. But the Master had a greater work for Peter and them. Witnessing for Him is more than fighting for Him, and not infrequently as dangerous and difficult. Soldiers of the Cross, yes, but girt not with swords of steel, but with the sword of the Spirit. The Crusaders left a poor type of Christianity in the lands they invaded. The back-wash of wars many has retarded the progress of civilization despite learned statements to the contrary. Men are fiercer and more savage now, since the cataclysm of the world war. Heinous and heartless crimes are more frequent. Some may doubt this, but I do not—"They that use the sword shall perish of the sword." How the great Teacher's words are sometimes burned into our souls, lest we forget them! Men can not meet on fields of carnage, using all the death-dealing weapons that human ingenuity and satanic hate could devise for destroying life, and leave such scenes better men. It is contrary to divine teachings and human nature. One of the present tasks of our ministry and one of crying need, is to emphasize the sacredness of God-given life.

The whole destiny of any people depends upon the quality of its leadership. The world goes only where it is led.

Prussia went war-mad because she was led by Militaristic apostles of ruthless force. Russia went Bolshevik because her leadership was ignorant and fanatical.

America has become the world's greatest democracy because her early leaders were Christian statesmen trained in Church colleges. She will make further progress only in so far as that leadership holds the helm.

We May Go Wrong

America may yet go wrong. Already the Prussian advocates have invaded our schools. Even now the mutterings of radicals sound ominous. Unless leaders arise who swear allegiance to Christian principles we may yet end in confusion.

Class consciousness and all that it involves is created and fostered by irresponsible leaders and agitators with half-baked social ideas. It breeds strikes, industrial wars, sabotage, red revolution.

A trained mind with a Christian conscience never yet led the world astray. And the world would never go astray if there were a sufficiency of such leaders.

Out of the Christian College

The Christian college is the only institution which even claims to produce leaders with both trained minds and Christian hearts. It is therefore fundamental in American life.

Its influence can give stability to the turbulent world. Its graduates will direct human activities into channels of peace. It will banish the Bolshevik from American life. It means stability, law and order. It means constitutional government and civil liberty.

The Christian Education Movement undertakes the task of filling the world with leaders who will go straight. A great system of ninety schools and colleges, scholarly in curriculum and Christian in character, covering every section of the country with their influence, will be the medium.

Do you approve?

MY LITTLE POLICEMAN.

By Rev. M. H. Appleby.

Ho, here he comes with his cap and his club,
And the golden star on his breast;
But the star is a radiant, flashing light,
And the dangerous club is at rest.

My little policeman must guard the house
When afar from my place I roam;
O, his heart is stout and his heart is brave,
So I feel no fear for the home.

My little policeman will watch the door
And suffer no foe to cross
The threshold. O, I know he will see That the household comes to no loss.

Ho! little policeman, who will watch
You as you go on your way?
For evil is subtle and cruel and base,—
A tiger athirst for its prey.

Dear Father in heaven, I give him to Thee,
My boy in his suit of blue,
With his club and his cap and his boyish grace,
And his trusting heart so true.

For I know Thou wilt guard him forever and aye,
And help in his struggle with sin,
That at last he may come with his cap and his club
To the home where the good enter in.

THE ROSY LINING.

At Christmas, Betty's Uncle James, who was a florist in a distant city, sent her the biggest Easter lily bulb he had in stock.

"Don't you tell grandmother, mummy," chirped shining-eyed Betty. "I want to surprise her."

At the proper time, Betty planted the bulb in the proper way, it came up quickly and grew, as father said, "just like a prize cornstalk." Then one March night the weather suddenly turned very cold and the fire in the base-burner went out at the same time. In the morning every plant in the big bay window was frozen stiff.

Betty stopped crying as soon as she could, bathed her eyes and waited patiently till the red faded out of them. Then she went up to grandmother's room. Grandmother had not been downstairs for five years; but her room was the cheerfulness in the house. Betty didn't mean to say a word about the big disappointment; but she went to see grandmother. It made people feel better just to look at her. That is, it usually did. This time, somehow, it made Betty feel worse and before she knew what was going to happen, she was crying again.

"O grandmother!" she sobbed, "I had such a lovely Easter surprise for you and it got killed."

"You poor lamb! Tell grannie all about it."

So Betty did.

"It's too, too bad," said grandmother, soothingly. "But listen, dear: every cloud has a rosy lining. There's something I'd rather have than an Easter lily. Mother had it always, but I haven't liked to say anything. Everybody is so busy; and I didn't do it myself when I was up and about and could as well as not. I've thought of it, though, every Easter since I've been shut in, and now that you've been so disappointed, I'll speak about it. Call father and tell him about it."

When father came, she said: "Cut a few twigs from the plum and peach trees, John, and let Betty put them in a vase of water in the sun. Get them out of the tops of the trees on the sunny side. Just three or four of each. It seems a waste to cut many."

"There's no waste about it, mother. Hundreds never come to anything anyhow," answered father. As soon as they were outside of the room he whispered gaily to Betty: "We'll surprise grandmother yet, Bettykin."

"How, father, how?" asked Betty, excitedly.

"Come out in the orchard and I'll show you," he answered. He got a ladder and cut an armful of twigs from the tops of the trees. "There! These are all peach. We'll give them the start. They'll need it, because they are a little slower. Later, we'll get some plum. We'll put them in the big green jardiniere. The fern roots are alive and will send up new shoots; but they can lend us the jardiniere awhile."

The peach twigs lay all around the edge of the jar, and when the plum twigs were put in they filled the center. Betty watched the buds eagerly and turned the jar carefully every day. It seemed impossible that they could bloom without any roots; but soon they began to swell and in a little while they showed the pink and white. Just in the nick of time they began bursting into bloom. Easter was early; spring was backward; and the big jardiniere was a mass of white and rose before the trees outside showed a bit of color. Easter morning they carried it up to grandmother's room.

"Oh!" she gasped; and "O Betty!" and then, "O John, how could you? But how lovely! How lovely!"

"It's the cloud with the rosy lining you told me about, grandmother," laughed Betty. And so it was—white in the middle and rosy all around the edges, where the peach blossom lining showed!—Mary M. Parks in The Child's Hour.

A LITTLE GIRLS VICTORY.

Two little girls were playing together. The older one had a beautiful new doll in her arms, which she was tenderly caressing.

The younger one crept up softly behind her, and gave her a sharp slap on her cheek.

A visitor, unseen and unheard, was sitting in an adjoining room and saw it all. She expected to see and hear another slap, a harder one, in retaliation. But, no, the victim's face flushed, and her eyes had a momentary flash of indignation. She rubbed her hurt cheek with one hand, while she held the doll closer with the other. Then, in a tone of gentle reproof, she said, "Oh, Sallie, I didn't think you'd do that!"

Sallie looked ashamed, as well she might, but made no reply. "Here, Sallie," continued the elder girl, "sit here in sister's chair. I'll let you hold dolly awhile if you'll be very careful."

Sallie's face looked just then as if there were some "coals of fire" somewhere around, but she sat down with the doll on her lap, giving her sister a glance of real appreciation, although it was mingled with shame.

The hidden looker-on was deeply touched by the scene. It was unusual, she thought, to see a mere child show such calm dignity and forgiveness under persecution. Presently she called the child and questioned her. "How can you be so patient with Sallie, my dear?"

"Oh," was the laughing reply. "I guess it's because I love Sallie so much. You see, Sallie's a dear girl," excusingly, "but she's got a quick temper, and—Sallie forgets herself sometimes. Mamma said if Sallie should do any angry thing to me, and I should do angry things to her, we'd have a dreadful time, and I think we would. Mamma said I should learn to give the 'soft answer,' and I am trying to."

The lady took her in her arms and kissed her. "My little dear," she said fondly and earnestly, "I think you have already learned the lesson."

"He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit is greater than he that taketh a city."—Exchange.

A TRUE ST. BERNARD STORY.

This St. Bernard lived in Switzerland. His name was Santo and he belonged to an innkeeper up in the mountains. One wild, stormy night when he was lying by the hearth-fire apparently asleep, and his master and mistress were taking their ease because they knew no guests would come on such a night, Santo suddenly jumped up and insisted on going out. His master tried to dissuade him, saying: "No, Santo you do not want to go out such a terrible night as this; see how the snow drifts and how the wind blows!" But Santo grew much excited and in spite of all persuasion got out and started down the mountain road as fast as he could go and as if he knew exactly where he was going.

About two hours later he returned, almost exhausted, with a baby lashed to his back with a piece of harness. You can imagine how amazed the innkeeper and his wife were and how quickly she took the baby and warmed and fed him. The man roused the neighbors, who followed Santo, now restlessly waiting for them. With such things as they could carry to help those they knew they should find in dire need, they waded through the snow two miles to a gully road, where they came upon an overturned bus from which the frightened horses had run away. There they found, huddled together for warmth, seven people, including the baby's father and mother. You can imagine how happy they were to know that the baby was safe. The innkeeper and the neighbors succeeded in getting all the travelers back to the inn, and so Santo really saved all those lives.

Now how did Santo know, in the first place, that there was trouble somewhere? Shut your eyes and think, before you read the next line, and learn that what made him prick up his ears and insist on getting out was the sound of the pounding of the runaway horses' hoofs, which his keen hearing caught, above the roar of the storm. He had before associated that sound with trouble, and his instinct made him go to the rescue.—Marion Coon, in Our Dumb Animals.

"TIME OUT."

He Needed It.

There was a man who did not approve of foreign missions. One Sunday at church a collector approached him and held out the box.

"I never give to missions," whispered the man.

"Then take something out of the bag, sir," whispered the collector; "the money is for the heathen."—Exchange.

Pure Boy!

According to their own account, the children were first in something at school; one was first in reading, another in arithmetic, another in sports. Bertie alone remained silent.

"Well, Bertie, how about you?" his uncle asked. "Aren't you first in anything?"

"Yes," said honest Bertie. "I am first out of the building when the bell rings."—The New York Times.

Nothing More to Be Said.

Picking her way daintily through the locomotive plant, a young woman visitor viewed the huge operations with awe. Finally she turned to a young man who was showing her through and asked:

"What is that big thing over there?"

"That's a locomotive boiler," he replied. She puckered her brows.

"And what do they boil locomotives for?"

"To make the locomotive tender," and the young man from the office never smiled.—Exchange.

THE DEATH OF REV. H. B. WATKINS.

Press dispatches from Meridian, Miss., on last Saturday, announced the sad news of the death of Rev. H. B. Watkins, pastor of our Central Methodist Church, on the day preceding. His death was not wholly unexpected, since it was known that he had been seriously ill for several weeks; but the announcement that the end had come brought a shock and a feeling of inexpressible sorrow to his thousands of friends throughout Mississippi and throughout the church. One of our ablest men has been cut down in the very prime of his useful and eminently successful life.

Mere words are a poor tribute to the memory of a good man. We knew Herbert Watkins in the intimacy developed between students who are thrown daily with each other on the campus and in the class room month after month and year after year—for five years we pursued our studies side by side at Millsaps College, being graduated together in 1899. He was mentally alert, diligent in the performance of all the duties assigned him, gifted with the qualities of leadership, and unmistakably equipped for high place in whatever sphere of life he should enter. The call to preach turned him aside from the profession of law—a profession he doubtless would have adorned and honored—to the greater work of the ministry. Beginning with the smaller appointments, he soon became recognized as one of the most capable members of the Conference, and in due time he was called to positions of high responsibility. That he was equal to all the obligations laid upon him was demonstrated by his unvarying and unqualified success to the very close of his ministry.

We join with all his other friends in expressing heartfelt sympathy to the sorrowing family in their bereavement. A suitable memoir will appear in the Advocate in due time.

A NOTEWORTHY BEQUEST.

The late Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D., a distinguished and honored member of the Mississippi Conference, loved his brethren with the full strength of the devotion that comes to exist in the great body of itinerant Methodist preachers. As a token of that affection, he bequeathed to them his library, with the request that some means be devised by which the volumes could be placed in the hands of the brethren with whom he labored so long.

In keeping with this request, there will be found on another page of this issue of the Advocate a communication from Mrs. T. B. Holloman, giving instructions as to how the books may be secured, accompanied by a catalogue of the volumes from which selection may be made. The library is made up of books which appealed to Dr. Holloman as being helpful in the work of the ministry, and which have not lost their usefulness with the passing of time. Many of them are standard works which should be in the possession of every preacher, and others are of a kind that will especially appeal to those whose interest lies in some particular field of research.

We record our own appreciation of this noteworthy bequest of Dr. Holloman, and we are sure the brethren of the Mississippi Conference will have their hearts stirred by tender emotions as they are reminded of the affectionate esteem of one of their number who has gone to his heavenly reward. These volumes in the libraries of the preachers of the Mississippi Conference will be a perpetual monument to the memory of a great and good man.

THE CHINESE FAMINE SITUATION.

The Chinese famine situation is distressing beyond expression. After allowing for the remittances that have already gone forward through the American Committee, through Mission Board channels, through the Red Cross, and after allowing also for those who are being cared for through funds from Great Britain, Canada, Australia, and from funds raised in China, there still remain between five and six million people in the famine-stricken regions who are in danger of death from starvation. Those who are in close touch with the situation, who are bending every energy to the work of meeting this appalling need, say that there is no hope for these starving millions unless the flow of money from America can be increased and continued until about July 1, when the next harvest will bring relief.

So tragic is the situation that our own Board of Missions and our Centenary Commission are doing everything in their power to bring the need of these starving people before our people, and a concerted effort is being made throughout the country by all the leading churches to show that Christian people can and will demonstrate their willingness to supply a brother's need under the compelling power of the gospel; nay, more—the appeal is being made to every citizen of our land, regardless of creed or religious affiliation, to vindicate the claim that America is "a nation that cares" when the welfare of humanity is at stake. It is inconceivable that every heart should not be touched by the pitiable condition of these starving men, women, and children in a land that is at our very doors by reason of modern means of communication. Within two weeks from the receipt of a contribution, the money is in the hands of the relief agencies in China and is being expended in its mission of mercy.

When we realize that three cents will save a life for a day, and that five dollars will save a family for a month, not one of us is so poor but that each can have some part in the work of relief. All the agencies of our church are ready to receive contributions for this urgent need. The normal course of procedure is to send them to Mr. J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer of the Board of Missions, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.; but they may be given to any local organization that takes up this relief work. The Advocate will be glad to forward promptly any funds that may be sent to it for this purpose. Our main object should be to meet this need as quickly as possible—thousands of helpless sufferers are dying every day.

AN UNUSUAL INSTITUTION.

We wonder how many of our readers saw the advertisement of "Character Cloth" in last week's issue of the Advocate. If this were an ordinary commercial advertisement, we would not, of course, call attention to it editorially; but the institution represented by this advertisement is of such unusual kind that we feel that it is perfectly proper for us to call attention to it here.

The Textile Industrial Institute is a mission school owned by our church, which is engaged primarily in the work of making character, "character cloth" being a by-product. Ten years ago a young preacher hit upon the plan of organizing a school with which to find, Christianize, train and place men and women to help do the thinking for the South's industrial population; the student body was to be self-supporting through legitimate profits. The first end has been attained: students who attend the Textile Industrial Institute make enough to pay their expenses by working every other week in the cotton mill, going to school every other week. Beginning with one student less than ten years ago, the institution has grown to an enrollment of three hundred, with half as many more turned away for lack of room. Many of these students become missionaries, preachers, teachers, social workers, and some have been given responsible positions in other cotton mills.

Rev. D. E. Camak, founder and president of the institution, is doing a wonderfully constructive piece of work in thus training and placing industrial leaders for this industrial age. The advertisement speaks for itself; what we have been impressed by, is the thoroughly practical way that has been chosen to solve one of our great educational problems—enabling students to earn their living while they are securing an education. This plan deserves commendation and co-operation.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

On Easter Sunday, our pastor at Yazoo City, Miss., Rev. L. E. Alford, received thirty-four members into the church—thirty of them on profession of faith.

Mrs. M. E. Miller, of Florence, Miss., writes: "I have been reading the Advocate since I was a child, and I am now seventy-seven years old." Blessings upon her!

Rev. J. L. Jordan, an honored local preacher of Mississippi, is now making his home with his daughter, Mrs. Ella G. Welch, 2880 West Beach, Biloxi, Miss. He has been a reader of the Advocate for nearly fifty years.

Rev. P. H. Howse, of Prentiss, Miss., writes that the work is making progress on his charge. There are four prayer meetings in operation, and the attendance on the church services is growing. He has all his meetings planned for, and is expecting great revivals.

A series of evangelistic meetings is being held at Rayne Memorial Church, this city, this week, the preaching being done by Dr. Charles B. Wilcox, of Denver, Colorado. Dr. Wilcox is an able preacher, and the services have been attended with much interest.

We greatly enjoyed a visit from Brother J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., on Wednesday of last week. He was in the city for a surgical nasal operation, from which he received much benefit. Brother Streater is one of the outstanding laymen of Mississippi Methodism.

Winfield Memorial Church, Little Rock, Ark., of which Rev. W. B. Hogg is pastor, had a great day Easter Sunday. Fourteen infants were baptized, and 143 members were received into the church. The Sunday school attendance was 639. The erection of a beautiful new church building will be begun within a few days.

Our church at Pochontas, Miss., is taking on new life, according to a report coming to us. A Ladies' Aid Society has been organized and is doing splendid work under the presidency of Mrs. Marie Rivers Baker. The Sunday school is growing both in interest and membership, and there are other marks of progress. Rev. J. F. McClelland is the pastor.

The many friends of Rev. Roy H. Kleiser, formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, but now pastor of Scott Street Church, Covington, Ky., will be glad to know that he is being wonderfully blessed in his work in that important charge. The Central Methodist recently gave an inspiring account of the results in that church following the pastor's presentation of the cultural program of the Christian Education Movement. Among other things, nine young people responded to the appeal to consecrate their lives to Christian service.

The Shreveport District Conference will meet in First Church, Shreveport, April 19-21, the first session being on Tuesday, April 19, at 9:30 a.m.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, announces that the quarterly conference for the Plain Dealing charge will be held at Walker's Chapel, May 18.

One hundred and sixty-two members have been added to the membership of our Queensboro Church, Shreveport, La., since Conference. Rev. W. A. Mangum is the pastor.

The New Orleans District Conference is in session on Thursday and Friday of this week at Bogalusa, La., being royally entertained by Rev. A. J. Gearheard and his fine people.

The work at Poplarville, Miss., under the pastorate of Dr. C. M. Chapman, is making fine progress. Dr. Chapman is being kept busy delivering addresses at the closing exercises of high schools.

Mrs. Robt. Scott, of Hermanville, Miss., now seventy-one years of age, has been reading the Advocate since her childhood. She writes: "I dearly love my church paper, and will always have it come to my home."

We learn with sorrow of the death of Mr. George M. Brown, a prominent citizen of Natchez, Miss., and a leading member of our Jefferson Street Church. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to those who are in sorrow because of his passing.

Rev. James B. Douglas, a recent graduate from Emory University, who has been accepted for missionary work in Korea next year, has been engaged as assistant pastor at First Church, Shreveport, La., for the present year, and has begun his work enthusiastically.

Hon. Josephus Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy, and one of the great laymen of Southern Methodism, will devote eleven days of April—April 17-27—to a series of addresses in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. His engagements will be announced later.

The Sunday school attendance at the Methodist churches of Shreveport, La., broke all previous records on Easter Sunday. The total was 2,526, distributed as follows: First Church, 1280; Noel Memorial, 555; Queensboro, 326; Texas Avenue, 199; Cedar Grove, 100; Bossier City, 66.

Rev. W. W. Moore, pastor, reports that the Newton District Epworth League and the Seashore District Epworth League have, together, promised $87 for the Back Bay Missionary Church, Biloxi, Miss. Leagues and others, organizations and individuals, are invited to help build this mission church.

Extensive improvements are being made on the Jefferson Street Methodist church, Natchez, Miss., at a cost of approximately $8000. The interior will be re-decorated, provision is being made for additional Sunday school facilities, and a new pipe organ is to be installed. Rev. W. H. Saunders is the pastor.

In a recent meeting at Picayune, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. B. E. Meigs, was assisted by Rev. J. V. Bennet, Conference evangelist, there were fifteen or twenty accessions to the church, and the meeting was a good one in every respect. The debt on the parsonage at Picayune has recently been fully provided for.

Dr. S. A. Steel, of Mansfield, La., recently held a great meeting in Lexington, Va. He was especially pleased with the interest the professors of Washington and Lee University took in the meeting, some of whom were present at nearly every service; not only were they present, but they also took part in public prayer.

Rev. J. V. Bennet, Mississippi Conference evangelist, passed through New Orleans on Friday of last week, having been in a successful meeting with Rev. J. T. McVey, at Boyce, La. There were seventeen additions to the church on profession of faith, and the church generally was strengthened. Brother Bennett stated that Brother McVey is doing a fine work at Boyce.

Rev. Jno. L. Sutton, of the Mississippi Conference, superintendent of the Mississippi Children's Home Society, requests us to say that he has in his care eleven girls, from four to eleven years of age, and five boys, from four to seven years of age, whom he would be glad to place in Christian homes. Interested persons may address the Society, Box 304, Jackson, Miss.

News has come to the Director General of the Christian Education Movement that six men in one of the cities of the South have together pledged $250,000 to the Movement. One man has given $100,000, one $50,000, and four $25,000 each. The city and the names of these men will not be given publicity now, but the pledges are in hand and the names will be announced later.

The thirty-fifth annual convention of the Louisiana Sunday School Association will be held in Jennings, La., April 11-14. Many prominent speakers, representing various denominations, will have places on the program, and all phases of Sunday school work will be presented. The delegates will be entertained by the good people of Jennings. Mr. Van Carter is the wide-awake State Secretary of the Association.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, who, for a number of years, has been closely identified with the missionary work of our church in New Orleans, but who is now ready to do general evangelistic work, is spending a few weeks in rest and recuperation at his old home in Tompkinsville, Ky. As will be seen from an announcement elsewhere in the Advocate, Brother Thomas will be glad to assist any of the brethren who may need his services.

The Fifth Ecumenical Conference will meet in London on Wednesday, September 6, and close on September 16. The first session, at which the opening sermon is to be preached by an American divine, will be held in Wesley's Chapel, where the first Conference met in 1881, Bishop Simpson being the preacher. The Conference will be composed of 550 delegates. The Methodist Episcopal Church will be entitled to about 160 representatives, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to about 80.

Easter Sunday marked an epoch in the life of our First Church, Gulfport, Miss. Approximately one-fifth of the white people of that city attended Sunday school at First Church, the record showing 981 in attendance, though this did not include a good many who came in late. One man who had not been to Sunday school in sixty years was present. The congregation at the morning preaching service was one of the greatest that have ever gathered there, and the pastor, Rev. W. L. Linfield, preached an inspiring sermon.

We regret that some of the reports of the North Mississippi Sunday school contest did not reach us in time for insertion in last week's Advocate. Among these was the report from Grenada, which was as follows: Business Men's Bible Class—attendance, 53, offering, $18.50; total attendance, 236, total offering, $35.77. This is the finest report in the history of this splendid school—one of which its membership may just be proud. The report from Crawford was as follows: Men's Unity Bible Class—attendance, 22, offering, $7.55.

Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, requests that the following changes in his quarterly conference announcements be noted: Taylorville and Mize, at Mize, April 21, 11 a.m.; Mt. Olive and Magee, at Magee, April 24, 7:30 p.m.; Hattiesburg, Main Street, May 15, 11 a.m.; Hattiesburg, Court Street, May 15, 7:30 p.m.; Silver Creek, at Pinola, May 23. Since the pages containing the regular announcements had gone to press when we received his request, we call attention to the changes here.

The New Orleans District Set-up Meeting of the Christian Education Movement was held in New Orleans on Thursday of last week. Rev. A. S. Lutz, Conference Secretary of Education, Mr. R. T. Moore, State Financial Director, and Dr. Jno. A. Rice, of Southern Methodist University, were present and made inspiring addresses. The attendance was unusually good, and much interest was manifested in the cause. Where the real significance of the present educational crisis is made known, our people are willing to respond to its appeal to the limit of their ability.

Methodism is well represented in the membership of the Louisiana Constitutional Convention, now in session in Baton Rouge, probably twenty or twenty-five of our laymen being prominent in its work. Among these are: Judge H. H. White and Dr. W. D. Haas, of Alexandria; Hon. H. T. Liverman, of Mansfield; Judge J. G. Palmer, Shreveport; Hon. F. L. Walker, Jonesboro; Hon. P. K. Abel, Winnfield; Hon. U. A. Bell, Lake Charles; Hon. C. A. Holcombe, Baton Rouge; Hon. J. W. Joffrion, Marksville; Hon. E. A. Pharr, Morgan City; Judge R. R. Reid, Amite; Hon. C. M. Roberts, Minden.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. P. H. Howse, Prentiss, Miss., 4; Miss Beulah Ferguson, Porter's Chapel (Oak Ridge charge, Miss. Conf., Rev. J. B. Cain, pastor) 18 ("Every Family"); Rev. J. B. Cain, Oak Ridge, Miss., 7; Rev. C. H. Straft, Florence, Miss., 22; Rev. John G. Sloane, Pelican, La., 3; Rev. W. W. Woollard, Grenada, Miss., 3; Rev. C. M. Ray, Longview, Miss., 4; Rev. J. W. BACK BAY MISSION CHURCH, BILOXI, MISS.

To the Sunday Schools of the Mississippi Conference:

We are asking the Sunday schools of the Conference to cover this new church—a truly home mission church—and any contribution will be gladly received. Each school sending ten dollars will be counted as covering a square, and we desire a typewritten list of the names of the members of such schools, and will put the list in the corner-stone of the church. The following schools have already responded:

Pascagoula, Gulfport, Fernwood, Saucier, Norfield, Mississippi City, Biloxi—Main Street, Biloxi, Wesley Memorial.

Let all the Sunday schools have a part in this mission work. We begin to build this week—please send your money at once.

The Sierra Nevada Mountains condense the cloudy moisture upon their slopes, and leave the plains beyond them arid deserts. So some great ambition or passion absorbs into itself all the forces of the soul, and leaves us without any energy or inclination for other and equally important things. This will account for the moral sterility of many of us. Says Cicero to a young man: "Hold off from sensuality, or soon you will be unable to think of anything else." Vicious thinking seems to rot the tissues of the brain itself. The passion for money-making drives out from the soul the more gracious impulse of helpfulness toward others and even the desire for self-culture. Under the spell of greed a man possessed of really brilliant talents becomes content to be a mere "grind" in the store or the factory.—J. M. Ludlow.

Do not pray for easy lives. Pray to be strong men. Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers. Pray for the powers equal to your tasks. Then the doing of your work shall be no miracle, but you shall be a miracle. Every day you shall wonder at yourself, at the richness of life which has come to you by the grace of God.—Phillips Brooks.

MRS. AGNES MARY STOKES (nee Hayes) was born in St. Landry Parish, La., March 2, 1856, and passed to her heavenly home on Feb. 24, 1921. She was married to Hiram Burr in 1875. To them were born two sons, Lester and Charles, and a daughter, Miss Anita. She was a widow some years after Mr. Burr's death, and in 1903 she married J. Y. Stokes, who, with her three children, survives to cherish fondly the memory of a good wife and devoted mother. She united with the Methodist Church in early life, and gave to it forty-seven years of earnest service. She was truly a good woman and a home-builder of the old type. She loved her church and the service of the sanctuary, and was a warm friend of her pastor and family. She went from us so suddenly that the family scarcely realized that she was leaving them till she was gone. The parting words were not spoken, but her life was her testimony. She had served her Master so long that when he called, she was ready to cease from labor and enter into rest. The sacred writer has well said, "The memory of the just is blessed." J. D. HARPER.

HETTIE C. CARSON was born in St. Landry Parish, La.; I do not know the date. She married Robert H. Lunsford, Feb. 28, 1911. To him she was a devoted wife, and a tender, loving mother to the two children that came to gladden this home. She was a Christian from her youth, and united with the Methodist Church in 1907, and was a faithful, active member—ready to help in the work of the Epworth League, teach in Sunday school, play the organ, or do her part in anything for the good of the church. Her mother writes: "She was conscious to the last, and perfectly resigned to the Lord's will. Over and over, she said, 'My faith looks up to Thee,' and committing her two children to her mother's care, she said, 'God bless my mamma and my babies,' and her happy, freed spirit returned to God who gave it." It seemed that there was so much she loved to do—and she was so young, so gentle, and good, that her loved ones needed her so much. But God knows best. His weary, loving child needed rest, and he took her to be with him. John Wesley said—and it's true—"Our people die well."

J. D. HARPER.

JOHN WESLEY McLEAN was born near Woodville, Miss., Jan. 30, 1844, and died Oct. 13, 1920, at Baker, La. His remains were laid to rest in the old family graveyard near Jackson, La. He was converted and joined the church at Bethel camp meeting, at the age of 14 years. He was a Sunday school superintendent for fifty years and a subscriber to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for as long a time. The writer was his pastor for three years, and knew him to be a loyal and faithful servant of the Lord. He was the founder of the little church which bears his name, Wesley Chapel, near his old home at Darlington, La. A Sunday school in his home was the beginning of the church organization. Brother McLean was a liberal supporter of the church—he gave more to the various causes in proportion to his ability than any other member on the charge. He remarked to the writer once that he had two evidences that the Lord loved him—"the Lord loveth a cheerful giver," and "whom he loveth he chasteneth." In the latter, if he prefers to take it that way, he experienced a great deal of grief from the loss of loved ones, having several children and two wives to precede him, besides physical afflictions in his own body for several years. He leaves behind three sons and one daughter, two brothers and one sister, besides grandchildren and a host of friends to mourn his going.

L. E. CROOKS, Pastor.

Greensburg, La.

Henry Chappell Robinson, son of Charles Edward and Sarah Robinson, was born in Kemper County, Miss., Aug. 22, 1853, and died, July 28, 1920, near Brandon, Miss. His life was 67 years of uninterrupted usefulness. While early in life he had the responsibility of caring for an aged father and two older sisters, he bore this responsibility with untiring cheerfulness. He was faithful, energetic, patient and loving. Such a combination made him a favored brother and a noble son.

He was the inspiration and help of a large circle of nieces and nephews, who found in him a comrade, one who could sympathize with them in their distresses and share their joys. In early manhood he joined the M. E. Church, South. He loved his church and pastor, and remained a loyal member to his death. Born in a time of political stress in his country, he imbibed a strong love for the Confederacy. He remained a true Southerner and a staunch Democrat until death. On Dec. 28, 1898, he married Mrs. Ida White, whom he left, with their five children, Edwin, Sadie, Willard, Wilma and Laniel, to mourn his death. His going is sad, but he told us where to find him. May the Lord so bless those who are left and may their lives be such, that there will be an unbroken family when we come to the Father's House.

C. H. STRAIT.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God, in his all-wise providence saw fit to remove our friend and brother, William A. Chatham, from labor to reward; and

Whereas, our church and charge have sustained a great and irreparable loss thereby; and

Whereas, our charge has lost one of its most faithful and efficient stewards and will miss his fellowship and wise counsel, Therefore be it resolved by the quarterly conference of the Macon circuit, in conference assembled, March 20, 1921,

1. That we miss his presence and association and brotherly counsel and feel very keenly his loss;

2. That our charge has lost an efficient official member, whose place will be hard to fill; that the pastor has lost a friend and brother that will be sorely missed.

3. That we extend to his wife and relatives our sincere sympathy in this their hour of deepest sorrow, and pray God's richest blessings upon them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased brother, a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and the Macon Beacon for publication, and a copy spread on the minutes of this Conference.

C. WESLEY BAILEY, Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS.

On February 12, 1921, the spirit of Mrs. W. P. Watson returned to God who gave it. Hers was a life beautiful, full of good deeds and expressive of the highest ideals of the Christian life. Mrs. Watson professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in childhood, and her "Lips and life expressed the Holy Gospel she professed."

She was not only loved by her friends, but was depended upon by them, and her willingness to help was at all times noticeable.

At the time of her death she held office in the Ladies Aid Society, and faithfully did she attend to her duties. She will be missed in the home, in the church, and in the community.

Because of these facts and realizing our loss and feeling our bereavement, the following resolutions were adopted:

First: We bow to the will of God and say, "He doeth all things well," even though we would have kept her with us longer.

Second: We as a society express thus formally our great love for Mrs.

Watson and our appreciation of her devotion to the work.

Third: That we assure the family and friends of our continued sympathy and prayers for them in their great sorrow.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread on the minutes, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. R. E. Rose, Mrs. Clarence McGaha, and Mrs. S. J. Strickland, Sec'y.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be fairly described as "a carbonated, flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffeine contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful.....	1.54 gr.
(hot) (5 fl. oz.)
Green tea—1 glassful.....	2.02 gr.
(cold) (9 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz.....	.61 gr.
(prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

Epworth League.

ANNIVERSARY DAY.

The second Sunday in May is set apart by our General Conference as Anniversary Day for our Epworth Leagues, or Young Peoples' Day in all of our congregations, whether or not they have an Epworth League.

On this special day a special offering is to be taken for the promotion of the young peoples' work throughout the bounds of our church.

It is suggested that the best policy for this special occasion is to adopt the special prepared program, which can be ordered now from Central Office, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., and unite the Epworth League and night service, making a big special feature of the program. In churches where there are no Leagues, this same idea for the evening service will be found very effective.

We, as Conference workers, urge every church within our Conference to order a supply of these programs and observe this day, for we, as church members, must stand behind the work of our young people and lend them our help in every way possible. As soon as the special offering is taken, the entire amount should be immediately forwarded to the State Treasurer, Miss Grace Cook, 614 N. 4th St., Monroe, La., in order that she may have her reports complete for the Assembly.

Do not put this off, but begin your plans now. Let us make this a banner day and prove to our young people that we are with them in their great work.

WOMEN WHO CANNOT WORK

Read Mrs. Corley's Letter and Benefit by Her Experience

Edmund, S. C.—"I was run down with nervousness and female trouble and suffered every month. I was not able to do any work and tried a lot of medicine, but got no relief. I saw your medicine advertised in a little book that was thrown in my door, and I had not taken two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before I could see it was helping me. I am keeping house now and am able to do all of my work. I cannot say enough for your medicine. It has done more for me than any doctor. I have not paper enough to tell you how much it has done for me and for my friends. You may print this letter if you wish."—ELIZABETH C. CORLEY, care of A. P. Corley, Edmund, S. C.

Ability to stand the strain of work is the privilege of the strong and healthy, but how our hearts ache for the weak and sickly women struggling with their daily rounds of household duties, with backaches, headaches, nervousness and almost every movement brings a new pain. Why will not the mass of letters from women all over this country, which we have been publishing, convince such women that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help them just as surely as it did Mrs. Corley?

NOTICE TO EPWORTH LEAGUE CHAPTERS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

From the reports being sent in by the various pastors, I note that a number of Epworth Leagues are being organized. The organization of these Leagues should be reported immediately to the Conference Secretary, Miss Lilly Mullins, Holly Springs, Miss.; also to your District Secretary, so that they will know how to be of assistance. Write to the Central Office for aid of any kind in literature. They will gladly help you. Before the Conference meets in June, the Secretary should have the name of every organization in hand, whether it be Senior, Intermediate, or Junior League. Remember, we meet June 9-11, at Grenada College. We are planning for a great conference.

What are you doing about the African Special for Missions? That is our task, so no League should send its representative to Grenada College without a good report to make on African Missions. Send all money for missions to Mr. V. H. Stephenson, Booneville, Miss.

Call on the district secretaries often. Some of them are standing idly by while no one calls for them. Brother pastor, call on that secretary to come and organize a League; that is what he is or she is anxious to do. Ask your presiding elder—he can tell who the district secretary is.

W. R. LOTT, Conference President.

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP ENLISTMENT FOR THE LOCAL CHAPTER.

If you have not undertaken the standard programs of your chapter work, it has doubtless been because you either doubted the wisdom of the undertaking or you did not have confidence in your chapter's responding.

Your chapter is not so different from every other chapter. It is made up of "folks" who will respond to any personal interest. The differences between people are not so large as they may appear, neither are differences in problems of various churches or communities so variant. Humanity cannot best be understood in masses; it must be dealt with by the individual.

In enrolling as Christian stewards, Epworth Leaguers are urged to act in their capacity as church members, enlisting when such opportunities are presented to the entire congregation. But since the chapter can act as a unit, and since the objectives of the Christian Education Movement represent the regular work of the Epworth League, especial advantage can be gained at this time.

Tithing cards, doubtless, will be presented to your entire church membership, and it is not necessary that Leaguers should sign twice; but you should not be satisfied until you know that every Leaguer has been personally interviewed.

For practical plans of cultivation and enlistment, consider the following:

1. Be convinced in your own mind that tithing is an approved method of recognizing God's ownership; and that over and above the tithe we are still stewards of all we may possess or control.

2. If there is no stewardship covenant in your chapter, you should plan for the earliest possible devotional meeting when you will take some few minutes of the program to present clearly the claims of Christian Stewardship. At this time ascertain those who are tithers and have signed a tithing card. Write down their names quickly. Later you will wish to make a roll of all the members of the chapter, recording the names of those who are tithers. Following this, pass the tithing pledge cards, asking that each one present take the card home with him. Also pass some suitable leaflet, such as "What I Owe and How I Ought to Pay It." Then announce that you and your committee the following week will call on every member who has not previously signed.

3. Following up this work is your real opportunity. Choose only as many helpers as you actually need. They should be those who are already tithers and can speak from experience. Divide to each member of the committee those whom he can best approach. If possible, let two visitors work together. Plan to make your visitation simultaneously. Every member and attendant of your League service should be visited. See that no Leaguer fails to come squarely to the issue of definitely committing himself.

4. Report your number of tithers at the next devotional meeting, and also furnish the list of the names to your pastor. At this devotional meeting, if possible, arrange to have an experience meeting, speaking on "The Joy of Tithing and Christian Stewardship." See that the record of tithers is regularly reported through the Secretary for the Quarterly Report, form No. 18.

5. See that the devotional topics that present tithing each year are occasions in your chapter of securing commitments for tithing and a deepening of the conviction of Christian stewardship.

6. Your interest in the stewardship covenant should not be limited to only one period of the year, although you will make this the special occasion. All new members or attendants of your chapter should be presented with opportunities of joining the covenant as they become members of your congregation.

7. Stewardship enlistment cards and free literature will be cheerfully sent on request.

MOVED AGAIN

Dear Brother Carley: It is delightful to move in the balmy springtime, when the sun shines beautifully, and the birds sing, and the bees hum, and the flowers bloom. It is so much better than to be on the road during the gray, chilly days of December, exposed to the discomforts of rain and snow and mud. If a majority of the preachers of our Conference knew the pleasure of moving at this delightful season of the year, I am sure that a motion to hold our sessions of the Annual Conference either in the early autumn or in the springtime would prevail.

Yes, this preacher has moved again. After a pleasant sojourn out very near the heart of nature, he was officially summoned to get things together and be in readiness at a moment's notice to change his place of residence. In due time he and his family were brought in, and the keys of the beautiful, new parsonage, affording every required comfort and convenience, were turned over to him. We are happy in this great expression of the liberal-mindedness and genuine appreciation of our parishioners.

Yes, Brother Carley, tell the boys that they can move, and must move, when the Bishop says "go," but this preacher has moved the second time, and our good Bishop knows little, if any more, about it than he did before it all transpired. Our situation is now so near ideal that, if I should give a full account of it all, I fear that ours would be a coveted position. But if I should follow the example of some of my brethren, many of their names might be referred to the Committee on Conference Relations before I move again.

I am here to stay, just how long I cannot tell, at least until necessity is laid upon me. A luxurious sort of parsonage like this would be an ideal home for a superannuate.

THE HUMAN RACE.

By Rev. Wm. A. Langley.

Let's watch the human race go by
With runners old and young.
Just see their heads are lifted high,
And watch their swelling lung.
I see their pacing starting slow
When first the race begins;
I see it quicken as they go
And quicken till it ends.

Yes, runners come and runners go
Until their race is run;
And some are running fast, and slow,
While some have never begun.
O! Racer, why not run to-day,
And win this race of life?
Begin the race and skip away,
There's glory in the strife.

Why, racers young and racers old
Can run the winning race,
If they will run toward the goal,
And meet it face to face.
This race is won by running on,
Without defeat of one.
The laurel prize is theirs alone
Who run and run and run.

Some reasons why we ask for a specified amount as an offering:

1. A few churches have the habit of dividing this offering with other causes.

2. Many people contribute according to the amount you ask for. If you ask for a penny collection, that is all you are apt to get.

3. Others send the same amount from year to year and it is a small amount.

4. Another reason is we have outlined a larger program as follows:

A Conference Elementary Superintendent working full time, a Conference Training School for teachers at Grenada, two District Training Schools, a Wesley Bible Class Federation, etc.

5. We need the money to do the work.

Half the children in our Conference are neglected in their religious education; the other half do not receive what is due them. It is true the church is doing more work and better work for the children than in the past, but the church has made only a modest beginning. It is positively stupid to put down a mere incidental offering one Sunday in the year for the religious education of our own children. It is high time that we go forward.

New Albany proposes to lead in all good works. Fourteen out of a class of fifteen made high grades in an examination on the first half of Life in the Making. Brother Stephens challenges any school in the Conference in a teacher training contest. It is commendable to have a full school, but it is a greater task to have teachers qualified to instruct the children when they come. It is good to get them, but better to hold them.

Mark this date on your calendar—June 20-25. Do your best to arrange your other duties so you can attend the Conference Training School at Grenada during these six days in June. Settle upon the course you would like to take, order your book, and begin study now. The following courses will be offered: Beginner Methods, Primary Pupil, Junior Pupil, Intermediate-Senior Methods, Adult Psychology, The Pupil, The Teacher's Study of the Life of Christ, and Missionary Education. We have secured a high-class faculty to teach these courses.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES.

Sunday School Day is April 24, and before you read these notes the programs will have been sent to Sunday school superintendents. Your Conference Sunday School Board is sending you this sample that you may examine it. You will send your order direct to Smith & Lamar, Dallas, Tex., as the Sunday School Board does not in any case furnish programs. Pastors will do well to make inquiry concerning Sunday School Day programs and see that the day is observed. If for any reason you do not receive a sample copy, notify your field secretary.

We are very sorry that we let our supply of Children's Week leaflets get away from us at the Wesley Bible Class Federation. We have not secured a new supply from the General Office as yet. Any school which has not received the Children's Week literature, even in part, and wishes to observe the program for this week, write your field secretary for the literature and perhaps we can supply you.

Please read again the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Notes in the last issue of this paper. Every sentence is important.

The Conference Standard Training School will be held at Mansfield, June 15 to 22. We will have an excellent faculty, five in number, to teach the courses. In many cases we hope it will be possible to select delegates to the Epworth League Assembly who could remain for the next week and take the Standard Training Course.

We are very proud of First Church Sunday School, Shreveport. In a letter from the superintendent, Mr. W. A. McKennon, he writes as follows: "First Methodist Sunday School of Shreveport will observe Children's Week from April 24 to May 1. Our Sunday school has been making a wonderful record in attendance, making the average attendance for the last five Sundays to be 1139."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The fourth Sunday in this month is Sunday School Day. If you have not already received your programs, please let us know. We are anxious for every church in the whole Conference to observe this day this year.

If you are interested in Children's Week, please write me. The plan and the leaflets are the best I have ever read. I believe they will do much good wherever they are distributed and worked out.

The illustrated lecture is going finely. I feel that much good will be accomplished by using this lecture.

Brother Clark had a very happy and successful trip to the Bolton charge. He was received well and did good work. I would like to hear from some other schools as to how their work is going.

Court Street, Hattiesburg, reported 440 in Sunday school Easter. Gulfport reported 981. This is the best yet. I am sure that God will bless this loyal, faithful body of workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM MARY WERLEIN MISSION.

We would like to express our thanks to the following for articles received for the Mission within the last few days:

Parker Memorial Church, eggs for Easter egg hunt, and cash, $5.00; Carrollton Avenue, a large box of groceries, and quite a bit of clothing, and other articles, including some pictures and a rug, and a very splendid assortment of flowers for Easter decoration of the chapel.

To those who contributed cars for the Easter egg hunt, we thank Mr. McGlasson, Mr. Petty, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Rosenbern, also Mr. Werlein. All of these contributed to the making of the outing a good time for the children.

We had one conversion Friday night, a lady, who also united with the church, and was baptized.

Also add to the report of boxes received, a box from the Woman's Missionary Society of Haynesville, La.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONFIDENCE.

Whereas the Sunday school of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Greenville, Miss., has learned with profound sorrow of the closing of the Commercial Savings Bank of this city, of which institution our beloved superintendent, W. P. Kretschmar, was president; and whereas we desire to express to him and to the world our sympathy for him and our confidence in him and our love for him, Therefore be it Resolved, by the officers, teachers and members of the Sunday school of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Greenville, Mississippi;

1. That we extend to Brother Kretschmar our deepest sympathy in his hour of trouble and assure him that we realize that his bank went down because it was a victim of unprecedented financial conditions, and of its effort to continue to serve the community in the production of our cotton crops, as it has served it for years;

2. That we express to him and to the world our entire confidence in his ability as a financier, his integrity as a banker and man, and his value as a citizen, who has always been foremost in all public effort and endeavor looking to the betterment or happiness of his people, and assure him of our cooperation in any labor he may undertake;

3. That we send a copy of these resolutions to Brother Kretschmar, a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy to the Greenville Democrat-Times, and to the Memphis Commercial Appeal. Adopted unanimously by a rising vote.

ROSS WOOLFORD,
Chairman of Meeting.
FRANK W. RIGGS,
Sec'y of Meeting and School.

Resolved by the Big Brothers' Bible Class of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, that we re-adopt and endorse the resolutions this day adopted by the Methodist Sunday school concerning our friend and brother, W. P. Kretschmar, and, in addition thereto, assure him of the friendship and support of this class and its belief in his ability to weather the storm through which he is passing and fully re-establish his material fortunes.

Signed by, Waddy West, President, M. P. Massey, Secretary.

FROM AMITE, LOUISIANA.

Dear Brother Carley: I am writing you a few lines to let you know that we are still doing things at Amite. Our Epworth League has just closed a week's sunrise prayer meetings, which were very largely attended both by League members and others. Now, in reference to our regular Wednesday night prayer meetings, the attendance is still good, as well as the interest manifested; and one fact that especially stands out prominently about them is that Brother Hoffpauir insists on this being a laymen's meeting entirely, and not a preacher's meeting at all; therefore, they are always led by the laymen. The Easter services were good, our pastor bringing us a splendid Easter message in the morning, the attendance being large; and in the evening the pastor, not being able to bring the regular message because of boils and blood poison in one of his hands, made a few introductory remarks, turning the services over to Judge Robert R. Reid, who brought a delightful message from "The Life of Moses," which was very much enjoyed by the congregation. Brother Hoffpauir feels that he is serving a people that will at all times respond to his calls for assistance.

Fraternally,
LOUIS F. LEFEVRE.

Big Service For 10 Cents

Washington, D. C., (Special)—In order to let people, all over the country, see for themselves how valuable the Pathfinder can be to them, the editor of that old-established national weekly offers to send his paper on trial 8 weeks for only 10 cents. The 10c does not begin to pay the cost but the editor says he is glad to invest in new friends. The Pathfinder has been going for 28 years. One family in every 70 in the entire United States now takes it. Thousands more would take it if they realized what they are missing. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Only a dime sent to the Pathfinder, 165 Langdon Station, Washington, D. C., will keep your whole family informed, entertained, helped and inspired.

EDUCATION MOVEMENT IN SARDIS DISTRICT.

To the Methodists of the Sardis District:

Prof. A. C. Gainey, of Senatobia, has accepted the place of District Director for the Sardis District in the Christian Education Movement now in progress. Prof. Gainey is one of the foremost educators in Mississippi, and is a very busy man; so I trust that all the pastors and other workers in the district will answer his communications promptly and give him their hearty co-operation.

Rev. E. G. Mohler, of Sardis, has consented to act as District Chairman of our Minute Men, and I ask for him the same prompt assistance in his work that I have requested for Prof. Gainey.

There are several considerations connected with this Christian Education Movement that I think we should do well to bear in mind:

1. This great undertaking was authorized by our last General Conference. When that body speaks, loyal Southern Methodists cannot afford to ignore its instructions.

2. Southern Methodism covers a vast area of territory, and it does not follow because the conditions may be unfavorable in our section that they are equally so everywhere. In so widely extended a movement, others may be able to do much more than we can; hence it is the part of wisdom for us to do our best without expressions of pessimism, hoping that the church as a whole may reach the goal that has been fixed for it.

3. Cash payments to this cause are not demanded. The first installments of subscriptions made will not be due until next autumn. Subscribers, within reasonable limits, may fix their own times of payment.

4. Pledges made to the Christian Education Movement will not be legal obligations. They will be promises, made in good faith, to do one's best, in the good providence of God, to contribute the amounts set down. If disaster should overtake a subscriber, he will not be sued and pressed to the wall.

If these considerations are brought to the attention of our people, they may be encouraged to take hold of this movement with more enthusiasm.

Fraternally yours,

R. A. MEEK, Presiding Elder, Sardis, Miss.

THE FINGER OF GOD.

The sentiment of the Methodist Church at Lafayette has been thoroughly canvassed. The subject has been discussed from every angle. The conclusion arrived at is that a new church must and shall be built.

Two prominent Methodists visited the parsonage and informed the pastor that there is no opposition within the church to the new church. The loyalty and liberality of these two leading Methodists have been so often tested that no adverse statement is credible, as they are in a position to know the mind of the members. One or more thought that a better time might have been selected, but they favor the new church.

As a congregation we render hearty thanks to God that this is true; and we keenly appreciate the offers of help and service that are pouring in from the noble citizenship of Lafayette, and are glad such a spirit, so rare, pervades the new church project.

Rub-My-Tism is a great pain killer. It relieves pain and soreness caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sprains.

Trying Times.

The reconstruction period after the great war is characterized by what may be called high pressure days. The demands of business, the wants of the family, the requirements of society, are more numerous now than ever before. The first effect of the praiseworthy effort to keep up with all these things is commonly seen in a weakened or debilitated condition of the nervous system, which results in dyspepsia, defective nutrition of both body and brain, and, in extreme cases, in complete nervous prostration. It is clearly seen that what is needed is what will sustain the system, give vigor and tone to the nerves, and keep the digestive and assimilative functions healthy and active. Many persons from their own experience recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for this purpose. It acts on the vital organs, builds up the system and fits men and women for these trying times. In cases where there is biliousness or constipation, it is well to take Hood's Pills. They are a thorough cathartic, a gentle laxative.

ANNUAL MEETING, NORTH MISSISSIPPI

For several reasons the Ninth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference at Okolona was the best ever held. One hundred and fifty-eight representatives were reported in attendance and about that many visitors from day to day. The attendance of delegates on sessions and committee meetings was good.

Beginning Tuesday evening, March 9, with the Executive Committee meeting, and the session at the church, the next three days were crowded with reports from officers, inspirational talks, and exchange of ideas from the many auxiliaries represented.

Mrs. Conger's address was a message of inspiration, showing the progress of the past five years, urging all to be steady and go forward. Mrs. Boswell reported many new organizations, yet goal of an organization in every church had not been reached; and Mrs. Wilburn reported our financial pledge paid, with a surplus. Mrs. Baker showed the Young People awake to their opportunities, and Miss Corinne Rogers, in her report of work with children, told us what could be accomplished with good leaders for the children. Mrs. Brownlee said her department had "increased in interest," and Mrs. Pittman showed how broad was the work of the Social Service superintendent. Miss Peebles gave a report of the Co-operative Home at Corinth, and Mrs. J. M. Wyatt reported on the Hospital; she said the name-plate was at last to be placed on the door of the room belonging to this Conference.

The "Method Periods," conducted by different superintendents, brought out the best in every department and proved "that the Woman's Missionary Society was the greatest organization for women in the world." The quiet hour services were always the time of especial interest to every one.

The Conference visitors were: Mrs. P. L. Cobb and Dr. E. H. Rawlings, of Nashville, both of whom gave inspirational addresses; Dr. W. L. Duren of New Orleans, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, president of the Mississippi Conference W. M. S., and Mrs. Alma Riley, of Jackson; Rev. B. P. Jacob, Rev. J. H. Holder, Rev. T. H. Dorsey, all of whom made better the program, and many others who came and went, and we felt blessed by their presence.

The social spirit was featured by the "Get Acquainted" hour, the noon hour, when beautiful lunches were served every day, young people's luncheon, the automobile ride and the cordial hospitality given every visitor in the homes to which they were assigned. The local congregation had many honored members with us, a few of whom were presented to the Conference: Rev. J. J. Brooks, Mrs. G. D. Garrison, Mrs. Fannie Clark, Mrs. Porter Davis, Mrs. Herndon, and Aunt Laura Murdock.

The new officers are as follows: President, Mrs. J. W. Conger, Vaiden, Miss.; vice president, Mrs. Lester G. Pant, Holly Springs; recording secretary, Mrs. G. C. Jones, Belen; corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. M. Clark, Tupelo; treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Wilburn, Lexington; superintendent Y. P., Mrs. Joe Herndon, Okolona; sup't Social Service, Mrs. W. V. Pittman, Sunflower; Sup't Publicity, Mrs. C. A. Neal, Carrollton; Sup't Juniors, Mrs. E. P. Neblett, Durant; Sup't Supplies, Mrs. Susie Thomas, Starkville. The district secretaries are: Aberdeen, Mrs. Jeff Busby, Houston; Columbus, Mrs. Kemp Williams, West Point; Corinth, Miss Ettet Murry, Ripley; Greenwood, Mrs. Whitehead, Tchula; Greenville, Mrs. P. Children's Work.

We, your Committee on Children's Work, recommend:

1. That the attention of the Adult Auxiliary be called to the fact that its most important work is the conservation of the child-life of the church.

2. That, since the duty of training the children of the church and of giving them a vision of world service through missions devolves upon the Superintendent of Children's Work, each auxiliary choose its most faithful worker for superintendent of children's work.

3. That the junior auxiliary be represented at the annual meeting by the superintendent of children's work, and that the adult society be asked to pay her expenses.

4. That the adult auxiliary provide refreshments for quarterly mite box openings.

5. That one half-day be given for the children's work at district meetings and that the work be presented by the Conference superintendent of children's work or by her appointee.

6. That the superintendent of children's work and one or more Juniors, represent the Juniors at district meetings.

7. That although the Conference banners are given for the greatest financial report, no auxiliary shall be awarded the banner that does not also reach the Standard of Excellence.

8. That the making of missionary posters and scrapbooks be encouraged.

MISS CORINNE ROGERS, Chm.

MRS. R. P. NEBLETT, Sec'y.

Social Service.

Realizing our work has never been quite as essential as it is to-day, with the new impulse given to Social Service, we must keep the Christian balance, or the entire program will fail. The spirit of Christ must permeate and pervade all of our work, if it is to be of the highest value, if it is to be abiding in its influence. We, therefore, recommend:

1. That every means for Americanization and Christianization be used, co-operating with all welfare organizations for local and national betterment.

2. That clean recreation be furnished our young people by opening our homes for their entertainment.

3. As women, we urge those who are charged with the administration of our laws to prevent lynchings, pledging ourselves to uphold officials in the execution of justice.

4. Since provision for the education of negro children is still inadequate, we urge that surveys be made of the educational situation in local communities in order that negro children may secure (a) more adequate division of the school fund, (b) suitable buildings and equipment for schools, (c) longer school terms, (d) higher standards and increased pay for teachers in order to enable them to have more efficient instructors.

5. That we lend sincere sympathy and enthusiastic support to the ministry of the Memorial Home in New Orleans, which seeks to restore, as far as may be, those who have been overtaken in a fault.

6. That always we shall remember that Social Service is but a means to the end that the "earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters that cover the sea."

MRS. W. V. PITTMAN, Chm.

RESPONSE TO CHINA'S NEED.

Mr. J. D. Hamilton, treasurer of the Board of Missions, reports over $160,000 as the amount of the fund up to date. "Never before in the history of the Board," says Mr. Hamilton, "has there been such a prompt and generous response from our church."

FROM NEW ALBANY, MISS.

Our presiding elder, Rev. J. B. Randolph, was with us in the second quarterly conference on the 19th of March. He preached for us two good sermons. The Sunday morning service was one of the best in our church in many a day. Some two or three dozen young people came at the conclusion of the service and said they were ready for the Lord to use them in full-time service if it was his will.

Brother Randolph makes a good elder. He knows how to look after the detail work of the church. He starts off well, indeed.

Easter Sunday was a great day with us — record attendance at Sunday school, received three into the membership of the church, and baptized two babies. The work runs well. Our collections for the year were paid the first Sunday in January.

J. E. STEPHENS, Pastor.

EASTER SUNDAY AT FIRST CHURCH, GULFPORT, MISS.

Easter was a beautiful day, long to be remembered as a day of intense interest and large increase in our Sabbath school. More than one thousand were present and deeply interested. Our church was most beautifully adorned with the brightest and loveliest of flowers. The exercises were opened with song and prayer. The most interesting thing to me was the forty-eight little folks from the Cradle Roll marching up in order, taking their places and singing their little song and waving their pretty flowers that they held in their hands as they sang. Then came the primary department, about 100 strong, with their sweet song and pretty little speeches. These exercises, from start to finish, were most pleasing and interesting, so everybody said. This is a great Easter day for Gulfport Sunday school. So the children shall lead them. What is a greater force in the development of Christian character than to teach them from the cradle roll up, to love and worship God?

One of the inspiring features of the Sunday school is to hear the children singing our good old gospel hymns that are full of religion, and repeating and learning paragraphs of Scripture that teach the practical side of our holy religion in our daily living. I do not hesitate to say we have one of the finest and best-conducted Sunday schools in the State. Colonel Har-

Renwar vs. Rheumatism.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle, has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WAR-NEK DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

dy is a live superintendent, who is intensely interested, and determined to have his school Al. Now, if we only had a nice auditorium fitted up for the children, so that they could go out of Sunday school in a body into their auditorium and have their service suited to children, in ten years how great would be the results!

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

NOT Education at the Cost of Religion

MANY a father and mother has dreaded to send the son and daughter to college because of the effect which they fear on the old home training. Education at the expense of religion is a dangerous thing, as many have found to their cost.

President Thompson of Ohio State University says "I am in no way untrue to state institutions when I say that in our day a boy might become a bachelor or master in almost any one of the best of them, and be as ignorant of the Bible, the moral and spiritual truth which it represents and the fundamental principles of religion, their nature and value to society, as if he had been educated in a non-Christian country. Who is to supply this lack if not the Christian college?"

The church college is a safe place to send your boy. He comes home stronger than he went. The school of this type is a SAFE INVESTMENT.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE SAME OLD STORY.

A man in a trusted position stole $22,000; leaving a wife and two children, he dropped out of sight for a while; later, he was arrested, when it was discovered that he had been cutting a wide swath in dissolute society; he told the officers who took him into custody that he was penniless. So the old story runs—wealth ill-got, squandered in revelry, poverty, arrest, shame and disgrace, retribution. If men would only learn in advance that the way of the transgressor is hard!

FOUR HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

Some moments stand out as turning points in the history of the world; such a moment came when Martin Luther, just four hundred years ago, stood before the Diet of Worms and uttered those memorable words: "Here I stand. I cannot do otherwise. God help me. Amen." Those words were a declaration of independence in the face of a spiritual tyranny that had shackled men's minds and spirits for centuries; and out of them grew the Reformation, by which the right of the individual to stand before God in his own person was again established and maintained. Dr. Robert E. Speer, president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, has called upon the Protestant bodies of this country to observe Sunday, April 17, as the anniversary of the Diet of Worms, and that they call attention to the significance of its lessons for our own day. This is a timely suggestion. If we do not preserve the spirit of the Reformation as led by Luther, the Christian world will soon be in need of another reformation that will restore the true doctrines of Christianity.

GETTING SOMEWHERE.

An old colored woman, watching the crowds riding on a merry-go-round, could not refrain from saying to one of the passengers, "Rastus, yo's spent yo' money, but whar's yo' been?" There was not a little philosophy in the old woman's question. The main thing in travelling is not to travel, but to get somewhere; and the main thing in working is not just to work, but to do something. Too many of us are merely going around and around, and merely working and working. In some cases, we might as well stop till we can fix upon a goal toward which we can move. We have read somewhere that a large percentage of the energy of the burning coal goes up the smokestack; we wonder how much human energy is dissipated into thin air.
